
Inquirer Phila. Phila. Tues. 3-20-56 P.1 Pa.

"The South," says Judge Perez, "is being used as a whipping boy. There are Communist votes . . ."

Thunder Over Dixie

New Orleans Hears Many Voices Raised In Segregation Debate

Inquirer Tues. 3-20-56 Philadelphia, Pa. P.1

Third of a Series

By JIM BISHOP

NEW ORLEANS, March 19.

THIS is a city of many voices, glib, grim, gay, smart, sinister, sullen. The voices pull in many directions. The voice of the Federal Court intones that the white man shall, and will, accept Benny Bush, a tall, timid Negro, in his schools. The voice of Leander Perez, unctuous and deadly, wets you with smiles as it says that it would be ideal—and impossible—if all Negroes moved to Liberia.

The tired voice of an old Archbishop says flatly that segregation is a sin. Over on Burgundy st, a young Negro preacher says that the deceased in that powder blue casket would not be deceased if he had not been caught in the wrong apartment by the right woman.

Voices. How do you weigh a voice? The babble is lost in the dragging cry of the Dixieland bands, the sinuous snap of the stripteasers on Canal Street, the prayers of a handful of Negroes in St. Louis Cathedral.

It is night and, from the skyscraper office of Judge Perez, New Orleans is on its back in spangles. The judge used to be a county judge. Now he is a district attorney, and a handsome one with snowy hair and dark glittering eyes. He is also two other things. The judge is a big politician. He is one of the important men in the New Orleans Citizens Council. The Council says it does not want to hurt the Negro. It just wants to keep him in his place—which is right where he is. The Council in New Orleans claims 7000 members.

* * *

"THE South," says the judge, tapping his cigar holder, "is being used as a whipping boy. There are a group of Communist votes and other foreign votes and these people use the South as a whipping boy." His lips blow outward as he speaks. He is very sure that white is white and black is black and that there are no grays.

"There is no fear that white women will ever marry Negroes. The fear is that when the Negro attains power, that he will want white women."

The judge sighs. "Everybody would be happier if we had an all white South." It is as though he is remembering how his forebears brought these people here a century and a half ago, and that now, sadly, the genie is out of the jug because the Supreme Court has pulled the cork.

"The greatest menace to the country is the United States Supreme Court." Perez has been a district attorney for 30 years. "There is no doubt about that. The Supreme Court has adopted Communist literature to use in interpreting our Constitution."

Inquirer P.9

THIS man is a Catholic who disagrees with his hierarchy. He is one of thirteen children, a graduate of Louisiana State University. "Of course," he says slowly, "the liberal thinking in the Catholic Church is the result of work in the National Conference of Christians and Jews. They had a meeting in the South—Atlanta, maybe — and they wrangled over the question of racial integration. When most of the people had left the meeting—" (he points the D.A.'s indicting finger) — "a Negro preacher is credited with standing up and putting this thing over. A vote was taken, and they voted for integration. Later, I heard that a priest said that the Catholic Church was bound by the decision because they had a representative at the meeting."

You ask the judge what kind of people he came from, and he says: "English, Irish, Dutch, Italian, French and Spanish. I'm a creole."

The judge does not answer the the Sunday greetings of Msgr. H. C. Bejou. In matters of education, the Monsignor is the voice of Archbishop Rummel; he is, in fact, superintendent of all Catholic schools. He too is a voice, and his tongue speaks in favor of integration. The Bejous have been here for two centuries and the Monsignor, in his tall homeliness, has a pride in Southern tradition.

"There has been a small amount of integration in the Catholic schools," he says. "It isn't much. No one has complained about it. Of course, our seminaries have been integrated for years. The Negro who wants to study for the priesthood prays and studies beside the white seminarian." The palms of his hands open outward with a how-could-it-be-otherwise gesture. "A Negro bishop was consecrated in Bay St. Louis a few years ago. Here in New Orleans, our Xavier College is the only all-Negro Catholic college in the country."

The Monsignor picks up his Archbishop's pastoral letter and he reads from it and he knows that it applies to him and all his work as it paplies to Judge Perez and all his work: "Racial segregation is morally wrong and sinful because it is a denial of the unity and solidarity of the human race as conceived by God. . ."

There is the matter of intermarriage, which worries so many white men. The monsignor permits himself a small smile and erases it with the palm of his hand. "Marriage," he says, "is a private affair. Whether we have integration or not, the sacrament of marriage will remain the same. Marriage entails a high degree of compatibility"—he emphasizes this word—" and I do not worry that intermarriage will ensue on a large scale." He looks for a paper he cannot find. "Marriage between the races is permitted in Boston and in Los Angeles and what are the figures? About one-seventh of one percent."

* * *

THE archdiocese controls 132 elementary schools and 45 secondary schools. Of these, 36 are solely for Negroes. In New Orleans and around it, 74,000 children go to parochial Negro churches. In a Catholic white church, no usher can tell a Negro where to sit. He sits where he pleases. The color line has never applied either to the confessional or to the altar rail.

A voice. One more voice.

You drive out to North Villere, and you can hear another voice. There is a small awkward house which starts out as a one-story job and then goes to a second story at the back. In the dimples of the unpaved street lays yesterday's rain.

This is the home of Oliver Bush, 45, very dark father of 13 Negro children. He sells life insurance, and he owns his home and a car. His son is Earl "Benny" Bush, 17, a student in the 12th grade of a Negro High School. Benny is the symbol of all Louisiana Negroes who want to get into white schools. The white lawyers and the Negro lawyers fought all over the Federal District Court because of Benny, and now the court has said that the white schools must enroll Benny.

The boy doesn't talk much. He is tall and slender and he hangs his head and watches out of the tops of his eyes. Benny's father is a member of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and he went to the NAACP a year and a half ago and offered Benny as the test case. There were others, but Benny, through the NAACP, sued the thing out, and won.

* * *

THE father, Oliver, has frank self-assurance. He is president of a Negro PTA and he attends studies and lectures. He has two children in college and he might never have sued Benny's case except that he heard that the Clark High School was going to teach the children in two platoons. Besides, Oliver felt that the white man was ready for a change.

"When I was a boy," he says, studying the faded rug, "if a Negro went to the polls, they beat him half to death. Now the politicians come to our meetings and talk to us."

He thinks that the white man's fear of intermarriage is largely a political device. "They talk about sex and other matters," he says, "oh, just to play up this thing. Personally, I think a man should be allowed to marry anybody he pleases. If I liked a light-skinned person, I'd marry her, but I can't imagine myself doing it."

Over on Burgundy st., the Negro preacher stuffs a white kerchief inside his collar and closes the sermon on the deceased, who was knifed by a Negro woman because of another Negro woman. The preacher listens to the shrill screams of the women, and watches approvingly as the Negro nurses in the starched white hats carry the faintees feet first out of the Morning Star Baptist Church. The Negro preacher has said all that he is going to say, and that is, if there is any justice at all, every last one of us is going to have to account for what he has done before the throne of God.

He, too, is a voice. A small one.

(Continued tomorrow)

Published In Askelon—V

Ala Advertiser P. 2-B

In Baltimore, Birmingham Race Strife is Big News, But The Harry Belafonte Incident Is Played Down

Montgomery, Ala

Sun. 5-13-56

Edward P. Morgan, The American Broadcasting Company

[The following is a transcript from the broadcast of news commentator Edward P. Morgan, over ABC, May 7, 1956—Ed.]

IN A SPEECH in New York City recently, the editor-in-chief of The Montgomery Advertiser, Grover C. Hall, Jr., accused the North of preaching piously and acting hypocritically on the segregation issue. In a telling indictment of information media (and it must be assumed he was including radio and television), Hall said: "There is an exasperating failure by the American press to present a faithful, unsparing picture of American race disharmony from New York to Los Angeles."

The day before Hall spoke, a hotel in Baltimore refused accommodations to Harry Belafonte, the Negro singing star. Baltimore, of course, embraces many traditions and sentiments of the South but as a so-called border state metropolis it must be eligible for Hall's criticism. The more so when it develops that Baltimore newspapers and broadcasters almost completely ignored the Belafonte incident, although they had given top attention to the Nat King Cole affair in Birmingham.

Although conceding that Baltimore has made "considerable progress" in improving race relations, Chairman Una Corbett of the local ADA chapter's race relations committee reports that according to a recent survey, Baltimore has a worse record in the discriminatory policy of local hotels than any other large city in the country. Yet little is said about it.

EDITOR HALL, who found himself reluctantly playing host to scores of northern reporters sent down to cover Montgomery's bus boycott, wondered who had been left behind to deal with the stories on discrimination at home. He decided to have his own reporters do some checking on the story in the North.

Hall found even The New York Times remiss. Only once in 125 years, he said, has the Times printed a picture of a Negro bride in its society section.

"Out across the continent at The Los Angeles Times," Hall said. "Jim Crow is society editor, but he wears a different hat—the Los Angeles Times refuses to run (pictures of) Chinese brides. And since there is a great deal of race friction in Los Angeles, I assume that a Negro bride's picture hasn't got a Chinaman's chance."

Hall turned to the city of Dearborn, Mich., hard by Detroit with its big Negro population. He quoted the mayor of Dearborn as saying "Negroes can't get in Dearborn. We watch it. Every time we hear of a Negro moving in. . . we respond quicker than you do to a fire. Our Italians and Poles are so anti-colored—much more than you in Alabama." Detroit papers, Hall found, gave only the vaguest inside-page coverage to a suburb's mob action against a Cherokee Indian family, thought to be Negro, but the Nat King Cole incident was Pg. 1 news in Detroit.

The Alabama editor said that in Chicago there is a "code agreement among the newspapers and radio stations to muffle . . . race strife stories lest they incite more riots."

SOME of Hall's examples may be picayune. On the cumulative record, The New York Times with a mass of factual reporting and on the whole responsible opinion probably has contributed more than any other American newspaper to the understanding and therefore the improvement of racial tensions. With its huge Negro population swelling almost daily—due in part to an exodus from Mississippi and other parts of the deep South—Chicago has an enormous problem in housing alone. Yet its once explosive Trumbull Park public housing development is yielding slowly but surely to intelligent treatment. And although to be sure cruel evidences of hypocrisy and prejudice can be found in almost any northern community, the Negro, in most cases, has the law—and the vote—to protect him.

But Editor Hall has made a major contribution in pointing out that "race disharmony" as he puts it is a national problem and not just a provincial peculiarity of the South.

This is Edward Morgan saying good night from New York.

Published In Askelon—IV

Advertiser Sat. 5-12-56

The North's Hypocrisy On Negroes

Montgomery, Ala. P. 4-A

George S. Schuyler In The Manchester (N.H.) Union Leader

[The following article was bannered across the top of Pg. 1 in the Manchester (New Hampshire) Union Leader. The writer is George S. Schuyler, editor of the Pittsburgh Courier, nationally circulated Negro newspaper. Schuyler is the best known Negro journalist in the U.S.—Ed.]

THE Achilles heel of the non-Southern white "liberals," both Christian and Jew, is the colored brethren. Whatever its editorial motives may be, that excellent newspaper, The Montgomery Adveretiser, deserves applause for exposing the Northern (and Eastern and Western) hypocrisy, and impaling Yankee sham on the poignard of ridicule, in a series of articles by staff member Tom Johnson. I hope The Advertiser publishers imitate the sanctimonious New York Times and publish a special supplement on Brother Johnson's findings for nationwide distribution. [Italics his.] As one who was born, reared and live in the Northeast (and have been everywhere in the U.S.), I can attest to the accuracy of The Montgomery Advertiser's series. For my 60 years I have been sickened by the self-righteous squawks of professional white liberals and do-gooders moaning lugubriously over Southern Negrophobia, racial prejudice and discrimination, and have done my utmost to expose it. I certainly detest these practices and prejudices in the South, but I hate them no less in the rest of the country. The Southerners at least are frank and forthright, which is more than I can say for their Yankee brethren. [Italics his.]

THE cities outside the South where a decent Negro family can move out of the black ghetto without great difficulty are as rare as an Arab official in Tel Aviv. Frequently the white neighbors opposing the "invasion" have said it with violence, and, that failing, have fled elsewhere to avoid social contamination. Is this not true?

Prior to 1945, the number of hotels, restaurants, motels and such establishments that solicited or welcomed Negro patronage outside the South was infinitesimal. I exposed this situation in "Traveling Jim Crow" (American Mercury, August, 1930), "Vacation Daze" (Common Ground, spring, 1943), and "Jim Crow In The North" (American Mercury, June, 1949). Before me is a report made last year by Andrew F. Jackson and Associates of Washington, D. C., showing that Negro travelers are "welcome in not more than 6% of the nation's better hotels and motels." Jackson surveyed 2,500 of the best such establishments, mostly non-Southern.

The Advertiser series exposes the Color Curtain on social news about Negroes maintained by all daily newspapers in the U.S., including the "liberal" ones. It is true and disgraceful.

THE National Bar Association has exposed the racial exclusion prevalent throughout the West from the Mississippi River to the Pacific Coast and sought vainly to do something about it.

Pious disavowals of Negrophobia by distinguished white politicians, publicists, clergymen, pedagogues, etc., mean nothing when jim crowism and racial exclusion is nationwide. So I'm glad that The Advertiser has exposed this shameless hypocrisy no matter what its intentions. Let's have the truth from whatever source.

Published In Askelon—III(A)

Advertiser

The editor rejoices that, speaking to a New York audience last month on the grotesque failure of the American press to report Northern race strife along with the Southern, he concluded —"But the American press will land on its feet."

Montgomery, Ala.

Had we failed to foresee that, we would now be embarrassed by the balancing endeavor now in evidence among the more alert and sensitive Northern newspapers.

Sun. 5-11-56

Particularly does this apply to The Des Moines Register, whose editorial is reprinted in adjoining columns. It had often struck us that the Midwestern papers were the most obscurate and uncomprehending about race matters, probably because they are more isolated from the centers of Negro population. The New York editors are romantics about the glamorous dispensa-

P. 4-A

Published In Askelon—III.

Advertiser P. 4-A
Montgomery, Ala.
Fri. 5-11-56

'This Southern Journalism Is Good'

Editor Lauren Soth In The Des Moines Register

THERE is much that is negative and backward-looking in the South's reaction to the series of recent U.S. Supreme Court decisions on human rights.

But by no means all. There has been a lot of hard thinking and a lot of originality shown in meeting the startling new situations the South is beginning to have to face.

In Montgomery, Ala., first capital of the old Confederacy, two creative responses to the new situation have appeared.

One was the disciplined effort of the Negro community of Montgomery to carry out its boycott against the local transit bus system in a spirit of Christian love and Gandhian non-violence.

The other is the continuing newspaper campaign by The Montgomery Advertiser under the title, "Publish It Not In The Streets Of Askelon."

Grover C. Hall Jr., editor-in-chief of the daily paper, felt that in the Autherine Lucy case and in the bus boycott newspapers in the North were playing up the South's racial difficulties and concealing their own. He has a theory that Negroes encounter rejection wherever they migrate in sufficient numbers.

But instead of just asserting it and letting it go at that, he set his able staff to gathering facts—and printing them. He embarrassed a number of Northern editors and publishers by smoking out the fact that few of them publish pictures of Negroes in their "Society" sections — and perhaps accelerated a reform that is long overdue. He found suburbs of Detroit where Negroes are effectively prevented from buying or renting living quarters. He found fiery crosses and school segregation in Ohio, bombings and a heavy police guard over Negroes in the Trumbull Park housing development in Chicago.

He attracted attention throughout the nation to the complex, rapidly-changing facts of what is actually a national problem of human adjustments, not just a Southern problem of "race."

We don't suppose either Hall or very many white readers of his paper see this problem as one of adjustment. So far they are just finding additional "proof" for their original contention that Negroes are objectionable and Northerners hypocritical or ignorant.

But since the bus boycott, Montgomery whites are no longer so sure they "know" their own Negro neighbors. By the time The Advertiser finishes its "Publish It Not" series, a good many brash generalizations that flourish North and South will be subtly infiltrated with stubborn, complex, contradictory facts.

tion of the U.S. Supreme Court, but they seem to be listening even when they have snapped off their hearing aids.

But now to hand is the Des Moines Register editorial. It is a handsome editorial, much appreciated by us. The Register is one of the foremost American newspapers, but it is owned by the Brothers Cowles, proprietors of Look—without question the dizziest of publications when reporting the Negro. The editor of The Register is Lauren Soth, winner of this year's Pulitzer Prize for the finest editorial writing in 1955.

At the risk of claiming more than is our due, The Register editorial reminded us of our April meeting in Washington with Soth. We exchanged pleasantries about The Advertiser's series on Northern Jim Crow and we asked our friend why he didn't vary his menu with some revelation of Iowa race discrimination. Soth said that none such existed. We told him about sending for a research document by an Iowa professor revealing the standard American discrimination in Iowa. Soth appeared to think his Alabama colleague was pulling his leg, shook hands and moved on. We reflected: "Those Midwesterners know how to grow corn and feed cattle, but that's all you can penetrate their skulls with."

That was erroneous. Hardly had we returned to Montgomery than we read a Register editorial on Iowa discrimination against the Negro, and it revealed comprehensively just what we had it in mind to reveal. Soth was responsible for that. Further, we understand The Register ran the recent New York Times series on Northern race discrimination.

Then, on top of that, The Register comes through with today's editorial. This is the handsomest thing Iowa has done since 1939 when a deputation of Iowa legislators traveled to Montgomery to return the Alabama battle flags captured by Iowa soldiers in the Civil War.

But what Southerners must understand is that the Northern press is not cold to truth and reason. We cannot make much time with lustful Northern politicians, but we can make time with the Northern press. It simply has to catch up with the story that the Negro has migrated to the North and that he is encountering rejection. And eventually the Northern press will be asking itself, What is the basic difference in the emotional nature and morality of the Northerner and the Southerner?

It will not—The Advertiser must say again—relieve the South of its problem to reveal that Northern citizens react to Negroes en masse the same as Southerners, for despite the spectacular migration now in progress, the South will continue to have the mass of the Negro citizenry.

But truth is always worth revealing for its own sake, and more than that, if the Northern press is led to tell its readership the facts, it will diminish the ignorant, impatient clamor that the South conform immediately if not sooner.

Enlightenment of Northern editors is an essential. They must cease to associate the South and race prejudice as inevitably as spaghetti & meat balls, and see that it exists wherever the Negro migrates in significant numbers.

It would be interesting to have the editor of The New York Times and the Los Angeles Times estimate how many Negro citizens they have ever met and talked to. The number probably would be piddling.

38a 1956

SERIES - by- ELGIN WILLIAMS

Road To Integration

Informer Houston, Tex.

(Eleventh In A Series)

By ELGIN WILLIAMS

Sat. 1-14-56

Last week I had an interesting experience. I asked a member of the board of directors of the Austin Civic Theatre whether he had integrated or not. Usually one finds that actors are among the most progressive people and the least socially prejudiced in any given city. However, this man was an exception. He immediately began to throw facts and figures at me. He said that the people of Austin, including the members of his own theatre, would not approve of integrating its civic theatres which existed to minister to the social and artistic needs of the city. He said furthermore the Austin population would support good plays such as those of Sean O'Casey, Federico Garcia Lorca, and Barrie Stavis.

He went on to state as his sixty-four dollar argument that really good plays by playwrights such as I have named would not be attended by the people of Austin because most of the people are illiterate, uneducated Negroes and Mexicans.

He told me with a straight face that one third of Austin's population of 100,000 is Negro, one third is Mexican and the remaining one third is "white" — all of this as if he were an authority on statistics. In other words, this gentleman likes to have his argument both ways. On the one hand, he wants to be able to say that most of the people in Austin are white and will not tolerate a mixed theatre which would among other things produce modern progressive plays. On the other hand, he wants to be able to say that most of the people of Austin are not "white" and therefore presumably uncultured and therefore the civic theatres can't produce anything except Broadway junk and melodrama.

In fact there are about 32,000 Negroes in Austin and an equal number of Mexicans. In other words, one out of eight Austinites is a Negro and one out of eight is a Latin-American. Six out of eight are white Anglo-Americans.

It is well known, moreover, that minority groups are receptive to new ideas on the stage as elsewhere.

Furthermore, theatre groups in which both whites and Negroes participate have produced many great advances in American theatre history, notably during the depression in the WPA Theatre.

The Austin Civic Theatre could do well for its box office receipts, for its community relations, and for its contribution to dramatic art by integrating. I hope they integrate.

And I hope that these statistics will provide some small help as they start down the road to integration which everybody in this city from school children to the governor has begun to travel.

I believe that Austin actors will find that integration and a higher level of dramatic art will go together. Already they have scheduled the play, Tobacco Road, by Erskine Caldwell, to open January 20. This is a step in the right direction, because like James Joyce, O'Casey, Isben, and Shakespeare, Caldwell writes about real life.

The next step is integration. With integration the civic theatre will find itself producing more and more serious plays of high artistic calibre. Real life cannot be exiled from a theatre to which Negroes are admitted.

Decision Dodgers Hit Anti-Segregationists

World Fri. 3-16-56 P. 1

B'ham, Ala.

South Carolina Page Boy Fired By Legislators

COLUMBIA, S. C. — (INS) — The South Carolina legislature fired a 23-year-old page boy Wednesday for writing an anti-segregation article in a school newspaper.

Raymond L. Morton, a sutdent at the University of South Carolina, wrote an article in the Gamecock, the student publication, in which he severely criticized the state legislature for its anti-segregation activities.

He charged:

"The state senate and Southern governors have become an embarrassing sound truck for the South in the handling of the segregation issue."

He wrote that he was "ashamed to be called a Southerner" and that he was one "only by the biological accident of birth."

In announcing Morton's discharge from the $44-a-week part-time job, Lt. Gov. E. F. Hollings said:

"No employe who has made such criticisms could be kept on the payroll."

World

Morton explained that the article was merely an experiment to test campus reaction and added that he had already written another article explaining his motives. He said:

P. 8

"I didn't explain that ahead of time so I probably got what I deserved."

In the article he also criticizes a deceased aunt for "her ignorance and superstition" in refusing to allow him to associate with a Negro friend when he was a child.

"Her stupidity is reflected and echoed in every white citizens council in the South today," he declared.

Shoot Into NAACP Head's Home Again

Afro-A Mercor P. 3

Baltimore, Md.

By JOHN H. McCRAY

LAKE CITY, S.C. — Two shotgun blasts, fired almost simultaneously, smashed through the front door and a front window of the home of this city's NAACP branch president, Walter Scott, about 1 a.m. Sunday.

It was the second such attack on the Scott residence within one month.

They came four months after the parsonage of the Rev. J. A. DeLaine was fired upon and his flight from the state after returning the fire from an automobile in which four white men were riding.

Two of the occupants of the car were slightly injured by the Rev. DeLaine's bullets.

Sat. 3-17-56

AS IN the Rev. DeLaine case, Lake City and Florence County police officers say they have found nothing of evidence on which to make arrests.

Officers say the first shooting was reported to them a day late. They are "investigating" the Sunday morning shooting, they reported.

Mr. Scott said he had prepared for bed, Sunday morning and was resting on a studio couch near the front door when he heard a car stopped before the house.

The shotgun blasts followed immediately and the automobile sped away before he could see it, he stated.

He was uninjured. The first shooting occurred while he was attending church services, he said.

* * *

CIVIC LEADERS suspect that the Scott shooting climaxed a long campaign to intimidate Mr. Scott under an economic pressure campaign launched by the Lake City White Citizens Council, organized last summer.

Despite vigorous WCC efforts, they say, his employers at an automotive concern have refused to fire him.

The Scott "shooting" raised to six the number of similar incidents in recent months which have remained "unsolved."

Two similar attacks have been reported on the Fleming-DeLaine Funeral Home at Manning.

An unpublished shooting into the home of an Elloree woman, and the shooting into the home of NAACP State President James M. Hinton, a month ago, are affirmed incidents.

South Carolina Page Boy Fired By Legislators

Daily World P. 1 Thurs. 3-15-56

Atlanta, Ga.

COLUMBIA, S. C. — (INS) — The South Carolina legislature fired a 23-year-old page boy Wednesday for writing an anti-segregation article in a school newspaper.

Raymond L. Morton, a sutdent at the University of South Carolina, wrote an article in the Gamecock, the student publication, in which he severely criticized the state legislature for its anti-segregation activities.

He charged:

"The state senate and Southern governors have become an embarrassing sound truck for the South in the handling of the segregation issue."

He wrote that he was "ashamed to be called a Southerner" and that he was one "only by the biological accident of birth."

In announcing Morton's discharge from the $44-a-week part-time job, Lt. Gov. E. F. Hollings said:

"No employe who has made such criticisms could be kept on the payroll."

Morton explained that the article was merely an experiment to test campus reaction and added that he had already written another article explaining his motives. He said:

"I didn't explain that ahead of time so I probably got what I deserved."

In the article he also criticizes a deceased aunt for "her ignorance and superstition" in refusing to allow him to associate with a Negro friend when he was a child.

"Her stupidity is reflected and echoed in every white citizens council in the South today," he declared.

Pointing out that over $35,000 is being spent to keep fewer than six students at the law school, the group asked that they be admitted to existing colleges in the state.

State students eligible for out-of-state aid should also be admitted, the group said.

* * *

THE LEGISLATURE was asked to outlaw White Citizens Councils and other groups "whose membership is restricted by race and color."

Lawmakers were also asked to drop "obsolete" state laws requiring segregation in travel and recreational facilities.

The recommendations were sent to the members of the Legislature, Gov. George B. Timmerman Jr., South Carolina members of Congress and the press.

The committee set April 8 for its state convention in Columbia. It called for an interracial delegation to the Democratic National Convention.

Closed park, but open case

Afro-American Baltimore Md.

CHARLESTON, S.C. — Al-

Repeal segregation laws — S.C. Dems

Afro-American P. 4 Baltimore Md.

Sat. 3-17-56

COLUMBIA, S.C. — The executive committee of the South Carolina Progressive Democrats has asked the State Legislature to repeal all laws alluding to race.

This recommendation was included in a six-page statement drawn up in the committee's biennial session at Carpenter's Hall Sunday.

* * *

AN INTERRACIAL state commission to deal with the school issue was called a "necessary first step" toward integration by the committee.

The group also asked the repeal of state laws governing the law school at the state college in Orangeburg and out-of-state scholarships for colored students.

though, the State Legislature has closed Edisto Beach State Park the issue is still alive.

John H. Wrighten, attorney representing the plaintiffs who sought admission to the park, indicated this last week.

Sat. 3-17-56

He revealed that Federal Judge Ashton H. Williams had written attorneys for the state and the plaintiffs that since the legislature had passed legislation to close the park, he felt that the case was no longer active.

P. 3

Mr. Wrighten said that the issues have not been decided by the assembly's action. "By the same token the state closed the park, it can be opened through the same means," he said.

Judge Williams set March 21 as a hearing date on the case. He has been asked for a ruling ane way or the other to permanently settle the case.

Negroes Will Continue Fight In Park Case

Daily World Fri. 3-16-56 P. 1

Atlanta, Ga.

CHARLESTON, S. C. —(ANP)— Despite closing of Edisto Beach State Park by the state legislature, Negroes here announced last week that they will not abandon their right to seek admission to the park when and if it is reopened.

Atty. John H. Wrighten, one of the lawyers representing the four Negro plaintiffs, wrote federal Judge Ashton H. Williams that he and other lawyers will be in the U. S. Courtroom March 21, the date set by Judge Williams for the hearing.

The judge had written attorneys for both sides explaining that since the General Assembly had passed the law enabling the State Forestry Commission to close Edisto Beach Park, he saw no reason to continue the case.

Wrighten, in his letter, says the issues are not decided by closing the park.

Because the park is closed "by the same token the state closed the park it can open the park thru the same means," Wrighten said. "Therefore, this matter would never be settled if we were to withdraw our complaint at this time."

He added that the plaintiffs feel that the court should rule one way or the other so the matter may be permanently settled.

Condemn South Carolina Bias

World P5 Fri. 3-30-56

NEW YORK — The NAACP's objective of "first class citizenship for Negro Americans according to the Constitution and the laws of the land" apparently are "incompatible with the South Carolina conception of Americanism," Roy Wilkins, the Association's executive secretary, said here in commenting on South Carolina's newly enacted law barring NAACP members from employment by the state or any city or county in the state.

In signing the bill, Governor Geo. Bell Timmerman characterized the NAACP as an "insidious" organization trying to upset the laws, customs and traditions of the state and creating "turmoil" between the races. Apparently the bill is an effort to intimidate teachers as they are the only large group of public employees from which NAACP membership is recruited in the state.

Meanwhile, in Columbia, Rev. James M. Hinton, president of the South Carolina State Conference of NAACP Branches, announced that "this new discriminatory law will be tested in the federal courts, and little time will be lost in bringing such a case." He charged that the law "is a violation of rights guaranteed under the United States Constitution, and is a gross discrimination against those who join the NAACP," and predicted that it "will not stand the test before the courts of the land."

At Greenville, S. C., Dr. George F. K. Naylor, a visiting Australian Professor at Furman University, denounced the new law as embodying "the very principles of persecution which we resent as being characteristic of communism."

"A certain organization," he said, "whose social objectives appear to have been pursued with complete legal propriety has been selected as a victim to be persecuted because its views differ from those of the ruling classes."

Page boy pans S. C. senators, loses his job

Afro-American Baltimore, Md. Sat. 3-24-56

COLUMBIA, S.C. — Raymond L. Morton, 23, page in the South Carolina Senate and student at University of South Carolina, was fired last week for criticizing the solons' anti-integration stand.

Mr. Morton's article appearing in the Gamecock, student weekly at the university, said the "senate is intent on circumventing integration."

* * *

CONTINUING, he pointed out that he is a southerner by the "biological accident of birth," he added "I am ashamed to be called a southerner."

The student's ire was directed principally at bills barring NAACP members from state payrolls and allowing police officers to remove from a "white" school any child enrolled there by court order.

Segregation bills, page boy featured in S.C. Legislature

News & Courier Thurs. 3-15-56

COLUMBIA, S. C., March 15—(AP)—Three segregation bills and a page boy who got fired for criticizing the state Senate's segregation activities featured the legislative scene here yesterday.

Chief among the bills is a House-passed measure which would fire from state, county or local employment any members of the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People. The bill also would ban any future employment of NAACP members on South Carolina government payrolls.

THE 23-YEAR-OLD Senate page boy, Raymond L. Morton, was sacked for an article which appeared in The Gamecock, student weekly at the University of South Carolina.

"It was an experiment to test campus reaction," Morton said, "but I didn't explain that ahead of time and so I probably got what I deserved."

Morton's article said the Senate is "intent on circumventing" integration. It added: "I am ashamed to be called 'a Southerner'," and that he was a Southerner by "the biological accident" of birth.

TWO OF THE segregation bills went to Gov. George Bell Timmerman Jr. for his signature or veto.

One would allow police officers to transfer a Negro child enrolled by court order at a white school back to a Negro school to avoid "civil commotion."

The other would create a legislative-governor's committee to investigate the effect of activities of the NAACP at State College for Negroes.

HOLLINGS' OFFICE confirms the firing but no statutory reference was given. Newsmen speculated that the di[illegible] was made on the general theory that criticism by an employee was adjudged unwholesome.

But Morton wrote that Southern governors and legislators, now trying to circumvent the Supreme Court's school ruling are "embarrassing sound trucks for the South.

"I am ashamed to be called a Southerner," the youth who said he hopes to teach in the state, declared.

* * *

"TEXT OF THE article follows:

"Man's first passion was a grunt. With evolution he was molded and shaped his emotions with color and song and speech. Sing we must, else go mad. Speak we must, else the throat choke and burst with silent truths. Speak we must, before it is too late. Listen.

"I am ashamed to be called a 'Southerner.' By biological accident, I, like most of you, am a native South Carolinian. With you, I am a student at the University of South Carolina, a rather large school, admirably progressive in everything except the desire to forget the past.

"THROTTLED BY this slavish and solitary stigma, we are not attempting to free ourselves. Unconsciously we have been smothered and strangled with tradition, the so-called 'Southern' tradition, a backward-looking and odious attitude appropriately attributed only to the United Daughters of the Confederacy.

"For several years I have been a page in the State Legislature. They, too, form a rather large school. And this is a monumental session in 1956.

"Arrested by the decision of the 'nine evil old men' on the United States Supreme Court, they are intent on circumventing movements which would abolish segregation in our state. Southern governors and legislators have been the embarrassing sound trucks for the South.

"Tempered by custom, they speak with weighty, obstreperous and irrational voices. Never have they spoken for me and some of you. Never could they speak for those who feel as we do.

* * *

"BEING A Southerner, my decrying segregation is worse than damning a venerable old god. But most gods are merciful and understanding; many Southerners are not. Most gods are forgiving and broadminded; most state legislators are not.

"Twelve miles below Columbia on a bluff overlooking the Congaree Swamp, I was born. Clearly I remember racing through the haystacks, over the holy pastures green and blithe with the confusion of youth.

"The fields sang to us and our bodies ripened in the sun. My only playmate was Freddy, a Negro, and nothing I cared about the color of his skin.

"He was as young and free as I and every moment as merry. Then, one day, my visiting Auntie, an enormous woman who smeared lipstick on her forehead when she smiled, saw us drinking from the spring.

* * *

"WITH ALL the affected dignity of a Southern lady, she informed me that Freddy was a 'n—r,' and should never be caught drinking from the spring again. Freddy cowered away dumbfoundedly. I was abashed.

"Auntie died two years later, and both Freddy and I watched the funeral less than a hundred yards from the spring. There I discovered suddenly not sorrow, but hatred.

"I wanted to kick dirt in her embalmed face, a face representative of the ignorance and superstition of generations past.

"But Freddy cried, and all the fears of his young dark world cried pity, not hatred. Now Freddy is a part of a Korean hillside, and he died for the grace of people like Auntie.

"But Auntie's temperament did not die with her. Her stupidity is reflected and echoed in every Citizens' Council in the South today.

"THIS AMERICA IS: Sing to me of the sunlight of the human spirit pouring through open windows.

"This the South is: Slur to me your syllables of interposition.

"This America is: Show, don't dream to me of human dignity.

"This the South is: Move to the rear of the bus."

'I'm ashamed,' writes student; fired in S.C.

Afro-American Baltimore, Md. Sat. 3-24-56

COLUMBIA, S.C.—Lt. Gov. E. F. Hollings, Senate president, dismissed a legislative page Tuesday, following publication of an article the page is believed to have written in the University of South Carolina's student publication, The Gamecock, favoring integration.

Fired was 23-year-old Raymond L. Morton, an English major senior, whose March 9 Gamecock item criticized the state Senate and backers of segregation.

He drew $44 weekly take home pay and had been appointed a page in 1951 by Gov. George B. Timmerman Jr., who was then Lieutenant Governor.

MINISTER CLEARED ON FUGITIVE COUNT

Times

No Extradition Papers Filed for Desegregation Leader by South Carolina

P. 29

Proceedings against the Rev. Joseph A. DeLaine, African Methodist Episcopal minister charged with being a fugitive from South Carolina, were dismissed yesterday in Felony Court. Times 1-17-56

Magistrate David L. Malbin dismissed the warrant against the Negro minister after having been informed by Assistant District Attorney Carl A. Vergari that no extradition papers from South Carolina had reached New York. Newspaper

Mr. DeLaine was charged in Lake City, S. C., with felonious assault for assertedly shooting at a group of white persons. Mr. DeLaine contended that he had fired only in self-defense at the persons who, he said, were in automobiles that had sourrounded his home. The 56-year-old minister has been a leader in the fight against segregation, particularly in the schools.

Mr. DeLaine and his wife fled their Lake City home after the incident and received shelter in this city from the Right Rev. D. Ward Nichols, Presiding Bishop of the church's New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania district.

Minister Cites 'True Justice'

Outside the courtroom Mr. DeLaine, who calls himself a "political fugitive," said his being set free was an "example of true justice."

Bishop Nichols, who has assigned Mr. DeLaine as an assistant pastor at the Bethel A. M. E. Church at 65 West 132d Street, said that dismissal of the charge against Mr. DeLaine "strengthens belief in democracy."

"Throughout the entire South," Bishop Nichols said, "particularly in the states of Mississippi and South Carolina, groups of so-called citizens' councils are seeking by terror and intimidation to deprive not only Negroes but other whites as well of the fundamental rights of our democracy. Indeed they are conspiring to teach and overthrow the very pillars of social structure.

"One bright spot in this otherwise dark picture," he continued, "is the increasing tempo of the role of our churches as led by determined and dedicated men such as the Reverend DeLaine. These forces of evil will have to combat the full moral force of the Christian Church allied with other God-fearing religious bodies."

Times 1-17-56

Times p. 29

New York Times

38a 1956

Associated Press

CHARGE DISMISSED: The Rev. Joseph A. DeLaine, who was charged here with being a fugitive from justice. He was indicted in South Carolina for felonious assault.

Malbin ordered charges against the minister dropped when South Carolina failed to file an extradition request.

* * *

MOORE WAS one of four whites in the car upon which the Rev. Mr. DeLaine fired near his Lake City parsonage the night of Oct. 10. The minister said the car contained persons who were shooting up his home and he shot back to "mark it."

Timmerman, who on two occasions belabored the U.S. Justice Department for its refusal to arrest DeLaine, last month advised Florence County authorities.

It is not in the best interest of the South Carolina to seek extradition of the pastor who started the Clarendon County Case.

* * *

LAST WEEK told one lawyer in the case: "South Carolina is well rid of this professional agitator," referring to DeLaine.

Two men riding with Moore were injured by flying metal after a DeLaine bullet struck the car.

Subsequent revelations disclose that the fiery cleric and Moore had previously engaged in a dispute, arising out of a misunderstanding at Moore's filling station, located a block from the DeLaine parsonage.

Rev. DeLaine Cleared Of S. C. Fugitive Charges

Daily World P. 1 Atlanta, Ga.

NEW YORK — (ANP) — Rev. Joseph A. DeLaine, an AME minister charged with being a fugitive from justice in South Carolina, walked out of felony court a free man Monday after Magistrate David L. Malbin dismissed the charge.

The minister, a leader in the fight against segregation in schools, was charged in Lake City, S. C., with felonious assault for shooting at a group of white men. He contended that he fired in self-defense at the men who, he said, were in cars that had surrounded his home last October 10. 1-24-56

Magistrate Malbin cleared him of the fugitive count because no warrant has been received from South Carolina since the minister surrendered voluntarily to the New York district attorney November 25.

Rev. DeLaine and his wife fled their Lake City home after the incident and took refuge with Bishop D. Ward Nichols, presiding bishop of the AME church's New York, New Jersey and Pennsyvania district.

Outside the courtroom, the clergyman hailed his release as an "example of true justice."

Bishop Nichols, who has assigned Rev. DeLaine as an assistant pastor at the Bethel AME church here said that dismissal of the fugitive charge against the minister "strengthens belief in democracy."

"Throughout the entire south," Bishop Nichols said, "particularly in the states of Mississippi and South Carolina, groups of so-called terror and intimidation to deprive citizens' councils are seeking by not only Negroes but other whites as well of the fundamental rights of our democracy. Indeed they are conspiring to teach and overthrow the very pillars of social structure.

"One bright spot in this otherwise dark picture," he said, "is the increasing tempo of the role of our churches as led by determined and dedicated men such as the Rev. DeLaine. These forces of evil will have to combat the full moral force of the Christian Church allied with other God-fearing religious bodies."

Timmerman silent on DeLaine release

Afro-American P. 1 Sat. 1-28-56 Baltimore, Md.

COLUMBIA (S.C.) — Gov. George Bell Timmerman had no comment about the release in New York City of the Rev. J. A. DeLaine, former Lake City AME pastor, freed of a criminal warrant charges last Monday.

Magistrate David L. Malbin ordered dismissed in New York's Felony Court Monday, a fugitive warrant charge against the Rev. Mr. DeLaine, indicted last fall on an assault and battery charge filed in Florence County by James (Jack) Moore, white, of Lake City.

Shotgun Blast Rips Home of J. W. Hinton

Afro-American P. 3 Sat. 1-28-56 Baltimore, Md.

... By JOHN H. McCRAY

COLUMBIA (S. C.) — A shotgun blast, which boared through the walls and shattered a wall mirrow on the first floor, was pumped into the two-story farm home of James M. Hinton, state NAACP president, late Monday night.

Mrs. Hinton, placing the incident at "about 10 minutes of midnight," said she saw "an old model car" speeding away from the scene "making a lot of noise," a moment or two later.

No one was injured.

* * *

IT WAS ther fourth shooting-up of residences of NAACP leaders since last September, South Carolina-wise.

The Columbia Detective Division was investigating the Hinton shooting. But three days afterwards, although both had been notified and requested to enter the case, there was no official word indicating that the Richland County Sheriff's office, or the FBI, had joined city police.

It was the second act of violence directed against Mr. Hinton since he became state NAACP president in 1941.

* * *

IN 1949, a group of unidentified white men kidnapped him from his boarding place in Augusta, Ga., rode him into the woods and for some unexplained reason, released him without harm some distance away.

Mrs. Hinton told the AFRO, in brief:

She had returned around 9 p.m. from a PTA meeting at Booker T. Washington High School and after reading the afternoon paper, had gone upstairs, listened to two late news radio broadcasts and prepared for bed.

"I was in bed shortly after 10:30," she said, "but wasn't yet sleepy."

She was listening to the radio in her room and was about to turn it off when she heard "a terrific crash against the house."

MRS. HINTON said she rushed downstairs and discovered glass on the stairway. She saw her mirror on the wall of the reception room smashed, heard a car roaring away and dashed to the front porch to see it disappear.

Returning to the reception room, located at the southeast front corner of the house on Heidt St., she noted that shotgun pellets had done the damage. They were of the buckshot variety.

She notified her husband, who was in Augusta, Ga., and then police.

Earlier in the night after returning from the meeting, she said, she heard what she thought were two other blasts in the Lady St block along the west side of the home, while reading her paper downstairs.

* * *

AT ONE point, she said, "I heard a woman's voice saying, 'Let me out of this car."

It was not clear, however, whether these two blast were actually shots or backfiring of an automobile which may have had trouble.

Local papers had not reported the shooting Thursday, possibly because Mr. Hinton, his wife said, didn't want the incident publicized. However, news of it had stirred Columbia and a committee of men had been patrolling the Hinton home area, "heavily armed," since Tuesday night.

* * *

EFFORTS TO reach Mr. Hinton by telephone in Augusta were not immediately successful. His office reported him in Thomasville, Ga., on company business.

Other recent shootings occurred in Manning, where on two occasions shotgun blasts were pumped in the funeral home of Billy Flemming, a nephew of the Rev. J. A. DeLaine.

The Rev. Mr. DeLaine's former parsonage at Lake City, DeLaine said, was fired upon about 11:30 the night of last Oct. 10. He returned the pistol fire and immediately fled the state to New York City.

Rev. DeLaine, Wife Fugitives No More

Afro-American Sat. 1-28-56 P. 18
Baltimore, Md.

NEW YORK—"I am a political fugitive and my freedom is an example of true justice."

So observed the Rev. Joseph A. DeLaine, AME minister, Monday, after charges of being a fugitive from South Carolina were dismissed in Felony Court.

Magistrate David L. Malbin dismissed the warrant against the minister after having been informed by Assistant District Attorney Carl A. Vergari that no extradition papers from South Carolina had reached New York.

* * *

THE REV. MR. DELAINE was charged in Lake City, S.C. with felonious assault for assertedly shooting at a group of white persons.

The minister contended that he had fired only in self-defense at the persons, whom he stated, were in automobiles that surrounded his home.

The 56-year-old minister was a leader in the fight against segregation, particularly in the schools.

* * *

HE AND HIS wife received shelter in New York City from Bishop D. Ward Nichols, who presided over the AME's churches in New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

The Rev. Mr. DeLaine is an assistant pastor at the Bethel AME Church at 65 West 132nd St.

After the soft-spoken "refugee" made his brief statement, outside of the courtroom to reporters, Bishop Nichols commented:

"Throughout the entire South, particularly in the states of Mississippi and South Carolina, groups of so-called citizens' councils are seeking by terror and intimidation to deprive not only colored persons but other whites as well of the fundamental rights of our democracy.

"Indeed they are conspiring to teach and overthrow the very pillars of social structure.

* * *

"ONE BRIGHT spot in this otherwise dark picture is the increasing tempo of the role of our churches as led by determined and dedicated men such as the Reverend DeLaine.

"These forces of evil will have to combat the full moral force of the Christian Church allied with other God-fearing religious bodies."

REV. J. A. DeLAINE

RACIAL ISSUE SHUTS SO. CAROLINA PARK

Sunday 2-12-56
New York

EDISTO BEACH, S. C., Feb. 9 (UP)—The Edisto Beach State Park, which is under attack in the Federal courts for racial segregation, was closed today by the State Commission of Forestry. Sun. 2-10-56

One of twenty-one South Carolina state parks, Edisto is the first public facility ordered closed in the state as a result of the segregation crisis.

In several other places in the South public park and golf course facilities have been leased for token sums to private organizations to keep them segregated. Georgia has a new law authorizing sale of public parks threatened with racial integration.

Park Superintendent Donald B. Cooler said here that he had received orders yesterday from T. O. Ravenel, assistant state parks director, to close the parks. Mr. Cooler said Mr. Ravenel had told him the forestry commission had voted unanimously to order the park closed.

The park is the only one in the state system that is segregated by a specific act of the Legislature. Other parks fall under the general laws regarding segregation.

S. C. Park Awaits Integration Orders

Afro-American P. 3
Baltimore, Md.

CHARLESTON, S.C. — An order to remove "white only" signs from Edisto Beach State Park was taken under advisement Monday by Judge Ashton H. Williams in U.S. District Court here after four plaintiffs sued to wipe out racial lines.

Plaintiffs in the injunction suit are Mrs. Etta Clark, J. Arthur Brown, John L. Chisholm and Charles C. Mason, all officers of the local NAACP. They are represented by John H. Wrighten of this city and W. Newton Pough of Orangeburg.

Sat. 2-18-56

WHILE REPEATING his disagreement with the May 31 U.S. Supreme Court decision which struck down segregation in public schools, Juge Williams indicated that he would sing the order banning segregation at the park.

He pointed out that integration might lead to racial unrest at the state park, but made it clear that his personal beliefs had no weight since he was bound by rulings of both the Supreme Court and Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals.

None of the remaining 20 state parks, five of them set aside for colored persons, would be affected by the Edisto Beach case, counsel for both sides and Judge Williams agreed.

* * *

IT WAS pointed out by counsel for the state that the Edisto Beach Park is the only one segregated "by law," it having been created by a special legislative act under which all save white were excluded in 1935.

On the other hand, legal experts assert that although integration could be effected at the other parks without action, it might still be necessary because of the long standing practice of exclusion followed at socalled "white beaches."

Both Mrs. Clark and Mr. Brown testified that after trying for five years to get a state park in this area, they and other plaintiffs wrote to the Edisto Beach superintendent last May for permission to use it.

The superintendent, Donald B. Coller, named defendant in the suit and the only state witness, testified that he had rejected the request of the plaintiffs because state law forbade use of the park by colored persons.

* * *

JAMES S. VERNER, assistant attorney general, whose argument was in the main an attack on the NAACP and a charge that the case was "trumped up" in agitation drew a near shouting taunt from Mrs. Clark.

Telling her that her insistence upon integration would probably result in closing the park, thus depriving white people of the use of its facilities, he asked: "Does this mean anything to you?"

Mrs. Clark replied: "They never cared how I suffered. Why should I worry over them now?"

In a lengthy exchange from the bench with Mr. Brown over what might happen if the park is integrated, Judge Williams said it might result in "criminal elements from both sides" provoking trouble.

* * *

MR. BROWN replied: "Sometimes we contemplate something is going to happen, we wait for it and it never does happen."

He then cited harmonious interracial voting in Democratic primaries here integrated relations at the local Navy Yard and use of facilities in the Federal court building (in which the hearing was held) as examples of how things might actually work out.

"Your honor, I find that people generally manage to work out things among themselves if given the chance," Mr. Brown told the court.

Mr. Brown agreed with Judge Williams that at first there might be some reluctance on the part of white persons, but added that that reluctance would disappear in time.

* * *

JUDGE WILLIAMS' action on the order is expected soon, following submission of final briefs by counsel for the state, represented at the hearing by Mr. Verner and Attorney General T. C. Callison.

Other defendants in the case, in addition to the park superintendent, are C. H. Flory, state forester, and C. West Jacobs, state parks director.

Following the hearing, which began at 10 a.m. and ended shortly after 1 p.m., the AFRO questioned some 39 colored spectators (15 whites were also present in the tiny courtroom) on their reactions to closing of the park as had been threatened.

They were unanimous to a person in the opinion:

* * *

"HOW CAN we miss something we've never had? Well, if nobody has a park around here, then we'll all be in the same boat, which is exactly what we want. Perhaps we'll then be paying less for the white man's so-called 'exclusive' rights."

Two days after the hearing, faced with the threat of an integration order by Judge Williams, a legislator introduced a bill in the legislature Wednesday aimed at preventing integration at state parks.

The bill, which would close "forthwith" Edisto Beach State Park and remand it to the custody of a caretaker "until such time" as further action is deemed necessary, was sent to the senate finace committee.

NAACP Maps Court Fight Against So. Carolina Ban

Columbia, S. C. (ANP)—State NAACP President James M. Hinton, serving notice that South Carolina has another court battle on its hands, issued a "to whom it may concern" letter last week stating the NAACP will test in federal court the state's new law banning NAACP members from public employment.

Declaring that the law is unconstitutional and a "gross discrimination" against NAACP members, Hinton said "little time will be lost" in bringing a test case.

The controversial law was enacted by the General Asembly and signed by Gov. John Bell Timmerman two weeks ago. It states that NAACP membership is "wholly incompatible with the peace, tranquility and progress that all citizens have a right to enjoy."

Hinton said the General Assembly should recall 1944, when as assembly removed all primary laws from the books in an effort to block Negro primary voting. He pointed out that the federal courts then "lost no time in opening the South Carolina Democratic primary to Negroes."

"History will repeat itself," he added.

"Night Riders" Fire Into Motel

COLUMBIA, S. C. (ANP) — White "Night Riders" last week showed their approval of the state legislature's crackdown on the NAACP by firing a shotgun blast into a motel owned by an NAACP official.

The blast, fired from a passing automobile knocked out a neon sign in front of the Silverbeth Motor Court owned by Mrs. Andrew W. Simpkins secretary of the state branch of the NAACP.

Only a few hours earlier, Gov. Bell Timmerman had signed an anti-NAACP bill which bars state employees from membership in the civil rights group.

Sam Wilson, manager of the motel which is eight miles north of here on U. S. Highway No. 1 said he saw the shot fired but was unable to get a look at occupants in the car.

The shot was the second fired into the motor court in eight days. The first one broke several window panes and punctured screens, but no one was hurt.

A month ago, a charge of buckshot was fired into the front door of the Columbia home of James M. Hinton, state NAACP president.

White Ministers Of S. C. Town Not Willing To Confer With Negro Group

Dr. Odell R. Reuben, president of Morris College, Sumter, S. C., was the guest speaker on Friday at Florida Normal and Industrial Memorial College in St. Augustine in a special chapel sponsored by the Student Council, with Jefferson Jones of Gainesville, vice persident of the council presiding.

In a very forceful presentation Dr. Reuben used the parable of the Good Samaritan to delineate the three philosophies which are at work in the world today as truly as in the time of Jesus. The robbers who set upon the man going down to Jericho represent the way of POWER, the way of MIGHT. "But," said the speaker, "the way of power and might will never bring to our world peace and happiness for mankind."

In maintaining that any system, any nation, or any world which bases its way of life on the philosophy of power, of majority rule in the sense of exploitation of any people, will eventually come to naught.

Dr. Reuben mentioned that the state in which he lives has passed a law making it impossible for any person affiliated with the NAACP to hold at state job. Another bill under consideration, he stated would cause any church in which an NAACP rally was held to lose its tax exemption.

The second philosophy, exemplified by the priest in the parable, and representing religion, was seen by the speaker to be indifference. Just as the priest in the parable "passed by on the other side," ignoring the ineeds of the man who had been beaten and left to die by the robbers, so many of the religionists of today might seem to be placing themselves in this category.

Dr. Reuben cited an effort on the part of the Mayor in the city in which he lives, "a lovely mayor—a woman," to bring together for conference on the school desegregation issue the ministers of the city, both white and colored. Most of the colored group came, the speaker stated, but the Mayor received a letter—in the meeting—from the white ministerial alliance which said, "We are sorry we cannot meet with you and participate in what you have in mind."

A startling illustration of the far-reaching effects of seemingly trival incidents was pointed up by the speaker, who stated he personally, only six days after the arrest of a visiting colored minister—because he entered the waiting room at the depot in Sumter, received a letter from a friend in Rome which mentioned by name the persons involved in this incident and spoke of the fact that the newspapers in Rome were making much of it to denote that the American way of life is not what it is claimed to be.

Bringing to a strong conclusion his plea for the choice of the Samaritan's way, Dr. Reuben pointed out that the Samaritan of the parable, although the "Jews had no dealings with the Samaritans," rose above the bonudaries of race and class and creed to recognize that this was a person created in the image of God and entitled to all the binefits of which he was himself entitled; so he got down off his horse to lend a helping hand. "Somehow" the speaker declared, "our world has got to see men as infiitely precious in the sight of God." Dr. Reuben recalled that Jesus, on one occasion, when he had restored the sight to a blind man asked what he saw; whereupon the man replied, "I see men walking like trees." Jesus, not satisfied with the reply, asked the question again, and was told, "I see men walking like men." Dr. Reuben declared: "We must see men walking like men . . . Unless this comes about there will not be peace . . . The way of power is not the answer; the way of indifference is not the answer; but somehow the world must grasp the philosophy of the Good Samaritan."

Democrats Defiant In South Carolina

Special to The New York Times.

COLUMBIA, S. C., March 24—South Carolina Democrats closed ranks today and called for an organized stand for states rights at the party's national convention and afterward, if necessary.

The Democrats, at a state party convention, voted to reconvene after the National Convention, and urged other state parties to follow suit.

Today's biennial meeting was marked by an attempt to heal the schisms of the last eight years.

There was no mistaking the temper regarding states rights, the Supreme Court desegregation decision and related matters. Speakers were applauded as they condemned the Federal Government's "unlawful usurpation" of power.

In urging United action, the State party officially invited other parties to join in setting up a steering committee to draft a program of constitutional government for presentation to the national convention.

The invitation also suggested a meeting of all delegates from the South "and other interested states" at least a day before the National Convention to consider the steering committee program.

It proposed that all cooperating state conventions stand in recess, instead of adjourning, and be ready to meet again to consider such joint action as might be suggested by the steering committee.

This was interpreted as a threat to deny a majority of the Electoral College to either party if national tickets and platforms were unacceptable. Such a move could force the Presidential election to revert to the House of Representatives, in which each state would have one vote and a united South would be in a strong bargaining position.

Elects Delegation

The convention elected an uninstructed delegation of forty members, each with half a vote, to the national convention. Among them were Gov. George Bell Timmerman, Senators Olin D. Johnston and J. Strom Thurmond and State Senator Edgar Brown, who was renamed national executive committeeman.

Missing were former Gov. James F. Byrnes, who asked that his name not be considered, and most of the state's Congressmen.

In the strongest show of harmony, Senator Thurmond helped to escort Mr. Brown to the platform and chatted with him. Thus they publicly ended the bitterness that grew out of their 1954 contest for the Senate. Mr. Thurmond triumphed on a wave of write-in votes.

Governor Timmerman, labeling the move for desegregation "un-American," said a joint recessing of Southern party conventions would demonstrate to party leaders in other sections "that we wish to work out our problems within our own party if we can, but that we are determined to maintain our position on a matter so vitally important."

Despite the outward harmony, there was a noticeable difference in emphasis between two major groups.

One, led by Neville Bennett, State Party Chairman, wanted to "work out our difficulties" through the national party, possibly on a "give-and-take basis."

The other, and apparently larger faction emphasized the differences between South Carolinians and both national parties. It urged the strongest protest and a determined stand.

NEGRO AIDE WINS ON SEGREGATION

South Carolina Town Drops Charge of Using a Rail Station's Front Door

FLORENCE, S. C., Feb. 28 (UP)—City Attorney Wylie Caldwell declined to press charges tonight against Florence Mitchell

Washington Negro leader charged with attempting to use the front door of the Florence railroad station.

New York N.Y.

Mr. Mitchell, director of Washington bureau of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said, "I hope that this will be an end to segregation in Florence."

He and the Rev. Horace Sharper, Negro Baptist minister of Sumter, were arrested last night. They were attempting to enter by the front door of the Florence railroad station where Mr. Mitchell had train reservations for Washington.

When the case was called by Recorder William H. Smith, Mr. Caldwell said, "I have investigated this matter with the arresting officer and a conviction is unlikely since we do not have a city ordinance covering the case. I hereby move that the case be nolle prossed."

Dismissal Is Asked

Lincoln C. Jenkins of Columbia, one of three Negro attorneys representing Mr. Mitchell, asked Mr. Smith to "dismiss" the charges.

However, Mr. Smith said since innocent pleas had been entered by both defendants before the motions had been made, he would grant Mr. Caldwell's motion that the case not be prosecuted rather than dismissing it completely.

A police spokesman said Mr. Mitchell had been charged with "violation of Section 417, failure to obey an officer acting in discharge of his duty."

Signs designating "white" and "colored" entrances to the station were removed last Jan. 10. At that time, an Interstate Commerce Commission order to integrate public waiting rooms for interstate passengers became effective.

Some South Carolina cities have erected signs reading "White intrastate passengers only" outside former all-white waiting rooms.

Mr. Mitchell also was represented at the hearing by William Bennett and E. D. Turnage, both of Florence.

F. B. I. Begins Inquiry

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28—The Federal Bureau of Investigation began an inquiry today into the arrest of Mr. Mitchell.

A Justice Department spokesman said the department had heard about the case through news reports and had decided to look into it. The F. B. I. will simply "get the facts," he said.

The I. C. C. ruled last Nov. 25 that segregation was unconstitutional in interstate travel. It ordered railroads to end any segregation of facilities in trains or in waiting rooms.

Compliance with the order has been irregular in the South. Segregation has ended quietly in large areas, but in other places local officials have said that regardless of what the railroads do they would enforce segregation.

Officials of the N. A. A. C. P. here said Mr. Mitchell had been in South Carolina to make a speech and had no intention of making a test case on the I. C. C. ruling. But they said the incident could result in a judicial test.

Baptist Church, received a telephone call warning him that if the meeting were held in the church it would lose its tax exemption. The meeting was held in the church.

When newspapermen asked Mr. Price why he attended the April 22 meeting, he said: "There has been a lot of telephone calling relative to this meeting. I don't want another Alabama or Mississippi incident in South Carolina. That's why I am here."

In his speech, Mr. Mitchell praised Florence citizens who rallied to support him when he was arrested. He condemned the White Citizens Councils as a movement which results in violence of the type used on a singer Nat (King) Cole in Birmingham, Ala., recently.

"The process of making the South a part of America is being foolishly sabotaged by those who seek to line up the good people of the area with the forces of lawlessness and disruption," Mr. Mitchell declared.

Chief Price, who is said to be a member of the White Citizens Councils, expressed regret for the arrest on Feb. 27, explaining that he was out of town when the incident occured.

Mr. Mitchell was arrested on that date when he attempted to enter a Florence railway station waiting room. Although no signs designated the room as "whites only," three local policemen took Mr. Mitchell and the Rev. Horace Harper of Sumter, S. C., to the local police station. The two men were charged with resisting an officer in performance of his duty, but the charges were dropped.

White Official Says Crack Negroes' Skulls

Courier Sat. 5-12-56 P. 2

'Heads Should Be Bashed'

Pittsburgh Pa.

UNION COUNTY, S. C.—State representative Hart of this county blasted the Florence city officials for the manner in which they handled the Clarence Mitchell-H. P. Sharper arrests last week.

Hart said in a prepared statement, "Bashing Mitchell's head would have had a highly salutary effect on integration philosophy in the Florence area."

Condemning the "jelly-fish" manner in which they handled "Clarence Mitchell's flagrant violation of S. C. segregation customs," Hart said, "Local NAACP members can be expected to imitate Mitchell on a wholesale scale."

In a direct appeal to violence Hart said, "We must have a showdown sooner or later and it is doubtful that a better opportunity will ever present itself.

"A few cracked heads here and there would avert bloodshed on a larger scale later on. There is more law and order in a South Carolina night stick than in a sociological U. S. Supreme Court decision."

S. C. Police Chief Acts To Keep His State's Good Name

Nashville Tenn.

FLORENCE, S. C., April 26.—Chief of Police Julian Price, whose men arrested NAACP Washington Bureau Director Clarence Mitchell in February, was in a front seat as a spectator when the latter spoke at a Florence NAACP membership meeting here last week.

Prior to the meeting, the Rev J. J. Abney, pastor of Trinity

State Stands Firm on Bus Segregation

Daily Defender Chicago, Ill. P. M. 5-19-56

Columbia, S. C., May 10 (AP)—The South Carolina public service commission said today the United States Supreme court has not ruled on intrastate travel segregation laws, and explained why it thinks so.

It said South Carolina laws requiring white and Negro passengers to ride separately on trains and buses within the state "are in full force and effect" despite a recent action of the Supreme court.

The Supreme court refused April 23 to review a case from Columbia in which a Negro woman, Sara Mae Flemming, had sued the city bus operators for $25,000 because a driver insisted she sit separate from white passengers.

Disagree on Meaning

The court's refusal to review has been widely interpreted as upholding a 4th Circuit Court of Appeals ruling in the case that bus segregation is unconstitutional. Some government lawyers disagreed.

In its ruling the Appeals court contradicted a District court decision by Judge George Bell Timmerman Sr.—father of South Carolina's governor—that segregation was not a valid cause of action.

The public service commission said the sole reason the Supreme court refused to review the case was that it will not consider any case until a District court has rendered a final judgment.

Not Ripe for Review

The commission said that since the Columbia case had not been tried on its merits in the District court, there has been no final judgment. The statement added that "the Supreme court's action therefore merely means that the case is not yet ripe for its decision."

The Supreme court's only reference in the dismissal was to Slaker vs. O'Connor, a case in which the commission said the court declared it would not review a case until after final trial judgment.

Thus, the state commission said, the high court actually has not ruled one way or the other on bus segregation. This view is also taken by a number of lawyers, including Atty. Gen. T. C. Callison of South Carolina.

At S. C. Colored Church

Sheriff Forces Whites To Close Religious Revival

Journal + Guide P. 1 Sat. 6-2-56

Norfolk Va.

MANNING, S. C.—Sheriff J. . Jackson of Clarendon county, S. C. is not ready for mixed ublic schools or race mixing t church services. That was made clear last week when the sheriff forced a group of white men and women to leave the county because they were conducting services in a rural Negro church.

Word reached the sheriff that a group of about a dozen men and women and one child had conducted one service at the Negro Sanctified church at New Davis Station.

* * *

ACCORDING TO Sheriff Jackson the group told him when he investigated the report that they were Canadians and members of the Church of Triumph. They also said they had been given permission to conduct the services by a Negro bishop.

The sheriff said the group finally agreed to leave when he told them he would have to enforce state laws requiring the races to be segregated. The group countered, however, with the statement that the U. S. Supreme Court had declared segregation unconstitutional.

The group was traveling in automobiles from Minnesota, California and Manitoba, Canada. The sheriff said the women wore ankle-length white dresses and the men burlap vests.

At the sheriff's insistence the group finally left without creating any disturbance.

Mr. Byrnes Vs. The Court

(From The New York Times)

For thirty years a member of House or Senate, for a year associate justice of the Supreme Court, a top-ranking executive in wartime agencies, Secretary of State, Governor of South Carolina—James F. Byrnes has enjoyed a lifetime of distinguished public service. One can only feel a sense of sorrow that he deems it necessary to cap his long and remarkable career with an intemperate attack on the Supreme Court, apparently because he dislikes and fears its unanimous decision outlawing segregation in the public schools.

Mr. Byrnes has the right of every American citizen to say what he likes about the court or any other of our revered political institutions. But what he said neither reflects credit on himself nor shakes the wisdom and legality of the Supreme Court's noted decision of May 17, 1954. "The court did not interpret the Constitution—the court amended it," complains Mr. Byrnes in this week's U. S. News & World Report.

We would not deny that the line between constitutional interpretation and legislative decision on the part of the Supreme Court is sometimes ultra-fine, nor that in a sense the court amends—or, if you prefer, interprets—the Constitution in accordance with its own views of the law. It has done so since the days of John Marshall, through the days of Taney, and on to the days of Warren—with every prospect that it will do the same in the future. What was a minority opinion once upon a time—the first Justice Harlan's view of segregation, for example—becomes majority opinion a generation or two later.

Mr. Byrnes professes alarm over "the demonstrated willingness of the Supreme Court to disregard our written Constitution and its own decisions" and "to destroy the powers of the forty-eight states." In 1941 the Supreme Court overturned a California anti-migrant law. In an opinion explicitly rejecting an earlier decision the justice who spoke for the court said: "We do not consider ourselves bound by the language referred to * * *" He was not afraid to overturn old theory, which in this modern day he found "no longer fits the facts." As to restrictions on state powers, he wisely noted: "It is frequently the case that a state might gain momentary respite from the pressure of events by the simple expedient of shutting its gates to the outside world. But, in the words of Justice Cardozo: "The Constitution was framed * * * upon the theory that the people of the several states must sink or swim together, and that in the long run prosperity and salvation are in union and not division." The man who handed down this opinion which invalidated anti-migrant laws in some twenty-seven states was Justice Byrnes.

We do not maintain that the court is always right; but we do maintain that it is foolishness to attempt to intimidate it or to curb its powers because of dissatisfaction with a specific decision. It is especially foolish to attack it with as many irrelevances—covering everything from communism to miscegenation—as Mr. Byrnes has seen fit to use in his demand that "the Supreme Court must be curbed."

Runs Sheriff In S. C. Chases Worshipers

Church Group Was Conducting Religious Service

MANNING, S. C. — (ANP) — A group of white missionaries who were conducting services at a Negro church in Clarendon county were run out of the area last week by Sheriff J. T. Jackson.

According to Jackson, the group, numbering about 15 men and women and one child, had conducted one service and were preparing for a second when the sheriff ordered them to leave the county for violation of the state's segregation laws.

The church was a Negro "sanctified church" near Davis Station. Jackson and Deputy W. C. Epps investigated after being told that the group was unloading boxes at the church.

Jackson said the men and women told they were Canadians and members of the Church of Triumph who had come "to serve fellow members."

They said they knew the church was for Negro members and had been given permission to use it by "a Negro bishop."

At first, according to Jackson, the group tried to argue with him by reminding him that the Supreme Court had declared segregation unlawful.

The sheriff ended the argument by ordering them to leave. He reported that within 30 minutes the group was out of Clarendon county.

Jackson added a footnote to the incident:

As he followed the group driving away from the church, two Negro women working in nearby cotton fields dropped their hands and called to him: "Thank you all for getting them out of this church."

Bus Segregation Suit Voided Anew

Carolina Judge Acts Second Time

COLUMBIA, S. C., June 13 (U.P.) — A South Carolina federal judge dismissed for the second time today a suit against a segregated bus system, holding that a higher court did not make "retroactive" its ruling that "Jim Crow" seating is illegal.

Judge George Bell Timmerman Sr., father of South Carolina's outspoken segregationist governor, thus maintained his own consistent record in favor of the state's traditional color barriers. He was a member of a court panel that twice upheld segregated schooling before it was reversed by the U. S. Supreme Court in the historic 1954 decree.

The 75-year-old judge today granted the South Carolina Electric and Gas Co.'s motion to throw out a $25,000 damage suit by Sarah Mae Flemming after overnight "reflection." He had declined to grant the motion yesterday.

The Negro woman had asserted her civil rights were violated when she was ordered from a seat in the front of a crowded bus where white persons ordinarily sit. Once before Timmerman had tossed out the suit but the plaintiff appealed to the U. S. Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals which held that segregated seating was illegal in intra-state transportation and remanded the case for determination of damages.

The utility company which operates the buses then sidestepped both lower courts to appeal to the Supreme Court which declined to intervene on grounds no judgment had been returned in the district or regional courts. The high court's action was interpreted in some quarters as a precedent against segregated seating on local transit runs. But technically it applied only to the Southeastern states in the Fourth Circuit.

Federal Jurist Nixes Bias Suit

COLUMBIA, S. C. — Surprising to no one who is familiar with the region and its deep-seated prejudices, Federal Judge George Bell Timmerman dismissed the $25,000 damage suit of Mrs. Sarah Mae Fleming Brown against the South Carolina Electric and Gas Company.

He based his action on the grounds that S. C. law requiring segregation of the races on the buses had not been repudiated. (South Carolina still does not recognize the fact that the U. S. Supreme Court has invalidated its state laws on segregation.)

Timmerman ruled that "no person has the civil right to violate a valid and existing state law."

BUS SUIT TOSSED OUT SECOND TIME

Judge Again Dismisses Segregation Case

COLUMBIA, S. C., June 13 (AP) — US District Judge George Bell Timmerman Sr., Wednesday dismissed a second time a celebrated bus segregation case.

Mrs. Sarah Mae Fleming Brown, Columbia Negro woman, sought $25,000 actual and punitive damages on the ground that her civil rights were violated by a bus driver for South Carolina Electric & Gas Co.

She contended the bus driver ordered her to vacate a front seat in a crowded bus in June, 1954, and then struck her with his fist when she attempted to leave the bus by the front exit.

After Judge Timmerman dismissed the action originally, the US circuit court of appeals reversed the action when it held that segregation on buses operating within states is unconstitutional.

When the suit was appealed by the company, with the backing of the state and city of Columbia, the US Supreme court last April refused to review the case. At first it was believed that the Supreme court action upheld the circuit court decision but later it was interpreted to mean the appeal was premature.

In dismissing the action again, Judge Timmerman did so on the ground that the circuit court decision could not be made to apply retroactively. The bus driver, he said, was acting at the time under "valid and subsisting" state law requiring segregation of races in public transportation.

The company, therefore, could not be liable, Judge Timmerman said.

He also held that the plaintiff's testimony Tuesday was that no white people were behind her when she took the seat from which she was ordered by the bus driver.

The order for her to move, Timmerman said, had to be for some other reason than her color. That reason, he added, would be outside the court's jurisdiction.

Trial of the case, which began Tuesday never reached the all-white jury.

In dismissing the action, Judge Timmerman reversed his rejection late Tuesday of a defense motion for a directed verdict on grounds the Negro woman had not shown the bus driver failed to act in "good faith" in accordance with law in effect at the time.

S. C. State NAACP probe unit named

Afro-American P. 1

Sat. 7-14-56

COLUMBIA, S.C. — An all-white nine-man committee was completed last week to investigate NAACP sympathies around S.C. State College in Orangeburg.

Speaker Sol Blatt of Barnwell, of the House of Representatives, announced Tuesday he had appointed the following persons to the committee:

Reps. Jerry M. Hughes, Jr. of Orangeburg, whose bill providing for the probe was passed earlier this year by the state legislature; Philip B. Finklea of Florence and P. Eugene Brabham of Bamberg.

• • •

EARLIER THE state Senate had named Senators James Hugh McFadden of Clarendon County, Earl E. Morris, Jr., Pickens and W. A. Lawton of Hampton County.

Afro-American

Governor George Bell Timmerman, Jr. appointed to the committee A. O. Rickenbacker of Cameron, Herbert W. Fogle of Denmark and A. T. Graydon of Columbia.

S. C. State Trustee Board secretary, W. C. Bethea, had told newsmen several days before Blatt's announcement that the probing would get under way "soon."

• • •

EFFORTS TO contact state NAACP leaders for comment, weren't successful immediately, but both they and other civic leaders have unanimously agreed that such a probing was at best anti-integration propaganda, and sponsored by the White Citizens Council.

The last reported NAACP activity at the college was during the 1949-50 academic year, and under the administration of the late State College president, Dr. Miller F. Whittaker, who died in 1949.

There had been a Youth Council (chapter) on the campus, but student leaders charged that president Benner C. Turner, elected for the 1950-51 year, and subsequently, has not approved such activity.

• • •

EXPELLED STUDENT Council president Fred H. Moore told the AFRO that, at the request of students, he had asked Turner permission to re-organize a campus NAACP unit at the beginning of the 1955-56 school year and was refused.

Students, Moore said, adopted a plan by which some affiliated with the chapter at Claflin College, across the fence from S.C. State, with NAACP branches in their hometowns, and by direct application to the national NAACP office in New York City.

During the several weeks of protests and demonstrations against segregation and coddling of WCC products on the campus the undergound student sheet "The Free Press," repeatedly urged students to "Join the NAACP."

• • •

WHILE Orangeburg NAACP leaders said "hardly more than five" adults at the college held memberships in the local branch, "better than 95 per cent of the 197-member staff and faculty drafted a pro-integration, pro-NAACP statement in April and filed it with trustees. Turner and trustees fired four of the number; several others resigned forthwith at the end of the school year.

Alumni and other leaders concerned with the issues around the college told the AFRO that an investigation is welcomed, listing a number of reasons for their views:

1. An investigation will not and cannot disclose NAACP activity on the campus, which one man said, "Is at most a reflection upon the staff, faculty members and president.

• • •

2. EXPEDITE, perhaps, the expected climax to a state move to outlaw the NAACP and disqualify its members from public jobs.

3. Speed integration in state colleges and universities. One spokesman explained this as meaning that should further efforts be made to "intimidate students and faculty members, most of these would walk out and stay out, and seek entrance at white colleges."

• • •

ONE ORANGEBURG NAACP leader, commenting on the committee, said:

"The NAACP doesn't have to spend its time directing the actions of citizens, such as are at the college. The NAACP is a legal-aid organization.

"Everything we've been interested in at S.C. State College has been placed before Federal courts. We've had complete success in this approach. So far as I know, we have no intention of deserting the high plane we're worked on thus far.

He indicated, however, that the organization's state president, James M. Hinton, might issue a statement shortly clarifying the course NAACP will pursue, if one is necessary, when the committee makes its report.

NAACP Official Freed of Charge

Legal P. 2-A

Wed. 2-29-56

FLORENCE, S.C. — (AP) — Charges of resisting a police officer, the outgrowth of a disturbance at the railroad station here, were nolle-prossed in city court Tuesday. City Atty. Wylie Caldwell told City Judge William Smith that he did not think he could obtain a conviction after Clarence Mitchell, director of the Washington Bureau of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, and The Rev. Horace P. Sharper, a Negro minister, were arrested for refusing to use a railroad station entrance reserved for Negroes.

Bonner Answers Charges

Courier Dec. 2

Pittsburgh, Pa.

Sat. 12-8-56

COLUMBIA, S. C. — Bishop I. H. Bonner of South Carolina told reporters here that he is unequivocally in favor of an all-out fight for full integration.

"I have at no time favored segregation in any form, whether it be first or second class," the Bishop said in replying to charges that he had stated he "preferred first-class segregation to second-class integration" in a sermon delivered in Chicago recently.

"As in my Chicago speech, I reiterate that I feel that we must be prepared to fully accept the responsibility of full citizenship and not go into a battle ill-equipped to face a well-armed opposition," the Bishop said.

"This is the philosophy I hope to implant here as the chairman of the board of Allen University. It is the philosophy I wish to impart to ministers in my charge while serving as spiritual head of the church in South Carolina.

■

"AS A native of the South and one who has served a number of years as a servant of God and of my people, no one can say I have ever cowed to anyone. I have been accused of attempting to ease my way into a hostile situation here in South Carolina. Can South Carolina be any more hostile than Alabama, my native state and the state in which I served as Bishop for the last four years?

I never supported segregation in Alabama nor will I do so in South Carolina. I do feel, howver, that a man, regardless of his courage must be armed with the proper weapons before entering battle with any opposition," the Bishop said.

"Here in South Carolina, as in Alabama, I urge my ministers to major in the thing they are called to do . . . to serve the spiritual needs of their congregations. In this area there is much to do. Let them support political efforts. Let them support organizations devoted to the improvement of human relations. But in doing so they cannot neglect their duties as spiritual leaders of a people who are much in need of such services.

■

"AS IN the area of religion, so Allen University serves a much needed place in the area of education. It is our task to prepare our young people to handle a man-sized job when they go out into their respective communities to assume the responsibilities of citizenship.

"Allen University must be recognized as a first-class college . . . not just a Negro college . . . just as our graduates must be recognized as first-class citizens.

"We must work on this problem from the inside of people as well as the outside. If we can get people to think right they will naturally act right. Tht's simple, plain common sense. And that is the task that confronts every man dedicated to the work of the Lord in this nation today . . . to get people to straighten out their hearts and their minds on this matter of human relations."

Irked By Threats, 15 Leave Academy

Afro-American Baltimore, Md. Sat. 7-21-56

By Special Correspondent

CAMDEN, S.C.— Harassed by anonymous threats, questioning by local police officers and "get out" advice from city officials, a 15-member teenage work camp group, 10 of them white, reportedly left Mather Academy, this week, without completing its mission.

The group, made up of teenagers from over the country and several Mather students, was here principally to repaint the men's dormitory at the all-colored school.

They were on a project of the Volunteer Christian Service of the General Board of Education of the Methodist Church, Nashville, Tenn.

* * *

HISTORIC MATHER, itself, is administered by the Women's Division of Christian Service of the Methodist Board of Missions, New York City, and has had white presidents.

Mayor Henry Savage Jr. said after the group departed:

"We repeatedly advised them that they did not have to leave, that we would do our best to protect them, but that we were fearful of what might happen."

He said that city council had planned asking Gov. George Bell Timmerman Jr. for troops and the militia, if the group remained.

* * *

THE REV. J. W. Bell of the Methodist General Board of Education said threats by anonymous telephone calls had been made against the youths. He said officers cited a state law forbidding mixing of races.

The Rev. Mr. Bell said, too, that Police Chief Wilbert Williams, the sheriff and city officers had asked the group to leave "to avoid trouble and to give time to work things out."

Williams had no immediate comment on the Rev. Mr. Bell's statement.

* * *

FOLLOWING their attendance of services in Trinity Methodist (colored) Church last Sunday, Bell said officers questioned the group on why they were in Camden.

That night, he said, Williams and the sheriff called and warned the group it could not remain on the Mather campus because of a state law.

Both men promised to return later but failed to do so, and during the night a cross was burned in front of the secondary school.

The Rev. Mr. Bell said, in response to a request, city and school officials met Monday when city officials asked the group to abandon its mission.

Savage and Williams repeated the request Tuesday, Bell said other meetings between the two groups were also held, he said.

* * *

SOME THREATS were relayed to the school by city officials. The Rev. Mr. Bell said some of the threats were that the building would be blown up or burned down.

"The work camp group has transferred to another location to continue working for the church this summer," the Rev. Mr. Bell said.

"The decisive factor was the judgment of church officials responsible for the school and the group, that it did not want to be the cause of bringing trouble to the school or inciting violent resistance."

of violence if they remained.

A cross was burned in front of the school. Anonymous telephone threats were made to blow up the school or burn it down. Church authorities then removed the group to an unidentified location.

The Rev. Joseph W. Bell of the Youth Department of the Methodist General Board of Education disclosed the incident today. He attributed the threats to "an unknown group opposing the mixing of the races."

Mayor Henry Savage of Camden confirmed the incident. He put the blame on a revival of the Ku Klux Klan since the United States Supreme Court ruled racial segregation in public schools unconstitutional.

The youth group consisted of seven boys and eight girls. Ten were whites and five Negroes. Most were between 15 and 20 years of age. They came from various parts of the country and from Mather School, a Negro institution here.

Mission of Project

The group was to have spent Jluy in a work camp on the Mather School campus painting a boys' dormitory. Their mission was a national work project of the Volunteer Christian Service of the Methodist General Board of Education, cooperating with the Women's Division of Christian Service of the Methodist Board of Missions. The Women's Division administers Mather School.

Camden is a city of 7,000 population. It is a popular winter resort, noted for polo and hunting, and is situated twenty-eight miles northeast of Columbia, the state capital. It is a textile center in a farming and lumbering area.

Mr. Bell who came here from his headquarters at Nashville, Tenn., to investigate the situation, said some of the group were questioned by the Camden police last Sunday about what they were doing in town. That night, he added, the police chief and sherriff called at the school and warned the camp directors and the school superintendent that the group could not remain on the campus. They cited a state law forbidding the mixing of the races.

Cross Burns at School

"At 10 o'clock that night a cross was burned in front of the school," said Mr. Bell. Local police were seen driving by at the time but did not stop."

On Monday morning, Mr. Bell continued, E. L. Marsh, principal of the school, received an anonymous phone call from a nearby town that "those whites on the campus better leave by night or else."

"The city officials reported no race difficulties so far, but admitted that a White Citizens Council exists in the town and has had several meetings," asserted Mr. Bell.

The youth group was removed from the campus Monday night, but returned the next day. Mr. Bell, who had then arrived on the scene, conferred at the school with the Mayor and other city officials. According to Mr. Bell, the officials warned that if the group remained "there would likely be trouble, if not harm, to the young people, possibly burning the building."

Also, on Tuesday, the school principal received another anonymous telephone call from a local station, asking: "Did that white bunch get out yet? They had better not be there tonight."

Bomb Threat Made

The youth group again left for the night. At midnight, according to Mr. Bell, the police chief relayed word to school officials that threats had been made to bolw up the school if the white youths' returned there on Wednesday.

Mr. Bell said a group of local officails and citizens on Wednesday again urged that the youth group leave to avert "real trouble." The decision to remove the group, he added, was made so that it would not be "the cause of bringing trouble to the school or inciting violent resistance."

"We feel that the group has done nothing wrong," he added. "The members came to join in fellowship of work in the spirit of Christian love and service. We still believe such experiences can make progress in group relations and brotherhood."

He said the group would continue working for the church this summer in their new location.

Mayor Savage said he did not like to bow to threats but "you can't risk making martyrs out of children."

"The City Council was prepared to ask the Governor for militia to protect the group if necessary but we felt that if it was pushed that far, race relations would suffer," he said. "We were relieved when they decided to leave.

"We're having a tough time down here with this whole problem. We're trying to work things out, but when you take a stand between two extremes you get cussed out by one side for being liberal and by the other side for being prejudiced. But I'm happy there wasn't any violence.

INTEGRATED CLASS QUITS IN CAROLINA

Times P.13-C Sat. 7-14-56

Threats of Violence Force White and Negro Students to Leave Church School

N. Y. Times

Special to The New York Times.

CAMDEN, S. C., July 13—An integrated group of fifteen white and Negro boys and girls have left a Negro Methodist church school here because of threats

Orangeburg cleric finally prodded into leaving town

Afro-American Baltimore, Md. Sat. 8-11-56

ORANGEBURG, S.C.— Father Henry L. Parker, rector of the St. Pauls Episcopal Church, scourge of local White Citizens Council leaders and prodded by his white bishop, has finally left town.

Friends and civic leaders reported Thursday that the Rev. Mr. Parker, who had spearheaded several civic projects since coming here, is now an assistant rector in an Episcopal Church at Detroit.

* * *

THE REV. MR. ALFRED ISAAC, another civic leader and who was among those fired from positions at S.C. State College in May, said he had talked with the Rev. Mr. Parker by telephone Thursday.

He was advised the young clergyman is doing well in his new post, held now for three weeks.

Father Parker cropped out as a controversial figure last spring when Bishop Carruthers of Charleston confirmed he had requested the St. Paul minister to "find" work elsewhere.

Bishop Carruthers denied in a public statement that his request had anything to do with pressure from the White Citizens Council or Father Parker's support of the NAACP.

ST. PAUL'S is a mission. Episcopal leaders explain that missions differ from the more independent church stations, in that pastors of missions serve at the discretion of the bishop.

The mission's membership came to the rescue of Mr. Parker in pronouncements and declarations, however, the young minister left town.

Burn Home of NAACP Leader In Clarendon County

Bulletin Thurs. 10-11-56 Des Moines, Iowa

New York — The home of an NAACP leader in Clarendon County, S. C., was burned last week, the NAACP National Office here has been notified.

The home was that of the Rev. James W. Seals of Manning, S. C., a founder of the Clarendon County NAACP branch.

Mr. Seals was notified of the disaster, which occurred on Oct. 2, while he was visiting relatives in this city. He has gone back to Manning to inspect the damage.

Mr. Seals said he has received various threats because or his NAACP activities, and also has been subjected to economic pressures for the same reason.

He is pastor of African Methodist Episcopal churches in Summerton and Silvers, S. C.

Future of Rev. DeLaine's fire gutted church still unsettled

Afro-American 8d 9-22-56

LAKE CITY, S.C. — Nearly one year after a fire of mysterious origin gutted its interior while its pastor attended an annual conference miles away, the future of St. James AME Church, remains unsettled.

St. James is one of the three churches on the Lake City Circuit which was pastored by the Rev. J. A. DeLaine, who fled the state last October after he said whites shot at the parsonage the night of Oct. 10.

The minister had initiated the Clarendon school suit, but had been pastoring here for several years.

Baltimore

A STATE PROBE of the burning brought forth "incendiary," which was an investigator's opinion of the blaze. A pall of silence has since hovered over the incident.

Privately, Lake City officials as well as some spokesmen for the White Citizens Council blamed for the series of incidents, disclaim knowledge of any white persons who might have burned the church.

The Rev. Mr. G. L. Baylor of Moncks Corner was assigned to the Circuit last November. Services for St. James' members have been held in a small Holiness Church in the "Deep River" section near the elementary school.

* * *

EFFORTS BY the pastor and congregation have been made to raise enough money with which to build a new edifice, "from the ground up," as one member said.

The old building was insured for an estimated $4,000, hopelessly insufficient for constructing a new building.

Some contributions have come from Lake City whites. No announcement of what has been accomplished by the Building Fund Committee.

One reason for this lack of announcement is that a contractor has not yet been engaged.

THE REV. MR. BAYLOR told the AFRO that bids on the proposed new edifice are to be delivered by Sept. 18 after which the project will be either affirmed, or rejected.

Mr. Baylor, emphasizing that his role in Lake City was to serve as pastor of the church, said:

"I would like to thank the so many people who have contributed to the fund for the rebuilding of St. James Church."

He said that contributions should be drawn by check or money order, payable only to: "Building Fund Committee, St. James AME Church" and mailed to him at P.O. Box 335, Lake City, S.C.

S.C. beach case before U.S. court in Richmond

Afro-American 9-3

Baltimore Afro

ORANGEBURG, S.C. — W. Newton Pough of Orangeburg and John H. Wrighten of Charleston, attorneys, left last week for Richmond, Va., to present arguments before the Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals in the Edisto Beach State Park Case on Monday.

Afro 9-20-56

They represent, J. Arthur Brown, John Chisolm, Mrs. Etta Clark and Charles C. Mason, all of Charleston, who brought the integration case last year.

The state legislature closed the park facility rather than bow to integration, and District Judge Ashton H. Williams dismissed the suit after several hearings in Charleston.

Judge Williams said when he dismissed the suit in Charleston that he would make his decision according to the Supreme Court ruling in the Maryland park cases. Maryland parks were desegregated.

* * *

WHEN THE case first came before Williams, he urged colored citizens not to press for benefits of integration contained in the decisive school segregation cases.

He also gave verbal support of the White Citizens Council without specifically naming a group organized in his hometown of Lake City.

Council 'Pressure' Unites Elloree squeeze victims

Afro-American Sat, 12-15-56 . Baltimore, Md.

P.19

By JOHN H. McCRAY

ELOREE, S.C.—"T'hell with the white man now," laughed one of the five men loafing in the business place.

"we are closer together here now than ver before. In one way I think the White Citizens Council's economic pressure campaign was the best thing for unifying us," said another.

The second speaker was Lee A. Blackman, 75-year-old president of the local NAACP branch who, also, has supervised crop loans, donations of foodstuffs, shoes and clothing under an NAACP recommended plan for more than a year.

He is publicly regarded as "the most hated" man in Eloree, yet also the most feared by whites and, most loved by his own people.

While the bus boycotts in Montgomery, Ala., and Tallahassee, Fla., have held the headlines for the past year, the battle of attrition between pro and con integration camps in Eloree began sevral months before the Alabama or the Florida disputes.

* * *

IN FACT, the battle developed here in August or 1955. Some 37 parents signed and filed an integration petition with the local school board. Formed a chapter of the White Citizens Council, first established in South Carolina.

Among organizers was the former mayor, representatives of the WCC headquarters in Mississippi and hundreds of other whites in and around Eloree and Orangeburg County.

Whether he wanted to or not, every white man in the area was pressured into joining the WCC or face a WCC led boycott of his business, as well as social isolation.

In the wake of wholesale firings of colored employees, threats, chasing of petitioners and their families out of the cottonfields and out of money lending places and stores where they had lived mostly on credit, utter disaster for a while threatened the community.

Fourteen of the petitioners accepted WCC appeals, withdrw their names. Some said they didn't know what they had actually signed.

From Eloree, the WCC campaign spread 22 miles west to the county seat at Orangeburg.

* * *

A MONTH or two later, the NAACP-led integration forces had struck back. They threw up a boycott of their own against stores and places where firings had occurred. From the north came tons of clothing and foodstuffs.

Mr. Blackman was named supervisor of aid in this area. Hundreds of men, women and children got overalls, dungarees, dresses, shoes, under garments, etc.

Others, faced with a sudden and not yet due maturity of mortgages, found relief in loans from the Victory Savings Bank at Columbia where several organizations and businesses outside of the state had made special deposits so that adequate funds could be used for farmers having credit references in good standing.

By December of 1955 this aid program was in full bloom. However, several families had packed up and moved away, among them the families of James Shivers, a city employee who was the first in town fired, and Andrew Glover, fired from his mechanic post with the local Ford dealer after some 12 years of service.

All members of the school board joined WCC ranks. These were brought into Federal court in October after 24 teachers at the Eloree Training School were let out last spring when they refused to sign anti-integration, anti-NAACP statements.

Sevèntten of the number sued, charging a violation of their rights under the First Amendment. A ruling is expected momentarily from the three judge trial court.

* * *

MR. BLACKMAN told the AFRO that "The restrictions as to mortgages and other forms of debts haven't been changed since last year.

"They (whites) clamp down the day a note is due and don't waste any time foreclosing. It wasn't like that before this thing (economic campaign) started."

He said that foodstuffs, etc., which were sent into the area "were life savers," which restored faith and hope. These contributions aren't coming in "as freely as before," he said.

Greatest needs in the area just now, Mr. Blackman said, are sweaters, dungarees, oxfords (shoes) and small toys for children between the ages of 6 and 14.

A special effort is underway, he said, to gather enojgh toys for the less fortunate children, behind which is a never-before-told story of how vicious race hatred can be. Mr. Blackman recalls it this way:

When Santa came to Eloree in 1955, as had been the custom in the several previous years, little colored children thronged the parade route looking for the sacks of fruits, candies, nuts, etc. which had been given eacr child annually.

But Santa, despite his waves, smiles and greetings as they cheered him, had nothing for the colored children.

"They ran our children off the street," Mr. Blackman said. "It was the most touching and pitiful sight I've ever seen.

"They gave every little white child his present, but passed over all of our children."

* * *

LOCAL LEADERS later tried to atone for the insult and hope this year to be able to give all colored children some sort of gift.

The WCC campaign, gowever, hasn't worked out exactly as it was thought.

Local merchants still fail to get get the business they once had. Those who can shop in Orangeburg, nearby St. Matthews, Holly Hill, and even Columbia. One mercrant reportedly put his business up for sale earlier this year. The counter-boycott had hurt his trade.

One citizen reports having been in the local bank when a white farmer entered and sought a crop loan.

When he told the banker that he had discharged his colored farm workers because the WCC ordered it and only his wife and he were left to work crops this year, the banker refused the loan and suggested that he take his problem to WCC.

The man, muttering profanity against the WCC leaders stormed out of the bank.

One man whose car was threatened with repossession, came to Mr. Blackman at night. He qualified for a loan and early the next morning appeared at the dealer's place, along with the NAACP president, who had the total of more than $200 in cash.

The dealer changed ris tune. Where before he had refused to allow a few extra days for the note, now he was willing to lt the man have as much time as he needed.

He was paid in full, however, and the account was setup under supervision of the local NAACP.

BIGGEST LOSERS around Eloree is a third group — all colored—who can turn neither to whites nor the to their own people.

Referred to as "uncletoms and stooges," this group lined up with whites at the outset of the battle.

Some of them served as informers and decriers against integration. WCC leaders made promises of secured jobs and credits, but afterwards laughed at them and showed contemp for them.

Shocked eventually into realizing that they were only being used, some of this group returned to NAACP leaders and sought help. Some were considered, but the most flagrant turncoats still find themselves rejected by whites and despised among their own people.

The man speaking in the group loafing around the colored establishment, perhaps best sums up Eloree today when he said:

"The NAACP's done put the white man out of business around here.

"If we need money now, we go to the NAACP to help us borrow it. If we need food and clothes, the NAACP gives them to us, and we don't have to say 'yowsuh' for it. I tell you, that NAACP is the best thing trat's ever come to colored folks.

"I ain't never heard of no white man around here treating us like the NAACP is doing. T'hell with the white man now.!"

Hitler Burned Libraries; South Carolina Burns Churches

Journal & Guide Dec. 12-8-56 Norfolk, Va. 38 P8 S C

Editor
Journal and Guide
Norfolk, Virginia

Dear Sir:

In Kershaw County, South Carolina, there has been a series of Negro Churches burned to the ground by, what we feel to be, White Groups of the opposite race.

In January, the Mt. Moriah Baptist Church in Camden was burned. Then followed in succession, Effisus Methodist Church in the Lugoff section; White Oak Baptist Church in the Camden area; Four O'clock Baptist Church in the West Camden section; Red Hill Baptist Church in the Cassatt section, and the last to be burned was Sanders Creek Baptist Church about five miles north of Camden. The last two mentioned were burned within the week. Negro homes have been burned and one or two rural places of business owned and operated by Negroes.

Camden and Kershaw County were once peaceful and quiet, now there is fear for what might happen at any time. We don't know who the next victims will be, whose church or home or business will be next. I do not wish my name mentioned for fear of reprisals.

Yours truly,

(Name withheld by request)

November 28, 1956

Culbertson Explains His Segregation War

Post & Times Herald P. 3-A Mon. 12-9-56 Washington, D.C.

38a

A few years ago John Bolt Culbertson was much in demand as a high school commencement speaker in and around his home town of Greenville, S.C.

Then Culbertson began a one-man campaign against racial segregation.

"I don't get invited to high schools any more," Culbertson said here yesterday. "I guess they're afraid I'll undermine Southern traditions."

Culbertson was in Washington to speak at the Plymouth Congregational Church, 17th and P sts. nw. It was one of dozens of speeches he has made—mostly to Negro groups—since he started active work against segregation six years ago.

The Washington Post

JOHN B. CULBERTSON
. . . segregation fighter

How He Got Involved

Culbertson, 48, who speaks with a rich Southern accent and has the friendly good manners associated with a typical Southern gentleman, explained how he became involved in the fight against segregation.

"I always have been interested in liberal causes," Culbertson related, "and in the labor movement since my days at the University of South Carolina."

He became an attorney, served as an FBI agent for two years, then practiced law in Greenville. Culbertson began taking labor cases and became more involved in the labor movement.

"I saw that someone in the South would have to face the problem of segregation and solve it, or we wouldn't succeed in the labor movement or in democracy itself," Culbertson stated.

Felt Qualified

As a native southerner, Culbertson felt he was fitted to lead the fight againse segregation. His religious feelings also entered into his decision. He said:

"I've always tried to practice the Christian religion and put it into effect, not just talk about it.

"I've always been a firm believer in democracy, too, and thought it was a mockery to talk about it when I looked around and saw that 50 per cent of the people in South Carolina were denied the fundamentals of democratic government."

Practice Suffers

Culbertson said his practice has suffered from his activities, and that he has been "kicked and cuffed a bit" But he plans to continue speaking.

He's optimistic about the future.

"I think the tensions are easing," he said, "and the White Citizens' Councils and the Ku Klux Klan have reached their peak. Their power is waning. I think they realize that in spite of everything they do, the South is a part of the United States and Federal laws will prevail."

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENTS EDUCATION
VOTING

Pass Amendments To Constitution

Defender Chicago, Ill.
Sat. 12-13-56

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Southern School News reported that voters in two states have approved constitutional amendments and other measures tightening school segregation laws, while in a third state —Tennessee — the pro-segregation tide was running strong. At the same time five additional school districts in two states disclosed they had desegregated in practice or principle.

The publication is issued here each month by a board of southern newspaper editors and educators for the information of school authorities, public officials and news media.

Voters in Louisiana approved a constitutional amendment designed to bloc school entry suits while Arkansas voters approved a constitutional amendment, an initiated act and a resolution of interposition, all designed to forward state segregation policies.

In Tennessee there was a new eruption in the Clinton high school case, with the school seeking federal government aid in protecting the rights of Negro students enrolled there under court order.

671 MIX SCHOOLS

One of the new desegregated districts — in Arkansas — took this action two years ago without publicity, it was disclosed The other four districts are in Delaware. This brings to 671 the number of school districts in the southern and border states which have adopted desegregation in practice or principle, Southern School News said. Some 3,000 districts having puplis of both races remain segregated.

The publication noted a number of key court rulings, including three in Virginia and one each in Texas and North Carolina, which are pending or which have been handed down in recent days. It reported additionally that a U. S. Supreme Court decision in the Montgomery bus case and a show-cause order in Alabama against trustees of the University of Alabama for the readmission of Autherine Lucy Foster had rekindled segregation - desegregation debate in Alabama.

Reporting from 17 states, the paper's correspondents noted a heavy switchover of Negro voters from Democratic to Republican candidates in the Nov. 6 election, with apparently decisive results in the Presidential votes of Tennessee and Louisiana. However, the publication found that "the actual effect of the Supreme Court school segregation decisions on the election results seems to have been relatively minor."

Latest school population figures in Washington, D. C., according to Southern School News, show that Negroes now make up 68 percent of the enrollment of District of Columbia schools.

A state-by-state summary of major developments during November follows:

ALABAMA — A U.S. Supreme Court ruling in the Montgomery bus boycott case, linked to the public school decisions, revived discussion of race relations. Meanwhile, a federal judge ordered University of Alabama trustees to show cause why they should not be held in contempt of court for refusing to readmit a Negro student (the former Miss Autherine Lucy).

ARKANSAS — Voters approved a constitutional amendment, an initiated act and a resolution (of interposition) designed to preserve school segregation— all three by heavy majorities. A survey of educators turned up one more school district (the fifth) which had been desegregated or was in process of desegregation.

DELAWARE — A majority of the eight school segregation suits now pending in federal court will come to trial early in 1957. Three all-white and one all-Negro districts were disclosed to have announced that they would accept students of both races.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA — Two out of three District pupils are members of the Negro race, according to a recent school population survey. Since last year the number of white students has declined by 4,010 while 4,846 more Negroes have entered classrooms.

FLORIDA — Dade County's (Miami) Little White House Conference on Education voted in favor of "integration in principle" while in St. Petersburg the Florida PTA urged school authorities to carry out recently enacted laws to preserve school segregation.

GEORGIA — Gov. Marvin Griffin considered a "segregation strategy meeting" for Decembera (apparently to coincide with a meeting of U.S. district attorneys in Washington), reportedly to seek ways of courtering recent pro-integration court rulings.

KENTUCKY — Louisville School Supt. Omer Carmichael reiterated before Negro groups his earlier statement questioning the competency of Negro teachers as compared with white teachers. A suit was filed in Scott County seeking school desegregation.

LOUISIANA — Voters approved a constitutional amendment designed to block suits against school boards but rejected a second amendment designed to restrict or delay voter registration.

MARYLAND — A survey showed that more than 40 schools (29 of them in Baltimore) now have mixed staffs of white and Negro faculty members.

MISSISSIPPI — The state educational finance commission approved a phase of the public school equalization program calling for construction of 322 new classrooms for Negroes and 86 for whites.

MISSOURI — St. Louis County was said to have virtually completed desegregation with a minimum of friction. Meeting in St. Louis, the National Council of Teachers of English defeated a resolution supporting school integration.

NORTH CAROLINA — In the long-standing McDowell County case the Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals ruled (in Baltimore) that Negroes still must exhaust administrative remedies for school entry — singly, and not as a group— but that appeal can be taken directly to federal courts without going through state courts as the 1955 Pupil Assignment Act directs.

OKLAHOMA — Two-thirds of the state's colleges (22 of 33) with 90 percent of the enrollment, now have racially mixed classes, according to a survey.

SOUTH CAROLINA — The school segregation issue figured in the November elections with a sizeable split in the Negro vote, formerly heavily Democratic.

TENNESSEE — A strong segregation tide was reported running, with state officials ready for a legislative showdown on the issue in January. John Kasper, Washington, D. C., White Citizens Council leader, was acquitted of violation of sedition and incitement to riot laws in Clinton, where Negroes absented themselves from the high school to which they had gained admittance by court order, because of a series of "little incidents."

TEXAS — Several plaintiffs have dropped out of the Dallas school integration case; the NAACP has urged a quick trial of the state's plea for a permanent injunction against its activity in the state.

VIRGINIA — Legal battles over three suits involving school segregation were under way as school districts reported concern over marketing of bonds for new construction.

WEST VIRGINIA — A Republican sweep brought in a new governor and a new superintendent of schools in a state where desegregation is accomplished or under way in 52 of 55 counties, but with no change anticipated in state policy.

38a 1956

'If sent back, I'll still fight'—Delaine

Afro-American
Sat. 1-7-56

By JAMES L. HICKS

NEW YORK, N.Y. — "If they send me back to South Carolina I'll still fight against segregation and try to have the Supreme Court's decision enforced.

As an American minister I wouldn't be living up to the articles of my church if I didn't."

The Rev. J. A. DeLaine, fugitive minister from South Carolina, made this statement to reporters Wednesday when asked what he would do if South Carolina officials request his extradition back to his home and Governor Averill Harriman grants their request.

Baltimore Md.

The Rev. Mr. DeLaine, who is charged by South Carolina law with assault with intent to kill, appeared in magistrate's court Wednesday for a second hearing on the charges which grew out of his firing back on a group of white men who fired into his home last summer.

* * *

MAGISTRATE ANTHONY M. LIVOTI declined to dismiss the charges against him as requested by his attorney William Carey.

Instead, he set a new hearing for Jan. 16 and stated that if no extradition papers have been received in New York from South Carolina by that date the charges would be dismissed.

South Carolina has forwarded papers here calling for the arrest of the Rev. Mr. DeLaine, but no papers requesting his extradition have arrived here yet.

* * *

THE COURT said in setting the new date that it is presumed that the papers are "in the process of being drawn up" but added that this opinion was "very unofficial."

The Rev. Mr. DeLaine, accompanied by Bishop D. Ward Nichols and about a dozen prominent ministers of the AME Church, appeared in court with his wife and his 18-year-old son Brumit B. DeLaine.

His 19-year-old daughter, Ophelia, is also in New York but did not appear in court. Another son, Joseph, 22, is with the Army in Korea.

* * *

IN AN INTERVIEW with reporters after the hearing Mrs. DeLaine said that she hopes that her husband will not be sent back by Governor Harriman, but she said if he is "I will stick with my husband and go back with him."

She was a teacher in the public schools before the family was forced to flee the state.

During the interview with reporters Bishop Nichols and Attorney Carey differed sharply as to whether the DeLaine case has political importance.

Mr. Carey told reporters, "I don't see any real political significance in this case, particularly where Governor Harriman is concerned. I don't believe Harriman would be moved by politics in this case.

"He is aware of the reign of terror in the South and I believe he would do what all of us hope he will do if the extradition papers are sent to him."

* * *

BUT BISHOP NICHOLS disagreed, saying, "While this is not a political case, it has political implications. Sixteen million colored people are watching the fate of the Rev. Mr. DeLaine and are deeply concerned about it.

Mr. Harriman, while not having declared himself a candidate for president, has been pictured as aspiring to that office and colored voters naturally are watching his every move with deep interest."

The statement of both men stemmed from the fact that if Governor Harriman sends the Rev. Mr. DeLaine back to South Carolina on extradition, he will displease colored people.

If he refuses to send him back he will anger the white South which is fighting integration.

* * *

THE REV. MR. DeLAINE, in a television interview, said the 23rd article of the AME Church binds him as a minister to uphold the Constitution of the United States and he said he would not feel he was acting in good faith if he did not fight for the enforcement of the Supreme Court's May 17 decision wherever he happened to be.

Asked if his son in Korea knew of his situation, the minister said his son not only was fully aware of it but that he had been "upset about it" to the extent that an Army official had offered him the opportunity to come home to take a hand in the fight.

The Rev. Mr. DeLaine said South Carolina officials had tried to frame both he and his son by trying to make it apear that he (Rev. DeLaine) had stolen an expensive microscope found in his house.

He said the microscope had been bought by his son in Korea from an Army major and that the major had testified to selling it to him.

The minister does not know by what authority South Carolina authorities entered his home to find the microscope in the first place.

* * *

MEANWHILE, A spokesman for Gov. George Bell Timmerman of South Carolina said Wednesday in Columbia, S.C., that there had been no request for the extradition of the Rev. Mr. DeLaine.

Governor Timmerman, however, assailed the Department of Justice for its refusal to return the Rev. Mr. DeLaine to South Carolina for trial.

The governor wondered why the Federal felon fugitive law isn't being enforced.

The Department of Justice notified the South Carolina governor and Florence County Sheriff John Hanna that the Rev. Mr. DeLaine's case technically did not come under the felon law.

Accused by DeLaine is paid honor

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.
Sat. 1-14-56

LAMAR, S.C. — James (Jack) Moore of Lake City, accused by the Rev. J. A. DeLaine as among a white quartet which fired on the pastor's home last Oct. 10, has been nominated as "Man of the Year in South Carolina" by the White Citizens Councils.

W. E. Hill, head of the Lamar WCC, said Tuesday, Moore had been invited as guest of honor to a meeting of the local unit, which Hill said was also inviting any Department of Justice probers to a "meal for any Anglo-Saxon agent" of the department.

Mr. Moore allegedly drove the car in which two other white men were struck by splattering metal when Mr. DeLaine said he returned their fire. Moore subsequently swore out an assault and battery warrant for the pastor who touched off the Clarendon case.

* * *

THE REV. MR. DELAINE fled Lake City immediately after the shooting. An extradition in the case is pending in NYC, where Mr. DeLaine is on bond and in the custody of Bishop D. Ward Nichols.

Mr. Hill released the following text as the citation which is to be given Moore by the Citizens Council:

"This citizen of Lake City, S.C., by the simple act of riding peacefully down a quiet street on his way home, simultaneously rid this state of an arrogant professional agitator and transformed an ordinary rifle-shooting assailant into a saint who basks in the adulation of that ignorant and undiscerning portion of the northern public which apparently feeds upon its own soul-consuming hatred and envy of the South."

* * *

RECENT disclosures indicate that there had been at least one unpleasant incident between Mr. Moore and a member of the DeLaine family.

Mr. Moore told newsmen he had consulted a lawyer with the view of filing a civil libel suit against the minister. He said Mr. DeLaine had registered a complaint against him with the Standard Oil Company's South Carolina office at Columbia.

He Passes On Desegregation

Informer
Sat. 1-14-56

The December issue of "New South," official organ of the Southern Regional Council, tells this story of how a white minister lost his pulpit in South Carolina. It says:

"Yet another victim of the pro-segregation hysteria was the Rev. G. Jackson Stafford of Batesboro, S. C. Mr. Stafford was pressured to leave his pulpit largely through the influence of Federal Judge George Bell Timmerman, Sr., a member of his congregation. Judge Timmerman learned that Mr. Stafford held personal views in accord with the school decisions of the Supreme Court—and in harmony with the official action taken by the Southern Baptist Convention. The Judge, whose sworn duty it is to uphold the high court's ruling, found this brand of religion too much to bear. And so the Rev. Mr. Stafford had to go."

Houston Lee

This sounds very much like those people of power nearly two thousand years ago, who sat in judgment upon Jesus Christ. Although they found "no fault with This Just Man," still they turned Him over to the mob in order that they might crucify Him.

With things in such a posture, it is not hard to imagine what will happen to the constitutional rights of Negroes when they come up for judgment in the court of such a judge. All he will remember is that they are Negroes. All else will be forgotten.

Courier Sat 1-28-56 P. 2 Pittsburgh, Pa.

38a

Hate Targets?—James Hinton, president of South Carolina's NAACP chapters, is shown here with his wife and daughter, Novella, a student at Bennett College. Thugs fired a shot into the Columbia (S. C.) home of the Hintons last week in the latest incident in Dixie's wave of terror. Courier Sat. 1-28-56 P. 2 Pittsburgh, Pa.

Hinton Is Terror Target

S. C. Thugs Fire Shot Into Home Of NAACP Chief

Courier Sat. 1-28-56 P. 2 Pittsburgh, Pa. 38a

By A. M. RIVERA JR.

COLUMBIA, S. C.—The home of Dr. James M. Hinton, president of the South Carolina chapters of the NAACP, was fired into last week by thugs who drove away in a car described as "a shabby old model."

Dr. Hinton, who was in Augusta, Ga., where he is employed as an executive of the Pilgrim Life Insurance Company, told the Courier that the incident is being investigated by the FBI and local police.

Hinton said that he felt the incident was designed to annoy and frighten him and his wife.

• • •

MRS. HINTON was upstairs at the Hinton residence, 1222 Heidt Street, when the shot was fired through the reception hall just inside the front door.

She said that she saw an old model car drive away following the shooting. She said that the darkened street and a heavy fog kept her from seeing a license plate as it drove away. Investigating police expressed the belief that whoever fired the shot got out of the car to do so.

In 1949 Mr. Hinton was picked up by a group of white hoods who took him for a "ride" to frighten him into resigning his NAACP post.

Chief of Police L. Campbell of this city is sifting fragments of evidence. Hinton said if the guilty parties can be found, Campbell will find them. "He is one of the finest I've ever met," he said.

—DIGEST OF THE PRESS—

NAACP Leader's Home Fired On

World Telegram and Sun P. 11

By the United Press.

COLUMBIA, S. C., Jan. 20.—The home of a Negro integration leader was fired on here Monday but no one was injurde, police disclosed last night. Fri. 1-20-56

The blast was fired into the front of the residence of James M. Hinton, South Carolina president of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. Officers were notified early Tuesday but did not reveal the shooting at that time.

"We have no leads in the investigation," a spokesman said. New York

Mrs. Hinton was the only person at home when the blast was fired. She said she saw "an old model automobile" racing away. N. Y.

Detectives found a dozen buckshot pellets which had pierced the front of the house, smashed a mirror and plowed into pot plants, walls and a stairway inside the house.

Mrs. Hinton said "numerous" threatening telephone calls had been received in the past.

Bullets Rip Home Of S. C. NAACP Chief

Detroit Sat 1-21-56 Chicago Ill.

COLUMBIA, S. C.—The home of James Hinton, president of the N. A. A. C. P. state conference of branches, was peppered by shotgun blasts last week, just eight days after Gov. Timmerman called for a "lawful" race battle to get underway in the state. P. 1

At the time of the blasts, only Mrs. Hinton, wife of the businessman, was in the frame house. She was unhurt.

Hinton, who was out of town at the time, said investigation was underway by local police.

According to well-informed sources, Hinton is high on the list of Southern Negro leaders marked for intimidation and possible death by Dixie racists seeking to maintain segregation.

Hinton is also one of a dozen NAACP officials threatened in recent months. He was once taken for "a ride" by so-called "night riders," but escaped with his life after being told he was "too uppidy."

WCC adds 5 to pressure list

Afro American Sat. 3-3-56

ORANGEBURG, S.C.—The local White Citizens Councils, headed by W. T. C. Bates, central South Carolina representative of the New York Life Insurance Co., added five names to a list of 100 persons against whom the local WCC is conducting an economic boycott.

A copy of the latest listings was obtained by the AFRO, along with a copy of an application form used by the WCC and an issue of the organizations first edition of a 4 page tabloid size newspaper.

The paper lisis the following: Shadrack Morgan, attorney, 544 Clar St., and his wife Mattie D. Morgan. Baltimore Md.

THE REV. ALFRED ISAAC, associate professor at S.C. State College and pastor of a Baptist church here, and his wife, Dorothy. She teaches at Dulton Memorial School

George W. Daniels, 733 Treadwell St., retired agricultural agent, and wife, Mrs. Dora E. Daniels.

The Rev. John D. Rhodes, 310 Green St., pastor of a Baptist church here.

The Rev. Henry L. Parker vicar of St. Pauls Episcopal Church.

Desegregation of S.C. parks is due Feb. 6

Afro-American Baltimore Md. Sat 2-4-56

CHARLESTON, S.C.—U.S. District Court will be asked here Feb. 6 to issue an order integrating facilities at Edisto Beach State Park, attorneys for five plaintiffs in the South Carolina parks case said last week.

The Edisto Parks case, sidetracked pending for the recent U.S. Supreme Court ruling in the Maryland case, was placed back on the District Court's roster after lawyers for both sides agreed to pursuing the issue in state courts would settle nothing.

• • •

JOHN H. WRIGHTEN, attorney associated with W. Newton Pough of Orangeburg in the case, said that Jack Greenberg of NYC, NAACP attorney, would assist in the hearing.

The case grows out of several years of efforts here to obtain state park facilities for colored citizens similar to those provided for whites at Edisto Beach.

Mr. Wrighten said the court, in its discretion, could issue an integration order and prevent further litigation. Both sides had agreed that the Maryland ruling by the Supreme Court would be binding on the issue here.

S. C. Governor Urges 'Lawful' Race Battle

FROM CHARLOTTE OBSERVER, Jan. 12, 1956

Ike: Victory In Economic War

Timmerman Blasts Integration Edict

ANOTHER CIVIL WAR LOOMS? If South Carolina's Governor George Bell Timmerman, Jr., had his way, the South would again be the scene of turmoil between the races.

The outspoken governor charged in an address to the state legislature last week that the US Supreme Court's schools decision "flagrantly violated . . . the rights of states and the people" and asked that Dixie states join together in adopting the idea of interposition.

The governor's race-baiting statement caused the somewhat liberal Charlotte (NC) Observer to use the above headline. Gov. Timmerman called for the entire South to "band together" against the Federal government.

SENATOR URGES DELAY TO BLOCK DESEGREGATION

Daily Tribune Art. 1-28-56

Chicago, Ill.

Demands Dixie Law Changes

P. 4

Columbia, S. C., Jan. 27 [Special]—Sen. Eastland [D., Miss.] has suggested a strategy of organized delay by southern states in resisting the desegregation decisions of the United States Supreme court.

He proposed that the southern states organize a regional commission financed with public funds to carry on the fight and added:

"The state, if necessary, can abolish school districts, create other ones, and thus remove the basis of a suit. This would mean the whole case must start over, with years' delay. The state can also, when necessary, close schools.

Urges Law Changes

"By changing state laws and creating new state policies which must be litigated and which must go to the Supreme Court of the United States, the states can litigate this for an indefinite time in hostile federal courts."

The senator indicated delay would give the southern states time to frame a segregation policy based on factors other than race. He pointed out the Supreme court said segregation "solely because of race" violated the Constitution.

Speaking before a state-wide rally sponsored by two pro-segregation groups, Sen. Eastland added:

"No one but the states can segregate under the police powers, to promote the public health, raise the academic standards, protect the psychological welfare of the child, prevent violence, promote peaceful and harmonious race relations. This kind of segregation is not based upon race."

He Praises Governors

The senator urged that every southern state adopt a state policy of program to retain segregation. He praised the governors of South Carolina, Georgia, Virginia, and Mississippi for agreeing at their Richmond meeting Wednesday to stand on the states' rights theory against the Supreme court decision.

Referring to the interposition doctrine stressed at Richmond, he said:

"What we attempt to do is to point to the illegality and to void by constitutional and legal means any unconstitutional and illegal act committed by the Supreme court."

"Interposition," he went on, "is the legal and constitutional doctrine thru which the problem can be resolved. The Supreme Court of the United States has committed several unconstitutional acts in the segregation cases. It has attempted to amend the Constitution and to use compulsion to enforce its illegal decisions."

Urges States to Act

"The states affected should say these decisions are illegal and invalid, that the court has no power to interfere with or place a limitation upon the power of any state to regulate health, morals, education, marriage, and good order within the state.

"The regional commission should take the lead in this effort. We should then request by resolution an amendment to the Constitution under Article V which will rivet these principles into our Constitution."

He said the regional commission should also make a study of race and "publicize the facts about the characteristics, morals, and native intelligence of the races," and "conditions that prevail in the interracial schools of Washington and New York."

Charges Truth Banned

"A concerted effort is being made to suppress the truths of what is going on in the Washington school system," he continued. "President Eisenhower's own grandchildren have been removed from a system that permits integrated schools and placed in a private segregated Episcopal school in Alexandria, Va."

Sen. Eastland called for a "just and legal fight" without violence or lawlessness.

"Violence hurts the cause of the south," he warned. "Acts of violence and lawlessness are turned against us by our enemies. In this fight no one should be mistreated. The white people also desire peace and harmony."

Again Raps Court

Sen. Eastland reiterated attacks on the United States Supreme court, saying: "The time has come when the bit and curb must be placed on these unfaithful guardians of our heritage, rights, and liberties."

"The anti-segregation decisions are dishonest in the light of law and precedence," he added. "These decisions were dictated by political pressure groups bent upon the destruction of the American system of government and the mongrelization of the white race. The court responded to a radical pro-communist movement in this country."

He charged that the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, which won the segregation fight in the Supreme court, was backed by organizations "of all shades of red."

Blasts Church Group

He said these ranged from "the blood red of the Communist party to the almost equal red of the National Council of Churches of Christ in the U. S. A. The foundations and other groups with tremendous sums of tax exempt money are financing this drive in a big way.

"These and other anti-segregation organizations control news services, the magazines, the radio and television chains. There is a continual rain of propaganda. It is foolish to deny the power and influence of those arrayed against us. When groups can subvert the highest court of this land and control the President of the United States, they must be reckoned with."

'Sacrificed Lives,' Says Mrs. DeLaine

Afro-American Sat. 2-25-56
P. 6 Baltimore, Md.

BALTIMORE

(Below is the text of the address delivered by Mrs. Mattie B. DeLaine of Lake City, S.C., during the rally of the Baltimore NAACP at Sharp Street Methodist Church on Sunday, Jan. 22).

Mrs. DeLaine was a teacher in the Carver School at Lake City until October 1955, when she and her husband, the Rev. J. A. DeLaine were forced to flee from their parsonage home four days after their church was burned.

South Carolina forwarded a warrant to New York for the minister's arrest but he was never extradited.

Today, as many of you know, Rev. DeLaine is confined to the state of New York.

"We had hoped, heretofore, that at this time in our lives, we would have been able to take life just a little easier. We had worked and we had planned toward that year.

* * *

REV. DeLAINE is a father and a husband in his home. I can truthfully say he has always been kind and very gentle. He never raised his voice in the home.

He was never too buy to call the children together and counsel them at intervals.

He was never too busy in the mornings to call the family together and give thanks to God. He has always admonished the children to strive to be the best citizens and not that one who would degrade and bring the race down.

Rev. DeLaine has always emphasized in his church the 23rd Article of religion, from the AME district, which obligates a member of the AME church to uphold the constitution of the United States and it seems that that is the thing that has him where he is today.

We have sacrificed our lives, we have sacrificed our loved ones, and until today, we are almost completely at the mercy of God and the mercy of our friends.

But I've decided, since my husband's begun this struggle that I would stick by his side, regardless to what the end is.

* * *

TODAY, after 25 years of teaching, I could perhaps have been self-sustaining, but I could not afford to renounce the things which I believe in to be right, and to sell my people just for a few pennies.

I cannot do it now, I would not think about doing it, I would not do it for the offer of those who would have liked for me to do it.

This struggle began back in the year of 1949, when a graduating class of Scott Wright School of Clarendon County began to complain because of some irregularities in the school.

Our own son was a member of this class, but because we did not care to become involved in some disagreements in the schools, being a teacher in that district myself, and my husband being a teacher, we decided to move ourselves.

We sent Joseph to Camden, South Carolina, which is a boarding high school for boys and girls.

Some talked to their parents, to ask if there was something that couldn't be done.

After the class had graduated in June, the president of this class, called some parents together and they met at a small church in Summerton, South Carolina, St. Marks AME Church.

There the parents organized and Rev. DeLaine was asked to act as acting chairman of this group which was against his will But he took the place.

They formed a local committee to go to the local board of trustees to ask if something couldn't be done in the school. And Rev. DeLaine was asked to act for this committee.

They went to the board of trustees, but the board of trustees refused to hear them . . . They finally carried their complaints to the county board.

The county board heard their complaint and the answer was that the administration of the school was found guilty of negligence of their duty.

Rev. DeLaine felt it his duty or that which he had been asked to do was completed.

AT THAT TIME the chapter of NAACP in Clarendon County was not very much. It was only kept alive by a few people. Rev. DeLaine was the secretary of this group, and after the hearing of this group of school patrons, Clarendon group of more than 100 persons were turned over to the NAACP chapter of the County, which began the growth of this county—the NAACP chapter.

Then, the case was taken to court which was the case for equal opportunities and facilities for all. But this case was changed into a segregation case and after the case was changed, then terror continued to grow against Rev. DeLaine.

But before this case was changed into a segregation case, Rev. DeLaine, because of his leadership and because of his activities with the parents, there was a slander case brought against him and he was sued for $20,000.

Out of this, he had to pay a judgement of $2,700 plus lawyer fees, which came to around $4,000.

Then after the case was changed into a segregation case, a few days later, our home in Summerton, South Carolina, was burned.

* * *

IN THE MEANTIME, Rev. DeLaine had been moved by Bishop Reid, and sent to Lake City, South Carolina, and this I might say, also, was against his will. But because the Bishop asked him to go, he said he would go.

We got along nicely in Lake City, but when the Supreme Court issued its decree in 1954, then our small farm home was burned mysteriously. And as I said, we got along nicely in Lake City until the White Citizens' Council was organized there.

A day or two after the White Citizens' Council was organized in Lake City, they began to throw stones, orange peelings, bottles into our parsonage home; knocking out the windows and attempting to intimidate us.

At times when I walked along the street, there were cars that would approach me at certain filling stations as if they were going to run over me.

Later on, on October 10th, after we had been out, we came in around 7:00 o'clock, the local colored policemen came to the house and invited Rev. DeLaine to the police station. Rev. DeLaine refused to go.

A little later that night, some shooting occurred around the house which disturbed us very much. Rev. DeLaine had gone to bed. Finally he had to get up and when he got up, and the shooting continued, it was a time when he was forced to answer them.

And each time that something would happen to us in our home, they first tried to attribute it to our son who is 16.

Since they could not do that and at several times he was away when these incidents happened, then they said to us, "How about your church members?" They couldn't do that, then they said, "Oh well, it's just so many NAACP members doing these things."

Well, at times I told them that they were not NAACP members whom I saw, they were not even members of our church whom I saw, and I was asked by officers "Are you sure?" I said, "Yes, I'm quite sure that the hand which I saw firing a gun was not a member of our church nor any other Negro church in this town."

* *

WELL, MAYBE I'll go back and let you know something about the ordeal through which I had to pass after the shooting which occurred on the night of October 10th.

I fled to a neighbor's house for safety. We were there, maybe if this is the right word, all night, because I could not sleep.

No one in the house slept peacefully. The rest of that night, we were watching cars as they passed to and fro, watching and looking to see what they could find or whom they could find, and at one time recognized somebody walking around the house tapping on the house.

The tap sounded as if it were a switch with which they were tapping on the house which I was in at that time.

The noise went from there to the parsonage and we continued to hear the tap on the house.

Later that morning, I asked the lady with whom I was living or staying that night if she saw the car or anything around the house. She told me "no, the car had disappeared." And at that time, I couldn't imagine what had happened to the car.

I couldn't imagine what had happened to Rev. DeLaine. I did not know anything. I thought at one time there had been foul play.

The next morning when the officers came in and questioned me—well when they came in, they would not even allow the lady of the house to remain in the room.

It took 5 officers, plus the deputy sheriff to come into the room to question me when I was lying in bed and they asked all kinds of questions, trying to trap me and asking me if I knew the whereabouts of my husband—which I did not know.

I asked them if they knew, because I felt that he had been locked up or something had happened—but they said that they knew nothing of his whereabouts.

I did not know anything about Rev. DeLaine until a few days after. My brother brought a newspaper to me and read to me that Rev. DeLaine was in New York with Bishop Nichols.

* * *

AND I WILL say to you today, my dear friends, that in Bishop Nichols, I do feel that not only Rev. DeLaine and his family have a friend, but I feel that the whole race has a true friend in Bishop Nichols. (applause).

Bishop Nichols has gone all out to rescue and to save Rev. DeLaine. And in that, he has not only done that for Rev. DeLaine, but for every Negro (applause).

We want you to feel that what Rev. DeLaine has done has not been done selfishly.

Since I have known him—since we have been together—I have never known him to act selfishly with either his family, the school in which he taught or the church in which he worked, and as I have just said, I have never known him to be too busy to help someone whom he felt needed his help.

And today we are certainly proud of our people and when I stop to think that those people, who have been limited in their travels and in their education, in Florence County, in Lake City, South Carolina, when this incident happened to one of the pastors in that county, that is Rev. DeLaine, that they forgot their little prejudices and their little hatreds, between each other, and they said, "We are forgetting these things; this is a fight and we must come together and cooperate and help to fight this thing."

We should not forget God. I shall never forget God. I can truthfully say that I've seen the lightening flash and I've heard the thunder roar, I've felt sin's breakers dashing, trying to conquer my soul. But Jesus has promised never to leave me alone.

* * *

WE UNDERSTAND, from what we read that this is not the only goings on in South Carolina, but in many other southern states and we feel our brothers care. We feel the care of those people who perhaps are suffering as I did, the night of October 10th.

We are asking the prayers, not only for us but for our people. And I again say that we feel that every mother and every father in this building should teach your son and your daughter and your friends, and those with whom you come in contact the principles and the need of our cooperating but most especially with the NAACP.

We should feel grateful to this organization; we should go out and try to bring others in and help support it. We should not have the selfish feeling to think well, I'm here, they can't hurt me.

If you don't have relatives, if you don't have brothers or sisters or cousins in the South, you should have people in the South who believe in justice and who want freedom. They need our help, they need your help and we should be willing to give whatever we can if it's nothing but a prayer to those who need us.

Now my dear friends, I must say again that we are certainly grateful to every one of you for your prayers and everything that you have given for the helping of this cause.

But when I think of having a son in Korea, aiding to protect millions of American lives, and here I am, a mother, and a father, a brother and a sister here without the protection of the government it makes me bow my head and sigh.

We have one daughter in North Carolina, we have one son here, as, I have said, whom we were forced to bring away from Maryland University for fear of reprisal.

Was Priest Moved Because Of His NAACP Activities?

Afro-American P.13 Sat. 5-5-56 Baltimore, Md.

By JOHN H. McCRAY

ORANGEBURG, S.C. — The Rt. Rev. Thomas N. Carruthers, bishop of the South Carolina Episcopal Church Diocese, side-stepped questioning during a church meeting Sunday on why he recently ordered Vicar Henry L. Parker, of the St. Pauls mission elsewhere.

The meeting following a confirmation at St. Pauls, which had been reported earlier would be boycotted by the membership, but went on as scheduled after church leaders shifted strategy.

Several members said Bishop Carruthers declined to explain what he had meant in press reports that Father Parker would be more "happily placed" elsewhere.

* * *

NEWSPAPERS HAD quoted Bishop Carruthers as saying he had dismissed the vicar on the request of some members of the church. In a letter dated in April, the prelate wrote the Times and Democrat of Orangeburg:

"The statement in your paper on Saturday about the Rev. Henry L. Parker, minister of St. Pauls Episcopal Church, could easily be misconstrued and I write this brief letter in the interest of clarification and fairness to all concerned.

"There was no request from St. Pauls congregation or from its vestry for Mr. Parker's removal.

"St. Pauls is a mission of the Diocese of South Carolina and missions are under the direct administration of the bishop. Clergy serving missions are there by the bishop's appointment. My action in this matter was, therefore, a part of my responsibility as bishop of the diocese.

* * *

"I DID NOT intend to give this matter any publicity. The publicity originated elsewhere. The circumstances leading up to my decision date back for some

"I came to the conclusion that it would be best, both for Mr. Parker and the congregation, for him to seek work elsewhere. I so advised him."

38a

THE NEWSPAPER, a support of the White Citizens Council, had not published the bishop's letter one month later. Queried by the AFRO, the Times and Democrat city editor said the letter had been referred to the managing editor; he gave no reason for its failure to appear.

Members said the prelate disclaimed that Father Parker's dismissal was a reprisal for his pro-NAACP and integration activities, quoting the Rev. Mr. Carruthers as announcing that he "would never question any" of his ministers on their NAACP activities.

However, they said, the bishop had charged Father Parker with trying "to break up the colored Convocation" in the S.C. Diocese.

* * *

ONE WOMAN member arose at this point in the meeting to announce that the St. Pauls congregation had been opposing the "colored" convocation some 3 years before the vicar arrived at the church — eight months ago.

Prior to the Sunday meeting, the women's auxiliary and the general congregation had both filed protests with Bishop Carruthers over the vicar's removal.

* * *

THE AUXILIARY's letter, dated April 9, said in part:

"At a call meeting of the woman's auxiliary of St. Pauls Episcopal Church, Sunday, April 8, 1956, the members unanimously decided to appoint a committee to draft a protest against the removal of the Rev. Henry L. Parker, vicar, and the manner in which it was done — the information coming to us through the local newspaper.

"Since Father Parker has been in charge, the church has grown spiritually as well as materially. We feel that moving him is by no means the wish of the majority of the loyal members of the church and will seriously affect the future of the church.

His conduct and activity in community services have been in keeping with proper ministerial decorum, in the interest of the total welfare of his parishioners.

* * *

"HIS SOCIO - RELIGIOUS activities have met our wholehearted approval. We feel that this community cooperation was in keeping with the principles set forth by the general church in its recent convention in Hawaii."

The women leaders said that no notice of the removal had been given the congregation, except through newspapers, adding:

"This action has caused the church and its members untold embarrassment in the community."

* * *

THE AUXILIARY also belabored the group which allegedly conferred with the bishop:

"In this our protest we must state that such action on the part of individuals did not represent the church officially.

Those persons who made the complaint to the bishop were speaking for themselves as individuals, and not for the church membership."

* * *

TEN DAYS later, April 19, the general congregation forwarded a similar letter of protest to the bishop, who resides in Charleston:

"At a call meeting of the congregation of Saint Pauls Episcopal Church, Wednesday, April 18, 1956, the members unanimously decided to draft a protest against the manner of the dismissal of the Rev. Mr. Henry L. Parker, vicar."

The letter, too, took exceptions to use of newspapers for notice of the dismissal, rather than an official note to the membership.

The congregation's letter also backed the vicar:

"The congregation feels that the services of the Rev. Mr. Parker have added materially and spiritually to the church and it was, with regret that we received notification that he will no longer be with us.

"This action has caused us undue embarrassment and we fear it has caused impairment to the growth and development of the church."

One church leader explained that in Episcopal missions — the classification of St. Pauls — the bishop's decisions are superior to, and binding upon, the congregation.

* * *

IN A MISSION, he said, the vicar's salary in part is paid by the membership and in part by the diocese or general church. Vicars are, therefore, appointed and removed by bishops.

The Episcopal parish, however, selects and dismisses its rector.

Suspicion persists here that Father Parker's support in behalf of economic pressure farm victims of the White Citizens Council and his prointegration, pro-NAACP stand were factors in the dismissal.

* * *

A RECENT supplementary list issued by the Orangeburg White Citizens Council included the name of the Rev. Mr. Parker; such listings mean disfavor with the WCC and a summary cutting off of credit in the community by firms and services following the WCC line.

Father Parker, a close associate said, "is looking for work" elsewhere but will remain at St. Pauls until a transfer is found to his liking.

"He is definitely planning to leave," the associate said. "He doesn't feel it best for all concerned that he remain longer than he finds another location."

FATHER HENRY L. PARKER descends steps in front of St. Paul Episcopal Church in Orangeburg, S.C. (Cecil Williams Photo.)

CAROLINA ASKS INTERRACIAL BOOK BANNING

Daily Intercom Chicago, Ill. Mon. 5-7-56

Proposal Could Halt U. S. Library Aid

Columbia, S. C., April 1 [Special] — The South Carolina legislature has asked the state library board to screen out books "antagonistic and inimical to the traditions and customs of this state."

The joint resolution, originating in the house several weeks ago, also was passed by the Senate. Adoption was by voice vote after a motion to table was lost, 7-15.

"It is time now to let people in these United States know . . . that South Carolina is playing for keeps," said Sen. Gressette, chairman of the state school segregation committee.

May Lose Federal Aid

Speaking of expressed fears that the resolution might cost the state a potential $172,000 in federal library aid, Gresette said he would rather see "every cent" of it lost "in order to protect the minds of our young girls and boys."

Only one title is singled out in the resolution. It is a children's book, "Swimming Hole" by Gerald Beim, which encourages inter-racial play on the part of young children.

The resolution grew out of discovery of this volume in the county library of a section where white citizens councils are active.

Sen. West, attorney from Camden, long a resort town, opposed "such censorship."

Cites 'Book Burnings'

Citing "book burnings" in Hitler's Germany, West said, "Southern traditions are too firm to have to rest on any such insecure footing."

Sen. Morrison of low-country Georgetown county said the resolution should be adopted only "if we are going to be afraid of the darky."

When an upstate senator asked whether the resolution wouldn't cover items in newspapers and magazines, Gressette replied that, as for himself, he has stopped subscribing to "publications sponsoring" integration.

Some leading newspapers opposed the resolution.

Call to fight WCC squeeze bears fruit

Afro-American Sat. 4-14-56 p. 3 Baltimore, Md.

ORANGEBURG, S.C. — Within less than a week after publication of an appeal from local NAACP officials, more than $500 had been added to a fund to support loans to farmers victimized by White Citizens Council reprisals.

In addition, a number of requests for details on procedure for contributing to the fund had come in from various localities as far away as New Castle, Ind.

The appeal was signed by Fr. Henry Parker, rector of St Paul's Episcopal Church; the Revs. M. D. McCollom, pastor of Trinity Methodist Church and president of the Orangeburg NAACP; Alfred Isaac, New Mt. Zion Baptist Church, all of Orangeburg, and E. E. Richburg, Liberty Hill AME hurch, Summerton.

It explained that banks in Orangeburg, Sumter and Clarendon Counties are denying customary fertilizer and seed loans to all farmers who have signed petitions for school integration and those who are even believed to be in sympathy with NAACP activities.

The fund is being developed, according to its sponsors, not through gifts, but through contributions which will be used as bank loans and returned after the distressed farmers have sold their crops next fall.

* * *

ALL LOANS ARE being handled on a strict business basis with mortgage security

Arrangements have been completed for the Victory Savings Bank of Columbia to receive the contributions and execute the loans to farmers.

The Rev. Mr. McCollom and his associates emphasized, in a statement this week, that all contributions should be mailed directly to the bank, with mention of their purpose, rather than to the ministers themselves

* * *

INITIAL DEPOSITS to the fund made prior to the published appeal included $20,000 from the national office of the NAACP, $5,000 each from the National Council of Churches and the Congregational Christian Church, and lesser amounts from South Carolina groups including the Prince Hall Masons.

Efforts have been launched to induce several of the Greek letter fraternities and sororities to make some of their national organization deposits available.

Complete details of the plan may be obtained either from the Victory Savings Bank of Columbia or any of the sponsoring ministers.

Seek Censure Of South Carolina

Defender Chicago, Ill. Sat. 4-21-56

State Sen. Fred Smith and Representative Corneal Davis, both of Chicago, are already planning Carolina legislature's resolution which condemns the U. S. Supreme court for its school desegregation ruling.

The two members of the Illinois legislature plan to introduce resolutions at the next session in January, 1957 — to condemn the State of South Carolina for condemning the Supreme Court.

The South Carolina resolution has been passed by both houses, certified by the Secretary of State and signed by Gov. George Bell Timmerman. The document has been distributed to the legislatures of all the states and segregationists are hoping that enough states will "ratify" it.

Davis labelled the South Carolina resolution "a fraud of the first order."

Davis said "the mere fact that Negro citizens are denied the right to vote and exercise their full constitutional privileges or hold public office makes this resolution a fraud upon its face and I will ask the membership of the assembly of the state of Illinois and the governor to non-concur."

Prof would treat Dixie natives like refugees

Afro-American p. 5 Sat. 5-26-56

NEW YORK — A professor in sociology and anthropology at Ohio State University seems to have fallen for the idea expressed by T. R. Waring, editor of the Charleston (S.C.) News and Courier, that moving large numbers of colored people North would solve the race problem in the United States.

Writing in the New York Times, Brewton Berry, of Columbus, Ohio, states:

"There is considerable merit in the idea (Waring's) and I am writing therefore in the hopes of promoting serious consideration of it and also to suggest how it might be carried out.

* * *

"THE GREATEST resistence to school desegregation and extension of the franchise arises in those areas where the size of the colored population approaches or exceeds that of the white.

Therefore a wider dispersion of colored people throughout the United States would certainly alleviate the problem of conflict and discrimination which so disturbs our consciences and injures our prestige throughout the world.

"Needless to say, coercion must be altogether excluded.

"It is my proposal, therefore, that Congress enact legislation to enable colored people in the South who wish to do so to migrate to the North and West.

* * *

"FUNDS OUGHT to be made available to them in the form of loans, and an agency ought to be established to administer the program.

"The governors of the northern and western states and the mayors of the cities and town might appoint commissions (similar to those we have now for the refugee program) charged with the responsibility of promoting the migration and assisting in the adjustment of the migrants.

"Voluntary groups (churches, civic organizations, service clubs, etc.) would play the same prominent role under this plan that they currently play in the refugee program — Securing sponsors, assuring housing and jobs and facilitating the adjustment."

380

THURMOND HELPS WRITE MANIFESTO — Sen. Strom Thurmond (D., S. C.), who helped write a manifesto on school segregation, works on correspondence with the assistance of his wife in their home at Washington. Thurmond is one of 19 senators and 77 representatives, all from the South, who pledged to exercise every "lawful means" to reverse the U. S. Supreme Court ruling to banish racial segregation in public schools. They called the court's 1954 decision an unconstitutional "abuse of judicial power."

sight. These requirements include:

Post-Herald

1. A government of national unity representing all major non-Communist and non-Fascist parties and therefore capable of action politically impossible for any partisan cabinet.

Press 3-13-56

2. Increased military conscriptions. Several hundred thousand more troops are needed instead of the 30,000 from Indo-China and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) planned by Mollet.

3. A large increase in direct taxes—now generally evaded—to finance Mollet's proposed Algerian social reforms and economic development.

Birm., Ala.

4. Equal political rights, social benefits and economic opportunity of the Moslem majority with the French minority which now rules and exploits Algeria.

As for genuine equal rights and privileges for the Moslems and the French, only a minority in the Paris Parliament nominally favors such basic reforms. Even that minority—which includes Mollet and his coalition partner, Pierre Mendes-France—refuses to define equality or commit itself to specific reforms.

Meanwhile the Mollet-Mendes government and the divided parliament hope to win the Algerian war cheaply. The same fatal French attitude of doing too little too late and then blaming America and Britain for the failure lost Indo-China. Algeria is vastly more important to French survival.

James Hinton Residence

Journal + Guide Sat. 1-28-56 p. 1

s Sprayed By Gun Shot

Norfolk, Va.

Noted Leader's Wife Alone At Home When Shots Are Fired; Police Press Their Investigation

38a

pecial to Journal and Guide

COLUMBIA, S. C.—Just eight days after South Carolina's Gov. Timmerman lled for a "lawful" race battle to get underway in the state, the home of the presi- nt of the state conference of NAACP branches was peppered by shotgun blasts.

The "lawful" aspects of the overnor's "battle" were in no wise evident when unknown persons fired a series of shot- gun blasts into the home of James M. Hinton, veteran civ- l rights advocate, Monday ight, Jan. 20.

* * *

ONLY MRS. HINTON, wife of the businessman-church- man-civic leader was in the home residence at 1222 Heidt street when the dwelling was literally sprinkled with blasts from shotguns. Mr. Hinton, who is agency director for the Pilgrim Life Insurance Company, Augusta, Ga., was out of town at the time.

When contacted by the Jour- nal and Guide at his Augusta office early this week, Mr. Hinton said investigation of the shooting by local police of- ficers had gotten underway Tuesday. Mr. Hinton said forthrightly that he plans to press investigation of the mat- ter to the fullest.

* * *

"WE'VE DRAWN OUR lot with those who seek equality of opportunity for all people and this will not deter us from our chosen course" he de- clared.

Mr. Hinton, according to well-informed sources, is high on list of Southern colored leaders marked for intimida- tion and possible "exterminа- tion" by Dixie forces seeking to retain the status quo.

HE ONCE WAS "taken for a ride" by night-riders, but es- caped with his life after being told that he was "too uppidy."

He was at a loss to explain why the persons who shot into his home selected a time when he was out of town to do so. "Everybody around knows that I'm usually out of Co- lumbia from Monday through Friday," he told the Guide.

38a

MR. HINTON'S work with the insurance firm takes him to all parts of South Carolina and Georgia and much of his other time is spent in cham- pioning civil rights activities.

Mrs. Hinton said a dozen lead pellets pierced the front of the house and smashed a mirror and sprayed into pot plants, walls and stairs inside the house.

MRS. HINTON reported that about 11:50 Monday night as she was upstairs in the home, she heard a noise sound- ing like someone had "thrown something up against the house."

She said she rushed to a window and saw "an old mod- el car" driving off at a high speed. She was unable to get the license number.

* * *

MRS. HINTON said she could think of no reason why anyone would shoot at the house except her husband's NAACP activities. She add- ed that the midnight shotgun blast was the first violence at the Hinton home although several threatening telephone calls had been received.

Columbia detectives Tues- y morning gathered up size ouble-0" buck shot from the or and picked other pellets of the woodwork and pot nts on a table inside the se.

* * *

THE PELLETS covered a le area to the right of the nt door of the two-story me house, located in an old stantial Negro section of city.

The shot into the front of home was only one of sev- ral fired Monday night in the icinity of the Hinton home, Mrs. Hinton said.

She reported that about 9:30 or 9:45 Monday night she heard three shots fired on an- other side of the home (loca- ted on a corner) but they were apparently into the air.

* * *

SHE SAID SHE was down- stairs at the time and "became so annoyed" at the shooting that she went upstairs. Later, about 11:50, she said, she heard "something that sound- like someone throwing ething up against the front the house," heard a car t up and went to the win- only to see an old model speed off.

Mrs. Hinton said all the ts in the house were off at time.

HE HINTONS, parents of r grown children, have d in the Heidt street house 16 years. "We got a lot threats over the phone for ut six months," Mrs. Hin- said, "but they stopped ing about October." She l she would listen to the lers for a few moments and n say she didn't know what y were talking about and ng up. She said the lan- age used somethimes was orrible."

But she said there have been no recent threats on her or on her husband.

* * *

A NEIGHBOR, Mrs. Maggie Boozer of 1227 Heidt street, reported hearing the shotgun blast. Her son, Benjamin had just come in the house and closed the door as the blast echoed down the quiet street. He reported seeing an old model car parked in front of the Hinton home.

Shortly after the gunshot, Mrs. Hinton said she came down the stairs, and found glass from a four-foot mirror all over the stairs and the floor.

* * *

PLASTER AND debris from the wall was on the floor and on a front hall table. A three- foot potted plant had had a leaf clipped off by the pellets, and several other pellets had lodged in the pot itself.

Small holes were visible on the front porch, about three feet abaove the floor, where the shot entered the house. Inside, larger holes caused by the spreading lead are visible.

* * *

DETECTIVE ELEAZER in- vestigating for Columbia po- lice, said he found several buckshot on the floor in the hallway leading to the stairs. Several glanced off the stair- way, he reported, and it look- ed "like a load from one shot- gun shell."

Mrs. Hinton said 10 or 12 pellets were found by detec- tives.

The Hintons are parents of four grown children, only one of whom is located in the Co- lumbia area. One son, Rod- ney, is in Norfolk, Va., with the Post Office, and one works with the Pilgrim Company be- tween Columbia and Augusta. Of the Hintons two daughters, one is a student at Bennett Col- lege, Greensboro, N. C., and the other is a social worker in Philadelphia, Pa.

Leader's Home Blasted

THE EVIDENCE Evidence that the home of James M. Hinton, president of the South Carolina Conference of NAACP branches was fired on is given in the above photos. At left are shown some of the holes caused in the wall of the frame house by the pellets. Pencil points to where pellets entered close together. At right is shown a four-foot high mirror which was shattered by the gunfire. Mr. Hinton, veteran leader of South Carolina's Negroes, is pictured in inset. He was out-of-town (Columbia) when the incident took place. His wife was alone in the house.

Dixie Editor Smears Negroes in Magazine Article Opposing Integration

Dispatch Thurs. 2-12-56

NEW YORK — (ANP) — A Southern editor last week advanced what amounts to a smear of Negroes in a magazine article opposing integration.

Oklahoma City

In an article entitled "The Southern Case Against Desegregation" appearing in the January issue of Harper's magazine, Thomas R. Waring, editor of the Charleston (S.C.) News and Courier, presented a five-point argument against the mixing of Negro and white children in school which he himself admits" . . . readers outside the region (South) may find it difficult, if not impossible to believe." . . . Waring wrote:

1. Health. "The incidence of venereal disease, for instance, is much greater among Negroes than among whites. . ."

2. Home environment. Waring says the cultural background for most Negro children in the South "is different in many ways from that of their neighbors. . . Slavery is so long in the past that nobody thinks about it any more, but the master and servant, or boss and laborer, relationship between whites and Negroes is still the rule rather than the exception."

3. Marital habits. "On the average, one Southern Negro child in five is illegitimate."

4. Crime. "For many years crime in the South has been more prevalent among Negroes than among white people . . . Conservative, law-abiding people are deeply fearful that hatered and bloodshed would increase without separation of the races."

5. Intellectual development. "Some advocates of integregation say the way to cure these (intellectual) differences is to let the children mingle so that Negroes will learn from the whites.

"The trouble with the theory is that even if it works, a single generation of white children will bear the brunt of the load. While they are rubbing off white civilization onto the colored children, Negro culture will also rub off onto the whites."

Waring did not have to wait long to receive Yankee opposition to his article. In a quick rebuttal the editors of Harper's slapped a headnote on to it stating that the views expressed in the article were "far removed" from theirs. However, they (the editors) said they felt it should be published.

Says Forced Bias Doomed By Historic Forces

World Fri. 3-30-56 P.4

Birmingham Ala.

NEW YORK — Replying to "The Southern Case Against Desegregation," an article published recently in HARPER'S magazine, NAACP Executive Secretary Roy Wilkins declared in a letter that the article's "sophisticated defense of racial intolerance is no more rational than Senator Eastland's crude denunciations."

38a

"The Southern Case" was written by Thomas R. Waring, a South Carolinian. Portions of Mr. Wilkins' letter were published in the March issue of Harper's.

Mr. Waring, Mr. Wilkins said, "brushes asides everything except race as a cause of the Negro's alleged backwardness."

The "shacks and alleys" in which the southern Negro has to live, "the outlying hollows and gulleys and railroad cuts that formed his 'residential areas' were to inspire the 'home environment" deplored as missing by Mr. Waring," the NAACP official commented.

"The overcrowded, underequipped one-room school, the racial pay scale and job ceilings, the demeaning eitquiette of the segregation system, the exclusion from the ballot box — all these had nothing to do with development. That vast numbers of Negroes failed this obstacle means (according to the 'Southern Gentlemen' of the Waring school of thought) that the race is racially inadequate."

"The remedy they propose," Mr. Wilkins noted, "is to continue the same system, to have 'meddlers' keep out and to let time (2055, one South Carolinian has said) and the friendly, thoughtful, considerate Southern whites take care of the whole thing."

The NAACP executive secretary asserted that "the past year has been one of great disillusionment to many white Southerners. 'Their' Negroes, whom they said did not want desegregation, have not stepped forward to ask the continuance of segregation."

DISCUSSION NEEDED

Responding to Mr. Waring's assertion that the South's racial situation calls for discussion, Mr. Wilkins said "the opposition doesn't want to discuss a solution of desegregation problems; it wants only to secure agreement to a continuance of the status quo laced with such improvements as the whites, in their beneficience, and in their own good time may choose to make."

"The Negro contends that this is no basis for discussion, moderate or otherwise. To expect him to think, talk and act as though the Supreme Court had never spoken is pure fantasy, unworthy of debate."

SOUTHERN GOVERNORS CONFERENCE
WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, WEST VIRGINIA

Dixie Chiefs Likely To Air Racial Issues

Advertiser Montgomery Ala Sun 9-9-56

By ARTHUR EDSON

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W.Va. Sept. 8 (AP)—Southern governors begin a four-day meeting here tomorrow, and nowhere in their official program do they mention the burning issue before them:

What happens to Southern education now that the Supreme Court's decision on public school segregation is starting to take effect?

Publicly the governors will discuss big but relatively non-controversial subjects—civilian uses of atomic energy and water conservation in the South. And they will listen to Adm. Arthur W. Radford, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

But you can bet your last Confederate flag that privately they will be comparing a lot of notes on proposals for handling their many school problems.

This will be the Southerners' 22nd annual meeting, and they traditionally hold it in the fall. So it's just a coincidence that their conference opens at the start of a school term, when you only need to skim the headlines to see some of their troubles.

MANY FLAREUPS

Draw a line across the map from Maryland to Texas. Each state it touches has had either a major or a minor flareup over integration. These states—Maryland West Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee, Arkansas and Texas—ring the rest of the South where presumably the integration difficulties will be tougher.

Already one governor, Thomas B. Stanley of Virginia, has reported he will be tardy, maybe absent altogether, because of the school problem. The Virginia Legislature is in a special session, wrestling over proposed school legislation.

Another governor, James P. Coleman of Mississippi, has said he will be unable to attend due to previous commitments.

This leaves 14 governors to fret over regional problems—and talk politics.

Among the Southerners are two Republicans, Theodore Roosevelt McKeldin of Maryland and J. Caleb Boggs of Delaware. Their states went for Eisenhower in the 1952 presidential election, as did Virginia, Tennessee, Oklahoma, Texas and Florida.

These last five states have 65 electoral votes and the Democrats must reclaim nearly all of them if Adlai Stevenson is going to win anywhere in his attempt to reverse the decision in his rematch with Eisenhower Nov. 6.

This will be the Democratic governors' first chance since the Chicago convention to check with each other on political sentiment in the unruly and often far from solid South.

HODGES IS ELECTED BY DIXIE GOVERNORS

Commercial Appeal Thurs. 9-13-56

Atomic Development Program Approved By Group

Memphis Tenn.

NO SEGREGATION STAND

P. 33

By MORRIS CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va., Sept. 12.—The Southern Governors Conference Wednesday approved a comprehensive program to stimulate atomic energy development in the South.

Closing its 22nd annual session, the conference also created a special committee on industrial development, composed of one representative from each of the 16 member states, to spur Southern industrial development in other fields.

Hodges Is Elected

Gov. Luther H. Hodges of North Carolina, a strong segregationist who has led the passage of new antiintegration laws in his state, was elected to succeed Gov. Frank G. Clement of Tennessee as conference chairman.

Sea Island, Ga., was selected as the conference's 1957 meeting place.

In other actions, the Dixie governors:

1. Approved the appointment of an additional member from each state to the Southern Regional Education Board.

2. Agreed to boost state tuition payments for the Southern Regional Education program in medicine and veterinary medicine by $500 a year.

Association Praised

3. Commended the Southern Association of Science and Industry for its assistance in drafting the new regional program to press atomic energy development in the South.

The new program, which calls for the eventual construction of one or more test reactors, is designed to put the South ahead in reaping the benefits of atomic know-how.

The program will start slowly, as did the unique regional education pogram successfully launched in 1948.

A regional advsory council, composed of the chairman of state nuclear energy advisory committees and seven technicians, would direct the program.

$5,000 Per State

To finance further planning, each state will contribute $5,000. The money will go to the Southern Regional Education Board to co-ordinate studies.

As suggested Tuesday by Gov. Leroy Collins of Florida, originator of the program, the governors agreed to keep it out of the atomic-generated electric power field in the initial stages.

However, the resolution proposed that a close watch be kept on private development of atomic power in the South with the idea that the new regional program could move into that field later if it became necessary.

Segregation Ignored

As expected, the governors took no action on the segregation questiton. With Delaware, Maryland, Kentucky, West Virginia and Oklahoma members of the conference, the segregation question has been omitted from conference actions for the past several years because of the divergence of views and policies among the 16 member states.

Before going into closed session for approval of resolutions and election of Governor Hodges, the governors devoted a public session to a general discussion of the need for improved water conservation programs in the South.

Panelists included Gov. Orval Faubus of Arkansas.

Governors huddle—

Clement says neither side all-out 'right'

News P. 1
Mon. 9-10-56
Birmingham Ala.

BY WARREN ROGERS JR.

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va., Sept. 10—(AP)—Gov. Frank G. Clement of Tennessee told fellow Southern governors today that "all justice does not lie on either side" in the South's rankling school segregation problem.

Making his welcoming address as chairman of the 22nd annual Southern Governors Conference, the 36-year-old Clement declared:

"Today the South is on trial. Today the South is the object of harsh criticism. . . . Today the South groans with a wrenching, agonizing social problem.

"ABOUT THE issues involved in that problem, I can only say that all justice does not lie on either side. But about the ultimate issue of that groaning, I am optimistic.

"This travail will not prevent the South from making future contributions to the nation."

Clement's talk, a welcome by Host Gov. William C. Marland of West Virginia and a series of reports make up today's opening program. Adm. Arthur W. Radford, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, makes the principal address at the annual dinner tonight.

NOT ON THE AGENDA, but on everybody's tongue, were the burning questions of school integration and politics.

The governors weighed two plans for coping with their mutual problem of school desegregation.

One plan came from the only Republican governor attending this four-day meeting, Theodore R. McKeldin of Maryland. It was admittedly of a general nature.

The other, as specific as dollars and cents, was offered by Gov. Luther H. Hodges of North Carolina, whose voters adopted it 4-1 at a Saturday referendum.

News P. 8

BUT SCHOOL segregation, easily the biggest concern of governors below the Mason-Dixon line, was not the only topic.

There was also politics. And the consensus was that President Eisenhower and Vice President Nixon would not do nearly as well in the South as they did in 1952, when they got seven Southern states.

Neither of those topics was on the agenda of the meeting. However, a report on how the South is faring in its regional education program provided a possible vehicle for some governor to turn the talk to segregation in the public schools.

THE GOVERNORS were asked to approve a recommendation that $500 be added to the annual payment made by states for students in medicine and veterinary medicine. They now are $1500 and $1000, respectively.

Gov. Leroy Collins of Florida, in his report as chairman of the Southern Regional Education Board, said such a raise "would bring these payments more nearly in line with costs."

The payments are made to schools which have signed contracts under the regional education plan launched in 1949. Collins said this program, making available to all the states the facilities of all of them in such technical fields as medicine and forestry, has been a huge success.

As for school integration problems stemming from the Supreme Court decision outlawing segregation, McKeldin issued a statement late last night saying Maryland has a general rule: "No matter what happens everybody is going to obey the law, and nobody is going to shoot."

So far, he said, it has worked. As to Maryland, he said:

"We confidently expect that within a short time the decree of the court will have been put into effect throughout the state.

"From the very start we . . . have held as sacred two propositions . . . the constitution as interpreted by the court is the supreme law of the land . . . the second is that violence will not be tolerated."

Governors Tee Off With Integration Statements

Herald P.20-C

By JAY JENKINS
Special To The Herald

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va. — The Southern Governors Conference Sunday afternoon got off to a strenuous start on the golf links.

Miami Herald

Gov. Luther Hodges of North Carolina said he had last played golf eight months ago.

Then he stepped to the first tee and smacked a drive 200 yards down the middle of the fairway.

Hodges played 11 holes, posted an undisclosed score, and retired for the day.

Monday afternoon, those governors who are not too footsore will take part in a tournament hosted by Sammy Snead, the golf pro at the Greenbrier, conference headquarters.

While the governors are opening their formal business session Monday morning, their wives will be competing in a putting match.

Gov. Frank G. Clement of Tennessee, whose phrases roll like the mountainous skyline of his state, is chairman of the conference. He will open it at 10 a.m. with an address of welcome.

Various reports will consume the morning session, with the afternoon free for recreation. The annual state dinner, a ruffles-on-the-drum affair, will be held Monday night.

Tuesday morning, Gov. LeRoy Collins of Florida will preside over a roundtable discussion of "Civilian Uses of Atomic Energy." Participants will include Gov. George Bell Timmerman Jr. of South Carolina and Gov. Marvin Griffin of Georgia.

The concluding business session on Wednesday morning will feature a roundtable on "Water Conservation and Development," with Gov. Hodges presiding.

Besides their golf, the governors were busy Sunday issuing statements about integration.

Gov. Clement said he's chiefly concerned over "keeping outside agitators from stirring the people up" on the school integration problem.

"I'm not going to tolerate outside agitators, period," Clement said.

FOLSOM HODGES

Gov. James E. Folsom, of Alabama, said no matter what happens elsewhere, "it's goin' to take a long, long time for school integration to come in Alabama." Folsom pointed out that Alabama is the only state in which no suits have been brought as the result of the Supreme Court's decision on public school integration.

Gov. Hodges declared he was "tremendously pleased and impressed" with the overwhelming margin of approval North Carolinians gave Saturday to a state constitutional amendment aimed at preserving school segregation.

Nearly 600,000 persons voted, approving the plan by about 4½ to 1. The plan was strongly endorsed by the governor. He called it a moderate approach to the U.S. Supreme Court's desegregation decrees and said it would preserve public school segregation and yet comply with the high court's ruling.

The double-barrelled amendment does not change the state's constitutional provision for maintaining public schools.

However, it modifies the Constitution so as to:

1—Permit a local school unit, on a petition of 15 per cent of its voters, to vote whether to close its schools. The governor has called this a safety-valve device which he hoped would be used only in "intolerable" situations.

2—Permit the payment of public funds, both state and local, to parents who want to send their children to private schools because they object to sending them to integrated public schools.

Destruyen los franceses una fortaleza rebelde en Argelia

Diario de la Marina

CABLES DE ULTIMA HORA

ARGEL, sept. 10. (AP).— Los franceses lanzaron hoy un ataque por sorpresa en un sector de la cadena de montañas Gran Kabylie, y destruyeron una fortaleza nacionalista situada en lo alto de una colina a 36 kilómetros al Oriente de Argel. El cuartel general declaró que los soldados fueron transportados en helicópteros, para atacar la posición rebelde cerca de Borjmeniel, entre Argel y Tizi Ouzou. En los últimos días esta región había estado relativamente tranquila y los franceses trataron de ponerla nuevamente bajo el control de autoridades civiles, al nombrar el miércoles un nuevo Prefecto civil. Los franceses, sin embargo, no proyectan retirar las tropas de la región.

Diario, 9-11-56

"Pudo correr mucha sangre"

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS West Virginia, sept. 10. (INS).— El gobernador Frank Clement declaró hoy a los gobernadores de la parte Sur de los E.U. que él evitó el estallido de una lucha sangrienta y una matanza entre los ciudadanos de su Estado, por motivo de la controversia sobre integración contra segregación racial, al movilizar la Guardia Nacional y enviar varios pelotones a la ciudad de Clinton.

Clement preside la Conferencia de Gobernadores.

Afirmó que "si lo hubiese esperado treinta minutos más, muchos de nuestros ciudadanos hubieran caído muertos en la calle.. así de cerca estuvo de desatarse la tragedia".

Agregó el Gobernador tenesiano: "fue una situación terrible, teníamos que decidir si dejar a nuestros ciudadanos a merced de la violencia, y sus hogares bombardeados. El gobierno del Estado no podía permanecer inactivo y tolerar que eso ocurriera".

A juicio del Gobernador Clement, lo ocurrido en Clinton es una lección para sus compañeros estatales en momento similares, precipitados por la controversia sobre la segregación racial.

Negro Leaders To Attend State Of The Race Contab

Pittsburgh Courier Sat. 4-21-56

NEW YORK — More than a score of the nation's top Negro leaders, from organizations with a combined membership totaling more than 12 million Negroes, are expected to participate in a "State of the Race" Conference on Race in Washington D.C. The implementation of the U.S. Supreme Court's public school desegregation decision, the rise of the White Citizens Councils and the general mounting racial tension in the South are the issues which are occasioning the calling of the Conference.

A. Philip Randolph, vice president of the AFL-CIO and international president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, announced that his letter of April 14 to Negro leaders urged that the meeting deal with some of the serious problems facing millions of Americans as a result of the recent Southern Congressmen's Manifesto in addition to the above named problems.

Randolph said, "A crucial challenge to every Negro and Negro organization is posed by the recent so-called 'Declaration of Constitutional Principles' introduced in the Congress on March eleventh, this year."

In an attempt to rally Negro leadership, the call to the convention states that there is a four-fold purpose to the Southern Congressmen's Manifesto. They are:

1. To defy and challenge the decision of the Supreme Court as an invasion of States' rights with a view to effecting its reversal or nullification.

2. To break away the northern educational and church liberal forces from effective involvement in the racial desegregation movement. Such action, if successful would also mobilize public opinion in favor of southern racial segregation.

3. To encircle and isolate the NAACP from the Negro. This effort is designed to achieve the neutralization of the Association's efforts, if not its complete annihilation.

4. To create a cheap labor market in order to attract northern anti-union business interests.

Randolph suggested that there are three things requiring the immediate attention of Negro leadership:

1. Unite the American Negro in an all-out vigorous support of the high court's desegregation decision.

2. At all cost, prevent the encirclement and isolation of the NAACP from the Negro people.

3. Completely tap and utilize the American reservoir of good will and fair play. We must initiate programs which will bring together citizens of all religious faiths, including labor, civic, business, government, and education interests, dedicated to the defense and maintenance of the Constitution of the United States.

The conference is to be held in the headquarters of the National Association of Colored Women in the Nation's capitol.

73 Negro Leaders Find 'State of Race' Not Good

Washington D.C. Star Wed 4-25-56

Seventy-three Negro leaders representing some 12 million of their people convened here yesterday for a day-long conference on "the state of the race." They did not find it good.

Chairman A. Philip Randolph, president of the International Union of Sleeping Car Porters and a vice president of the AFL-CIO, told reporters the conference had come to the conclusion that the pace of desegregation is "too slow" and that progress in civil rights has been "inadequate."

The conferees, who were recruited from civic, church, labor and benevolent groups from all over the country, specifically rejected the doctrine of "gradualism" as a way of achieving civil rights.

Plan Member and Funds Drive

They announced they hope to increase the present membership of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People from 450,000 to one million within the next two years. They have set themselves a goal of raising a $2 million legal education fund for the organization during the same period.

Further, they voted to create a 12-man "Co-ordinating Consultative Leadership Committee" which will be charged with the responsibility of consulting with various leaders of organizations from time to time, "especially when crises arise, in the interest of placing their full weight, moral and financial, behind the fight for civil rights." It will meet in New York next month.

One of the new committee's first assignments, Mr. Randolph told reporters, will be to seek a conference with President Eisenhower, with a "view to placing before him the nature of the problems of the present civil rights crisis."

The committee also will be responsible for drafting a reply to the so-called "Southern Manifesto," a pledge to fight desegregation signed by 101 Southern Senators and Congressmen.

Advise No Commitment

In their most important political decision of the day, the conferees went on record as advising that Negroes be "politically uncommitted" to either major party in the coming presidential election. Candidates will be judged on the basis of their position on civil rights, the platform of their parties and their records on civil rights in this Congress.

In an opening statement approved by all the conferees, Mr. Randolph said both parties had been "guilty of a 'do-nothing' policy in the interest of Federal civil rights legislation since the Civil War." In that light, he declared, "a policy of rigid adherence to party label on the Negro does not make sense."

Will Study Decision

The new committee, Mr. Randolph said, will be charged with the responsibility of gathering material on the meaning and significance of the desegregation decision, not only to Negroes, but to all Americans. They will give widespread circulation to this material, with the belief that it will "touch the deep reservoir of American good will and sense of fair play in the interests of civil rights."

A document called "The Negro's Declaration of Intention," drawn up by J. H. Jackson of Chicago, president of the National Baptist Convention, was adopted by the conference. It said in part:

"We intend to participate in the total cultural life of the Nation, both for personal growth and development, and for the further progress of the country itself." The declaration also pledged obedience and respect for the laws and loyalty to the United States.

Members of Committee

Dr. Jackson is a member of the new Co-ordinating Consulative Leadership Committee. Other members are:

Mr. Randolph, Roy Wilkins, executive secretary of the NAACP; Father Shelton Hale Bishop, of St. Philip's Episcopal Church, New York; Rev. David Licorish, assistant minister of the Abyssinian Baptist Church, New York; Theodore Brown, director of research and education, International Union of Sleeping Car Porters; Mrs. William Thomas Mason, president of the National Council of Negro Women.

Also T. R. M. Howard, M. D., of Mound Bayou, Mississippi; E. D. Nixon, treasurer, Montgomery (Ala.) Improvement Association; Mrs. Irene McCoy Gaines, president, National Federation of Colored Women's Clubs; Loren Miller, attorney, Los Angeles; M. P. Webster, first vice president, Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters.

State of the Race meeting called by Philip Randolph

Afro-American 4-21-56

Baltimore Md.

NEW YORK — A "State of the Race" Conference has been called by A. Philip Randolph for April 24 at the headquarters of the National Council of Women in Washington.

Mr. Randolph issued the call to leaders of national organizations with a combined membership of 12 million to attend the conference.

The implementation of the U.S. Supreme Court's public school desegregation decision, the rise of the White Citizens Councils and the general mounting racial tension in the South are the issues to be discussed.

* * *

MR. RANDOLPH, VICE president of the AFL-CIO and president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, set forth three points to act upon:

1. — Unite colored Americans in an all out vigorous support of the high court's desegregation decision;

2. — At all cost, prevent the encirclement and isolation of the NAACP from the colored people;

3. — Completely tap and utilize the American reservoir of good will and fair play.

NEGRO LEADERS TO CONEVNE AT 'STATE OF THE RACE' CONFERENCE

Dispatch p. 1 Thurs. 4-26-56 Oklahoma City Okla.

NEW YORK.—More than a score of the nation's top Negro leaders, from organizations with a combined membership totaling more than 12 million Negroes, are expected to participate in a "State of the Race" Conference on April 24 in Washington, D. C.

The implementation of the U. S. Supreme Court's public school desegregation decision, the rise of the White Citizens Councils and the general mounting racial tension in the South are the issues which are occasioning the calling of the conference.

A. Philip Randolph, vice president of the AFL-CIO and international president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, announced that his letter of April 9, to Negro leaders urged that the meeting deal with some of the serious problems facing millions of Americans as a result of the recent Southern Congressmen's Manifesto in addition to the above named problems.

Randolph said, "A crucial challenge to every Negro and Negro organization is posed by the recent so-called 'Declaration of Constitutional Principles' introduced in the Congress on March 11, this year."

In an attempt to rally Negro leadership, the call to the convention states that there is a fourfold purpose to the Southern Congressmen's Manifesto. They are:

1. To defy and challenge the decision of the Supreme Court as an invasion of States' rights with a view to effecting its reversal or nullification.

2. To break away the northern educational and church liberal forces from effective involvement in the racial desegregation movement. Such actoin, if successful, would also mobilize public opinion in favor of southern racial segregation.

3. To encircle and isolate the NAACP from the Negro. This effort is designed to achieve the neutralization of the Association's efforts, if not its complete annihilation.

4. To create a cheap labor market in order to attract northern anti-union business interests.

Randolph suggested that there are three things requiring the immediate attention of Negro leadership:

1. Unite the American Negro in an all-out vigorous support of the high court's desegregation decision.

2. At all cost, prevent the encirclement and isolation of the NAACP from the Negro people.

3. Completely tap and utilize the American reservoir of goodwill and fair play. We must initiate programs which will bring together citizens of all religious faiths, including labor, civic, business, government, and education interests, dedicated to the defense and maintenance of the constitution of the United States.

The conference is to be held in the headquarters of the National Association of Colored Women in the nation's capitol.

grams which will bring together citizens of all religious faiths, including labor, civic, business, government, and education interests, delicated to the defense and maintenance of the Constitution of the Uinted States.

The Conference is to be held in the headquarters of the National Association of Colored Women in the Nation's capital.

organization is posed by the recent so-called 'Declaration of Constitutional Principles' introduced in the congress on March eleventh this year."

In an attempt to rally Negro leadership, the call to the convention states that there is a four fold purpose to the southern congressmen's manifesto. They are:

been in the news since she was two. At that time the New York Herald-Tribune in an interview with her found out that she could spell hundreds of words. At three her music was so advanced, Time magazine called her a musical genuis because she had written 10 compositions. At seven Philippa gave two recitals of her own works at the New York world fair.

At twelve she wrote and orchestrated a symphonic poem called "Manhattan Nocturne" which later received first prize. At 13, she wrote an orchestral scherze, "Rumpelstiltskin". At 14, she appeared before an audience of 14,000.

She has appeared in more than 100 cities and has completed her fifth foreign tour as a musical ambassador of goodwill.

"State of The Race" Conference to Draw Negro Leaders to D. C.

State Press P. 1 Fri. 4-20-56 Little Rock Ark.

More than a score of the nation's op Negro leaders, from organizations with a combined membership totaling more than 12 million Negroes, are expected to participate in a "State of the Race" conference on April 24th in Washington, D. C.

The implementation of the U. S Supreme Court's public school desegregation decision, the rise of the White Citizens councils and the general mounting racial tension in the south are the issues which are occasioning the calling of the conference.

A. Philip Randolph, vice president of the AFL-CIO and international president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, announced that his letter of April 9th to Negro leaders urged that the meeting deal with some of the serious problems facing millions of Americans as a result of the recent southern congressmen's manifesto in addition to the above named problems.

Randolph said, "A crucial challenge to every Negro and Negro

1. To defy and challenge the decision of the Supreme Court as an invasion of states' rights with a view to effecting its reversal or nullification.

2. To break away the northern educational and church liberal forces from effective involvement in the racial desegregation movement. Such action, if successful, would also mobilize public opinion in favor of southern racial segregation.

3. To encircle and isolate the NAACP from the Negro. This effort is designed to achieve the neutralization of the association's efforts, if not its complete annihilation.

4. To create a cheap labor market in order to attract northern anti-union business interests.

Randolph suggested that there are three things requiring the immediate attention of Negro leadership: State Press

1. Unite the American Negro in an all-out vigorous support of the Hi Court's desegregation decision. P. 4

2. At all cost, prevent the en-

Group asks Afro-American nationwide drive ahead

Sat. 5-5-56 Baltimore, Md.

By LARRY STILL

WASHINGTON

"We reject all doctrines of gradualism, moderation or middle of the road. The gradualism approach is based upon the assumption that either colored citizens are not ready for desegregation—or that Federal and state courts' decisions can not be enforced."

This was the decision handed down Tuesday, by A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, following a meeting with 75 top leaders of communities throughout the nation.

They represented 12,000,000 persons.

In a prepared text which spokesman said summed up the view of conference members, Mr. Randolph declared:

"Colored citizens are in the midst of a grave civil rights' crisis, a crisis which is an inevitable phase of a civil rights revolution, a revolution which has its roots in the Civil War revolution, a revolution which was never fully completed.

"Now, a crisis is distinguished by the possession of two factors; one, danger; and the other, opportunity.

"The question as to how we grapple with this crisis is by far the most important question we have had to answer since the Civil War.

* * *

"ONE BIG fact is fairly obvious: namely, that this crisis has been sharpened and broadened by the rise, growth and spread of the White Citizens Councils and the revival of the old Ku Klux Klan and other hate groups.

"Together with the infamous manifesto, signed by 101 Southern Congressmen and Senators, they are designed to bring about the nulification or reversal of the desegregation decision of the Supreme Court.

"I want to emphasize the point that this crisis is an inevitable phase of the civil rights revolution, for it could be avoided or eliminated only by the existence of either one of two conditions;

"Namely, refusal of colored men to continue to press for full freedom or the voluntary concession of the colored citizen's claims to first-class citizenship by the Dixiecrat South.

"Neither one of these conditions is likely to obtain.

"When one recognizes the fact that social history shows no instance of a group which possesses power voluntarily surrendering said power over any people or any thing for any reason, the prospects of the South voluntarily recognizing colored people as first-class citizens is not remotely possible.

"Thus the logical deduction is that freedom, equality and justice for any people at any time, anywhere, must either be ceaselessly fought for or these conditions will not be won and enjoyed.

"Therefore, the fact that the civil rights crisis is becoming increasingly threatening to the racial peace in some southern communities is not strange, unusual or unique.

"Nor should this fact be the occasion for a policy of appeasement or retreat on the part of the colored man; for appeasement and retreat will only whet the appetite of southern racial reaction for more reaction and further appeasement and retreat.

"Moreover, it is the long, tragic story of history that no revolution has been developed and carried forward without some casualties and great labor and pain, if not bloodshed and death.

"The seed which is planted in the earth must die before a tree will grow and bear fruit. One must die if he would live. I have only to point to the Christian Revolution, the Revolution for Political Democracy and the Industrial Revolution.

"Now, it is well that we not only recognize but forthrightly accept the fact that a civil rights revolution is under way, involving the vast transition of the colored person from a status of a slave to that of a free worker and first-class citizen.

"Now, history is replete with evidence of the fact that in this competitive struggle among social forces the state invariably moves in the direction and confers its favor upon that social force which, in the context of the times, constitutes the greatest challenge to the stability and power of the state.

"The philosophy behind this historical fact is that government only moves when it is moved by pressure from social forces. It never initiates action in behalf of any groups of its citizens on a basis of sympathy, mercy or justice.

"If this analysis is correct then our task is clear.

"Thus the purpose of this conference should be to go on record with the following purposes:

"Seek and urge unity among colored persons who have the primary responsibility of winning civil rights behind the United States Supreme Court Desegregation Decision of May 17, 1954, and May 31, 1955. This mandate is obvious in the face of the unity of the South against the decision.

"Because the National Association is ably leading the fight for civil rights and the strategy of the high command of the Southern Segregationists is to encircle, outlaw and isolate the association from the colored man by legislation, intimidation and violence, colored persons have no alternative save to back and support the NAACP morally and financially.

"Hence, this conference should express its position on the NACCP by calling for a million colored members for the association in the next two years with a fund of two million to fight for civil rights.

"Colored persons are manifesting great wisdom in not resorting to the impotent weapon of violence in retaliation against the violence of White Citizens Councils for just as violence cannot enable colored persons to win their civil rights, neither can violence on the part of White Citizens Councils defeat the struggle of colored citizens to achieve their civil rights.

"Finally, let this conference go on record as advocating that funds be raised for the legal cases of the NAACP, the Montgomery Boycott of the Jim Crow Bus and colored farmers under boycott of White Citizens Councils in Mississippi and South Carolina, and that the funds be sent to the NAACP and the Montgomery Improvement Association.

The all-day meeting was held at the headquarters of the National Association of Colored Women, 1601 R St., NW. Mr. Randolph's statement was issued on behalf of all persons attending the conference.

In addition to Mr. Randolph others included were Rev. Shelton Hale, Bishop, New York; Councilman Earl Brown, New York; Charles W. Burton, Dr. George Cannon; Dr. Kenneth Clark, James B. Cobb, Dr. Paul Cooke, J. P. Covington, Mrs. Jeanne Dago, Dr. R. B. Atwood, Frank Evans, Bishop Louis Ford;

Geo. G. Fleming, Alexander Fuller, Irene McCoy Gaines, Bishop S. L. Greene, Eugene Davidson, Charles Hayes, Lillian Hatcher, the Rev. Dewey Robinson, Dr. T. R. M. Howard, the Rev. John H. Jackson, James E. Hager, Dr. William Trent, Dr. Robert P. Weaver, Phil Weightman, Leyton Weston, Roy Wilkins, Boyd L. Wilson, Perry Smith II; Aldrich Turner, Dr. Smallwood Williams, Thelma W. Taylor, Mrs. Jane Spaulding, E. D. Hill, Mrs. Rosina Tucker;

Dr. E. C. S. Smith, the Rev. W. H. Jernagin, Dr. Dorothy Ferebee, Golden B. Darby, Asnley L. Totten, Milton P. Webster, Bennie Smith, T. T. Patterson, B. F. McLaurin, Bertram L. Tottem, William H. Bowe, Theodore Brown, Congressman Charles Diggs, A. Franklin;

Conferees

A. PHILIP RANDOLPH

THURGOOD MARSHALL

MRS. VIVIAN MASON

DR. KENNETH CLARK

CONGRESSMAN POWELL

State Of Race Meet Bars Press

Defender P. 1 Sat. 5-5-56 Chicago, Ill.

WASHINGTON, 2 "The State of the Race" conference held here last week ran a-foul of technicalities in barring members of the press from its top-secret closed sessions.

Victim of the shut-out was Defender Publications Correspondent Ethel L. Payne who had been designated by Publisher John H. Sengstacke to represent him in his absence from the meet.

Editor-In-Chief of the Defender, Louis E. Martin, who had also been invited to attend, wired A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters at the National Association of Colored Women's headquarters, site of the confab, his regrets that not being able to come and that Miss Payne would be there in the capacity of representing the paper.

However, officials in charge of the conference refused to admit her on the grounds that she was a member of the working press.

Miss Payne protested that the rule was unfair as Councilman Earl Brown of New York, an associate editor of Life Magazine and a columnist for the New York Amsterdam News, was present and had filed a report of the meeting.

She also said that though photographers and reporters were not allowed to come in until the close of the meeting. Newsreel teams however, were admitted in the middle of the sessions.

Afro-American reporter, Larry Sills, who arrived early for the delayed press conference was asked to leave because he could overhear some of the proceedings.

Later, Randolph and Dr. J. H. Jackson, president of the National Baptist Convention, appeared before waiting newsmen and gave out a statement of the conference.

73 Leaders

De-Segregation 'Too Slow' Says Philip Randolph

Call p. 3

WASHINGTON. — Seventy-three Negro leaders, representing some 12 million of their people, convened here for a day-long conference Tuesday, April 24, on the state of the race. They did not find it good.

Chairman A. Philip Randolph international president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters and vice president of the AFL-CIO, told reporters the conference had come to the conclusion that the pace of desegregation is "too slow" and that progress in civil rights has been "inadequate."

The conference, which was closed to the public and the press, was held in the headquarters of the National Association of Colored Women.

The conferees, who were recruited from civic, church, labor and benevolent groups from all over the country, specifically rejected the doctrine of "gradualism" as a way of achieving civil rights.

Plan Funds Drive

They announced they hope to increase the present membership of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People from 450,000 to one million within the next two years. They have set themselves a goal of raising a $2 million legal education fund for the organization during the same period.

Further, they voted to create a 12-man "Co-ordinating Consultative Leadership Committee" which will be charged with the responsibility of consulting with various leaders of organizations from time to time, "especially when crises arise, in the interest of placing their full weight, moral and financial, behind the fight for civil rights."

Following the conference, Randolph announced that at the first meeting of the committee, plans will be made to seek forthwith the White House Conference with the president. The meeting of the committee has been called for May 5 in Randolph's office in New York.

Mr. Randolph old reporters that the committee will seek the conference with the President with a "view to placing before him the nature of the problems of the present civil rights crisis."

The committee also will be responsible for drafting a reply to the so-called "Southern Manifesto," a pledge to fight desegregation signed by 101 Southern Senators and Congressmen.

Advise No Commitment

In their most important political decision of the day, the conferees went on record as advising that Negroes be "politically uncommitted" to either major party in the coming presidential election. Candidates will be judged on the basis of their position on civil rights, the platform of their parties and their records on civil rights in this Congress.

In an opening statement approved by all the conferees, Mr. Randolph said both parties had been "guilty of a 'do-nothing' policy in the interest of Federal civil rights legislation since the Civil War." In that light, he declared, "a policy of rigid adherence to party label on the Negro does not make sense."

Will Study Decision

The new committee, Mr. Randolph said, will be charged with the responsibility of gathering material on the meaning and significance of the desegregation decision, not only to Negroes but to all Americans. They will give widespread circulation to this material, with the belief that it will "touch the deep reservoir of American good will and sense of fair play in the interests of civil rights."

A document called "The Negro's Declaration of Intention," drawn up by J. H. Jackson of Chicago, president of the National Baptist Convention was adopted by the conference. It said in part:

"We intend to participate in the total cultural life of the Nation, both for personal growth and development and for the further progress of the country itself." The declaration also pledged obedience and respect for the laws and loyalty to the United States.

Members of Committee

Dr. Jackson is a member of the new Co-ordinating Consultative Leadership Committee. Other members are:

Mr. Randolph, Roy Wilkins, executive secretary of the NAACP; Father Shelton Hale Bishop, of St. Philip's Episcopal church, New York; Rev. David Licorish, assistant minister of the Abyssinian Baptist church, New York; Theodore E. Brown, director of research and education, Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters; Mrs. William Thomas Mason, president of the National Council of Negro Women.

Also Dr. T. R. M. Howard, of Mound Bayou, Miss.; E. D. Nixon, treasurer, Montgomery (Ala.) Improvement Association; Mrs. Irene McCoy Gaines, president, National Federation of Colored Women's Clubs; Loren Miller, attorney, Los Angeles; M. P. Webster, first international vice president, Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters.

Negro Leaders Adopt Civil Rights Strategy

In Former P. 7 Sat. 5-19-56

Houston Dep

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Nearly seventy-five top Negro leaders representing organizations with a combined membership of twelve million met on April 24 in a "State of the Race Conference".

The conference was called by A. Philip Randolph, vice president of the AFL-CIO, and international president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters.

Declaring that progress towards school desegregation has been too slow, the Negro leaders set up a national steering committee to use all practical means to speed the progress.

The group flatly rejected "gradualism" as an approach to the achievement of equal rights for Negroes.

The conference also decided to "initiate programs which will bring together citizens of all religious faiths including labor, civic, business, government and education interests dedicated to the defense and maintenance of the Constitution of the U.S."

Clement Withdrawal Dissolves Tenn. 'Favorite Son' Squabble

Journal & Constitution

Sun. 1-29-56 P. 5-F

Governor Indicates He Will Support Unpledged Delegation to Parley

By JOE HATCHER Atlanta, Ga.

Staff Writer, The Nashville Tennessean
Special to The Atlanta Journal-Constitution

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Jan. 28—Tennessee's widely heralded "Battle of a Century" between Gov. Frank Clement and U.S. Sen. Estes Kefauver for control of the delegation to the Chicago convention exploded into thin air this week.

As suddenly and unexpectedly as was the pronouncement by the Clement spokesmen that he would be the state's "favorite son" candidate, Gov. Clement dissolved the conflict by withdrawal before the fight ever got under way.

In withdrawing as a candidate for the "favorite son" designation, Gov. Clement did not pledge support to Sen. Kefauver, but rather indicated support of an unpledged delegation to Chicago which might or might not support the Kefauver cause.

Both Deny 'Trading'

Both sides denied any "trade" or agreement between the two principals. Gov. Clement and Sen. Kefauver, at least, have had no direct discussions of the situation. They were together at the big Democratic fund-raising party in Nashville in October and again at the Gator Bowl in Jacksonville, Fla., but only in the informal gatherings.

However, Sen. Kefauver conferred at length with State Chairman H. S. (Hub) Walters from Washington in Nashville last Friday and close advisers of the two are understood to have conferred over the weekend.

And certainly Sen. Kefauver knew ahead of time the decision the governor had made. He issued his statement lauding the governor's withdrawal in Wisconsin before Gov. Clement made the statement public in Nashville. The foulup in releasing the statement caused some commotion on both sides, but did not upset the release program.

At least the prospects of a showdown fight between the ambitions of Tennessee's young governor and its senior senator kept the political picture in a turmoil for better than two weeks.

TENNESSEE

Agriculture Commissioner Buford Ellington (campaign manager for Gov. Clement in both his campaigns) made the surprise announcement that the governor would be given the "favorite son" indorsement on Jan. 7 on a visit to Washington. Gov. Clement unofficially let it be known he would accept on Jan. 9. Kefauver forces showed a willingness to fight for the delegation on Jan. 11 and demands for a preferential primary broke out all over the state.

Friends of Sen. Kefauver held the first of a series of fund-raising rallies at McMinnville, the Kefauver summer vacation spot, on Jan. 20, attracting some 500 backers from the entire area—many of them well-known pro-Clement supporters in the past.

And five days later, Gov. Clement removed himself from the picture.

Gov. Clement said Sen. Kefauver "is entitled to fair and full opportunity to conduct his campaign in the pre-convention primaries of other states unshackled and unembarrassed by difficulties in his home state."

As to the delegation to Chicago, the governor said it "should be concentrated on going to Chicago free to act as judgment and circumstances indicate to be in the best interests of our nation in a year so important to the entire world and to the preservation of our way of life."

Clement Stands Firm

Segregation organizations in the state started exerting pressure both upon the governor and in the courts the past week. Motorcades from Memphis and Chattanooga descended upon the governor Monday to pressure for an extra session of the Legislature to enact protective legislation. The governor firmly held to his position that there would be no state action pending decision at the local levels only. Atty. Gen. George McCanless stood by the governor and took credit for the "local level only" decision. He declared also, in effect, against the interposition position.

Meanwhile suits were filed in state courts seeking injunctions against state colleges accepting Negro students starting next year, which has been adopted by the state administration.

U.S. District Judge Elmer D. Davies instructed the city of Nashville to open its golf courses to Negro players. Immediately Z. Alexander Looby, a Nashville city councilman and NAACP attorney, issued notice that suits would be filed to open the city and state parks to Negro patronage.

Gov. Clement declined the invitation to meet with the four Southern governors at Richmond, Va., earlier in the week. This and the attorney-general's position indicate Tennessee will not act soon.

Takes An Unfair Dig At NAACP In Strange Talk

Globe & Independent
Nashville, Tenn.
Fri. 1-27-56 p. 1

38a Lenin

Statement By Chief Executive Classes Militant Organization With Pro-Segregationist Groups, Leaving Many Believing He Is Against Desegregation Mandate, In Contrast To Views Of Large Host Of Nashvillians, White And Colored

News to the effect that the better element of white citizens in Nashville—those composing such organizations as the League of Women Voters, the organization of university women, parent-teacher organizations and others, will soon sit down with similar groups of colored citizens and plan ways to put desegregation into effect, came out last week.

This followed soon after Senator Estes Kefauver, Tennessee's able candidate for the Democrat party's nomination for the presidency urged that it be done, saying that desegregation is now the law of the land. The announcement of the plans of these groups, which largely are composed of women interested in school matters, indicated that radical groups, largely made up of men, are soon to face real opposition if they try to put Tennessee, and especially Nashville, in an embarrassing position before the world.

The announced action of the forward-looking groups, was to some extent disturbed this week when Nashville was visited by a large group of men from Chattanooga and Memphis. They call themselves pro-segregationists, and came to the city to petition Gov. Frank G. Clement to call a special session of the state legislature to pass a resolution in defiance of the Supreme Court mandate to desegregate public schools.

Gov. Clement gave the group of several hundred a respectful hearing, but let them know he would not call the legislature into special session. The governor said to them, according to the Nashville Tennessean and radio broadcasts, that "you are the greatest allies of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People in bringing about integration. I believe this with all my heart, whether you like it or not."

The "greatest of allies" in bringing about integration, according to the best thought in Nashville have been school authorities of the past, who, given an opportunity to carry out a Supreme Court mandate of 1896 to maintain separate, but equal schools, never even tried to remember the EQUAL part of the mandate but most certainly were Johnny on the spot in looking after the SEPARATE part of mandate. This thesis, with regard to "how come" we now have the mandate of 1954 to desegregate, was advanced many months ago by the Hon. Cecil Sims, a prominent Nashville lawyer.

The disturbing statement made by Gov. Clement has many tongues among colored persons wagging, a large element of whom are active members of the local NAACP chapter. It was being recalled that in 1954 when the Democrat primary was held, Gov. Clement and Sen. Estes Kefauver were the "favorites" of colored citizens for the offices of governor and U. S. Senator, respectively. Both were nominated by large majorities over their respective opponents, former Governor Gordon Browning, and Congressman Pat Sutton, who wer considered enemies of desegregation.

Gov. Clement during his campaign, it has been said, took a position similar to that of the old time school teacher who said regarding the subject of Geography, he was equally well prepared to teach the world is round or that it is flat like it is pictured in the Bible.

In other words Gov. Clement's stand on desegregation, even after his blast at the pro-segregationists here on Monday of this week remained a mystery. In fact he took the position that the local communities would handle the desegregation matter according to their own notion. That the State would just handle desegregation in the State colleges.

There are some persons here who feel that they wnod what Gov. Clement's stand on desegregation is by the way his administration fought the entrance of colored students at Memphis State College, a white institution. The State Attorney General tried to get a verdict in the Federal Court, upholding the sanctity of the Tennessee State Constitution, which forbids mixed schools. The Federal Judge merely pointed out that all Federal State and City laws sanctioning separate schools have been rendered null and void by the U. S. Supreme Court.

It is said that had the Memphis State College been instructed by state authorities to let the six colored students go to the college, by now it would have been forgotten. It was NAACP attorneys, almost invariably successful in lawsuits involving civil rights, who defeated Attorney General George McCanless in the lawsuit in Memphis. Whether or not this fact riled Gov. Clement is not known. But what is known is that he is alleged to have "gone out of his way" to class the NAACP with the groups openly defying the Supreme Court mandate and are calling upon the state to take such action in a resolution by the state legislature.

If the NAACP has any intention of visiting its wrath upon Gov. Clement because of his unkindly insinuation about the NAACP, its best chance of course, would have been to fighrt his bid for the Democrat nomination for president. Gov. Clement on Tuesday of this week robbed the NAACP of that pleasure. He withdrew any plans he had to run for president in opposition to Sen. Estes Kefauver, in a great profession of loyalty to his party and to Senator Kefauver, as well.

But his blast at the NAACP, it is believed, may chill any ardor his party bosses may have had to make him the spellbinder to deliver the keynote speech at the opening of the Democrat National Convention in Chicago in August.

As an orator, Gov. Clement is considered to be better than Senator Kefauver but not in a class with former Gov. Gordon Browning, conceded to be the best of the state's Democrat spellbiners.

It is not known just how much of a controversail figure Gov. Clement will be in the future. Not very much, say some who note he i snot going to get into the scramble for president and probably not for vice president, or Democrat keynoter.

But there are recent statements made by the governor claiming it is un-Christian to complain about taxes, with indications that he may favor a 4-cent sales tax, with the extra penny going to schools of cities and counties! Of course the governor will deny he favors a 4-cent sales tax, but his enemies will be sure to say he gave no indication before he was elected in 1954 that he favored the 3-cent sales tax, which is proving to be the greatest bonanza the tax gathering politicians ever laid their eyes on, while at the same time it is arguable whether the schools are any better than they were before the school lobby latched onto a windfall of sales taxes.

Overriding Issue

Integration Cauldron Seethes in Tennessee

By ERNEST B. VACCARO

MEMPHIS, Tenn., March 12 (AP).

TENSION is high in West Tennessee over the race issue and opinion is divided as to how it will manifest itself in the November Presidential election. Troubled civic and business leaders are striving so hard to find ways to calm the hot-tempered on both sides of the school integration controversy that the personal fortunes of Presidential candidates are of secondary importance in the minds of many.

The attitude the candidates take in the months ahead, and, more important, the party platform planks of integration and race questions generally may be a major factor in determining the decisions of many voters.

Experienced political observers say the tension in West Tennessee is higher than elsewhere in the State because the ratio of Negroes to whites is much greater than in middle and East Tennessee. Negroes make up about 40 percent of the Memphis population.

The attitude of public and party officials in Tennessee in both Democratic and Republican ranks is to do all possible to keep the integration controversy out of the explosive stage and as much out of political debate as possible.

* * *

THIS attitude was reflected in a talk Gov. Frank Clement made to a "Davy Crockett Day" crowd at Rutherford the other day. He said he would tread carefully in the racial segregation controversy because "a few indiscriminate words on my part, as Governor, could initiate conflict and bloodshed."

There hasn't been any integration of public grade or high schools in Tennessee, except at a high school at Oak Ridge, the atom plant city, and that is on Federal property.

This reporter, trying to sample a bit of public opinion on President Eisenhower's prospects for repeating in November his Tennessee victory of four years ago, found most outspoken Democrats saying confidently that it can't happen again. He won in 1952 by 2437 votes out of 892,000.

* * *

MR. EISENHOWER still has great popularity in the State. Some Democrats say he has lost a lot because of the TVA issue. The Republicans dispute this and claim that he has made sharp gains. But more about that issue later.

Some who voted for Mr. Eisenhower in 1952, and who say they will vote for him again, said they believed Adlai Stevenson could carry the State this time if he is the nominee.

In Memphis, one notes a lot more Democratic sentiment for Stevenson than for Tennessee's Sen. Estes Kefauver, who is contesting with the 1952 standard bearer for this year's Democratic Presidential nomination.

* * *

UP AT the 50 Club, an exclusive hangout for business and professional men, many of the members said they are for Mr. Eisenhower again. But some of them noted that Tennessee was basically a Democratic State and said if Stevenson convinces the South he is a "moderate," he might defeat their favorite.

People who say Kefauver could carry the State point to his Democratic primary victory in 1954 when he defeated former Democratic Rep. Pat Sutton by a majority of close to a quarter million votes.

Those who argue the other way say that Kefauver's statments in his Presidential primary campaigning have angered fellow-Tennesseeans because of his position on civil rights questions.

Some of the most ardent segregationists blame Chief Justice Earl Warren, Attorney General Herbert R. Brownell, Jr., and Vice President Richard M. Nixon for varying degrees of responsibility for the school desegregation ruling of the Supreme Court, but exemtp President Eisenhower from their ire.

On the other hand, Republican Party officials say privately they expect the ruling to give Mr. Eisenhower a majority of the Negro votes in the State.

Harold Martin

Little Colored Boys Are Easy to Scare

It was one of those local buses that run from Knoxville to Chattanooga, stopping to let people off wherever they wanted to stop, picking up passengers wherever they stood beside the road. On the crest of the hill, waiting for the bus, was a huge Negro woman, her arms full of packages wrapped with string. She was the biggest woman you ever saw. Beside her stood a little boy about 5 years old. He had on a black leather cap like motorcyclists wear, with the ear flaps dangling loose. The cap was black and shiny as his skin and his eyes shone whitely out of his blackness. The door of the bus opened.

"Get up there," she told the little boy, nudging him in the seat of the pants with her knee. He climbed up. Then he saw the bus load of white faces, all the people staring at him. He turned and grabbed at his mama's knees. She couldn't see him below her ample middle but she could tell where he was. She started bouncing the packages up and down on his head.

"Get on down that aisle, boy," she roared. "You want me to soften your head?"

He started down the aisle, the people laughing, his thumb in his mouth, his two big eyes shining.

She started down the aisle. It was narrow and she was wide. She had to push hard, squeezing through. People were still laughing. She laughed, too. She got to the back of the bus and sat down.

"Anybody want this little boy?" she shouted. "Anybody want to take him home for Easter?"

She rode about four miles down the road. Then she pulled the bell cord. The driver pulled over and opened the door. He looked back at the big colored woman.

"Just leave him up here on the seat by me," he said. "I'll take him home. I'll tell my wife I brung her an Easter rabbit." He laughed. All the people laughed. The little boy didn't laugh. His eyes got bigger and bigger. He grabbed for his mama's knees again. She bumped him on the head with the packages.

"Go on, Rabbit," she said, laughing.

He saw the open door and he went like a rabbit. He came down the aisle of the bus like a small black streak, running. He popped out the door and his feet hardly touched the ground. He lit out across the fields, the ear flaps on his black cap flapping. She was still squeezing down the aisle. She got to the door and peered out.

"Where he go?" she shouted. "Where that chile at?"

The bus driver pointed across the field to a small black dot, growing smaller.

"Lawd hep us," she said. Then she set out across the field in a waddling run. She was hollering something, but in the roar of the engine as the bus pulled off nobody could hear what she said.

Holds B-Racial Dance; Loses His Beer License

Defender Chicago Ill. Aug 25-56

JACKSON, Tenn. — (ANP) — A cafe operator here has lost his beer license because he permitted Negroes and whites, even though separated by partition, to dance under the same roof.

In a group protest, headed by a white minister, Madison County Beer Commission acted last Monday after hearing a protest petition filed by 21 residents of nearby Meden.

A lawyer for the group said that although a partition separated them, both Negro and white customers were allowed to dance simultaneously, in defiance of segregation laws.

Consequently Earl Mills lost his beer license.

SEGREGATION BLOC WILL BE POWERFUL IN '57 LEGISLATURE

Commercial Appeal Sat. 8-4-56

Shelby Delegation Expected To Get Strong Support From Other Counties

Memphis Press

PLEDGED IN CAMPAIGN

Interposition Resolutions To Be Offered — Clement Forces Pleased By Number Of Friends Renominated

By JAMES EWING

From The Commercial Appeal Nashville Bureau

NASHVILLE, Aug. 3.—Strong support of pro-segregation legislation is assured for the 1957 legislative session, a check of winners in contests throughout the state showed Friday.

Besides the solid bloc of segregation advocates elected from Memphis and Shelby County under the Citizens for Progress banner, practically unanimous support is also expected from the other 21 counties in West Tennessee in keeping with pledges made by candidates.

Wide Support Expected

A check of winning candidates who replied to a questionnaire distributed by the Tennessee Federation for Constitutional Government showed the West Tennessee legislators will get substantial support from both Middle and East Tennessee.

None of the four candidates who informed the Federation they would oppose segregation legislation was elected.

Among legislation expected to be offered are resolutions asserting the right of interposition to which the Shelby delegation is committed, and proposals to strengthen preservation of segregation in schools, parks, transportation and public facilities.

Representative-nominee David Givens of Somerville has announced he will seek passage of a bill somewhat similar to the one which Senator Charles A. Stainback, also of Somerville, tried unsuccessfully to pass in 1955.

Clement Happy

Gov. Frank Clement and his leaders were pleased with the results and predicted the number of Administration friends will be even greater than at the last session, when practically all the Clement-sponsored legislation was approved.

Among Administration stalwarts renominated were Senate Speaker Jared Maddux of Cookeville, House Speaker James L. Bomar of Shelbyville and Representative Damon R. Headden of Ridgely, former Administration floor leader in the House.

Another highlight of the elections was the defeat of several enemies of the Clement Administration, among them Senators Justin Thrasher of Selmer and Brooks Eslick of Pulaski.

The only major setback to the Clement forces was their failure to defeat Senator Clifford Allen of Nashville, the Administration's most outspoken critic.

Few Newcomers

A survey of the background of the membership shows they will be among the most experienced in state legislative history.

Of the 33 who will serve in the Senate, only five are newcomers and a majority of the 99 House members also have previous legislative experience.

Administration leaders also were successful in electing a friendly state executive committee.

State Chairman H. S. Walters and Mrs. Albert Hill of Nashville, who were recently elected to the national committee, were among winners in contested positions on the 36-member committee.

Clinton Aim Was Peace —Clement

Constitution Mon. 9-17-56 Atlanta, Ga.

DALLAS, Tex., Sept. 16 (AP)—Gov. Frank Clement of Tennessee said today the decision to send state police and National Guardsmen to Clinton, Tenn., scene of violence early this month growing out of school integration problems, "was based on the necessity to live and work in peace."

"We did not act in the Clinton situation to promote integration, or on the other hand, to encourage segregation," Clement said in a luncheon address before the National Exchange Club.

"This was plainly and simply a decision based on the necessity—nay, the right to which every American is entitled—the right to live and work in peace," he continued.

"REGARDLESS OF ISSUES"

"It demonstrated to the people of Tennessee that law and order will be maintained in any community regardless of what issues may lead to the disturbance."

He urged his audience "to redouble your efforts toward preserving our democracy not only on the national level or on an international basis, but on the local level — on Main street, U.S.A."

"Redouble your efforts to inculcate in our children the spirit of family and community responsibility," he said. "Redouble your efforts to build up a respect for law and order in your homes and our home towns."

In reviewing the incidents at Clinton Sept. 1, Clement said, "A lawless mob incited to the possibilities of violence by outside agitators, roamed the streets" of Clinton and "the tiny forces of law and order in that community had been overwhelmed."

"NICK OF TIME"

He said 100 highway patrolmen and 600 National Guardsmen were sent to Clinton after he received appeals for help from the sheriff, the mayor, city officials and scores of "just plain citizens."

These forces arrived "in the nick of time to prevent bloodshed and further violence," he said. "Law and order were restored; the responsibilities of citizenship were faced."

"The guardsmen were not merely an occupying force," Clement said. "On the contrary they directed a special training course for local law enforcement officers and helped prepare civilian volunteers for the future, although I pray to God that such future trouble will never come to Clinton or any community in Tennessee or the nation."

Anti-Negro Censor Dies

Courier P. 22 Sept. 8-56

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (ANP)—Lloyd Binford, self-named as "the most notorious film censor in the world," died following complications and a siege of flu. He was 89.

Pittsburgh Pa.

Binford was tagged by critics as the America's worst censor for his bans on any film that depicted Negroes and whites in the same scenes.

He banned a Hal Roach movie "Curley" because of the "little Negroes in it."

He declared that the South does not recognize racial fraternization even in children.

Other movies he ordered not shown in Memphis included "The Wild Ones," "Duel in the Sun," "Night of the Hunter," and several Ingrid Bergman films.

Mixed Meeting

Courier

Negroes Told to Get Out

Sat. 11-24-56 Pittsburgh Pa. P. 2

MEMPHIS—Apparently too many Negroes spoil the "soup" at the Peabody Hotel, which accepts "two or three" at times, yet recently asked another group attending the National Conference on Government to leave the meeting because their presence was contrary to the hotel's policy.

Thomas McGinn, manager of the Peabody, said the hotel's policy has not changed. He said Negroes are not allowed to attend meetings there except in a few cases like that of the Mid-South Medical Association meetings which are attended by "two or three Negro physicians."

At the opening session of the Government meeting three Negro women were served with other guests in the Continental Room. Negroes also attended the afternoon gatherings.

■

THE FOLLOWING day a group of about 15 young Negro students was refused admission to a meeting.

Again the following morning five Negroes were asked to leave a panel discussion. The same afternoon Negroes attended the "Youth in Civic Affairs" program.

New York delegates protested, stating that "the Peabody management has gone back on its agreement with us. We had an understanding that Negro visitors would have every privilege except that of staying at the hotel."

McGinn said, "It was and is the Peabody's policy not to cater to the Negro race at meetings or any functions whatever.

The Mid-South Medical Society is an exception because the Negro members are very few, "probably not more than 2 per cent."

Tenn. Churches Push Integration

Constitution Atlanta Ga. Wed. 12-5-56

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Dec. 4 (AP). The Tennessee Council of Churches has asked the governor, the state board of education and the General Assembly to take steps to desegregate public schools in the state, officials said today.

The action came in a meeting here of 48 church leaders representing 11 denominations and 15 Tennessee towns.

Dixie Integration Manifesto Splits Tenn. Political Groups

Constitution & Journal 3-13-4

Atlanta, Ga

Senators Kefauver, Gore Among Five Lawmakers Withholding Signatures

Sun. 3-18-56

By JOE HATCHER

Staff Writer, The Nashville Tennessean
Special to The Atlanta Journal-Constitution

NASHVILLE, Tenn., March 17—Tennessee, like its congressional delegation, split into multiple pieces over the Southern manifesto against the U.S. Supreme Court's desegregation ruling.

Thus far, the splits are in the talking stages, but speculation runs high on possible political repercussions.

Originally, the bare majority of the 11-man delegation declined to sign, but two mid-state representatives added signatures to bring a bare majority into line.

Five Failed to Sign

Both U.S. senators, Estes Kefauver and Albert Gore, and Rep. J. Percy Priest of Nashville along with the Republican representatives, Howard Baker of Knoxville and B. C. Reece of Johnson City make up the unsigned group. Rep. Ross Bass of Pulaski, the small city where Gen. Nathan Bedford Forrest organized the first Ku-Klux Klan, lighted the torch for the statewide controversy in signing under what might be interpreted as bitter protest.

Rep. Bass, the youngest of the Tennessee delegation, branded the manifesto as a political movement designed to reassure the re-election of Georgia's Sen. Walter George and quoted Sen. Richard Russell in the cloakroom discussion as the basis for his charge. He explained that despite the political nature thus revealed and the lack of promise of any constructive benefit, he was himself signing because of pressures brought on him to follow the lead of the Southern group.

The young congressman was besieged by telegrams from Tennessee, some demanding he withdraw his name or pledge full support for the document, others praising him for his frankness. As a result he called a statewide press conference for Nashville and New home to "set the record straight."

Sen. Russell's denial of having made the cloakroom statement of the manifesto being primarily for Sen. George's benefit, did not change Bass' original statement on that conference. However, Bass emphatically declared his support of segregation, but declines to recede from his position of questioning the motives behind the manifesto.

TENNESSEE

Kefauver Stands Off

Whether the political repercussions, other than Bass' own spotlight on his second term ambitions, will be reflected further this year remained to be seen. Sen. Kefauver, as a candidate for president, did not participate in the conferences and was not expected to sign. Sen. Gore interpreted the document as without legal force and a threat to any further peaceful progress towards an ultimate settlement towards the civil rights problem. Sen. Gore sees in the manifesto the reopening of all kinds of civil rights legislation before the Congress at a time when other legislation needs more attention.

The document can "serve no particular good" and may well cause dissension and bitterness that would split the Democratic Party and disrupt the orderly proceedings of the Congress for a long time to come without accomplishing any constructive steps, as Sen. Gore interpreted it.

Gore does not face election until 1958 and Sen. Kefauver until 1960.

Gov. Frank Clement, a potential threat to either Gore or Kefauver, presumably can find no issue with either on this particular subject. He is strongly on record and has established the state's official position along the lines followed by both Kefauver and Gore on the segregation question.

Gov. Clement Silent

The governor prevented legislative consideration of any anti-desegregation bills in the 1955 Legislature and vetoed a number of strictly local bills on the subject and was upheld by the Legislature.

He has declined comment on the manifesto controversy.

Rep. Priest of Nashville may have precipitated new opposition for his August primary race, but it is questionable if he weakened his position. Priest represents Davidson County and Nashville, which is thus far strictly a "moderate approach county." Mayor Ben West of Nashville is potentially his strongest foe, but Mayor West's strong point would be opposition to Priest's vote on the natural gas bill and not his refusal to sign the segregation manifesto.

The three West Tennessee congressmen represented strong prosegregation areas and only in the case of Rep. Clifford Davis of Memphis is the issue likely to be influential.

Davis is a major holdover from the old E. E. Crump regime in Memphis and faced almost certain opposition from the new Memphis regime. Whether his prosegregation stand can save him or not is speculative.

Certainly the manifesto brings into sharp focus the upcoming legislative races in the state and may make it a bitter issue in many sections of the state despite the Clement administration's effort to keep the issue out of the 1956 primaries.

But the growing fear over the state among the Democratic leaders is that it may be a forerunner of another third-party movement in the South and a sacrifice of the opportunities for Democratic victory in the nation.

Gore Critical Of Southern Manifesto

Daily World Sat. 4-7-56

Atlanta, Ga.

COVINGTON, Tenn. - (ANP) - Tennessee's Sen. Albert Gore said in a letter to a public official here that "no particular good" has resulted from a recent Southern manifesto.

SBP.1

The letter, written by Roy Boyd, clerk and master of chancery court, thanked Tipton county citizens who had wired Gore, urging him to sign the document. He refused.

Gore declared that he did not think the declaration, signed by more than 100 Southern Congressmen, would "bring any improvement in a delicate and dangerous situation."

He said that "however vigorously one may disagree with the decision of the Supreme Court, we must recognize that it is, after all, a decision of the highest court in the land."

Mississippi Roundup—

Post-Herald p. 20

Segregation To Stay, Coleman Says

Birmingham Ala.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., April 11 (U.P.)—Gov. J. P. Coleman of Mississippi said today there "never will be" racial integration in his state and added that he thought the crisis is definitely past in Mississippi.

News 4-12-56

Coleman, visiting here during a brief vacation from his official duties, said "just about everybody in Mississippi knows Mississippi will maintain segregation of races."

"And Negroes in Mississippi are not interested in jeopardizing their own schools by seeking integration," Coleman said.

In saying he thought the crisis is past, Coleman told newsmen who interviewed him that he thought "in the next three or four years it (integration) will cease to be a subject of agitation."

"I think the Negroes are now making more progress and are becoming more valuable citizens than ever before in the history of Mississippi," he said.

"Putting it in a nutshell, the Negroes are perfectly competent to operate their own schools and educate their children and I don't think they want to be deprived of the privilege."

RACE ISSUE CURB TENNESSEE'S AIM

Times-Picayune p. 50

Problem Expected to Influence Campaign

Fri. 3-16-56

By ERNEST B. VACCARO

MEMPHIS, March 15 (AP)—Tension is high in west Tennessee over the race issue and opinion is divided as to how it will manifest itself in the November presidential election.

New Orleans

Troubled civic and business leaders are striving so hard to find ways to calm the hot-tempered on both sides of the school integration controversy that the personal fortunes of presidential candidates are of secondary importance in the minds of many.

The attitude the candidates take in the months ahead, and, more important, the party platform planks on integration and race questions generally may be a major factor in determining the decisions of many voters.

Experienced political observers say the tension in west Tennessee is higher than elsewhere in the state because the ratio of Negroes to whites is much greater than in middle and east Tennessee. Negroes make up about 40 per cent of the Memphis population.

Seek Tension Curb

The attitude of public and party officials in Tennessee in both Democratic and Republican ranks is to do all possible to keep the integration controversy out of the explosive stage and as much out of political debate as possible.

This attitude was reflected in a talk Gov. Frank Clement made to a "Davy Crockett Day" crowd at Rutherford the other day. He said he will tread carefully in the racial segregation controversy because "a few indiscriminate words on my part, as governor, could initiate conflict and bloodshed."

"If I listened to the urging of some people, it could cause trouble," he said. "My sacred duty is to promote peace in Tennessee among its citizens. With your help, I will continue to do my duty."

Only Oak Ridge Integrated

There hasn't been any integration of public grade or high schools in Tennessee, except at a high school at Oak Ridge, the atom plant city, and that is on federal property.

This reporter, trying to sample a bit of public opinion on President Eisenhower's prospects for repeating in November his Tennessee victory of four years ago, found most outspoken Democrats saying confidently that it can't happen again. He won in 1952 by 437 votes out of 892,000.

Eisenhower still has great popularity in the state. Some Democrats say he has lost a lot of his popularity because of the TVA issue. The Republicans dispute this and claim that he has made sharp gains. But more about that issue later.

Some who voted for Eisenhower in 1952, and who say they will vote for him again, told this reporter they believe Adlai Stevenson can carry the state this time if he is the nominee.

Stevenson Sentiment Heard

In Memphis, one notes a lot more Democratic sentiment for Stevenson than for Tennessee's Sen. Estes Kefauver, who is contesting with the 1952 standard bearer for this year's Democratic presidential nomination.

A housewife, Mrs. Albert C. Rickey, 822 Charles Place, said: "I think Tennessee will go Democratic this year mainly because so many people think President Eisenhower double-crossed them on the Tennessee Valley Authority."

Mrs. Rickey, a Democrat, said she voted for Stevenson four years ago, and will vote Democratic again, and that she thinks Stevenson "has the best chance of carrying the state."

Ike Man Speaks Up

A. Arthur Halle, Jr., a corrugated box salesman, who described himself as an independent, said he will vote for Eisenhower a second time in November.

"I'm for Ike," he said. "I think he has restored dignity to the presidential office and unified the country."

At the same time, Halle said that if the Democrats put up Stevenson "he might carry the state." Halle said he didn't believe either Kefauver or Averell Harriman could do so.

There is political division even in the Halle household. Mrs. Halle, reached at her home at 4605 Minden Road, said "I would like to see Mr. Stevenson elected."

Up at the 50 Club, an exclusive hangout for business and professional men, many of the members said they are for Eisenhower again. But some of them noted that Tennessee is basically a Democratic state and said if Stevenson convinces the South he is a "moderate," he might defeat their favorite.

Cite Kefauver Record

People who say Kefauver could carry the state point to his Democratic primary victory in 1954 when he defeated former Democratic Rep. Pat Sutton by a majority of close to a quarter million votes.

Those who argue the other way say that Kefauver's statements in his presidential primary campaigning have angered fellow Tennesseeans because of his positions on civil rights questions.

Some of the most ardent segregationists blame Chief Justice Warren, Atty. Gen. Brownell and Vice President Nixon for varying degrees of responsibility for the school desegregation ruling of the Supreme Court, but exempt President Eisenhower from their ire.

On the other hand, Republican party officials say privately they expect the ruling to give Eisenhower a majority of the Negro votes in the state.

Nixon Backers Divided

Most of the pro-Eisenhower people who were interviewed by this reporter said they favored another running mate for Eisenhower than Nixon. Yet, a Memphis Press Scimitar photographer interviewed five people at a downtown corner and found four of them favoring Nixon for vice president, only one against.

Gov. Clement and Tennessee's two Democratic senators, Kefauver and Albert Gore, are planning to base much of the campaign in the state on the TVA issue.

Clement told this reporter in Nashville that Eisenhower promised in his 1952 campaign to "promote and protect" the Tennessee Valley Authority.

"He has not done so," Clement said. "And the people will not forget the Dixon-Yates contract." The contract, for building a private steam plant at West Memphis, Ark., was finally canceled by Eisenhower after a long and bitter controversy in which Democrats accused the administration of trying to cover up improper dealings.

Pro-segregation speakers criticize ministers, papers

News p. 8

Mon. 3-5-56

MEMPHIS, March 5 — (AP) — Ministers, "moderates" and newspapers were the targets of pro-segregation speakers at a county wide rally here yesterday.

Memphis Mayor Edmund Orgill, Tennessee's Gov. Frank Clement and Sen. Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.) were singled out for criticism for what the speakers called their neutral stand on segregation. Reporters estimated the crowd at about 3000.

Birmingham Ala.

CURT COPELAND of Little Rock, Ark., told the crowd that Southern preachers "are so carried away with this brotherhood mess of trash they haven't got the guts to preach the doctrine of segregation, which is the doctrine of God."

"The National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People," he said, "is the worst organization to come along since the one that crucified Christ—and I may as well say it—it's the same organization."

H. W. Fancher of Minter, Ala., author of several pro-segregation pamphlets, deplored what he called the Southern clergymen's general indifference to the threat of integration.

"I wouldn't go so far as to say that segregation is equivalent to salvation," he said, "but segregation will bring about conditions that most likely will lead a lost soul to God."

Other speakers included J. D. Johnson of Crossett, Ark., leader of his state's citizens council movement, and Amis Guthridge of Little Rock, executive secretary of White America, Inc.

State Sen. Charles Stainback of Somerville, Tenn., in a message read to the audience, said Memphis newspapers were edited and managed by Northerners who "are carpet-baggers in the true sense of the word."

The Case of Dr. Lorch

State Press 2-4

Last week, 18 months after he had been cited for contempt of Congress and two days before he was to go to trial, the government abruptly dropped charges against Dr. Lee Lorch. No formal explanation was given. The Justice Department like Pontius Pilate just carefully washed its hands of the whole matter and turned its back to the irreparable damage done in character assasination as well as to the sensitivities of his family and Dr. Lorch.

The mathematician became the center of a highly publicized controversy while he was chairman of the department at Fisk university. Shortly after the Supreme Court decision of May, 1954, Dr. Lorch and his wife sought to enroll their daughter in a Negro school in Nashville. The child was already closely associated with colored children who were her playmates on the campus.

Fm. 5-4-54

However, for this act of heresy, some vague allegations of Communist ties while he was a student at the University of Cincinnati in 1941 were unearthed and Dr. Lorch was subpoeanaed to appear before the House Committee in Un-American Activities which held hearings in Dayton, Ohio. When he invoked the First Amendment to the Constitution on the grounds he had not been properly notified so as to prepare for legal counsel and this was a breach of his civil rights, the board of trustees of Fisk met and voted to dismiss him. Six of the 34 members — all Negro — voted against the action, but with pharisaical piety, Dr. Charles Johnson, president of the university issued a statement "explaining" the action of the board. According to it, an individual who took refuge in an amendment to the constitution was subject to immediate dismissal meaning that in their judgment he was guilty as charged without a trial.

Dr. Lorch is now teaching at Philander Smith college in Little Rock, Arkansas, but because he believes in the practical demonstration of democracy he and his wife and child have been hounded and driven from the campuses of three so-called free institutions of learning in America, City College of New York because the powerful Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., put pressure on the board to terminate his contract; Pennsylvania State college because he agitated for Negroes to be admitted to Levittown project built with Federal funds and Fisk. What is truly unforgivable is the emotional assault upon the prejudice-free mind of 11-year old Alice Lorch that this witch hunt has brought about.

Now that the government says it has no case against Lee Lorch, an indictment ought to be handed down upon the House Un-American Activities for its Nazi-tactics against innocent citizens solely because they believe in the principles of freedom and democracy. Indeed the committee has stooped to the same level of the same totalitarian form of government which it so vigorously tries to protect the American people against. As for the trustees and the president of Fisk, of Pennsylvania State and of City College, we wonder if their consciences encased in smug righteousness sometimes trouble them when they speak of democracy. —Chicago Defender.

A Distorted View Of Memphis

Press 2-4

From The Memphis Commercial Appeal

When a specialist on Southern history remarks that he's "shocked" and "distressed" by resistance to racial integration in Tennessee, and when he makes the blanket statement that "there is not too much culture in Memphis" he displays a certain naivete.

Birm. Ala.

These are attitudes credited to Dr. William B. Hesseltine of the University of Wisconsin, who was here to take part in the second annual Midsouth Leadership Seminar at Memphis State College.

Dr. Hesseltine put Tennessee in the "upper South" in discussing desegregation. In regard to Memphis, he must have forgotten that, as Shields McIlwaine wrote in "Memphis Down in Dixie," the people of Mississippi "have always claimed the Tennessee town as their own" and "for trade and fun it, not Jackson, is their capital." That has always had vast effect on the character of Memphis.

At the same time, Memphis, as a river port and a growing industrial city, is evolving from a big farm town into a somewhat more sophisticated city. An influx of industrialists, merchants and artisans from other parts of the country is affecting the cultural picture here.

When the Metropolitan Opera visits Memphis each Spring, music lovers pour in from Nashville, Little Rock and Jackson, Miss. Increasing interest in the arts has caused expansion of Brooks Art Gallery and led to planning for a municipal Fine Arts Center. Memphis State College is bursting at the seams, and Southwestern's Adult Education Program stirs avid interest among older citizens.

Those are samples of cultural growth wrought by the new industrial age in Memphis. Dr. Hasseltine, who maintains Memphians are primarily former farm folk with "their hearts in the country," could make a rebuttal by pointing out that a "country music" performer outdraws the Metropolitan Opera. But that phenomenon is national rather than local.

Memphis, we believe, is in a transitional period. It is by no means as urban or urbane as some Northern and West Coast cities. "For trade and fun" it is still a favorite of agrarian Mississippians and plantation attitudes remain prevalent. Acknowledgment of that would have softened the "shock" of resistance to integration which Dr. Hesseltine experienced. And a more careful study of cultural improvements would have shown him that in that field Memphis is growing up.

It would seem that, in some ways, Dr. Hasseltine has been observing Memphis through the wrong end of his binoculars and, perhaps, provoking a little publicity for Dr. Hasseltine.

NEWSPAPER URGES INTERPOSITION TEST

Commercial Appeal 2-4

Nashville Banner Advocates Study By States

Memphis Tenn.

VIRGINIA MOVE CITED

Fm. 2-3-54

From The Commercial Appeal Nashville Bureau

NASHVILLE, Feb. 2. — The Nashville Banner Thursday urged "respectful study" and a "full test" of the theory of interposition by the states.

In a column-long editorial the newspaper recalled it has consistently urged against "injudicious action" since the United States Supreme Court handed down its desegregation decree in 1954.

'Deserves Study'

"We believe, however," the editorial said, "that the Virginia resolution for interposition by the states deserves respectful study and that it demands that examination by the courts that can establish its legality; that submission to the states, if held valid, which can determine the wishes of the people anent the issue contained in the amendment it proposed.

"The Banner," it continued, "has always been a devout champion of state's rights and led the fight for their preservation. As an uncompromising believer in the Constitution, we have recognized that there are state's rights and Federal rights. Neither can safely encroach on the other."

Test Reason Cited

The interposition test was urged as "the approach of last resort to blocking encroachment" by the Supreme Court and to slow down "the precipitate action whereby eager-beaver elements are pressuring for instant conversion to the integration pattern."

"Entirely apart from the desegregation question," the newspaper said, "we believe that Virginia had the right to make the interposition proposal and it deserves an adequate test of its legal aspects. If it is not defective legally, it should proceed to establish the wish of the American people through their states concerning the amendment proposed."

Traffic Toll Cut, Segregation Among Tenn. '56 Problems

Journal + Constitution

Jan. 7-8-56

Legislative Seats Reapportionment, Better Highways on List of Issues

P. 5-E

By JOE HATCHER

Atlanta, Ga.

Staff Writer, The Nashville Tennessean
Special to The Atlanta Journal-Constitution

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Jan. 7—Gov. Frank Clement, looking into the new year, foresees at least four major problems and issues in Tennessee in 1956.

Safety on the highways, segregation problems, reapportionment of legislative seats, and improved highways are listed by the chief executive as certainly among the greater issues and greater problems facing the state.

Since there is no gubernatorial race this year, the campaigns will concentrate on electing a new Legislature, with the listed issues involved, and at the political level with a U.S. senator seeking the presidential nomination and the governor the vice presidential.

Tennessee accomplished the remarkable record of having no fatal accidents on the New Year's weekend and only eight on the

TENNESSEE

Christmas weekend, although setting an all-time year's record of 897.

Concentration of the highway patrol and some National Guard units on the highways received the credit for the low death tolls.

As the result, Gov. Clement says the patrol will concentrate on more patrolling, more frequent examinations of driver's licenses, and more attention to roadworthy condition of cars.

The state has purchased three electric speed timing clocks to supplement as many radar units. It will add 23 additional electric clocks as quickly as they are available.

No special sessions are anticipated to meet demands for additional safety measures or increase in the highway patrol. In fact no extra sessions are foreseen on any of the issues, unless it be the reapportionment of legislative seats if the state Supreme Court throws out the antiquated 1901 reapportionment law and thereby forces action before the November elections.

No legislative action is anticipated on the segregation problems in the state. Gov. Clement has insisted that the problem is entirely local and not a state problem, since the state has set up the integration at the college and university level starting in 1956-57 school terms.

Wants No Controversy

But segregation cannot be denied as an issue. As explosive as is the segregation issue, even in borderland Tennessee in some sections, there is little liklihood of more than local disturbance in the over-all political picture this year.

Gov. Clement's own national ambitions is reason enough to keep any controversy in the background if possible until after the Chicago convention at least.

Tennessee is particularly ready to march if and when a federal aid highway program is set up.

The state has been given a thorough two-year study by the Automotive Safety Foundation and its report will be made public this month.

The complete engineering study is designed to give the state's needs, immediate and future, and in general detail the over-all planning for an expanded and improved highway system.

Already the engineering recommendations have been embodied in recent highway lettings and the state's highway funds are in such excellent condition, state officials say, that any federal requirements can probably be met until the 1957 Legislature convenes.

The issue of at least a 100-million-dollar highway bond issue is already in the offing.

Big City Changeovers

Two complete changeovers in big city administrations featured the year's end.

Memphis installed Businessman Edmund Orgill after 50 years of E. H. Crump influence and domination in its city government.

Only major changes were three new assistant city attorneys, new park board members, a new school board chairman. At the same time, the Shelby County Commission also changed complexion with the retirement of E. W. Hale, commission chairman with 44 years' service as a close associate of Crump. Hale's health has been bad for more than a year. David N. Harsh, a prominent attorney, succeeded him as chairman, and placed the commission in a position to co-operate with the new city government.

In Knoxville, Republican Jack Dance replaced Democrat Mayor George R. Dempster. Dance will extend his housecleaning much further than the case in Memphis presumably. All Dempster appointees will likely walk the plank, although the bipartisan or other nonpartisan system will be preserved with a few Democratic appointments.

CLEMENT CRITICIZES PRO-SEGREGATIONISTS

Commercial Appeal

Special Session Request Is Turned Down

500 IN MOTORCADE TRIP

Jan. 24, 56

By JAMES EWING

From The Commercial Appeal Nashville Bureau

P. 4

NASHVILLE, Jan. 23.—Gov. Frank G. Clement told leaders of a 500-member pro-segregation delegation Monday that they were the unwitting allies of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

"I believe with all my heart, for better or for worse, that your group is the greatest ally that organizations like the NAACP have," the Governor said.

Memphis

Gives His Opinion

He said he was not accusing them of "double-dealing", but said had one of them been state commissioner of education it was his opinion Tennessee would have been unable to obtain court acceptance of its plan for gradual desegregation in colleges.

Instead, he said, the "segregation bars would have been completely down and you would find yourself in the middle of the lake without a paddle."

The Governor turned down a request by leaders of pro-segregation organizations from Memphis and Chattanooga and intermediate points that he call a special session of the Legislature to pass laws aimed at escaping compliance with the United States Supreme Court's decree calling for desegregation in public schools.

38a

Governor Clement said he did not believe such a course would be "in the best interest of Tennessee and Tennesseans."

Leader Tells Aim

Harry W. Pyle of Memphis, chairman of the Pro-Southerners, said his answer to Governor Clement's decision is, "I'm going to go out and organize every county in Tennessee to prove the people did want a special session of the Legislature."

Mr. Pyle said he found the Governor "very courteous" but added that did nothing to "solve the race problem."

A. A. Canada of Chattanooga, president of the Society to Maintain Segregation, also took issue with the Governor's statement, pointing out that Virginia and Georgia have taken steps to resist the Supreme Court decision and there has been no breakdown of segregation in those states.

Mr. Pyle's group asked for a special session of the Legislature to declare the Supreme Court decision "null and void" and that legislation be enacted to carry out the recommendations of a proposed nine-member study commission.

Drastic Action Urged

The Chattanooga group proposed more drastic action, with recommendations for legislation "even to the extent of eliminating public schools as such if necessary."

Mr. Canada said one of the resolutions he read bore the signatures of 40,000 persons.

C. L. Mitchell of Chattanooga charged that Education Commissioner Quill E. Cope and other members of the state Board of Education abrogated their power in setting up the plan for gradual desegregation in colleges and that the "people have been muzzled by their Governor, who is more ambitious than loyal to his state."

Motorcades bearing members of the two groups arrived in the city shortly after 8 a.m. and the crowds milled about the capitol outside the Governor's office for several hours prior to and during the conference.

They bore placards and festooned their automobiles with banners bearing such messages as "we want a decent governor" and "Let's Preserve Segregation."

Each organization designated a committee to meet with the Governor in his conference room. Members of the press and radio, several of the Governor's cabinet members, and two Methodist ministers, a Catholic priest and a Jewish Rabbi were also present.

Lawsuit Role Told

Education Commissioner Cope and Atty. Gen. George F. McCanless, who sat on each side of the Governor, gave brief explanations of their part in the lawsuit which led to acceptance in court of the gradual desegregation plan for state colleges.

Mr. McCanless said if anyone is to be glamed for the year-by-year plan, he should be the one since he acted as the state's lawyer in arguing for it before Memphis Federal District Court.

Describing himself as a pro-segregationist acting completely independent of the Governor since he was appointed by the state Supreme Court, Mr. McCanless said his prime objective was to delay the time when the state's colleges would have to be desegreated.

Had the state not offered a plan, Mr. McCanless said, the court would probably have ordered a plan, Mr. McHvt(VR ordered immediate desegregation at Memphis State College.

Group Representatives

Representing the Pro-Southerners were Wayne T. Dewees, who acted as legal counsel for the organization; L. A. Watts, Mrs. M. M. Sullinger, Charley Bell, J. L. Hatley, J. A. Marshall, C. H. Sullinger, Brooks Varner, T. V. Rainey, Harry W. Pyle, James Piersol, local chairman, and A. B. Wren, all of Memphis.

Clarence Leopard and Frank Whisman of Memphis represented the Association of Citizens Councils of Tennessee.

Clement Lists Segregation As One Of State's Big Problems In 1956

Daily World
Sun. 2-1-56

NASHVILLE—(SNS) — The issue of racial segregation will be one of the big problems facing the state of Tennessee in 1956, Governor Frank Clement said in a news conference here last week.

Atlanta Da.

Others, but not all, of the problems facing Tennessee in 1956 outlined by Gov. Clement in his news conference include reapportionment, safety, and better highways.

The problem of segregation "certainly cannot be denied," Governor Clement asserted and added, "but it is one which the supreme court has made clear is to be dealt with on a local basis, and I do not think any broad, sweeping general statement by me will add anything at this time."

Turning to the problem of highways, the governor stated that a two-year study on state highway needs will be announced within a few weeks. He felt this would be one of the most solid accomplishments of his administration.

The State, the Governor declared will continue to do everything possible to cut the loss of lives on the state highways and in reply to a question ifg he though the state patrol needed to expand its personnel, Clement stated that they could use more men but would do the best they could with what they had.

In an executive order Governor Clement transferred $100,000 to the safety department last year to buy speed clock equipment. Three of these devices have been purchased and approximately 23 more will be bought to supplement the radar road checks.

The governor felt it was not proper for him to comment on the reapportionment question until it is settled by the state supreme court.

Drink Boycotted by Negro Dealers

Times Picayune
Thurs 2-2-56

JACKSON, Tenn., Feb. 1 (AP)—A soft drink was under boycott by Negroes here Wednesday because the bottler joined in a suit aimed at killing the state's gradual desegregation plan for colleges.

J. C. Jolly, operator of the Dr. Pepper Bottling Company plant, said Tuesday "12 or 13" Negro merchants had cancelled accounts with his firm.

New Orleans

He said the actions were taken because he is among 16 leaders of the Tennessee Federation for Constitutional Government who filed the suit in Nashville's chancery court last Tuesday.

Jolly said his firm had "felt the squeeze somewhat" but that he thought it was sometimes necessary to "sacrifice business for principles."

Isaiah Savage, a Negro merchant and a member of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said the boycott was a spontaneous movement.

CHATTANOOGA STUDIES RACE FIGHT AT DANCE

Commercial Appeal

Negroes, Whites Hurl Chairs

Origin Is Confused

Wed. 2-1-56

CHATTANOOGA, Jan. 31. — (AP) — City officials Tuesday opened investigations into a "rock 'n roll" dance session Monday night that suddenly changed into a bottle and chair throwing brawl between Negro dancers and white spectators.

And in City Court, disorderly conduct against eight Negroes were dismissed, but public drunkenness charges against three of them brought $50 fines. A ninth person, a 17-year-old Negro girl, was scheduled for Juvenile Court hearing.

Mayor P. R. Olgiati refused comment except that he was having Police Commissioner Herbert Dunlap look into the Memorial Auditorium incident, which resulted in minor injuries to at least three whites and three Negroes.

Memphis

Asst. Police Chief Ernest Williams said every off-duty policeman in the city, white and Negro, was ordered to the auditorium, a public building, to help put down the brawl. About 60 officers joined in dispersing the estimated 5,000 persons.

Another investigation, reportedly into the use of the auditorium by mixed races, was under way by City Commissioner George McInturff, head of the department of public utilities, grounds and buildings.

The dance and concert, featuring Roy Hamilton, nationaly known Negro singer, was advertised primarily for Negroes, but there was a section reserved for white spectators.

No one was able to say definitely what started the brawl, but accounts given police said a non-performing member of the entertainment group sat in the dress circle open to whites. Another unidentified Negro, apparently a local man, sought to make him move out and a fight, joined by some Negro dancers, ensued.

The melee was expanded, officers said, by bottle and chair throwing by both races, but it was not known who tossed the first object.

Another report was that the brawl began after a white spectator in the balcony poured soft drink on Negro dancers below.

Memphis Negro Teacher Urges Calm Reasoning

Post-Herald
Birmingham, Ala.
Thurs 2-9-56

Says This Is No Time To Rock Boat Containing Friends Of His Race

Special to The Post-Herald

MEMPHIS, Feb. 8—A 70-year-old Memphis Negro, principal of the South's largest high school for Negroes, stepped into the integration-segregation debate this week after two meetings featuring NAACP speakers had produced tensions previously missing in Memphis.

The man, Blair T. Hunt, long has been a leader in the Negro community and a force in local elections.

Hunt described himself as a gradualist. But he said that "all of us subscribe to the broad objectives of the NAACP. None of us want second-class citizenship."

But Hunt said, he felt duty-bound to indicate the presence of a large body of 'middle-of-the-road' Negro feeling in Memphis which is based on a common-sense outlook."

Giving his views in a letter to Editor Edward J. Meeman of The Press-Scimitar, a Scripps-Howard newspaper, Hunt wrote allegorically of the "Health of Old Man Race Relations."

Old Man Race Relations, he said, "has undergone a major operation" with the "U. S. Supreme Court as surgeon.

"We, who live in the areas most affected by the 'operation' are the nurses and resident physicians," Hunt said. And: "Experience and observation have taught me that you cannot cure a disease in a day. . . . So, come let us reason together. Our job is clear-cut.

"Old Man Race Relations has suffered from a complication of phobias and manias, of fears and frustrations and frenzies, of misunderstandings and misquotes, of stupidity and stubbornness, of traditions and tragedies," Hunt wrote Editor Meeman.

Hunt made it clear that he was moved to write by the incidents of the week. He did this as he said: "Let us not rock the boat containing our friends. You cannot make progress in a storm. That's common sense."

This was a direct reply to a statement made at a church meeting by an NAACP leader. That speaker urged Negroes to "rock the boat." Though the meeting was primarily to clarify the NAACP position against communism, it was this remark that was quoted in one newspaper story.

Hunt said that the "middle-of-the-road" group's position is that "the Negro needs his friends, as any group needs friends. "Let us not place such friends in such an embarrassing position where they become the helpless targets of extremists in their own circles, because of intemperance of feeling and expression on our part," he urged.

The school principal said he believes that "the majority of Negroes are thinking as I am . . . but there is a widening gap among us regarding the methods."

Boycott Soft Drink Company

Louisville Courier-Journal
Sun. 2-5-56

JACKSON, Tenn.—The Dr. Pepper Bottling Company was under boycott by Negroes here last week because the soft drink company joined in a suit aimed at killing the state's gradual desegregation plan for colleges.

M. C. Jolly, operator of the company plant, said 12 or 13 Negro merchants had cancelled accounts with his firm.

Isaiah Savage, a Negro merchant and a member of the NAACP, said the boycott was a spontaneous movement.

HOUSTON ATTORNEY SUES J WREN FOR $60.000

Informer 8/14

Refused Service In County Courthouse

Houston, Tex.

Sat. 4-21-56

Screaming "Niggers...Niggers"

Council Leader Strikes Atty

BY NINIAN MCGOWEN ..

HOUSTON — Atty M W Plummer late Wednesday filed a $60,000 damage suit against J M Wren, a burly white man who had struck the lawyer earlier at the courthouse cafeteria. Mr Plummer also filed an assault and battery charge against Mr Wren and Judge Tom Mace set May 2 for the hearing.

Atty Doyle, counselor for plaintiffs, filed contempt of court charges against Mr Derrington and the four county commissioners Wednesday afternoon.

J M Wren, an official of the White Citizens Council of Houston, shouting "Mr Derrington won't stop you, the citizens will! Good niggers don't want to come in here" — swung a healthy right to the shoulder of Atty M W Plummer Wednesday in the doorway of the courthouse cafeteria.

Racial trouble flared in the three-year-old courthouse cafeteria suit as Mr Plummer and a group of Negroes descended the stairs to the basement where they intended to be served, following Federal Judge Ben C Connally's order that Negroes be served in the Harris County Courthouse Cafeteria.

The Negroes were stopped at the doorway of the cafeteria by Mr Wren shouting "Good niggers don't want to come in here, good niggers don't want to come in here" and at the same time Mr Plummer was still advancing to the doorway where Mr Wren swung at him several times, striking him once on the shoulder. When Mr Plummer made no effort to hit him back, Mr Wren ceased blows.

Attorney for the plaintiff Henry Doyle, one in the group of Negroes, immediately went for officers and Lee (Dee) Derrington, defendant in the suit and operator of the cafeteria, came meekly to the door stepped to the outside of the door and closed the cafeteria up, customers and all. "I am closing the cafeteria up" came his announcement in a pre-meditated cool air.

In the elbow-to-elbow crowd, during the racial altercation, statements of "Next time you had better bring 500 instead of 15" and "This is a political year between Communists, Niggers and White folks" rose above the fury.

Waiting for the invasion of the lily-white cafeteria by the group, which included Mrs Lilly Alonzo, Attys Francis Williams, Robert Ford and an Informer newswriter, were a battery of daily newspaper reporters, commentators and television cameramen, and they were told by some pro-segregationists in the crowd, "If you write it, send it to them New York papers."

FINGERS PLUMMER

A man in the crowd pointed his finger at Mr Plummer yelling, "I know you, you are the one who started all of this."

In a few minutes, Mr Doyle returned with Lt Harris and Lt Frazier of the Sheriffs Dept.

Apparently in an attempt to stay contempt charges, Mr Derrington with great deplomacy told Atty Doyle, counsel for plaintiffs he had closed the cafeteria, saying "I'm doing it the legal way. I have closed the cafeteria until I can get a hearing on a stay of operation" and before he could utter another word Mr Doyle made it known he too was doing it the legal way, and he asked Mr Derrington, "If Mr teria for service would you have served him?" Mr Derrington said he would not have, because he was Plummer had gone inside the cafe- thinking it would be better to close the cafeteria temporarily adding, "I don't want anything to happen here, because the county officials have been too nice to me for me to let something happen."

The cafeteria operator declared he was sorry about the occurrence, and speaking directly to the group asserted, "I had no part in this, I want you to know that."

As the group was leaving the cafeteria, several city policemen arrived at the scene, and apparently the rest of the cameramen, radio reporting personnel had begun to arrive also.

In a final judgement Tuesday, Judge Ben Connally ordered Lee Derrington, defendant in the case, to serve Negroes in the cafeteria. Prior to the group seeking service at the cafeteria at noon Wednesday, George Nelson, a plaintiff in the case, had gone to the cafeteria for food and was refused service. He is a plaintiff.

Also Mr Plummer and Mrs Alonzo are plaintiffs. Atty Williams and Atty Ford are part of the counselling staff for the pllaintiffs. Mr Williams is also, president, Houston Branch of NAACP.

When the proposed Bond Election for the new $6-Million courthouse was held during the General Election, November 1948, thousands and thousands of tax-paying Negro citizens along with whites signed affadavits to vote on the issue. Soon after the courthouse was opened in the summer of 1953, Mr Plummer along with a group of other Negroes were denied food in the cafeteria, which resulted in the suit being filed in August 1953.

Church Council in Texas Urges Against Interposition

Herald Miami, Fla.

Sat. 3-10-56

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. —(AP)— The Texas Council of Churches has adopted a resolution urging member denominations to oppose interposition.

The resolution, adopted unanimously, said racial discrimination is "contrary to the gospel of Jesus Christ." The council is made of 11 Protestant denominations.

Interposition is a seldom-used doctrine under which states would attempt, by joint action, to forestall federal government action which they believe encroaches upon rights reserved by the U. S. Constitution to the states.

Some Southerners opposing erasure of color lines have urged interposition be used to maintain segregation.

The council adopted another resolution urging legal measures to close what were described as loopholes that might tempt weak officials.

ANTI-BIAS PLEDGE URGED

Times 2/16

In Dallas, Baptist Convention Asks Patience in Crisis

Thurs. 4-13-56

The Baptist General Convention of Texas, in a meeting at Dallas has urged all Christians to join in a five-point pledge against racial violence.

This was announced yesterday by Baptist Press, news service of the Southern Baptist Convention, largest church body in the South. The pledge calls upon Christians to observe the following:

New York

"To behave with charity and goodwill toward all persons in a time of racial crisis; not to engage in, nor to encourage, any action involving or implying violence; not to join with any group in actions which a person would not carry out openly as an individual; to encourage moderation and patience at all times by word and action; and to show friendship and consideration for persons of all races with whom a person is associated."

The Southern Baptist Convention is the parent body of white churches in the South.

Shotgun Fired At Negro Firm

Courier-Journal Louisville, Ky.

Texarkana, Tex. Sept. 6 (AP) — A shotgun blast early today smashed a window of a service station owned by two Negro men here, stirring speculation that the incident was a continuance of violence resulting from integration at Texarkana Junior College.

Officials expressed that opinion, but said they could find no reason for the shot.

One of the station owners, J. L. Montgomery, has been an outspoken advocate of integration of the college.

An effigy of a Negro was found hanging on the junior-college campus this morning. Last night a cross was burned on the campus after the State-City school registered the first Negroes in its 29-year history.

Houston loses

Afro-American

HOUSTON, Texas — The Harris County courthouse cannot lease its courthouse cafeteria without making certain that colored citizens are allowed to use the facilities.

That was the ruling of the U.S. 5th Circuit Court of Appeals here Wednesday, upsetting a scheme of the county commissioners to maintain segregation in a public facility by leasing it to private operators.

COUNTY COURTHOUSE SCENE —— The above picture was photographed in the basement of the Harris County Courthouse Wednesday afternoon when a Negro delegation tried unsuccessfully to be served in ie courthouse cafeteria. Negroes facing camera are, front left to right, Attorney Henry Doyle, NAACP President Francis Williams, Attorney Matthew W. Plummer, and Mrs Lillie Marie Alomzo. The white man with the glasses is Dee Derrington, operator of the cafeteria. He appears to be concerned with something Attorney Doyle has just said.

—Photo. Courtesy of the Chronicle

Governor Answers Newsman's Queries

Shivers Against '3rd' Party

Courier p.3
Sat. 3-31-56

By CLIFF RICHARDSON
(Courier Texas Editor)

HOUSTON — With the studied aplomb of a seasoned and thick-skinned campaigner, Texas Gov. Allan Shivers lightly brushed off with an emphatic "No," the question as to whether or not the national attention on the NAACP picket and boycott of his TSU speech caused him to change or delete any of his remarks.

Pittsburgh, Pa.

The Governor was approached during the lull in the ceremonies which accompanied the inauguration ceremonies of Dr. Samuel M. Nabrit as president of Texas Southern University.

The newsmen present were anxious to talk with the Governor. To get his views on the segregation picture as a whole and, in particular, to wheedle from him if possible some views about the picket line which the Houston NAACP had thrown up on the TSU campus in protest against his appearance.

* * *

REPORTERS FROM daily papers and radio and TV stations were told by his aide Jack Dillard that the Governor did not want to have a press conference for fear of lending political atmosphere to the NAACP boycott.

Taking a long chance, we decided to tackle him alone. We waited until he and board chairman Mack Hannah were in the hall of the administration building and we asked for permission for a few questions.

Shivers seemed glad to grant the interview and Mr. Hannah suggested that we use a more comfortable place than the administration building hall.

* * *

SHIVERS IS a tall, muscularly-lean and handsome man. He resembles what most people think a Texan should look like. Added to this is a ready smile and stern gaze he fixes on people as he talks to them. He has the poise and confident gait that is typical of younger men of wealth and health. He parries questions neatly and is adroit at bypassing with silence or an icy smile those he regards as "off limits."

As we talked to him he answered our questions over his right shoulder as he continued to chat at the same time with others in the room.

* * *

HE DID NOT smile and appear at ease until we asked if his ardor towards Eisenhower had cooled because of the Harris Bill veto. He said that he had been in politics too long to fall out with a man over one disagreement in policy.

"I still have great respect for the President," he stated.

* * *

THE FOLLOWING are some of the questions posed by us:

Q.—Will you again lead the Texas Democrats Club for Eisenhower?

A.—I do not know because I do not know who will be running for President.

Q.—Does your failure to run for re-election this year mean that you are out of politics?

A.—No. It simply means that I am jut not running for governor this year.

Q.—Do you plan to run for any other office?

A.—I am not running for governor this year.

Q.—Will you spearhead a national campaign to set up a third party with its principal plank one of states rights and pro-segregation?

A.—No. I have always been opposed to formation of a third party.

Q.—Do you approve of the contents of the Southern Manifesto which advocates using legal means to delay or dodge compliance with U. S. Supreme Court public school desegregation decision?

A.—I can't say. I have not read it.

Q.—You have not read it? But it appeared in all of the papers.

A.—I have not read it and thus cannot comment.

Q.—Does your philosophy of interposition advocate nullification?

A.—I did not say that. I have never said that. I suggest you read my statement. To me interposition is a constitutional guarantee. It is a fundamental righ of the governed to petition. I believe strongly in local self-government and I think that we should have a national election to rephrase or restate the language of the Tenth Amendment of the Constitution. Most people think that I only speak of states rights because of segregation. It applies to any other kind of legislation. The tidelands, for example. Here in Harris County there could be legislation which you would want to retain the right of local government.

Q.—Do you think the action of Representative Sam Rayburn suggesting Lyndon Johnson to head the Texas delegation to the National Democratic Convention in Chicago will prevent you and your supporters from being seated?

A.—I do not. I believe we will be seated. Mr. Rayburn has not controlled the Democratic party in Texas for quite some time.

All the time we were asking these questions a dozen or more white reporters wrote down the quotes. There were no other Negro reporters present. Carter W. Wesley, editor-publisher of The Houston Informer, was on the picket line. He was delegated to represent his alma mater, Fisk University, but he refused to cross the picket line.

In San Antonio

Courier
Sat. 4-7-56

No More Segregation

P.3

SAN ANTONIO (ANP) — City Councilmen, in this home of the Alamo, took less than five minutes to pass an ordinance abolishing segregation in all city-owned facilities.

Pittsburgh, Pa.

The council unanimously passed an ordinance repealing a 1954 law requiring racial segregation in city swimming pools. Then in the most sweeping action taken by a major Southern city, the council ended all segregation.

The action, effective immediately, opens all municipally owned facilities to "all persons on an equal basis."

San Antonio Ends All Public Segregation

Kansas City, Mo
Tri. 5-4-56

SAN ANTONIO.—(ANP) — City councilmen, in this home of the Alamo, took less than five minutes to pass an ordinance abolishing segregation in all city-owned facilities.

The council unanimously passed an ordinance repealing a 1954 law requiring racial segregation in city swimming pools. Then in the most sweeping action taken by a major southern city, the council ended all segregation.

The action, effective immediately, opens all municipally owned facilities to "all persons on an equal basis."

The law covers public tennis courts, golf courses, swimming pools, rest rooms and the municipal auditorium.

Negro and white children swam together this week without incident.

San Antonio, like all Southwest cities, has a three-way racial population, with Mexicans forming a large percentage of the population. Previously, Mexicans have been segregated.

School districts in San Antonio were desegregated last fall.

De-Segregation on Busses Has Problem For Dallas

Kansas City, Mo.
Tri. 5-6-56

DALLAS.—As this is being written Dallas is at the close of the fourth day since the desegregation of busses was announced. There have been no incidents and no threats of incident.

None was expected since, for the past four years, seating on Dallas busses has been done without any stress on the strict observance of the separate seating signs. Very seldom within that time has any passenger, white or black, moved or turned a sign. And bus drivers have been content to drive safely and to handle all their passengers with courtesy.

On Wednesday, the Dallas Transit company announced immediate abandonment of segregation through its president, W. R. Burns, and work to remove the signs from all 530 company buses was started. The announcement followed a conference of transit officials with their attorneys who declared that "There is no question that the U. S. Supreme Court decision renders invalid all local and state segregation laws relating to city bus transportation."

In making the announcement of the abandonment of the policy of segregation, President Burns said: "We are merely doing what every legitimate American organization must do — comply with the decision of the nation's highest tribunal."

Bus Companies Not Disturbed By Opinion of Attorney General

Although Attorney General John Ben Shepperd said Thursday that bus and transit companies complying with the Supreme Court decree were acting hastily, there was no indication that serious attention was being paid to his opinion by the officials of the companies, all of whom were acting under advice from their attorneys.

Both in Dallas and San Antonio, the first two cities to put an immediate end to segregation in city bus lines, both races apparently were ignoring the segregation ban. Drivers in both cities reported that both Negroes and whites took their customary rear and front seats in city buses.

Like Dallas, the San Antonio Transit Company reported no incidents on their desegregated busses, from which the "white" and "colored" signs are being removed.

Fort Worth transit company officials said they understood the decision is not effective for 30 days and are reserving any action on the ruling pending advice from their attorneys.

Beaumont, Wichita Falls and El Paso were reported by United Press Thursday as also taking a "wait and see" attitude.

In Houston, Negroes were riding the rear of the bus from habit, said UP, although a city segregation ordinance has been unenforced since 1954.

Dallas City Manager Elgin Crull said the Dallas ordinance imposing enforced segregation, patterned after the State law, had not been enforced for "quite a number of months."

He added that no formal action is necessary to rescind an ordinance that has been found unconstitutional.

2 Negroes Dive in Pool, End Bias in San Antonio

Herald Tribune June 4 1956

New York N. Y.

Special to the Herald Tribune

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Apr. 28.—Two teen-age Negro boys went swimming here this morning and a century of segregation of Negro and white races ended for this city of half a million people.

With their dive off a diving board at the gigantic San Pedro Park pool, San Antonio became the first metropolitan city in the South to completely integrate all public facilities.

Bus integration began last week with a decision by the privately owned San Antonio Transit Co. to remove signs calling for separate seating.

Golf courses, tennis courts, libraries and the municipal auditorium were thrown open to Negroes March 22 when the City Council declared void the city ordinance calling for race segregation. The action enabled mixed swimming at city pools also, but the pools didn't open until today.

No Incidents

No incidents have taken place at any facility.

The two boys who went swimming, Clarence Littlefield, sixteen, and Frank Glenn, fourteen, walked by three policemen, newsmen and the two pool managers to enter. All had been watching since 7 a. m. for the first Negro to show up. The boys were first seen when they stepped up on a diving board.

Later the boys said they had walked around the park for over an hour before getting up enough nerve to approach the ticket window.

Both boys attend city schools that have been operating on an integrated basis since beginning of the school term last September.

San Antonio College, which formerly operated the "separate but equal" all-Negro St. Phillips College, now has mixed students at both schools. Integration took place last June during the summer sessions.

End Medical Restriction

The Bexar County Medical Society some six months ago struck the restrictive wording from its charter and began admitting Negro physicians.

Two weeks ago the Board of County Commissioners issued a statement that there had never been any segregation at county parks and the 10,000-seat Coliseum. Their action followed that of the City Council.

Catholic parochial schools in the city have been integrated since one month prior to the Supreme Court dicision in 1954. Archbishop Robert Lucy made the move acting on his own by an insertion in the local Catholic paper that the schools were open "without regard to race, creed or color."

Texan Tells How Integration Works In His Native State

Times-Picayune New Orleans, La. Sat. 5-5-56

A large group of whites and Negroes, meeting at the Rabouin school Tuesday night, April 24, heard a fifth-generation Southerner tell of the favorable progress of integration in his native state.

The occasion was one in a series of discussions which has been carried forward by the Citizens Forum on Integration of this city. The idea is to effect a workshop in which persons interested in the problems of integration may learn at first hand how it was accomplished in other states and cities.

Thomas A. Sutherland, white, took the audience, step by step, through the process by which the people of his state achieved their goal. A former director of the Texas Commission on Race Relations, he was in a key position to know of the various forces in operation for and against integration. Upon more than one occasion he pointed out the impact of our racial program upon peoples of dark skin living in other parts of the world. In a recent trip to Panama he had noticed how keenly aware the Mexicans are of the changing race relations taking place in the South. At the last of his report he stressed the importance of implementing and carrying out the court's ruling if our country is to continue its role of leadership among the darker peoples of the world.

The speaker gave a short sketch of conditions in the state prior to the court's decision outlawing segregation. There were about a million Negroes in the state, "most of them living east of San Antonio and Fort Worth." There were also a million and a half Mexicans who had suffered a considerable amount of prejudice. They were segregated in schools and refused admittance into restaurants. With the coming of World War II, a Good Neighbor Commission was established with Federal aid, and this body took over the job of education along those lines. The returning Mexican veterans brought organized pressure through voting and by other means. Six years before the Supreme Court's decision, said Sutherland, Texas was already experiencing the desegregation of Mexican children.

Sat 5-5-56

He told of the rise of the Citizens Councils, the governor's recommendation to withhold state funds from integrated schools, the way in which "hate campaigns" were combatted by ministers and the "thoughtful and objective" handling of the situation by most of the members of the Texas press. Then followed a partial discrediting of the Councils and the overriding of the governor's recommendation by the state board of education.

There are two main factors opposing integration in Texas, warned the speaker. These are the "mischief-makers, more or less top dogs in business and politics," and a "psychopathic fear" on the part of some people that their world is being threatened with change. He stressed "the seeming coincidence" between integration and a favorable press, and the lack of prejudice among younger groups of people. Some fifty schools have already been desegregated without any unpleasant incidents, but he warned against passions which might be engendered during an election year.

Moderator of the forum, Dr. Samuel L. Gandy, Dean of the Chapel, Dillard University. Members of the panel: Rev. Norman A. Holmes, Professor of Religion and Philosophy, Dillard University; the Rev. Robert Grant, S. S. J., teacher at St. Augustine High School; and Dr. Robert Stone, Professor of Sociology, Tulane University.

NAACP LEADERS CONFER WITH HOUSTON CAFETERIA OPERATOR.— Before violence flared up at the Harris county courthouse in Houston over the serving of Negroes in the cafeteria, Houston NAACP leaders conferred with Dee Derrington, operator of the cafeteria, about the serving of Negroes. Shown here talking with the operator are Attorneys Henry E. Doyle, Francis Williams and M. W. Plummer and Mrs. Lillie Marie Alonzo. Later Plummer was the victim of an attack made by an oil man. With his back to the camera is the Chief Deputy Sheriff B. E. Williams. Spectators and newsmen are in the background.

—Courtesy Houston Chronicle.

Entire Court To Comply With Law

Chronicle 1-7-56

HOUSTON — Judge Bob Casey, speaking in connection with the recent order from Federal Judge Ben C Connally that Negroes be served in the courthouse cafeteria, declared that "the entire court will comply with the law."

He said that the cafeteria will be operated in compliance with the law and that he felt free to speak for the entire Commissioners Court in making the statement.

When the new $8-Million county courthouse was opened in the summer of 1953, W F (Dee) Derrington, lessee, for the cafeteria in the basement refused to serve taxpayers M W Plummer, an attorney living at 4917 Alvin, George Nelson, labor leader and barber, Mrs Lillie Alonzo, civic worker and barber, and James L Roberts, a porter living at 2206 Drew.

Following the refusal of Mr Derrington to serve the four they filed a petition in August 1953 seeking a permanent injunction restraining the courthouse cafeteria from refusing to sell food to anyone on basis of color.

Judge Connally has given Mr Derrington 90 days to comply with his order. It is not unusual for a 90 day period be given by a judge for a defendant to comply with the law, because the time is needed to make personal decisions such as maybe selling the lease or getting out from under it otherwise.

Mr Derrington has refused to make any statements until he talks to his lawyers, Scott and Merrill.

Judge Connally's ruling "the county so far as it is able must afford comparable and substantially equal treatment to all without regards of color" has caused some guessing in the interpretation of the order.

OPINION DISAPPOINTING

"The opinion was disappointing because it suggested to Commissioners Court and Mr Derrington a way to further discriminate," said Mr Plummer. Counsel for the plaintiffs were Attorneys Henry Doyle, Francis Williams, newly elected president for the Houston Branch NAACP and Robert D Ford. Here's how Attorney Doyle looks at the ruling: Doyle's statement.

EXPERTS COMPLIANCE

"While the language of the opinion may seem to be vague, as to what the Court intended, with reference as to how, the facilities, might be provided, it nowhere said that separate and equal facilities are to be set up. Therefore the only interpretation that can be reasonably given to the opinion is that the Court intends and expects the defendants to comply with its ruling under present constitutional interpretation which has specifically ruled out the doctrine of separate but equal.

Attorney Doyle further stated, "No doubt, this is what the Court meant when it stated that 'the defendant Harris county by its acts may not constitutionally deny the plaintiffs and other members of the Negro race similar situated the right to patronize the courthouse cafeteria' I will impute no other interpretation to the opinion unless the Court at a later date, makes a statement other than what is now embodied in the opinion."

Any appeal of the Court's decision would have to await further development."

In basing his ruling on the 14th Amendment to the United States Constitution, United States District Judge Connally cited at least 10 cases where similar constitutional rights of the plaintiffs were involved and where segregation had been stricken down in the cases, including the suits: Nash versus Air Terminal Service, Sweatt versus Painter, Bolling versus Sharpe, Beal versus Holcombe, Holmes versus City of Atlanta, Sweeney versus City of Louisville, Lawrence versus Hancock, Dawson versus Mayor of Baltimore, Kansas City versus Williams and Tate versus Dept of Conservation.

In view of these foregoing authorities Judge Connally so ruled;

"The plaintiffs contend the equal protection of the laws guaranteed to them by the 14th Amendment to the United States Constitution is denied them by excluding them from the courthouse cafeteria solely because of their race and color."

Judge Connally cites in the ruling the custom, practice and policy of excluding Negroes from facilities of the courthouse cafeteria constitutes a denial of equal protection of the laws to the plaintiffs.

There can be little doubt but that plaintiffs are entitled to relief against Harris county, having undertaken to furnish eating facilities to its citizens, the county so far as it is able must afford comparable and substantially equal treatment to all without regard of color."

"Conceding for the moment that a restauranteur at common law may arbitrarily select his clientele, in my judgement that privilege does not extend to the defendant, W F (Dee) Derrington, under present circumstances."

The Court has restrained the Commissioners Court from re-newing or extending the present lease or execution of a new lease or otherwise diverting itself of management and control of premises without specifically assuring that facilities will be made of use for colored people.

The first lease to Mr Derrington was from June 10, 1953 to Dec 31, 1594 and the second lease extends from Jan 1, 1955 to Dec 31, 1956.

Round one on the legality of the courthouse "jim crow" cafeteria was reached last Aug 8, in Judge Connally's Court. The question, Attorney Doyle, had before the Court was "Can the Commissioners Court in the execution of its legislative authority lease the courthouse cafeteria to a lessee who refuses to sell food to Negro taxpayers?"

Counsel for the defense County Attorneys Burke Holman and Madison Rayburn contended the plaintiffs were complaining of a social right, not provided for in the County Constitution, and this social and private right did not reach a federal question and was therefore in the wrong court.

Council for the plaintiffs cited pratically all of the cases, Judge Connally had cited for basis for his ruling, in showing the Court's Constitutional rights were involved in the class case.

Judge Connally ordered the plaintiffs to file briefs by August 17, showing why Negroes should be served in the cafeteria, and he ordered the defendants to file briefs by Aug 24 showing why Negroes should not be served in the cafeteria. The opinion in the case by Judge Conally was handed down, late Thursday evening Dec 29, 1955. The order to open the doors of the courthouse cafeteria to Negroes is regarded as a prelude to the door opening at the city hall, city jail and municipal airport cafeterias. The declaratory judgement suit of the courthouse cafeteria case was sponsored by the Houston Branch NAACP.

Citizens are already questioning the right of the Commissioners Court to close down the cafeteria, in case this avenue of escape is chosen by the county fathers. Citizens are also eyeing the courthouse to see if any saws and hammers might be going in. May be if they do and their guess is right that the order is being mis-interpretated, it is kind of likely the Civil Court of Appeals at New Orleans will be hearing something from Heavenly Houston.

Houston Negroes have had three cases in the Supreme Court including Smith versus Allright, Beal versus Holcombe (this suit was taken to the High Court by the City of Houston) and the Sweatt versus Painter cases.

Forced To Park At Gun Point

Houston Tex. Chronicle 1-28-56

MARSHALL — Rev Richard H. Dixon, pastor of the Second Temple Baptist church in Buffalo, New York, and chairman of the National Good Will Commission, was forced off Highway 80, at gun point, Friday, between 3 and 4 o'clock, about 12 miles from here, by what was presumed to be East Texas Citizens Council hoodlums.

Threatened by the gun's being pointed at him from a green truck while he drove, Rev Dixon finally ran his car into a bank. In the meantime, other cars came over the hill, and the armed and threatening hoodlums drove off. Rev Dixon abandoned his car and went back about two or three miles to the first telephone he could find and called the Highway Department and Sheriff's Department, where he talked to Officer Rosler, and a leading law firm in East Texas which he knew.

THE INCIDENT commenced when Rev Dixon, enroute from Longview to Marshall, stopped at a wayside inn, known as Pitts' Motel and Cafe.

The cafe had a showcase with chewing gum and other articles for sale, and a kitchen in back. Rev Dixon asked the lady in the cafe whether or not he could buy barbecue "to go."

The lady called back in the kitchen and the cook told her she had barbecue sandwiches. Rev Dixon ordered a barbecue sandwich, bought a package of gum and a package of Bayer's aspirin. He gave her the money for that and she took out for that and the barbecue sandwich which was to come.

IN THE meantime, while waiting for his sandwich Rev Dixon was looking at souvenirs. Just about the time his sandwich was ready to come out of the kitchen, a man walked in and told him he could not be served in there, he would have to go around to the kitchen to be served.

Rev Dixon reports that he told him he was not being served, that he had ordered and paid for a sandwich and was merely waiting for it to come, and it was about time for it to come out of then. But the man insisted that he had to go around to the back.

Rev Dixon, to avoid any trouble, walked out of the cafe to his car and left, leaving the sandwich there. When he had driven probably six or seven miles, there came behind him two men in a green truck. His first notice of them was when he heard a yell and a horn blowing.

The truck came on up beside him with the man on the right having a gun and pointing it at him, hollering for him to pull over. There was a post and other obstructions immediately on the side, and as Rev Dixon drove past them the truck was cutting in in front of him.

As the truck pulled in on the right, Rev Dixon ran his car on the shoulder and into an embankment.

IT SEEMS that the hoodlums were frightened off when other cars piled over the hill on the highway. Although Rev Dixon got out of his car, by that time the hoodlums had driven on off.

All of Rev Dixon's friends in East Texas told him that it was indoubtedly the work of the Citizens Council group. The matter is being investigated by whites in East Texas, who have had reports made on it. Among these is one of the leading law firms in East Texas.

Monday, when Rev Dixon was contacted, he said that he would prefer to give any further information about it after the investigation is made, which he said would be begun Monday if not completed.

Rev Dixon was in Texas in connection with his Good Will Commission work, and has had a number of interviews with important Negroes and whites. He has been strongly endorsed and encouraged by Ex-President Harry Truman.

REV. RICHARD H. DIXON

Open Drive For De-Segregation In Texas Parks

Fri 2-10-56

AUSTIN, Texas — (NS) — The National Association For the Advancement of Colored People fired the opening shot last week in a drive for desegregation of state parks in Texas.

The Texas executive committee of the NAACP urged Attorney General John Ben Sheppard to impress upon the people that the doctrine of "separate but equal" facilities is no longer lawful.

Sheppard was also petitioned to "use your high office to induce our governor and our legislature to take prompt action to remove from the statutes and the organic laws of this state, all traces and all suggestions of restraints or restrictions that would tend to limit the public generally in the use and enjoyment of the facilities provided by the state in our system of public parks."

San Antonio, Tex. Ends Segregation

Sat. 3-24-56

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., March 23 (AP)—City councilmen, in a few minutes Thursday, ended a century of segregation of whites and Negroes in municipally owned facilities.

They unanimously passed an ordinance ending racial segregation in city swimming pools, and then went a giant step further and threw open doors of all public functions in municipally owned facilities to "all persons . . . on an equal basis."

City Atty. Carlos Cadena said the action is effective immediately. There were no speeches and the City Council completed passage quickly. The measure has been under private discussion for about a week.

The ordinance covered public tennis courts, golf courses, swimming pools, rest rooms and the municipal auditorium.

All school districts here are already desegregated.

Negroes To Picket Shivers

Miami, Fla. Sat. 3-17-56

Houston Group Plans Protest

HOUSTON, Tex.—(UP)—Houston's Negro leaders said Friday 200 Negroes will picket Texas Southern University Sunday when Gov. Allan Shivers speaks at the inauguration of a new university president.

Attorney Francis L. Williams, president of the Houston Chapter of the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People, said "We intend going about this picketing in a prudent and lawful manner."

Shivers, a leader of Texas conservative Democrats, has vigorously backed the doctrine of interposition to stop "federal encroachment" on states' rights.

Shivers will deliver the main speech at the inauguration of Dr. S. M. Nabrit as president of the all-Negro university. The NAACP attacked the governor because of his "publicly declared views on integration in public schools."

Thursday night about 100 Negroes attending a meeting in the small Mt. Zion Missionary Church and voted to picket Shivers' appearance. The meeting was called by the executive board of the Houston NAACP branch.

Williams asked those present if they felt the boycott should be "active or passive." The NAACP had earlier urged Houston Negroes to stay away from the appearance, but there was no talk of picketing until Thursday night.

Williams said the NAACP believed "Gov. Shivers has a right to say anything he desires to say," but that "we also have a right to boycott his speech and to influence other people not to attend and listen to a man who has publicly declared he will do everything in his power to abridge the rights of the Negro citizens and their children in this state."

Houston opens its public facilities to all citizens

Afro-American p. 2

Sat. 3-31-56

SAN ANTONIO, Texas — City councilmen here Thursday unanimously passed an ordinance repealing an 1954 ordinance requiring racial segregation in the city swimming pools and then threw open doors of all public functions in municipally owned facilities to "all persons on an equal basis."

The new ordinance covered public tennis courts, golf courses, swimming pools, rest rooms and the Municipal Auditorium. All school districts here are already desegregated.

Baltimore, Md.

ELSEWHERE ON THE desegregation front the Baltimore County Board of Education at Towson voted unimously Wednesday to open 25 more public schools to integration when the fall term begins in September.

When added to the 28 desegregated last fall, the county will have 53 integrated schools.

* * *

THE SCHOOL, Nashville, Tenn., board here Thursday conceded that segregation provisions of Tennessee's Constitution and statutes are clearly "unconstitutional."

The board, however, requested a continuance of the suit seeking admission of 21 colored pupils to white schools and 2 white children to colored schools to permit more time for planning desegregation.

* * *

"UNTIL THE people say otherwise I'm going to uphold my oath to the U.S. Constitution, come hell or high water," Gov. James E. Folsom of Alabama declared in Montgomery Thursday.

He made the statement while charging that the Alabama Legislature "collectively and individually" violated its oath to the Constitution by passing a resolution declaring the Supreme Court's segregation decrees null and void.

Six Atlanta students who tried to enroll Friday in the State College of Business Administration failed in their uest after they visited the college the State Board of Regents and the Fulton County cancery judge, with their attorney, A. T. Walden.

Mr. Walden told reporters that he would continue his fight to have them enrolled.

In Raleigh, tse N.C. State Supreme Court was asked this week to speed up action on a case filed by parents of colored children seeking admission to a white elementary scsool at Old Fort by next fall.

Shivers Has Crowd at TSU, Pickets, Too

Kansas City, Mo. Fri. 3-23-56

HOUSTON, Texas — (INS) — Gov. Allan Shivers of Texas spoke Sunday, March 18, at Texas Southern university at the inauguration of President S. M. Nabrit, despite an anti-segregation picket line organized by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Shivers, labeled a "race baiter" in one of the placards carried by the 100 demonstrators, spoke out against what he called extremism—"the obstructionist and the impatient."

The picketing was approved by the Houston NAACP which opposes Shivers' views on segregation.

An overflow crowd of 1,200 Negro and white persons heard the governor, and a university spokesman described the boycott as a "failure."

Robert L. Winters, Mrs. Frazier V. Scurry,, Clifton O. Sylvester, L. D. Chadwick, Mrs. Signora E. Howard, Theo Harris, Willie F. Bunting, Mrs. Theo Harris, Mrs. Lillian H. Jackson, Carter Wesley, Moses Leroy, James L. Roberts, Mrs. C. V. Adair, Richard H. Moore, Mrs. Moses Leroy, Samson Ross, C F Richardson, Jd., Wm. O. Bonner, F. W. Scott, Mrs. W. H. Robinson, Quentin R. Mease, W. A. Samuel, Joseph H. Finche, Chas. A. Shaw, Dr. H. A. Bullock, C. h. Tarlett II and Rick Ravon Darnell.

right the wrong that has been done to Mrs. Baird's Bakeries, Inc., and set up machinery to prevent any recurrence of such an action by establishing a committee to evaluate and investigate, fairly without prejudice, any such charges which may be leveled against any organization, company or individual in the future, and

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, that this assembly has throughly evaluated the rumor concerning Mrs. Baird's Baking Company and finds that they, like Mrs. Baird's Baking Company has not made any contribution to the White Citizens Council or any such organization, and recommends that the citizens of Houston cease the unfair boycott against Mrs. Baird's Baking Company.

Among those signing were J. H. Hose, Mrs. M. V. Webster, Mrs. Jemison, Hobart T. Taylor, Julius White.

Mrs Baird's Bread Not Guilty, Group Says

Houston Post 11-10-56

ed rumors have been widely circulated which have placed this company in a situation of sales disadvantage, and

WHEREAS, The president of this company has gone on public record emphatically denying the truth of these rumors, and

WHEREAS, A representative cross-section of Houston's Negro citizens recognize the evils and danger of false accusation and rumor, and against individuals, organizations or companies based on unfounded rumo.

BE IT RESOLVED, That this Citizens Committee take whatever action that is within its power to

Representative citizens called the rumors about Mrs Baird's Baking Company false and found them untrue, and recommended that the citizens cease to honor the unfair boycott against Mrs. Baird's Bakery Company. The resolution follows:

(Adopted by the Harris County Evaluation Committee, Region November 1, 1956, at the South Central Branch of the YMCA.)

WHEREAS, The good name and integrity of an established Houston [illegible] and employer of many people has been maligned, and

WHEREAS, False and unfound-

In Houston—

Racial controversy closes cafeteria

Times 4-12-56

HOUSTON, Tex., April 12—(AP)—The cafeteria in the Harris County Courthouse remained closed today after a clash yesterday between whites and Negroes.

Fists flew when a group of Negroes sought to be served lunch at the cafeteria.

The Negroes approached the cafeteria a day after Federal Judge Ben C. Connally had directed that the place be made available to Negroes as well as whites.

J. M. Wren, an oil operator who was a candidate for governor of Texas in 1950, swung several punches at M. W. Plummer, a Negro attorney, when a group of the Houston Chapter of the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People appeared at the entrance to the cafeteria.

"If the court won't stop you, we will," Wren shouted. "I'm a citizen of Houston and I'm opposed to this."

He later added:

"We don't want Negroes in the cafeteria. If we've got to have a riot, let's have it. I'm not going to have Negroes here."

Wren ran for governor on a platform that advocated racial segregation.

PLUMMER WAS not injured but he immediately filed a charge of simple assault against Wren. He also filed a damage suit against the oil operator, asking $10,000 actual and $50,000 exemplary damages.

Representatives of the NAACP also asked that the operator of the cafeteria and county officials be cited for contempt.

The chairman of the Commissioners Court, Kyle Chapman, said the general feeling is that if the cafeteria is opened again it will be for county employes only.

Court Does Integration About Face

Herald P. 16-A
Mia. Fla. 4-13-56

HOUSTON, Tex. —(UP)— A federal judge stepped in Thursday and suspended his own anti-segregation ruling to re-open a cafeteria closed Wednesday after a white oilman punched a Negro attorney for trying to get a cup of coffee.

Federal Judge Ben C. Connally suspended his own injunction against W. F. (Dee) Dearrington, owner of a cafeteria in the Harris County courthouse, for refusing to serve Negroes.

Derrington closed the hitherto all-white eating place after several Negroes attempted to take advantage of Judge Connally's injunction and tried to enter the cafeteria.

In a melee that followed, oilman J. M. Wren, an independent drilling contractor, hit Negro attorney M. S. Plummer in the face. Plummer did not hit back. Wren was arrested, charged with simple assault.

The near-battle was witnessed by some 35 white patrons in the cafeteria and a group of Negroes Plummer brought to patronize Derrington's establishment. The group included Francis Williams, president of the local branch of the NAACP.

Derrington closed the cafeteria to everybody—"whites and Negroes alike" — after the fight.

He re-opened it Thursday after Judge Connally suspended his ruling ordering the courthouse cafeteria to serve Negroes, pending Derrington's appeal to the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans.

Judge Connally said he based his later decision on whether the right of Negroes to use the services of the cafeteria for the next few months outweighed the loss that Derrington testified he would suffer if the cafeteria was "integrated."

Judge Orders Negroes Served In Courthouse Cafe In Texas

Chicago Defender 4-14-56

HOUSTON, Texas, April 11 — Federal Judge Ben Connally ordered Tuesday that Negroes be served in the Harris County courthouse cafeteria.

His order was in a final judgment issued in a case brought by Negroes against county officials and Dee Derrington, operator of the cafeteria.

The Negroes' attorney, Henry Doyle, said "Negroes will seek service in the cafeteria by Wednesday at the latest."

Derrington said he will refuse service to any colored persons "on the advice of my attorney."

William Scott, Jr., attorney for the operator, said he will file a motion asking that the judgment be suspended until his appeal is acted on.

Connally's decree, effective at once, enjoins Derrington from excluding Negroes and forbids the county to renew the cafeteria lease without "specific assurance that facilities are available for use of colored persons under circumstances and conditions equal to those of the white race."

Texas Cafeteria Re-Opened To Negro Patrons

Daily World Fri. 4-13-56
Atlanta Ga.

(HOUSTON, Tex. —(INS)— The cafeteria in the Harris County courthouse was opened Thursday following a new order by a federal judge.

Judge Ben Conolly granted a stay of execution on his decision Tuesday ordering the cafeteria to serve Negroes. The stay was granted after the cafeteria proprietor, Dee F. Darrington, asked for time to appeal the earlier decision to a higher court.

The courthouse was the scene of a violent flareup Wednesday when six Negroes sought to enter the cafeteria on the basis of Judge Connollys order. As they tried to enter, J. W. Wren, an oil man, attempted to hit William Plummer, a Negro attorney.

Two of the blows were warded off and a bystander intervened to break up the incident.

Then Darrington closed the restaurant.

Simple assault charges have been levied against Wren, and Plummer has brought a $60,000 civil suit against the oil man.

Tuesday's order throwing open the doors of the cafeteria to Negroes was the result of a suit brought five months ago by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

NEGROES DRIVEN FROM TEXAS CAFE

New York Times 4-12-56

Courthouse Unit Is Closed After Violence—Singer Cancels Dates in South

Special to The New York Times.

HOUSTON, Tex., April 11—Violence flared here today when a delegation of Negroes sought to be served at the cafeteria in the Harris County courthouse. Dee F. Derrington, who operates the cafeteria under lease from the county government, closed it after the violence.

Federal District Judge Ben C. Connally signed an order yesterday making the cafeteria available to Negroes.

The delegation today was headed by Francis Williams, a lawyer and head of the Houston Chapter, National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

A central figure in the violence was J. M. Wren, a white oil operator. He punched M. W. Plummer, a Negro attorney, who was instrumental in bringing the Federal Court suit against Mr. Derrington and the county government.

Mr. Plummer escaped injury, but later filed simple assault charges against Mr. Wren. The latter cried out as he saw the six-member Negro group approach the cafeteria:

"If the court won't stop you, we will. I'm a citizen of Houston and I'm opposed to this."

Mr. Derrington tried to calm Mr. Wren. He said he had asked a stay of execution of the court order opening the cafeteria doors to all races but Mr. Wren retorted:

"We don't want them in the cafeteria. If we've got to have a riot, let's have it. I'm not going to have Negroes here."

Henry E. Doyle, a Negro attorney with the delegation, said he would seek a contempt of court citation against Mr. Derrington.

'King' Cole 'Not Mad'

CHICAGO, April 11 (UP)—Nat (King) Cole said today he was "not mad" at southern whites and planned no legal action against those who attacked him on the stage during a performance at Birmingham, Ala.

The Negro singer canceled at least three more appearances in southern cities and flew here for "a few days rest" and a medical check-up. But he vowed that he would continue his singing tour.

Three white segregationists pounced on Mr. Cole while he was performing to a packed audience of whites last night and sought to drag him from the stage. He suffered a slight back injury but later finished his performance.

In Birmingham, three men were charged with inciting a riot. Three others were booked on the same charge as accomplices. Later the charges were changed to assault with intent to murder.

Ohio Integration Ordered

Special to The New York Times.

HILLSBORO, Ohio, April 11—The Board of Education must proceed immediately to end segregation of Negro from white children, Judge John H. Druffel of the United States District Court ordered in Cincinnati today.

The ruling was in compliance with a Circuit Court of Appeals decision the United States Supreme Court refused last week to review. The appellate court had directed the board to admit Negroes immediately on a non-segregated basis and end all segregation by September.

About 20 Negro children have been applying daily for admission to the "all white" Webster School, they were turned away again today, as usual.

Negro Struck For Seeking Cafe Service

Courier-Journal Thurs. 4-12-56
Louisville Ky.

Segregation Banned By Court Day Before

P. 4

From Wire Dispatches

Houston, April 11.—J. M. Wren, a white oilman, hit a Negro lawyer today for trying to eat in the Harris County Courthouse cafeteria.

United States District Judge Ben C. Connally ruled yesterday that it was unconstitutional for the cafeteria to refuse to serve Negroes.

The lawyer who was hit and stunned, M. M. Plummer, later filed charges of simple assault against Wren.

W. D. Derrington, operator of the cafeteria, later closed his place to both whites and Negroes to avoid being held in contempt of Judge Connally's court.

Refused 3 Earlier

Derrington refused to serve three Negroes before Plummer arrived. The first was R. H. Williams, 59, a railroad machinist, who was waiting to be called for jury duty.

He asked for coffee. Derrington said, "Sorry, I can't serve you." Williams left without saying anything.

George T. Nelson, a barber and member of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, and Clyde Bailey, 29, were also refused service.

When Bailey was trying to get service, witnesses said Wren told him:

"Let me tell you something; you people had better stop pushing yourselves or you'll end up boycotted and starved out of the area."

Looks In, Goes Away

Plummer came to the door, looked in, went away, and returned with a delegation of Negroes, including Francis Williams, president of the Houston branch of the N.A.A.C.P.

Wren hit Plummer about 8 feet from the entrance. Plummer warded off further blows with his arms and retreated. Der-

OILMAN HITS NEGRO IN COURT CAFETERIA

Federal Judge In Houston Desegregated Eatery

ESTABLISHMENT CLOSED

By The United Press

HOUSTON, Texas, April 11.—J. M. Wren, a white oilman, hit a Negro lawyer today for trying to eat in the Harris County Courthouse cafeteria under a Federal court order.

United States District Judge Ben C. Connally ruled Tuesday that it was unconstitutional for the cafeteria to refuse to serve Negroes. The lawyer who was hit and stunned is M. W. Plummer.

Assault Charge Filed

Plummer later filed charges of simple assault against Mr. Wren. W. D. Derrington, operator of the cafeteria, closed his place to both whites and Negroes to avoid being held in contempt of Judge Connally's court.

"I want you to know that I have nothing to do with this attack," Mr. Derrington told Plummer. "I have too much respect for county officials to do something like this. I am closing the cafeteria."

Plummer broke in to ask whether he couldn't have a cup of coffee before the place closed, but Mr. Derrington said the place was closed "to everybody — whites and Negroes alike."

'I'm Closing Cafeteria'

"I don't want to be held in contempt of court by refusing to serve you," Mr. Derrington said. "Therefore, I am closing the cafeteria."

Actually, Mr. Derrington refused to serve three Negroes before Plummer arrived. The first was R. H. Williams, 59, a railroad machinist, who was waiting to be called for jury duty.

He asked for coffee and Mr. Derrington said, "Sorry, I can't serve you." Williams left without saying anything.

"I was just waiting around for Judge Ewing Boyd's court to open and thought I'd like a cup of coffee," Williams said. "I don't belong to any group or anything like that."

Others Refused

George T. Nelson, a barber and member of the National Association for Advancement of Colored People, and Clyde Bailey, 29, were also refused service.

When Bailey was trying to get served, witnesses said Mr. Wren told him: "Let me tell you something, you people had better stop pushing yourselves or you'll end up boycotted and starved out of the area."

Plummer came to the door, looked in, went away and returned with a delegation of Negroes, including Francis Williams, president of the Houston branch of the NAACP.

Blow Near Entrance

Mr. Wren hit Plummer about eight feet from the entrance. Plummer warded off further blows with his arms and retreated, while Mr. Derrington and a bystander grabbed Mr. Wren.

After the fight, Mr. Derrington asked the other Negroes not to press him for service.

"I have an appeal before the judge," he said. "Why don't you be patient and wait for his decision."

"We have waited, and patiently," Henry Doyle, lawyer for the Negroes whose petition brought forth Judge Connally's ruling, said.

Doyle filed the petition for a group of Negroes who work in the courthouse but can't eat in the cafeteria.

Refuses To Play For All-White Dancers

Informer Houston, Tex. Sat. 8-18-56

HOUSTON—Fats Domino overruled Houston police Sunday night when they ran Negroes from their own dance floor to accomodate white dance lovers. Bandleader Domino refused to play for white dancers only.

Tempers flared and the police and the Houston police officials were red-faced when police abruptly stopped 5,000 Negro and white Rock n' Roll dance lovers from enjoying dancing to the music of Fats Domino, one of their idols, in the City Auditorium Sunday night. Police stopped tthe music when they noticed Negro couples and white couples dancing on the same floor in an unsegregated manner.

Unable to solve what the law enforcement officers termed a "problem", it was decided that the 1,000 Negro fans would get refunds and the 4,000 white fans could have the entire dance floor. This not only angered the Negro dancers, but Maestro Domino, too, didn't like the idea. He refused to play for an all-white group. Then the 4,000 whites got into the act.

What had been a peaceful evening turned into a horrid nightmare as the 5000 dance lovers protested the police action, by demanding their money back if the dance did not continue.

Still not showing any sign of racial disturbance (as police said they thought the dance would produce had they let the couples dance like they were at the beginning of the social), a committee of 12 dance fans- six Negro and six whites asked police to permit the dance to be continued.

W H Hollins, a spectator, told The Informer the white dancers told the officers they did not want segregation; they wanted to dance and that neither the Negroes nor the whites objected to dancing on the same floor.

The white committee men were quoted as stating to the officers that all the dancers were American citizens and that segregation was dead, hence they did not want at the dance.

The officer, it was reported, then told the committee that it was against the law for Negroes and whites to dance on the same floor. The police added that since whites were in the majority at the Negro dance, the promoters had agreed to turn it into a dance for whites, Mr Hollins said.

The announcement sent Negroes into a run on the box office for their money. But one of the promoters announced that the money would not be returned, and the Negroes stormed back into the the auditorium. Then Negroes and whites went on the dance floor and started dancing again.

Later, according to Mr Hollins, the officers stopped the band.

Negroes and whites then started singing 'Let the Good Times Roll," and danced to their singing until officers broke this up, too Mr Hollins said. He said there had been no disturbance or protests of any kind before the officers interfered with the dancers.

Sat. 8-18-56

According to the city Legal Department there is no ordinance on the city's law books prohibiting the two races from dancing at the same time, on the same floor, to the same music.

"There is absolutely no ordinance on segregation in the city, except on buses," a spokesman in the city's Legal Department said Monday in answer to the reporter's query. The ordinance he referred to covering the riding of city buses, was killed by a recent Supreme Court's decision, and segregation on buses is no longer being enforced.

In the absence of Sgt A C Wingo, whose order reportedly stopped the dance, Sergeant Evans of the Uniform Division said that the authority the police took in the matter was based on "the fact that there is a possibility of racial disturbance at mixed dances."

Fats Domino checked out of the Crystal Hotel early Monday before he could be reached by the reporter. He reportedly refused to play for a segregated dance, after learning of the police action. The popular rock and roll entertainer was quoted as saying that his reputation was at stake.

FATS DOMINO

Informer Houston, Tex Sat. 8-18-56 P. 1 38a

Meanwhile, reports have leaked out that police action broke up a dance at the Coliseum several Sundays ago when the white dancers insisted on dancing like the Negroes. The reports are that the dance was closed down by police within 45 minutes of the scheduled closing time.

In a late statement Monday evening, R J Rausaw, promoter of the dance, said he "tried everything but nothing worked."

The people just wanted to dance." Mr Rausaw said. He said he tried giving their money back, but that didn't work.

He then tried changing the dance into a white dance, and that didn't work either, Mr Rausaw explained. He then tried making it a Negro dance, "but the people just wanted to dance," Mr Rausaw said. He said he never advertises his promotions as "Negro" or "white", and that this time he had not given the dance any elaborate advertising, "but the people came."

Fats Domino came here from San Antonio where he played to a mixed audience and was booked for his next appearance in Opelousas, Louisiana

'Can't Keep Us Out'

HOUSTON, Texas — "We got them cold and they know it. Legally, they can't keep us out of the cafeteria."

Speaking was Francis Williams, president of the Houston branch of the NAACP.

His branch successfully pursued a suit which resulted in a Federal Court order to open the Harris County Courthouse cafeteria facilities to colored persons.

ON WEDNESDAY, when Williams and five other persons attempted to obtain service in the cafeteria, J. Mort Wren an elderly wealthy oilman, staged a "one - man riot" against their appearance.

The owner of the cafeteria, W. F. Derrington, closed the cafeteria.

"I'm closed as of right now—closed to everybody. I don't want to be held in contempt of court.

"I wouldn't have had this happen for the world. I have too much at stake to handle this that way," he said.

* * *

MR. WILLIAMS, however, debunks this.

"Before Mr. Wren struck Mr. Plummer, George Nelson, one of the plaintiffs in the suit against the cafeteria, had gone to the cafeteria and had been refused service."

Mr. Williams gave the AFRO the following history of the suit, that was filed Aug. 28, 1952, by four residents of Houston and named the county commissioners, the county judges and the proprietor of the cafeteria as defendents.

ON DEC. 29, Judge Ben C. Connally of the U.S. District Court bench, ruled that it was unconstitutional for the cafeteria to refuse service to colored persons.

"However, taking into consideration the sociological questions involved in racial changes, he decided to wait 90 days before issuing the order," Mr. Williams reported.

"On April 9, the 90 days were up and he issued the formal order," saying:

"IT REQUIRES W. D. Derrington, operator of the cafeteria to serve colored people and made it clear to the county officials that colored persons could not be denied the use of facilities on public property," Mr. Williams said.

ON WEDNESDAY morning, at about 8 a.m., George Nelson, a barber and one of the plaintiffs in the suit against the owner of the cafeteria, sought service.

He was refused service.

At 11 a.m., Nelson returned to the county courthouse with Mrs. Lillie Alonzo, a barber, and M. W. Plummer also plaintiffs in the suit.

They were accompanied by Henry Doyle and Robert D. Ford attorneys, and Mr. Williams.

* * *

"WE WERE met at the door by J. M. Wren, a wealthy oilman and a member of the local Citizens Council," he said.

"He waved his arms and cursed at us. 'You n...rs can't come in here,' he screamed," said Mr. Williams.

"Wren hit Plummer, who warded off other blows before he was restrained by a bystander.

* * *

"HE CONTINUED to rave and rant 'if the court won't stop you, we will. ... ...

"'It's trash like you that is causing this trouble,' Wren shouted, 'The good colored people don't want this and neither do we.

"'If you are going to have a riot, let's have it now,' he continued," Williams said.

* * *

"NOBODY SAID anything, but him. And there were a number of whites standing around.

"The newsreel cameramen got a picture of him striking Mr. Plummer," he said.

"Derrington, the proprietor, asked us not to attempt to eat there until the appeals court had ruled in the case.

* * *

"WHEN WE refused, he closed up the cafeteria to everyone. Williams said.

On Thursday, Judge Connally granted a stay of order until the appeals court could rule. The ruling means that colored cannot use the cafeteria at this time.

* * *

MEANWHILE, Williams reports that "we are hitting at our opponents three ways.

"Plummer has filed a $60,000 damage suit in civil court against Wren.

"He has also filed a simple assault charge against Wren which will be heard in city court on May 1.

"On April 23, a motion for contempt of court charge against Derrington, the proprietor, will be held in Federal Court.

"Derrington could have hidden behind the Wren incident.

However, Nelson had sought service earlier Wednesday and was refused service.

"We feel that we have a good case," Williams said.

* * *

WILLIAMS IS a graduate of the Howard University Law School. He is a native of Austin, Texas.

It was the Houston branch which picketed the recent inaugural ceremonies of Dr. S. M. Nabrit at Texas Southern University.

The demonstration was a protest against the appearance of Gov. Allan Shivers as a principal speaker at the ceremony.

The Houston branch has 7,000 members. It is currently fighting for the desegregation of the city schools.

Schools in such Texas cities as Corpus Christi, San Antonio and San Marcus and El Paso have desegregated, he points out.

"We have many colored persons registered to vote in this city. However, under the [illegible] party system they have [illegible] choice in the elections," Mr. Williams revealed.

Loud Mouth—Shouting racial epithets and slurs, J. Mort Wren, right, Houston contractor, gets ready to toss a punch at Atty. M. W. Plummer who led a group of Negroes into a cafeteria of the Harris County (Tex.) Courthouse. Plummer's group was seeking to confirm a Federal Court order which gave Negroes the right to be served in the cafeteria. Attorney Plummer is suing Wren, a White Citizens Council leader, for $60,000.—Story on Page 3.

M. W. PLUMMER J. M. WREN

Hot words lead to blows in Houston courthouse safe fight

Interposition Support

Post + Times Herald

Four Governors to Ask Integration Protests

Wed. 1-25-56 P. 1

Washington, D.C.

By Robert E. Baker
Staff Reporter

RICHMOND, Va., Jan. 24 The Governors of four southern states today said they would ask their State legislatures to adopt resolutions of "interposition or protest" against the United States Supreme Court's desegregation decision.

In a joint statement, issued after a day-long, closed session at the capitol here, the governors declared the states have not delegated to the Federal Government the power to prohibit racial segregation in public schools.

They recommend that their State legislatures:

They said they would also

- Call on Congress to act to "protect the states" against "present and future encroachment by the central Government."
- Enact legislation to protect state sovereignty and "the rights of its people."

The brief, 200-word statement was read by Gov. George Bell Timmerman, of South Carolina. It was unanimously agreed upon by Governors Marvin Griffith, of Georgia, J. P. Coleman, of Mississippi and Thomas B. Stanley, of Virginia. They represented southern states where legislatures now are in session.

Gov. Luther H. Hodges, of North Carolina attended the session, but said he did not participate in the formulation of the statement, since the North Carolina legislature is not in session and he was attending only as an observer. He said the statement gives "expression to the position of the South" and will be given serious consideration in North Carolina.

The statement left wide open the question of how far each state would go with resolutions of interposition or protest. Interposition is a historic doctrine challenging the authority of the U. S. Supreme Court in making its desegregation dicision.

Interposition is a maneuver by the South designed to attain the opposite and its ostensiblv seeks. It proposes a constitutional amendment that would forbid racial segregation in schools.

Interposition proponents in the South expect the amendment would fail to secure the approval of the 36 states needed. The effect of this, in their view, would be to affirm that segregation is constitutional, thereby invalidating the Supreme Court decision for disegregation.

Going into the session, Griffin said he favored a "very strong resolution of interposition," interpreted as meaning he would support a measure declaring the Supreme Court decision null and void. In this case, the State would declare its intentions to maintain segregated schools until the United States Constitution was amended to specifically prohibit them.

But Mississippi's Coleman, going into the meeting, said he opposed nullification. The Governor's statement used the words "resolution of interposition or protest in appropriate language," thus leaving the question of how strong a protest should be up to the individual states.

Virginia has three resolutions of interposition already introduced in its General Assembly. One would nullify the Supreme Court decision, a second would expressly state it is not a nullification resolution and the third lies somewhere in between. Post + Times

The statement marked the first time Governor Stanley has taken a stand on interposition or protest. Herald

Although the Governors would comment no further than their joint statement, their stand evidently left the way open for enactment of plans by individual states to deal with the Supreme Court mandate by legislation—like Virginia's Gray Commission program to avoid enforced integration in the public schools.

Thus, the Governors' policy indicated this course for the South: (1) A long range plan, by way of interposition or protest, in the hope of retaining segregated schools by constitutional amendment and (2) for the immediate future, enactment of legislation to avoid enforced integration. P. 12

Attending the meeting were legal staffs of the various states and, from Virginia, state Sen. Garland Gray of Waverly, Attorney General J. Lindsay Almond Jr., and Gray Commission Counsel David J. Mays.

Clement Disappoints Segregationists

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Jan. 24 (AP)—Gov. Frank Clement told a group of segregationists he will not accede to their request for a special session of the Legislature to seek w ays to block integration of the races in public schools.

Several hundred segregationists converged on the Capitol Monday.

Labor Hits Changes In Compensation Law

RICHMOND, Jan. 24 (AP)—Organized labor opposed several amendments to the Unemployment Compensation Act at a hearing today before the Senate Finance Committee. The hearing will be resumed Friday.

The hearing turned largely to a discussion of the guaranteed annual wage provisions under contracts proposed between some unnions and automobile manufacturers. The bill would provide the Governor's recommended additional benefits to unemployed persons and would extend the disqualification for such benefits.

One amendment proposed to the Virginia law would bar an unemployed person from benefits if he receives unemployment benefits under any private plan, such as would be provided under the guaranteed annual wage proposals.

Beecher E. Stallard, counsel for the Virginia Federation of Labor, termed the bill a vicious one. He said it would penalize old persons who, w hile collecting retirement insurance, might seek to supplement this income with part-time work.

Other labor spokesmen who appeared in opposition to some of the bill's provisions included Julian Carper of the State CIO; Harry Boyd of the Virginia Federation; Jim Boyett of the Automobile Workers Union; and Silas Switzer, international representative for the textile workers.

Other legislative developments today:

1. The Senate passed a package of bills making various changes in judicial circuits and giving Virginia six additional jurists. An additional judge and another to the 16th Circuit (Fairax and Prince William counties and the cities of Alexandria and Falls Church) was allotted to the 36th Circuit (Arlington County)
2. The House received an Administration measure to limit the tenure of members of the State Highway Commission to two successive four-year terms.
3. Del. W. R. Stone of Martinsville proposed penalties for overweight trucks wherein they would be fined 2 cents per pound for each excessive pound. Should the excess amount to more than 5000 pounds, the fine would be 5 cents for each pound above 5000.
4. Del. Tayloe Murphy dropped in Monkand.s.w ETAOIN bills to carry out Virginia Advisory Legislative Council proposals for upping the maximum small loan that may be obtained from $300 to $600.

Meanwhile, Del. Sam Pope of Southampton said he would proposed a study to the sales tax issue if he became convinced his bill to enact the levy stood no chance of passage.

A Pope colleague, Del. Felix Edmunds of Waynesboro, said he would support the 2 per cent sales tax levy offered yesterday by the Southampton law-

Race Ruling Challenged By 5 States

Advertiser

Montgomery, Ala.

Sun 1-29-56

Interposition Plan Holding Major Hope Of Dixie Lawmakers

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

With five Southern states holding legislative sessions, U.S. Supreme Court decisions against racial segregation are being challenged in a variety of proposals.

The little-known doctrine of interposition appears to be the major hope of many Dixie advocates in the South's traditional separation of races. Through it they seek to nullify the segregation decrees.

But legislators in Alabama, Georgia, South Carolina, Mississippi and Virginia are pondering many other moves to maintain segregation.

There appears to have been a slackening of litigation to force desegregation and activities — such as economic sanctions — designed to discourage integration supporters.

IRREGULAR PATTERN

However, in an irregular pattern, integration continues to encroach gradually upon the Deep South.

Sponsors of the interposition doctrine hold that the federal government has only such powers as have been surrendered by the states, that the states have never surrendered the right to operate segregated schools, and the the U.S. Supreme Court exceeded its authority in holding public school segregation illegal.

Therefore, they contend, the states can interpose their sovereign power and declare the ruling to be void and of no effect.

Alabama has passed such a resolution, one is awaiting committee action in the South Carolina Legislature and one is ready for introduction in Georgia. In Virginia, a milder resolution, strongly protesting but not defying the court ruling, has been introduced.

PLAN TO CURB

Gov. Luther H. Hodges, who may call a special session of the North Carolina Legislature before next fall, also favors that possibility of curbing "assumption of authority" by the Supreme Court.

Interposition and other legislation to maintain segregation probably will be discussed Tuesday at a meeting called by Virginia Gov. Thomas B. Stanley. Attending will be governors Marvin Grifin of Georgia, J. P. Coleman of Mississippi, and George Bell Timmerman Jr. of South Carolina.

Georgia is moving toward a private school system. Administration bills to close public schools which are forced to integrate and make direct grants to students were unanimously passed in the Senate. They will encounter House opposition, but passage there also seems assured.

The Georgia Legislature also has before it bills to close state parks if segregation cannot be enforced, to prohibit mixed athletic contests and to revoke charters of cities which do not maintain segregated parks and other facilities.

PRIVATE SCHOOLS

At the direction of voters, the Virginia Legislature has called a constitutional convention on the proposal to give grants to students who attend private schools either because parents refuse to send them to integrated schools or because public schools are closed.

Other legislation pending includes bills in Georgia and Mississippi to require separate transportation waiting rooms despite a recent Interstate Commerce Commission order; a Mississippi proposal which could bar out-of-state attorneys in segregation cases; a proposed Alabama "freedom of choice" constitutional amendment to let parents say whether their children will attend integrated or segregated schools; and a South Carolina bill to remove the tax exemption on church property which is used for meetings by Communists or the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People.

Advertiser

LAWSUITS PENDING

There are a number of segregation lawsuits, most of them seeking school integration, pending in the various states. But there were few reports of recent new cases.

Use of economic sanctions by integration supporters apparently has been sporadic, and in only a few instances, organized. P. 24

Most of the targets of such tactics have been individual Negroes signing petitions seeking integrated schools or NAACP leaders.

However, the Falstaff Brewing Co., was boycotted for a time in Mississippi and in Georgia. Roy Harris of Augusta, States Rights Council leader, in his political newspaper, is urging boycott of Ford products because of activities of the Ford Foundation and the Fund for the Republic.

The Southern Gentlemen, a Louisiana prosegregation group of unknown strength, claims to have effectively boycotted several companies, including the Ford Motor Co.

COUNTER BOYCOTTS

In at least two instances, Negroes have fought economic pressures with counter boycotts. Such a move cut heavily into city bus patronage in Montgomery, Ala. and some Orangeburg, S. C., businesses are reported to have been hurt by loss of Negro business.

The segregation situation is quiet for the time being in Louisiana, where Gov. - elect Earl Long pledged to maintain it, and in Florida where the theme of officials is gradualism.

The situation also is calm in Tennessee, where courts have ordered some school integration by next fall; and Arkansas, where some schools already have ended segregation and others are under orders to do so.

Oklahoma and Kentucky are moving quietly toward full compliance with the court rulings against segregation.

Dixie Legislators Urge Interposition

Ford v. Finds

Associated Press

A Mississippi house member called on states yesterday to follow the theory of interposition and declare the Supreme Court's decision on school integration "illegal and invalid and of no force and effect" within their borders.

In an hour-long speech in the House, Rep. John Bell Williams (D-Miss.) said not only is the question of segregation involved but also the question whether the court has the right to amend the Constitution" and usurp the sovereignties of the 48 states.

"The time is at hand when the states must reassert their constitutional rights or suffer their own destruction," Williams declared.

"The zero hour for state governments has arrived, and it might well be the zero hour also for our republican form of government."

(Interposition is a maneuver by the South designed to attain the opposite end it ostensibly seeks. It proposes a constitutional amendment that would forbid racial segregation in schools.

(Interposition proponents in the South expect the amendment would fail to secure the approval of the 36 states needed. The effect of this in, their view, would be to affirm that segregation is constitutional, thereby invalidating the Supreme Court decision for desegregation.)

Williams said he had heard many persons say they favor interposition but oppose nullification.

"The very purpose of interposition is to nullify," he declared. "If that is not to be the purpose, the act of interposition becomes merely an expression of disfavor and is meaningless. Interposition is the action by which a state attempts to nullify."

If states are to preserve their sovereignties, if they are to preserve the constitution, Williams said, "they must interpropose and declare the black Monday decision (the court's decision on school segregation) to be illegal and invalid and of no force and effect within the territorial limits of their respective jurisdictions."

Williams was joined by a string of Southerners in one of the most vigorous house floor discussions of the year.

"Crowd," "Crew" and "Outfit" were some of the words used to describe the Supreme Court justices.

Only one Congressman, Rep. Charles A. Boyle (D-Ill.), defended the court. He said he felt it was his duty as a member of the legal profession and of the House Judiciary Committee.

"I don't think we win anything when we deprecate the Supreme Court with a lot of loose language," Boyle said. "That court is recognized the world over as the loftiest judicial body in the world."

Rep. John J. Flynt Jr. (D-Ga.) called on other states to join Georgia in interposition," "to resist the illegal encroachment on our sovereign powers. We know we are right. We shall not falter. We shall not fail."

Rep. Thomas G. Abernethy (D-Miss.) said he does not believe members of the Supreme Court should be appointed to that body within five years of having served in a political job. Chief Justice Warren was a Republican Governor of California when appointed to the court.

McKeldin Expects State To Solve Desegregation

Gov. Theodore R. McKeldin said yesterday he is confident Maryland will work out the desegregation problem in as good a fashion as the earlier settlers of the state did religious freedom.

He said the state tried religious freedom "somewhat reluctantly, perhaps as reluctantly as we are now trying desegregation. But try it we did, and it proved to be in line with the march of history."

The Governor told the Maryland State Society of Washington that "in the matter of desegregation my pride in Maryland is not that it has given us no trouble, but that we have tried to meet that trouble in a fashion worthy of civilized men."

Associated Press

Pictured as they met yesterday in Richmond, Va., to dsicuss their fight against integrated schools, are (from left) Gov. J. P. Coleman of Mississippi; Gov. Marvin Griffin of Georgia; Gov. George Bell Timmerman Jr. of South Carolina; and Gov. Thomas B. Stanley of Virginia. They agreed to take unified action on interposition.

Integration Battle Gets Hotter in Va.

Afro-American Sat. 9-8-56

Baltimore Md.

By RUFUS WELLS

P. 3

RICHMOND

While Virginia legislators try to find a way to get around the Supreme Court's desegregation decree, NAACP attorneys pushed plans looking toward eventual integration in schools throughout the state.

After outlining the status of pending school suits in the state, Spottswood W. Robinson III, of the NAACP staff, was asked about plans to meet any laws enacted by the current special session of the General Assembly.

* * *

MR. ROBINSON explained that no one would venture to say what type of legislation would come out of the General Assembly at the current session, but the attorney added:

"But I can say unequivocally, without any hesitation, that we will fight any laws that seek to curb or have the effect of restricting the civil rights of citizens of Virginia that are enacted by the General Assembly at this or any other session."

Public schools throughout the state will open on a racially segregated basis next week, some 27 months after the historic May 17, 1954, ruling outlawing jim-crow public schools.

By adopting a policy of delay, state officials have managed to forestall implementation of the high court ruling for more than two years. But now that their time is running short, the politicians are of differing opinions as to which plan should be adopted.

As the legislators sought a way around the momentous school desegregation decision, school officials in five Virginia municipalities found themselves before the guns of the Federal courts and in imminent danger of being cited for contempt.

* * *

IN CHARLOTTESVILLE Tuesday, Federal Judge John Paul agreed to stay his decision in an appeal to the U.S. Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals.

Judge Paul granted a motion by attorneys for the school board which will delay his desegregation order past the Sept. 4 opening date of schools. Mr. Robinson, NAACP attorney, had asked that the motion be denied.

"Under established practice, in lawsuits, I have no other course," the jurist said in granting the motion.

* * *

DESPITE THIS delay, Judge Paul warned the school board it would be unwise not to plan for desegregation in the meantime.

He told former Gov. John S. Battle, an attorney for the school board, that if the appellate court upholds his decision he will "look with less patience" upon the board if it has marked time in the intervening month.

While a motion filed by the state, similar to that filed and denied in the Arlington school desegregation suit, will be argued in the Newport News school suit Nov. 17, the trial date has been set for Feb. 11, 1957.

* * *

IN THE NORFOLK school suit, a pretrial conference has been set for Sept. 7, at wrich time the trial date for that case will be set, according to present plans.

A hearing in the Prince Edward County school suit is scheduled before Judge Sterling Hutcheson in U. S. District Court in Richmond on Nov. 14.

An injunction against the Arlington County School Board and a desegregation order has been stayed pending an appeal by the state to the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals. The appeal is still pending.

Gov. Thomas B. Stanley is advocating the withdrawal of funds from localities that permit desegregation of their public schools, either voluntarily or under a court order.

A group of legislators, headed by State Sen. Charles Fenwick, are supporting a modified version of the pupil assignment plan originally devised by the Gray Commission and later abandoned.

* * *

MEANWHILE, THE General Assembly which convened in special session Monday to consider bills to circumvent the Supreme Court school ruling, adjourned late the same day until Tuesday after Labor Day.

When the assembly reconvenes it will hold public hearings on Tuesday, then consider the 61 bills aimed at overcoming the high court's ban on segregated schools.

Included in the bills designed to hold the color line in Virginia schools were these proposals:

Del. W. C. Cleaton of Mecklenberg and six other delegates put in a House bill that would prohibit any city, county or town from levying taxes for the maintenance or operation of any desegregated school.

* * *

DEL. JOHN BOATWRIGHT of Buckingham submitted a resolution which would have the assembly express itself as being "unalterably opposed to mixing the races in the public schools."

Sen. E. O. McCue of Charlottesville introduced two bills that would give the General Assembly direct control of the public school system.

This plan envisions continued segregation in schools with the assembly the buffer between local school authorities and the Federal courts.

In the interim, five of the seven members of the state board of education in a closed door session Wednesday indorsed the original Gray plan and opposed the plan supported by Governor Stanley.

Tyranny Replaces Law

38a Va.

A SET OF SEVEN bills that will make it a crime to contest laws that discriminate against non-white people only was passed last week by the Virginia Assembly.

We have not read the texts of the several acts in detail, but from the explanations of their aims that have been made public, they reach the bottom of legislative inanities.

P. 8

What the legislators have done is to erect a structure on a sand bar, using as timber the epitome of bigotry, arrogance, and tyranny.

In effect, the legislation—stripped of verbiage and reduced to its simplest terms—aims to do these things:

Norfolk, Va

(1) Abolish every personal and individual right guaranteed to Negroes, by the United States Constitution, including freedom of speech, the right to peaceably assemble, the right to petition, and a free press.

Sat. 9-29-56

(2) Make it a crime for Negroes to undertake to contest the new legislation which is designed to nullify the Supreme Court's school decision.

(3) To involve lawyers in disbarment proceedings, or subject to criminal prosecution, if they engage to serve clients seeking to establish their rights under the U. S. Constitution and the constitution of Virginia.

(4) To stop any further complaints against racial discrimination in any form and against public school discrimination in particular, from being filed in a federal court.

(5) To make it unlawful for non-whites to have access to the courts on any question of civil rights.

That is a frank, plain, condensed statement of what the Virginia General Assembly enacted a new set of laws to accomplish.

It was naively stated in press reports that the laws would also apply to the Defenders of States Rights, White Citizens Councils, and so forth, as well as to the NAACP. That would not happen. Some of the men who passed the laws are sponsors and members of the Defenders and similar organizations. Some of the judges who would enforce the laws are members of the same organizations and have been prominent speakers at organizational meetings of the Defenders of State Rights.

What would happen to a case that came before Virginia's Judge Gravatt, for instance:

Suppose a case, based on these new repressive laws, were to come before such judges? It is beyond belief that they would administer justice impartially.

The seventh of these punitive laws was conjured up by a 32-year old Delegate representing Alexandria.

He is a native of New Orleans, and a former government worker in Washington.

His gimmick, strenuously opposed by Senator BREEDEN of Norfolk, and Senator SPONG, of Portsmouth, (both of whom supported all the rest of the bills) sets up a gestapo of 10 men who have the power to subpoena anyone, from garbage collectors to bankers, in its efforts to find a way to arrest and imprison persons who hold memberships in organizations which the gestapo does not like.

MRS. KATHRYN STONE, a member of the Assembly's House of Delegates from Arlington, Va., who alone spoke out against the anti-NAACP bills, was never more right than when she told her hate-filled colleagues: "You are tossing the Bill of Rights, in whose drafting other Virginians had so vital a part, right out of the window."

Under the impact of emotion, ignorance, and (in some cases) an almost pathologic hatred, Virginia's lawmakers have placed tyranny over law.

Virginia's 'Cosmopolis'

Post & Times Herald Washington, D.C. 10-11-56

Integration Is Progressing in Norfolk

By Felton A. Gibson

Newspaper and Magazine Columnist

SOME PHASES of integration are working successfuly in Norfolk and parts of Tidewater Virginia. Norfolk could become—because of its uniqueness—one of the first cities in the state to accomplish school integration. One educator explains it this way:

"Norfolk is more cosmopolitan than any other city in the state. Its population is drawn from all parts of the world. Most of the people are probably accustomed to integrated schools, jobs, seating on transportation systems, and use of other public facilities. . . . They have come here from everywhere, either to take private jobs, as members of the Armed Forces, or to work at Government installations."

On Jan. 9, when the Gray Commission Plan was put to a referendum vote, the Norfolk area favored the plan by a 1678-vote margin out of 23,404 votes cast. The Gray Commission Plan, which called for a constitutional convention for amendment of Section 141 to permit use of state funds for private nonsectarian schools, would probably have permitted integrated classrooms.

Results of the referendum showed that many precincts in new residential areas appeared to favor maintaining the current segregated public school system. Votes against the plan were interpreted by many as acceptance and willingness to abide by the Supreme Court's May 17, 1954, decision that segregated schools are unconstitutional.

INTEGRATION in many other areas is already a fact in Norfolk.

The Norfolk Minister's Association integrated its membership more than two years ago. It has sponsored two annual city-wide preaching missions in the city's municipal auditorium, at which guest speakers have been Negro and white. Music was furnished by an interracial choir composed of singers from white and Negro churches. Seating was unsegregated at all meetings, with few of the 33,000 seats vacant. There were standees most nights.

For some time, Government and military installations have been integrated, both job-wise and in their eating, recreation and entertainment facilities.

Immediately following the Supreme Court's statement on segregated transportation seating facilities, Norfolk's bus system—the Virginia Transit Co. — dropped its practice of racial seating. Not one incident has occurred as a result.

As recently as Aug. 29, Negroes were granted free and unrestricted use of all facilities at the Portsmouth City Park Golf Course. Inasmuch as it is a city park, Negroes also are now using the tennis courts and the picnic area, and Negro children are using the playground facilities.

The Oceana Golf Course, a few miles from Norfolk, has been open to Negroes for unrestricted play for some time.

AS FOR integration in the schools, the Norfolk Catholic High School is in its second year of successful interracial classes. There are 16 Negro pupils attending classes this year. There were 11 last year. Three Negro pupils are attending each of two Catholic elementary schools. This conforms to Diocesan policy which applies to all of Virginia. No friction or resentment has been exhibited in any of these schools.

For a number of years, Norfolk's school administrators and teachers in special fields have met interracially without friction. For the last two summers, a fully integrated teachers' workshop has been held in Norfolk. They have been sponsored by the Norfolk School Board in cooperation with the Extension Department of the University of Virginia.

Negro graduate students attend Norfolk Division of the College of William and Mary, study at the Norfolk Museum Workshops, have full use of the Norfolk Public Library, and can enroll in some private schools offering special field courses.

The Parent-Teacher Association Councils have been working together for some time. Negro and white members attend each other's workshops. The general view of Council members is in favor of integration—on a gradual scale. Officials of both councils speak of their "wonderful race relations."

The Norfolk Women's Council for Interracial Cooperation has been doing a featured series of interracial projects for several years. Last year the council sponsored an interracial kindergarten for the full year at one of the local churches. This year's planned project features book reviews, movies and panel discussions on "Rearing Children of Good Will."

THE WOMEN'S COUNCIL was one of the first groups to appear before the recent special session of the General Assembly. Its spokesmen objected to Gov. Stanley's plan to withhold funds from schools which went ahead with integration. Their feeling is summed up in the statement they read to the General Assembly:

"Our Norfolk school administrators have stated that they can operate our schools efficiently in compliance with Federal law. Our City Council and local legislators ask for local autonomy. We join them in asking for the right to administer our schools according to our local needs. In this way our school board can make long-range plans for operating schools so that all of our children will have the best possible training.

"We, the Women's Council for Interracial Cooperation, do not set fires or burn crosses but we are typical of thousands and thousands of Virginia citizens who value the security of the public schools over and above racial prejudice."

The Norfolk City Council resolved its objection to the Governor's plan on Sept. 2. The Norfolk School Board concurred. There are many Norfolkians who feel that integration could be accomplished here without undue stress because of Norfolk's uniqueness of location and its heterogeneous population.

Race Law Arrest Stirs Heated Arlington Parley

Evening Star Oct. 11-2-56

The arrest of a white woman for sitting beside a Negro and a heated argument that nearly ended in fistcuffs brought the Arlington candidates' meetings to a hectic conclusion last night.

Held at Jefferson Junior High School, the meeting was the fifth sponsored by the Arlington Committee for Candidates' Meetings. About 300 persons attended.

Arrested was Miss Faith Bissell, 43, a librarian with the National Research Council. Her address was given as the 3000 block of North Third street, Arlington. Chief of Police William Fawver and another Arlington policeman asked her to move out of a section of the hall reserved for Negroes. When she refused, they arrested her and took her to headquarters.

Charged with violating a State law requiring segregation at public assemblies, she was released on $100 bond for an Arlington Court appearance today.

Case Continued

When she appeared in court, Judge Paul D. Brown continued her case until November 13 to allow her to get a lawyer. Schools Supt. T. Edward Rutter, representing the county school board, agreed to the continuance.

Miss Bissell told reporters she had decided to make a test case "as a matter of personal conscience." She said she attended the previous candidates' meeting, after Attorney General Lindsay Almond's ruling holding the school board responsible for segregating the meetings.

"I was horrified," she said, "to see those Negro citizens sitting in segregated seats."

Miss Bissell said that before the Attorney General's ruling, the meetings had been integrated. "We're not making progress by doing this, we're regressing," she said. Miss Bissell said she is a member of the League of Women Voters, but that her action had no connection with that organization.

A native of New Jersey, Miss Bissell came to Washington in 1941 and moved to Arlington in 1951. She said she had not "made a test case of any racial issue" before.

Segregation Law Applied

The sponsors of the meetings had been advised that the sessions fell under the terms of the statute after the Defenders of State Sovereignty and Individual Liberities had requested a ruling from the State Attorney General. Accordingly, the group set the first four rows on one side of the auditorium as space for Negroes.

Miss Bissell sat in the third at first. When a Negro man came in and sat in the first row, Miss Bissell promptly moved up to sit beside him.

Miss Bissell is not a member of the Arlington chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and her action was not connected in any way with the NAACP, chapter president Thomas Monroe said later.

Both candidates for the County Board, Dr. L. H. Blevins of Arlington Independent Movement and Curtis E. Tuthill of Arlingtonians for a Better County, said later they regretted the incident.

The second uproar came later in the meeting during a question-and-answer period. A real estate man, G. A. Metzler, jr., of 3419 North Randolph street, asked Mr. Tuthill to "tell me directly, do you believe in integration?"

Mr. Tuthill said he would support the Constitution and laws of the United States and of Virginia. Mr. Metzler, rising and shaking his fist, shouted that he had not been given a direct answer.

When meeting officials asked him to sit down, Mr. Metzler advanced toward the stage, pounded it repeatedly with his fist and demanded an answer. When members of the audience hooted at him to "sit down," Mr. Metzler shouted, "I could make Demosthenes look sick, if I wanted to." Several members of the audience came up to him and after a heated exchange, including threats to beat him, order was restored.

Dr. Blevins, announcing that "tonight, I'm going to be a stinker," charged that his opponent "has many top NAACP supporters." He named a number of members of the Arlingtonians for a Better County group who, he said, are members or supporters of the NAACP and asked, "will they stay in the background once this campaign is over, or will they be appointed to high positions," on county bodies?

Promise on Appointments

Some of these supporters, Dr. Blevins said, "want their children to go to school with colored children." He asked, "Does Dr. Tuthill disavow these agitators? With all the ranting and raving my opponent has done, why hasn't he brought out these skeletons in the closet?"

The AIM candidate added, "I promise not to appoint a pro-integrationist to the school board and I will not appoint a Negro to county office."

Mr. Tuthill said that the 150 members of the ABC Council "represent all sections and points of view" in Arlington.

Virginia Loses Move To Segregate Parks

Evening Star Washington, D.C.

Supreme Court Refuses to Hear Lease Plan

Sun. 10-28-56

By MARY LOU WERNER

Virginia's hopes for getting around segregation decisions with lease arrangements were shattered today after the Supreme Court refused to review the Seashore State Park case.

By denying the review, the high court upheld a decision which bars lease of the park for operation on a segregated basis. It may even bar sale of State property—parks, schools or other public facilities—for use on a segregated basis.

The Seashore State Park suit had been regarded as a key case in the State's efforts to maintain segregation in its parks and other facilities. It had been speculated that school buildings might be leased to private groups and operated on a segregated basis—thus circumventing the Supreme Court decision barring racial segregation in public schools.

The Seashore case developed when the State sought to lease the park to a private group.

Stipulation Banned

Federal Judge Walter E. Hoffman held that the State could not bar Negroes from the park and that it could not be leased in such a way that would result in racial segregation.

Judge Hoffman ruled that the State could not do indirectly what it had no right to do directly. "In short," he said, "the power to sell or lease (public property) must not include the power to discriminate against members of any race."

Rather than operate an integrated park, the State has kept Seashore, near Virginia Beach, closed for the last two summers. The State's other eight parks—including one for Negroes—have remained open, since there has been no effort to push integration at any of them. State leaders have indicated, however, that all parks will be closed if they are directed to integrate.

Judge Hoffman's ruling was upheld last April by the United States Supreme Court of Appeals, and a review was denied yesterday by the Supreme Court.

Dormant Status Anticipated

The Associated Press reported that Virginia Attorney General J. Lindsay Almond, jr., had the following comment when notified in Richmond of the Supreme Court's action:

"It might safely be assumed, I think, that the recreational facilities of Seashore State Park will remain dormant. Under our system of government, unfortunately, there is no appeal from the Supreme Court of the United States."

State Parks Commissioner Randolph Odell said his office had "nothing definite in the way of plans for the park," but indicated some decision might be reached by the Board of Conservation and Development at a meeting later this month.

JUDGE WILLIAMS had dismissed the suit. It was brought by a group of colored South Carolinians to enjoin racial segregation in Edisto Beach State Park near Charleston. They had been refused admission to the park solely because they are colored.

The appeals court said "in view of the fact that the park had been closed by act of the legislature, there was no basis for the issuance of an injunction with regard to its use."

Park suit dead, Va. court rules

Afro-American Baltimore Md. 10-27-56

RICHMOND, Va. (NNPA) — The Fourth United States Circuit Court of Appeals upheld the decision of the Federal District Court in Charleston, S.C., dismissing a suit to enjoin racial segregation in a park the State had closed.

Acting with unusual speed, the three-judge court heard arguments Monday and rendered its decision Tuesday morning. Usually several days or weeks elapse between argument and opinion.

The appellate court agreed with Ashton H. Williams, a South Carolina Federal judge, that the case was hypothetical since the park was closed.

2 School Suit Appeals Slated

Evening Star Washington D.C.

RICHMOND, Oct. 9 (AP).—Appeals by two Virginia communities from school desegregation orders will be heard in Baltimore November 27 by the United States 4th Circuit Court of Appeals.

Tues. 10-9-56

The communities are Charlottesville and Arlington.

The Charlottesville School Board and its school superintendent are appealing an order of the Federal District Court which ordered desegregation last September in the city's schools. A stay was granted until hearing of the appeal.

The appeal from Arlington, made by the school board and superintendent, stems from a Federal District Court order requiring high school desegregation January 31, 1957, and elementary school desegregation by the beginning of next school year.

Virginia's General Assembly has passed a series of bills aimed at holding the color line in the public schools. The bills were passed since the decisions involving Charlottesville and Arlington.

Va. White Woman Draws Fine For Sitting Near Negro Man

Bell New Orleans, La. 9-16

Sat. 11-17-56

Arlington, Va. -- (ANP) -- A white woman arrested for sitting beside a Negro at a meeting last week has decided to make a test case of a new Virginia segregation law "as a matter of personal conscience."

Miss Faith Bissell, a 43-year-old librarian, was arrested at a Committee for Candidates Meeting here when she sat beside a Negro at the meeting where 300 persons attended.

Miss Bissell was jailed, according to Police Chief William Fawver, when he asked her to move out of a section of the auditorium reserved for Negroes and she refused.

She said she is a member of the League of Women Voters, but that her action had no connection with the organization.

Meanwhile, Thomas Monroe, president of the Arlington chapter of the NAACP, said that Miss Bissell is not a member of the civil rights group and that her action had no connection with the group.

She Sat Beside Negro at Debate; Virginia White Woman Fined $15

Herald P. 1B Miami, Fla

ARLINGTON, Va. —(AP)— A white librarian was convicted Thursday of violating a Virginia segregation law by sitting beside a Negro at a public political meeting here.

Miss Faith Bissell, 43, was fined $15 by Judge Paul D. Brown of Arlington County Court. Her attorney, Edmund D. Campbell, appealed to the Circuit Court which convenes Dec. 17.

Campbell said he did not argue the case — admittedly a test case — because if he had won in County Court it would have foreclosed a possible Supreme Court ruling. The state could not have appealed because the offense is a misdemeanor.

Miss Bissell was arrested Nov. 1 when she sat down in a section of the Jefferson Junior High School Auditorium which had been reserved for Negroes.

The occasion was a debate by candidates for the Arlington County Board.

In line with an opinion by Atty. Gen. J. Lindsay Almond Jr. the auditorium had been divided for a segregated audience.

Almond held that political debates fall under the state statute requiring segregation at a "public assemblage."

Issues in Virginia

Post & Times Herald

Numerous issues apart from the presidential and congressional contests will command the attention of Virginia voters on Tuesday. In addition to local matters in Arlington and Falls Church, three proposed amendments to the state constitution will be presented for approval. One of these would prohibit members of the State Corporation Commission from accepting free transportation and telephone service—a practice already discarded but which it would be well to forbid by law. A second amendment would permit the General Assembly to redefine the personal property tax so that cities and counties might abandon or partially abandon this levy. The personal property tax is an obnoxious and much abused means of raising funds, but it also is an important source of local revenues. Approval of the amendment would not repeal it, but would encourage communities to develop other and fairer means of taxation. Finally, a third amendment would extend the term of the Governor until the moment after his successor has been inaugurated so as to avoid the possibility of an interregnum. We think all three amendments merit a "yes" vote.

In Falls Church three bond issues—for a $450,000 municipal building, for a $210,000 public library building and for a $595,000 street and drainage improvement program—will be before the voters. These public works are important to enable Falls Church to meet its responsibilities as a city, and we hope they will be approved. In Arlington there is a more controversial question in the referendum over whether to require that future bond issues be approved by a majority of voting property owners, or freeholders. This is a particularly touchy question in Arlington because some 45 per cent of the county's population consists of apartment dwellers. The argument that such persons pay no real estate taxes and hence do not pay their share of the cost of the bond issues they vote is superficially plausible but lacks real validity. Apartment dwellers pay real estate taxes through their rent, and many apartment dwellers in Arlington are long-term residents. To qualify their vote on bond issues would be, in effect, partially to disfranchise nearly half the population and perhaps greatly to inhibit needed public improvements. We think this proposal ought to be turned down.

Probably the greatest local interest in Arlington is centered on the contest between Dr. Lucas H. Blevins and Dr. Curtis E. Tuthill for a seat on the County Board. The struggle really is between the conservative Arlington Independent Movement (AIM), represented by Dr. Blevins, and the more liberal Arlingtonians for a Better County (ABC), represented by Dr. Tuthill, for control of the board; the remaining members consist of two ABC representatives, one AIM representative and a conservative Democrat. Dr. Tuthill has focused his attack on the part played by AIM members in promoting the legislation in Richmond which deprived Arlington of its elected school board. For his part, Dr. Blevins has sought to dissociate himself from the extremist Defenders of State Sovereignty and Individual Liberties, but he has acknowledged his support of the notorious and punitive Moncure bill.

INTEGRATION FOE GAINS IN VIRGINIA

New York Times 12-9-56

Attorney General Attracts State Leaders' Backing in '57 Race for Governor

Sun. 12-9-56

Special to The New York Times.

RICHMOND, Va., Dec. 8—Lindsay Almond Jr., Attorney General of Virginia and a strong foe of racial integration, emerged this week as the man most likely to be the next Governor of the state.

The election will not be held until next November, but in Virginia the Governorship often hinges on early decisions within the dominant conservative wing of the state Democratic party. This wing is aligned with United States Senator Harry F. Byrd.

Mr. Almond stayed out of the 1953 race reluctantly in favor of party harmony while Thomas B. Stanley, a wealthy furniture manufacturer, won a Democratic primary and a close election.

Several legislators helped Mr. Almond's cause this week. United States Representative Watkins Abbitt of Appromattox, one gubernatorial possibility, said he would not be a candidate next year. State Senator Armistead Boothe of Alexandria also discouraged his backers. The key announcement came when State Senator Garland Gray, a wealthy lumber man, said he had decided not to run. Mr. Gray was chairman of the legislative commission that studied means of retaining segregated schools.

Seeks to Avert Disunity

He said he and Mr. Almond both had worked to prevent integration and he wanted to forestall "a division among the proponents of segregated schools.

Lieut. Governor A. E. S. Stephens on Friday ended speculation that he might seek the Governorship by announcing he would run for re-election.

There were indications that the Byrd organization would support Mr. Almond, but no formal declarations were made.

Two other principal sources of opposition to the Almond candidacy are expected to develop. One would be a more liberal wing of the Democratic party. Staff Senator Robert Whitehead of Lovingston, who failed to obtain sufficient financial support to make the 1953 race, is considered its most likely candidate.

GOP Encouraged

The other opposition source is the Republican camp. It has been cheered by the victories of President Eisenhower in traditionally Democratic Virginia, by the two places it holds in the ten-man delegation to the United States House of Representatives, by an unexpectedly strong race its candidate made in the First Congressional District last month, and by the last gubernatorial election in which the Republican candidate had a bare 45 per cent of the vote.

The Republicans, under a new state chairman, I. Lee Potter of Arlington, are seeking a strong candidate for next year. Their 1953 standard-bearer, State Senator E. Ted Dalton, is regarded as the most likely prospect but has announced he did not plan to run again.

For years Mr. Almond has been arguing in various courts for retention of segregated public schools. He is a prominent Lutheran layman and a member of the Board of American Missions of the United Lutheran Church in America.

Staff Photo

FAITH BISSELL

... tests segregation law

Segregation Act Upheld In Test Case

Post & Times Herald Fri. 11-16-56

Washington, D.C.

An Arlington white woman through her attorney, took the first legal step yesterday in testing a Virginia law requiring segregated seating at public assemblages.

Faith Bissell, 33-year-old librarian, was fined $15 in Arlington County Court for sitting in a Negro section at a recent political meeting in Thomas Jefferson Junior High School.

Her attorney, Edmund D. Campbell, noted an appeal to the guilty verdict of Judge Paul D. Brown. The case will move next into Arlington Circuit Court. A date for trial there is expected to be set on Dec. 17.

Miss Bissell, of 3007 N. 3d st., was arrested Nov. 1 when she refused to leave a section reserved for Negroes at a political meeting sponsored by the Arlington Committee for Candidates' Meetings.

Miss Bissell said later she deliberately sat in the Negro section to test the validity of the Virginia code requiring segregation at "public assemblages."

Enforcement began last month after Attorney General J. Lindsay Almond Jr. ruled the joint candidates' meetings in Arlington were public assemblages as described by law and should therefore be segregated. For several years, the meetings were held on a nonsegregated basis.

Campbell, who said he took Miss Bissell's case without fee, merely cross-examined four Commonwealth witnesses yesterday after iMss Bissell pleaded innocent. Campbell explained later that if he had argued and won the case, a test in a higher court could not have been made because the Commonwealth cannot appeal a misdemeanor.

Miss Bissell is free on $100 bond.

Arlington test case attracts wide attention

Afro-American Sat. 11-17-56 Baltimore, Md.

WASHINGTON

"The NAACP does not think anyone should be forced to attend segregated meetings, but we are not a party to Miss Faith Bissell's case."

Dr. Edwin B. Henderson, former D.C. school administrator and president of the Virginia State Conference of NAACP Branches, made the above statement in explaining the organization's position on the test case of Virginia's segregated seating law.

Miss Bissell, an Arlington resident, made the first step toward testing the controversial law, last Thursday, when she sat in the "colored" section of a political meeting at the Arlington Unitarian Church.

"I JUST wanted to test the law," Miss Bissell said at the time of her arrest after she sat next to Dr. J. B. Johnson of Arlington, Va.

Dr. Johnson was the only colored resident who agreed to sit in the segregated section in order to make the test, the AFRO learned.

Miss Bissell has been unavailable for comment since her action, but she has indicated to close associates that she intends to carry the test case to the Supreme Court, if necessary. Her attorney is Edmond Campbell of Washington.

DR. HENDERSON said the NAACP tried several years ago to get a test of the segregated seating requirements in Richmond but the State Attorney General ruled that NAACP meetings were not public.

"We are watching this case with interest" he said.

Arlington ministers are also reported to be preparing to challenge Attorney General Lindsay Almond's recent ruling that political meetings held in churches are public and should be segregated.

A city-wide meeting of ministers to protest the ruling was called recently by the Rev. Aaron Mackley pastor of Mt. Olivet Baptist Church. The Rev. Mackley said he called the meeting after the segregated pro-segregationist defender organization suggested that separate meetings be held in colored churches.

The Rev. Mackley said Wednesday that even though the elections are over, a committee of clergymen is still studying ways of protesting the ruling.

Stanley Hails Manifesto, Defends States' Rights

Evening Star, p A-13
Washington, D.C.

RICHMOND, Mar. 13 (AP).—Gov. Stanley indorses the anti-segregation manifesto signed by Senators and Representatives from 11 Southern States.

"The protest by such a large group of Senators and Congressmen," Gov. Stanley said, "emphasizes the seriousness of the usurpation of power (by the Supreme Court) and the urgency of corrective action."

The Governor expressed the hope that "the means employed will be effective in the protection of the rights of the States which have been threatened in so many instances, in and outside of the South, and which include the right of operating our public school systems."

Meanwhile, Senator Byrd, Democrat of Virginia, told reporters in Washington the Manifesto is "a part of the plan of passive resistance we are working for, and I hope and believe it will be an effective action."

Senator Robertson, Democrat of Virginia, said he thought it might "enlist the sympathetic consideration of those who believe in a dual form of Government and the preservation of the rights of the States and of the people."

Representative Smith, Democrat of Virginia, remarked that the manifesto "might have a sobering effect on the rest of the country and make them stop, look and listen."

The leading spokesman for Virginia's anti-organization Democrats, Delegate Robert Whitehead of Nelson County, praised the language of the manifesto.

He said it was "right in line" with a joint resolution he presented to the House of Delegates during the recent General Assembly session "as a substitute for the interposition resolution."

Merry-Go-Round

Herald
Miami, Fla.

Sen. Byrd Inspired Manifesto

Sun. 3-18-56

By DREW PEARSON

WASHINGTON — Untold story behind the Southern Manifesto attacking the Supreme Court is that most Southern senators signed it reluctantly.

PEARSON

Virginia's Sen. Harry Byrd, whose cherubic face belies his political prowess, mainly inspired the document and wangled his Dixie colleagues into signing it.

Chief resistance, surprisingly, came from two outspoken conservatives — Sens. Spessard Holland of Florida and Price Daniel of Texas.

They succeeded in toning down the original inflammatory language. The first draft scathingly denounced the Supreme Court's desegregation ruling as an "illegal and unconstitutional seizure of power by the nine men composing the court."

This was reduced to the simple charge that the verdict was a "clear abuse of judicial power." Other smouldering passages that were removed included such words as "flagrant and unjustifide" and "invasion of (state) sovereignty."

Holland and Daniel warned that the first draft was a declaration of anarchy. They also managed at the last minute to insert a calm paragraph acknowledging majority rule.

The Manifesto idea was concocted by Byrd, who had already gone out on a limb urging "passive resistance" to the Supreme Court decree. He wanted more company on the limb, so he got busy behind the scenes.

BYRD EASILY recruited South Carolina's unrepentant Dixiecrat, Sen. Strom Thurmond, to be his front man. Surprisingly, two Southern moderates, John Stennis of Mississippi and Sam Ervin of North Carolina, eagerly joined Thurmond in drafting the first angry Manifesto.

They quietly lined up what support they could, then presented the document as an accomplished fact to the rest of the Dixie senators.

Southerners were faced with a tacit ultimatum that they must sign it or be branded as pro-National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. With the temper of the South what it is today, the NAACP label is political poison below the Mason-Dixon line.

Alabama's Sen. Lister Hill, whose state is torn by racial strife, almost tripped over himself in his hurry to sign the manifesto. Another who wasted no time was Louisiana's Sen. Russell Long. They are running for re-election this year.

John Sparkman of Alabama hung back. So did Smathers of Florida.

Holland and Daniel, however, led the backstage fight against the Manifesto, but signed it along with the rest after watering down the language.

They warned that the document, at least in its original form, challenged the Consitution, itself. They also pointed out that the signers could do nothing about the Supreme Court decree, short of declaring civil war again.

Most Southerners who signed the Manifesto admitted privately that they were only adding fuel to an explosive situation.

Only Southerners who flatly refused to sign were Kefauver and Gore of Tennessee. Lyndon Johnson of Texas also did not sign. He stated that he was not asked to do so.

★ ★ ★

DISGRUNTLED Democrats, who had counted their parity chickens before they hatched, are blaming their Senate leader, Lyndon Johnson, for the farm bill's defeat.

It was a case of the Republicans' 66-year-old heart patient, they say, working harder than their own 47-year-old heart patient.

Eisenhower was busy on the phone lining up GOP votes for flexible supports, while Johnson was flying to Texas for rest and worrying about the natural gas fiasco.

The White House strategy was astute and shrewd. On top of this, Ike put through personal phone calls to the unpersuaded Republicans and turned on the charm. Result was an overwhelming GOP vote for flexible supports.

Benson's trade with the cotton-bloc senators was more than enough to catch the Democrats by surprise.

What time Johnson devoted to his duties, meanwhile, was spent fighting a rear-guard action on the natural gas bill. He all but ignored the farm bill while maneuvering the manipulating to hamstring the Senate lobby investigation.

Special Session Seen On Integration Issue

Evening Star Washington, D.C.

Gov. Stanley May Ask Return Of Lawmakers

Mar. 3-12-56

RICHMOND, Mar. 12 (AP).—Virginia lawmakers wondered today when their next call to Richmond will come. They have just ended a regular 60-day General Assembly session that produced significant legislation on many subjects—but failed to prescribe a clear-cut cure for the segregation problem.

Gov. Stanley's farewell message to the 140 Assembly members late Saturday indicated he may call the lawmakers into special session later to enact legislation aimed at avoiding compulsory integration of Negro and white pupils.

Two frequent critics of the administration sounded a caustic note on the handling of the school problem. Senator Ted Dalton, Republican leader from Radford, said the assembly had "failed to provide the legislation that will be needed in court." Delegate Robert Whitehead, anti-organization Democratic leader from Nelson County, said there was "inadequate and divisive leadership" in dealing with the problem.

One segregation measure that did pass was the Pope resolution against athletic integration at the high school level.

Resolution of Protest

Earlier, the Legislature had given rousing approval to a resolution of interposition voicing Virginia's protest against the Supreme Court's 1954 decision outlawing segregation in public schools. The resolution opposed what was described as "illegal encroachment" on States' rights and called for an amendment to the Federal Constitution to spell out the authority of the States to regulate their schools.

The Senate before adjournment directed its Courts of Justice Committee to prepare a report on the history and application of the historic doctrine which holds that a State may interpose its sovereignty between its people and the effect of a Federal order it deems an encroachment on State's rights.

The committee was authorized to have 50,000 copies printed for distribution to public officials, students and other interested persons. The report would be designed to inform other States and the public generally of the nature of Virginia's school problem.

During the closing hours of the session, a proposal popped up to tie in school funds with maintenance of segregation. But budget conferees discarded the suggestion and the State's $896 million appropriation bill for Commonwealth Operations the next two years quickly gained approval.

Funds Increased

The final bill actually was bigger than the original measure sent to the Senate, which cut it about a quarter of a million dollars.

The Conference Committee added $55,145 each year to the Senate increases of $130,000 and $180,000 for vocational education and the same amount of increase above previous Senate increases for pupil transportation.

It also added $55,800 to the appropriation for Confederate widows to increase their annual pensions from $480 to $600 a year. A $25,000 item stripped from the Game Commission's fish pond fund to finance a study of the commission was reinserted because the study resolution was killed.

A $50,000 sales tax study was authorized as evidence mounted that Virginia soon may join 33 other States that have the levy.

To Probe Milk Board

The solid line of defense for the Milk Commission was broken, too, as a resolution was rammed through to investigate the function of the 22-year-old agency that sets retail and wholesale prices. A tightened accounting system for milk distributors also was ordered.

The truckers were given their long-sought goal of a highway weight limit of 56,800 pounds. The present top is 50,000. They agreed to a 2-cent boost in fuel taxes in return for the increased limit.

The truckers' traditional enemy, the railroads, got something, too—permission to make short hauls by trucks between certain stations.

The legislature gave the go-ahead to a proposed $200 million bridge-tunnel to link the Eastern Shore to the Virginia mainland. The Chesapeake Bay project will be undertaken by the Bay Ferry Commission, whose membership was increased from 7 to 11.

More Unemployment Pay

Unemployment compensation was increased, but a controversy developed over a provision to deny benefits to workers who might be entitled to layoff pay from large manufacturers and other firms. The provision remained in the legislation, despite strong opposition of organized labor.

Citizens Await State's Move In Parks Case

Journal & Guide Sat. 4-21-56 Norfolk, Va.

Special to Journal and Guide

RICHMOND, Va.—Now that it has been made clear by Federal District court ruling that Virginia cannot expect to operate its recreation parks system on a segregated basis, citizens of the state are looking to officials to see exactly what their stands will be.

So far, following last week's District court upholding of a ban on lease of the Seashore state park for segregated use, state officials have been divided in their ideas of what the future of the parks system will be.

* * *

ATTORNEY GENERAL J. Lindsay Almond, yuite forthrightly said of the state's nine parks: "If we operate them, it has got to be on an integrated basis, or we stand to be sued with no hope of prevailing."

The state's plan, as sanctioned by Gov. Stanley, was to run eight of the state's park run eight of the state's parks exoludi n g Seashore) on a coming season. But the question arose as to whether the ruling of the District court, brought in the Seashore state park case, did not cover the entire system.

Journal & Guide

THIS QUESTION brought Mr. Almond's reply that the state could not hope to prevail if suit is brought against any other park charging racial discrimination.

Conservation Director Raymond V. Long, after a conference this week with Gov. Stanley, is expected to anpounce what the state's policy will be this season in regards to the operation or non-operation of Seashore State park.

IT IS GENERALLY felt that the parks department wants to consider the Seashore State park a separate matter and not involve the entire system. But Att'y General Almond has already pointed out the impracticality of assuming this position and now the state's citizens wait to see what move Virginia official-dom will make.

Regardless of its move, the state makes itself liable to litigation if any move other than full integration of park facilities is made, observers

'All citizens have right to use parks'

Afro-American p. Sat. 4-21-56 Baltimore, Md.

RICHMOND

Virginia cannot deny colored citizens use of State parks by leasing them to private operators.

This, was the ruling Monday of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit, in the Seashore Park case. The appellate court affirmed a ruling of the Federal District Court at Norfolk, enjoining the State of Virginia from leasing Seashore Park to a private operator unless all citizens are admitted without regard to color.

Monday's decision was a major defeat for the State in its battle to mantain racial segregation in the face of Supreme Court rulings ordering desegregation.

It is of special significance because many southern states had contemplated leasing public school property as a means of evading the high court decree prohibiting racial segregation in public schools.

In its decision handed down "It is perfectly clear under recent decisions that citizens have the right to the use of the public parks without discrimination on the grounds of race.

"And we think it equally clear that their right may not be abridged by the leasing of the parks with ownership retained by the states.

"And it is no grounds for abridging the right that the parks cannot profitably be operated on a non-segregated basis."

In the three-page opinion, the appeals court affirmed Judge Walter Hoffman's decree enjoining the state, its agents or lessess, from denying colored citizens, because of race "the right to use and enjoy the facilities" of the park.

* * *

HOFFMAN'S ORDER further provided that if the Commonwealth leased Seashore or any part of the park it must see that the rights of all races are protected.

The opinion quoted with approval federal district Judge Walter E. Hoffman's decision in granting an injunction to prevent the state from leasing the park except on a non-discriminatory basis.

Judge Hoffman had said:

"The short answer to the argument advanced by the defendants (the state's Department of Conservation and Development), that there is insufficient evidence to justify a prominent injunction based upon future threatened irreparable injuries, lies in the testimony of the director, Raymond V. Long.

* * *

ARGUMENTS IN the case were heard on Mar. 21st when NAACP attorneys Spotswood W. Robinson and Victor J. Ashe contended that the State Department of Conservation and Development planned by the lease of Seashore Park to continue to operate it as a governmental facility.

On the other hand, J. Lindsay Almond Jr., attorney general for the State of Virginia, contended that the park has not yet been leased and therefore no citizens' rights have been violated. He termed the lower court order prohibiting the leasing arrangements "confusing, too broad and indefinite."

Almond charged that the injunction granted by Judge Walter E. Hoofman was "based on mere conjectures, speculation and hypothetical threats."

Norfolk Man's Neighbors . . .

Journal + Guide

Protest Effort To Keep Area 'White'

Sat. 4-21-56 P. 1

Norfolk, Va.

By T. D. YOUNG

NORFOLK, Va.—"The language on that sign is a simple falsehood. It can't be true because that sign speaks only for the man who put it out there."

That was a typical comment coming from residents of the 1500 block of W. 40th street, as they told of their reaction to a large painted sign that was posted at 1512 W. 40th street. The sign appeared after Negro prospective home-buyers made inquiries in the neighborhood about homes listed for sale.

The wooden sign referred to was painted white with black lettering, easily read from a passing car. It stated:

"Notice, The people living on this street are very unhappy because colored want to move in here with us. We like to live to ourselves. We cannot be happy in any other invivement (sic)."

38. Va

IT SEEMS doubtful, however, that the sign spoke for more than one person, according to voluntary statements by residents of the neighborhood.

The person who says he put up the sign is J. W. Belvin, who owns several pieces of property in the block. He said he got "jittery" about the prospect of having Negro home-owners in the block. It was pointed out that are several Negro families within a half-block of Mr. Belvin's house. Nevertheless, he said he intends to put up more signs, with the hope of discouraging Negro buyers.

Journal + Guide

OTHER residents of that block believe the sign would offend any respectable buyers, white or Negro. Some said that it was a bad reflection and a false indication of how the people on that street feel. One owner, whose home is for sale, has to move to another climate for reasons of health. He said that Negroes would be equally welcome as buyers or neighbors on that street.

A small smear campaign has been going on sporadically since the first home went up for sale. Anonymous senders mailed clippings from Southern daily papers which attempt to discredit the integration movement. Another party, unknown, left copies of a national Negro newspaper and a popular magazine on a porch late at night. A note attached said, "Compliments of the N.A.A.C.P." It was obviously not sent by that organization.

The Lamberts Point neighborhood is attractive, with neat lawns and well-kept homes.

Virginia Loses Appeal For Segregated Park

World-Telegram Sun 4-9-56

By the United Press

RICHMOND, Va., April 9.—The fourth U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals today turned down Virginia's effort to lease seashore state park for private racially-segregated operation.

The ruling turned down the state's appeal to dismiss a lower court injunction against the leasing.

New York

The appeals court said "under recent decisions (of the U.S. Supreme Court) citizens have the right to the use of public parks in the state without discrimination on the ground of race."

Wash. 4-9-56

"We think it equally clear that this right 'may not be abridged by the leasing of the parks with ownership retained in the state."

Negroes obtained an injunction against the leasing of the park, near Norfolk. The injunction was granted by District Judge Walter Hoffman in Norfolk.

Bias Laid to Hotel By Queens Woman

Bklyn Eagle

A Queens woman today filed charges with the State Commission Against Discrimination accusing a Hot Springs, Va., resort hotel of rejecting her reservation request "solely because of my being of the Jewish faith."

Wed. 6-6-56

In her complaint, Mrs. David Kaplan, of 32-33 88th St., Jackson Heights, said she applied for reservations at the Homestead Hotel on April 12 and soon received a letter turning down her request. In the letter, Fay Ingalls, president of the Homestead, explained that the hotel was booked solid for the summer.

New York

However, Mrs. Kaplan alleges, a similar reservation request made by someone else on the same day was accepted.

Her complaint against the Homestead's "unlawful discriminatory practice" is the first filed with the commission against an out-of-state hotel. Mrs. Kaplan filed under the State Anti-Discrimination Law because her servation was processed through the hotel's New York City booking office.

Va. Democrats Adopt Platform on Segregation

Eagle Thurs. P. 1

Thurs. 5-24-56

Tulsa, Okla.

Warn That Heart and Core of White Race is at Stake

RICHMOND, Va., (ANP- — The Virginia State Democratic Convention last week adopted a platform which calls for the "right of separation of the races in our schools and all institutions involving personal and social relations."

The convention adopted the platform after listening to speeches full of talk of "mongrelization of the races" and warnings that the "heart and core of the white race is at stake."

Eagle

Most bitter of the speakers was Committee Chairman Albrook, who said the issue is not so much whether white children and Negro children will go to school together.

"The fundamental issue," he cried, "is whether the Anglo-Saxon race is to become a mongrel race."

P. 4

The convention's platform stated:

"The Democratic Party is particularly proud of the manner in which our state has met and continues to meet the crisis in public education created by the segregation decisions of the Supreme Court. In the calm and manner traditional to North Carolina, the governor and the advisory committee on education, we have attempted to solve the problems we face.

"The Democratic Party believes in the preservation of the rights and liberties of the citizens of the state. . . .As we interpret the Constitution of the U.S., this includes the right of separation of the races in our schools and all institutions involving social and personal contact . . ."

Some opposition developed to the platform but it was quickly drowned in the overwhelming pro-segregation sentiment.

Declined to review a case involving segregation in a Virginia state park which the state has kept closed two years in the face of a lower court ruling it must be open equally to all races.

This action by the Supreme Court leaves in effect the lower court ruling that Virginia may not operate or lease its Seashore State Park under any arrangement which would discriminate against Negroes. Virginia has appealed the lower court ruling and asked that it be reversed.

Ruling May Keep Virginia Park Closed Permanently

Washington Post 5-26-56 Chicago, Ill.

WASHINGTON — (ANP) — The Seashore State Park in Virginia which closed two years ago rather than admit Negroes, may never open again according to Virginia Attorney General G. Lindsay Almond.

This decision was made after the United States Supreme Court upheld the ruling of a lower court last Monday prohibiting the lease of the park to anyone who desires to operate it on a discriminatory basis.

The lower court's decision remained valid after the high court refused to review the case. When this decision was announced, the Virginia Attorney General in good faith said he safely assume that "the recreational facilities of Seashore State Park will remain dormant."

FOUR SUE

The case was initiated by four Negroes — Lavinia G. Tate, Samuel R. Robinson, Leon A. Woodhouse and Otis B. Watts — who were denied admission to the park.

The State closed the park but sought to lease it to a private group to be operated as it saw fit.

Federal Judge Walter E. Hoffman held that the state could not bar Negroes from the park, and it could not lease it in a way that the lessee could operate it on a segregated basis.

PARKS OPEN

While the Seashore Park, near Virginia Beach, was closed for the past two summers, the other eight state parks, including one Negro park, were kept open since there has been no effort to push integration in them.

State officials hinted that all parks might be closed if they are forced to integrate.

State Park Commissioner Randolph Odell reportedly announced that his office had no definite plans for the parks. He stated, however, that the Board of conservation and Development might offer some recommendations at a meeting to be held later this month.

JUDGE RULES

The state cannot do directly or indirectly what it has no right to do itself, ruled Judge Hoffman.

"In short," he added, "the power to sell or lease (public property) must not include the power to discriminate against members of any race."

The park case was quite significant in Virginia's effort to maintain segregation in parks and other public facilities. It has been speculated that the State might lease the schools to private groups who would be permitted to operate them on a segregated basis thereby circumventing the Supreme Court decision barring racial segregation.

At Secluded Conference—

Post-Herald

Negro Leaders Seek Way To Ease Racial Tension

Lynchburg, Va. P. 3

Lynchburg 3-8-56

BY JAMES DANIEL
Post-Herald Correspondent

WASHINGTON, March 7 — A group of top Negro leaders held a two-day conference at a private Virginia vacation lodge last week and considered how to restore normal relations between white and Negro Southerners.

No publicity was given the meeting and none apparently was planned. But an interview with one of the participants in the conference developed a summary of the discussions.

The first point agreed upon by the Negro leaders was that for the past six or seven months it has become increasingly difficult for Negroes and whites to discuss their points of difference.

One conference participant said that throughout the South it was as if the white and Negro communities had "lost contact."

On the Negroes' side they feel they no longer can talk with people who can really speak for the white community.

The Negro leaders attending the conference included Ralph Bunche of the UN, Roy Wilkins of the NAACP, Rep. William Dawson of Chicago, A.M.E. Bishop Frank Reed of South Carolina, William Trent of the National Negro College Fund, Willard Townsend of the AFL-CIO, and a number of Negro educators, businessmen and editors.

The group discussed the Authurine Lucy case and the mistake made in accusing the University of co-operating with a mob. It was decided to recommend shelving her case for some months to see what luck would be had with other student applicants.

The conferees discussed a story appearing in The New York Herald Tribune which quoted Dr. O. C. Carmichael in a way indicating that other suitable Negro students might be admitted.

The Negro leaders were told by one of their number that they shouldn't expect to win every battle, that they would have some victories and some defeats and must not get desperate if one issue went against them.

Quite a debate was held over the move of Rep. Adam Clayton Powell to tie a desegregation rider to federal aid to education. Powell originally proposed no federal funds to a state with segregated schools. He amended this to say no funds to a segregated state unless the Justice Department found it was taking steps to comply with the Supreme Court order.

The big labor union lobbies in Washington are upset with Powell now because they want federal school construction aid so they can tie their "prevailing wage" rider onto the bill and so jack up Southern construction wages. Powell has tried to make a deal with the White House to save his face, without success.

The tentative thought of the conference was that the unpopularity Negroes are getting as a result of blocking federal school aid may be unnecessary, because federal aid to schools probably wouldn't pass anyhow.

The conference took up the Montgomery bus boycott. It was reported that social scientists from a Negro college are making a record of how the boycott is operating. They also considered white boycotts. It was reported that a beer company is being boycotted for having given $1000 to the NAACP to try to drum up Negro customers.

The mere whisper that a cigaret company had done the same was reported to be affecting its sales in the South.

The conference discussed a Mississippi situation where Negro cotton farmers are reported having trouble getting their crop loans. Negro financial aid may be necessary.

Biggest question asked at the meeting was whether, as some former white defenders of NAACP are charging, the Negro leadership is pushing too aggressively. In recent weeks The Washington Post and Times-Herald, in its Virginia news column, has twice cautioned the NAACP "to go fishing."

Some of the participants said that if Negroes let up the pressures now there was no assurance that pressures against them would be relaxed. In this group were several who said that only by keeping up the pressures have Negroes made any gains.

It was recalled that after the Supreme Court school decision the "line" of the NAACP was that, of course, the law-respecting South would comply.

The group adjourned to make plans for a bi-racial meeting which they hope to hold within the next two months. It is planned to invite top Southern white leaders to meet with them privately and see if contact can be re-established. They hope to have some Northern whites present, too, but don't want to make Southerners feel they're being dictated to by Yankees.

One of the most disturbing facts the conference disclosed was that the participants feel that in many ways they are "behind" the Negro population. One of the participants was afraid he couldn't "sell" a policy of moderation to his organization which is in a belligerent mood.

If the Southern white community could show some intention of complying with desegregation of cooling off the hotheads would be easier, the conferees felt.

Race Fight Flares At Negro Dance In Roanoke Hall

Rich. P. 14-A Sun. 5-6-56

Washington, D.C.

ROANOKE, Va., May 5 (AP).—A bottle tossed from the white spectators' gallery at a Negro dance at American Legion Auditorium here early today touched off a disturbance that required the combined efforts of 30 police to quell.

Police reported the bottle was tossed just as the dance was breaking up about 1:15 a.m. and it was answered by a barrage of bottles thrown from the floor. Five persons were arrested and one was reported injured. He was reported to be a white Virginia Tech student who suffered a cut mouth. He was among the five arrested on charges of drunk and disorderly conduct.

Seats were ripped from the balcony, fixtures smashed and dozens of windows were broken by flying bottles.

Gerald Glass, promoter of the dances, said about 4,100 persons attended as dancers or spectators. Names of those arrested were not immediately available.

The Future of State Parks

Journal & Guide

THERE IS A great deal of discussion, of course, on the status and future of the nine state parks operated by Virginia. This is prompted by the federal court rulings barring use of the parks on a segregated basis. Technically, the rulings covered only Seashore State Park near Virginia Beach, but in principle it applies to them all. One aspect of the discussion warrants clarification. It is that Negroes are denying themselves the facilities by recourse to the courts.

Sat. 2-5-56 P. 9

This is silly. Negroes have never enjoyed the advantages of eight of the parks. This was true for years; in fact from the time the first of the parks was opened. Only after a colored taxpayer threatened to test the exclusion of the minority race from the parks some years ago did the state provide the one colored park near Burkeville.

Norfolk, Va.

The commonwealth of Virginia never even attempted to operate the parks on a segregated basis under the now invalidated "separate but equal" policy laid down by the Supreme Court in 1896. Had access to the parks been available on some reasonable basis to all citizens, the present "dilemma" of the officials now deploring the court action would have been avoided or postponed a considerable time at least.

However, the Norfolk-Portsmouth plaintiffs in the suit were denied even the privilege of riding through Seashore State Park as sightseers, as had earlier some children from a nearby camp for underprivileged youth. Now the state has closed Seashore Park and threatens to close any others if confronted with judicial directions to open them up equally to all. There is even talk of selling them, and one Norfolk organization has offered to buy the park here.

If the white citizens of the state find the parks closed to them, it is not the fault of Negroes. It is the fault of the officials they elected, but also it is their own fault for letting the governor, attorney general, and the officers of the Department of Conservation, which operates the park, be so prejudiced and unwilling to share with some citizens the public parks which their taxes helped purchase and develop.

If it is right for the state to deny a park to any of its citizens, it would be equally as logical to deny them the use of some specified highways, or any other public facility. Virginians of all the generations to come will forever condemn those now in power if they make the mistake of disposing of the parks rather than allow their use by a third of the population which happens to be colored.

Broyhill Tells Why He Signed The Manifesto

Post & Times Herald

Sun. 6-10-56 P. 4-B

Washington, D.C.

By Richard L. Lyons
Staff R

Rep. Joel T. Broyhill (R-Va.) signed the Southern Manifesto because he believed in it, but also because he could find "no middle ground" left on which to stand.

Broyhill and his fellow Virginian Richard H. Poff were the only Republicans among the 101 Southern Congressmen who last March signed the declaration urging "all lawful means" to resist and reverse the Supreme Court's school integration decision.

Broyhill is a stanch supporter of Presidenta Eisenhower on most issues. His 10th District just across the oPtomac voted against the Gray Commission's plan to get around integration by providing tuition grants to let students attend private schools.

Broyhill's signature on the manifesto has become an issue in the 10th District since the three contenders for the Democratic nomination have stated that they would not have signed it as Broyhill did.

Broyhill sounds as though he would have preferred that the Manifesto had never been written. But once it was, he was one of the first to sign. In fact, he signed the first draft "which had more punch," he said

Broyhill in an interview explained his signing first of all as a protest against what he considered an error by the Court. He is not a lawyer.

"The Manifesto," he said, was a statement of principles with which I agree. It does not necessarily deal with whether you are for or against segregation. It merely states that the decision was an unlawful decision.

"In no way does the manifesto imply that any signer is not a loyal supporter of the Constitution as the supreme law of the land. Nor does it repudiate the Supreme Court as the proper body to interpret it. It says only that we feel the nine members erred in this case. They are human and can err like other humans.

"The Court has made other decisions that have been objected to by many persons in the country. Abraham Lincoln said he would try to reverse the Dred Scott decision. So why all the hullabaloo? The big issue is not that 100 members of Congress disagreed with the Court, but that they disagreed with it on segregation."

Broyhill indicated that the hullabaloo was an important factor in his signing.

"One of the problems in solving this is that the two side are drawn, leaving no middle ground approach," he said. "You're for it or against it. Both extremes are bad. But if the lines are drawn I have to go on the side of segregation. I'm for segregation. I am in favor of giving every citizen equal opportunity and justice under the law. But I recognize that cannot be accomplished while men's minds and hearts won't accept it as a matter of custom."

Racial problems can be licked by the gradual educational process that is going on, said Broyhill, but not by a court order.

"White people in the South accept many things they would not have accepted years ago," he said. "The South is gradually coming around, but they won't take it by force.

"How does the Negro stand in the North? Is he a social equal? No. He doesn't hold as many high postions in northern schools as he does in the South."

Broyhill acknowledge there are probably proportionately fewer pro-segregationsists in his district than in any other part of the state. But he feels northern Virginia must work out the problem along with the rest of the state.

"It is still geographically a part of the State of Virginia," he said. "The solution to this problem has got to be worked out in cooperation with the state as a whole."

Both Virginia's senators and all 10 of its House members signed the manifesto.

Broyhill feels the Tenth District's vote against the Gray plan did not necessarily prove a majority of his constitutents favor integrated schools.

"I do not take it (the referendum) as a vote on integration versus segregation as such, nor as agreeing or disagreeing with the opinion of the nine men on the Court," he said.

"It was a vote on whether they would agree to this method (Gray plan) solution to the problem," he said. "I talked to many people during debate on the referendum who were basically for continuing segregation but were fearful that the Gray Commission approach would jeopardize the public school system."

Broyhill makes no attempt to reconcile his support of the President with his signing the manifesto.

"Not more than 10 members of Congress have a better record of supporting the President than I," he said. "But my record isn't 100 per cent and it's not going to be.

"I'm not a rubber stamp. There a few things on which I disagree with him and this is one of them."

U.S. Discrimination Raging In Norfolk?

Afro-American P. 3 Sat. 6-9-56

Norfolk, Va.

NORFOLK, Va. (ANP)—The dispute over discrimination at government installations in the Norfolk area flared up anew last week following an address in South Norfolk by Clarence Mitchell, director of the NAACP, Washington bureau.

After Mr. Mitchell's speech at a freedom rally sponsored by the South Norfolk NAACP, he was privately questioned by several persons as to what is being done about the complaints of discrimination at the Navy Yard, Army Depot, Amphibious Base at Little Creek and other nearby places.

More than a dozen colored employees at government installations in the Norfolk area have filed complaints with the Norfolk branch of the NAACP, and some with officials in Washington.

However, no case has been settled satisfactorily because of the difficulty of getting at the facts in the cases and because of the great amount of time devoted by lawyers to the school and travel segregation cases.

* * *

THE NORFOLK BRANCH of the NAACP, headed by Robert D. Robertson, has been flooded with cases, some of which were not logically cases that qualify for NAACP support, but all complaints brought to the attention of the local branch have to be disposed of one way or another.

Colored workers at the Norfolk Naval Shipyard have insisted in recent weeks that they are being discriminated against in the matter of employment and upgrading.

They insist that they are denied positions as supervisors and that the policy of the personnel director or other officials is to keep them in unskilled jobs and lower paid positions.

Officials at installations reply to specific questions on how colored workers fare under the nondiscriminatory policy of the Federal Government with respect to the order against racial discrimination in employment and upgrading in very general terms.

They call attention to the government order and merely state that the order is being obeyed.

* * *

THROUGH GENERALIZATIONS, broad statements or the contention that it wouldn't be in keeping with security regulations to reveal the number of colored persons employed in various capacities, the commanding officers parry all questions.

As a result, the Navy Yard Amphibious Base, Army Headquarters, Fifth Naval District Headquarters, Naval Ammunition Depot, Naval Base and Supply Center and Supply Depot have managed not to reveal what the policy in practice is with reference to the employment or upgrading of colored workers.

The charge by Rep. A. Clayton Powell that the Army is returning to segregation has resulted in a request among colored leaders in Virginia for an investigation of the charge to include a check on what is happening to colored employees at government centers in the Norfolk area.

Publisher sues civic leaders; asks $60,000

Afro-American Baltimore, Md. Sat. 2-22-56

BY RUFUS WELLS

ROANOKE, Va.—Ten prominent Roanoke civic leaders, including six ministers, have been named defendants in a $60,000 damage suit filed by the Rev. F. E. Alexander, publisher of the Tribune, a local weekly.

The suit was brought against: Dr. Harry T. Penn, Dr. Lawrence E. Paxton, Reuben E. Lawson, attorney and president of the Roanoke NAACP branch; Mrs. Cordelia S. Williams and the Revs. Samuel T. Stone, Winslow S. Medley, Robert J. Smith, Thomas B. Wright, William N. Hunter and William Moore.

IN THE litigation, filed in Law and Chancery Court, the Rev. Mr. Alexander alleged malicious damage in statements made and published about him as a result of his stand on the segregation issue.

He had advocated a policy of moderation on the controversial integration problem prior to the alleged remarks and statements.

The publisher-minister contends that a censure motion adopted by the ministers, identified as the Roanoke Pastors' Conference, on July 25, was publicized in daily newspapers here and subsequently inserted as an advertisement.

Judge Opens Links To Norfolk Golfers

Norfolk, Va. Sat. 9-15-56

NORFOLK, Va. (ANP) — A temporary injunction granting Negroes the free and unrestricted use of the Portsmouth city park golf course was granted by Federal District Court Judge Walter E. Hoffman.

He indicated a permanent injunction will follow.

The course previously has been open to Negroes on Fridays only.

Persistent Mr. Almond

Journal & Guide

VIRGINIA HAS appealed to the United States Supreme Court JUDGE HOFFMAN's ruling in the Seashore Park case, after the Fourth District Appellate Court affirmed JUDGE HOFFMAN's decision.

Norfolk, Va.

ATTORNEY GENERAL ALMOND declared in his petition to the Supreme Court that DISTRICT JUDGE HOFFMAN "placed the cart before the horse," in that he "has attempted to decide a purely abstract question which is premature at this time because of lack of evidence."

Sat. 7-14-56

The State announced plans to lease the park to a private operator, after the court held that segregation was illegal. On a hearing on the lease question JUDGE HOFFMAN held that, "the lease must not, directly or indirectly, operate so as to discriminate against the members of any race."

This ruling was affirmed by JUDGES DOBIE, SOPER and PARKER, of the Fourth District Circuit Court of Appeals.

MR. ALMOND is entitled to another day in court. It is doubtful, however, if the outcome will be different.

A Commanding Event In The Resistance

Advertiser P. 4-A

THE THUNDEROUS REVOLT in the State of Virginia against the U.S. Supreme Court race mixing order is one of the commanding events of the Resistance.

Montgomery Ala

It is a dull one indeed who cannot read the signs by the light of this fire.

Virginia is the most distinguished of American states. It is the womb of this nation. Its people are the descendants of august figures in the founding of this Republic and the heirs to a matchless tradition of statesmanship.

38a

Virginia is the Upper South, bordering the North. It is no isolated Deep South state.

Wed. 1-11-56

America's capital is established upon a plot of earth carved out of Northern Virginia.

Our impression is that most members of the Supreme Court live across the river from Washington in Virginia and vote in Virginia. So do most of the chief officers of the Washington government.

The state's leading newspapers, its foremost political leaders and the people were as one Monday in voting by the overriding majority of 2 to 1 to defy the court's race mixing order.

Virginia is acting in the best and oldest American tradition of defying the Supreme Court. It learned the ropes from the Hartford Convention in New England, from the North's snarling defiance of the court in the case of the Fugitive Slave Law, and from Abraham Lincoln's folksy contempt of the court and habeas corpus.

The significance of the Virginia vote is that Virginia leadership is pure of rabble rousers, that its best brains took a 14-month look at the problem before contriving this artful dodging of the race mixing order. Then its citizenry, amidst whom dwell Supreme Court justices, adopted the dodge by a vote of 2 to 1.

It couldn't have been any more in the teeth of the Supreme Court had they counted the ballots under the white dome of the Jefferson Memorial in Washington.

This event will resound through the South. It will warn the rest of the country more than if it had happened in any other Southern state.

It means, as we have said repeatedly, that there isn't going to be any general mixing of the races in Southern schools for years to come.

Madison And Nullification

Advertiser P. 4-A

Irving Brant In The Nation

VIRGINIANS promoting the state amendment to evade school integration by using public money in private schools are well aware that the Supreme Court is likely to strike the move down as a subterfuge. To salvage their plan in that event, they are resurrecting the 1830 doctrine of "nullification" under the less aggressive name of "interposition."

A set of resolutions modeled on the famous Virginia Resolutions of 1798 against the Alien & Sedition laws is being promoted in the Virginia General Assembly, which opened its session on Jan. 11. The resolutions call on other states to exercise a disputed right to "interpose" against the Supreme Court's integration decrees. South Carolina, Louisiana and Mississippi are giving it considerable support, although incoming Gov. Coleman of the last-named state terms it "legal poppycock."

The idea is that the states shall severally ask Congress to submit a constitutional amendment legalizing racial integration. Until the amendment is adopted (thirteen states could block it) the "interposing" states are to be governed by a declaration of their legislatures that "the decisions and orders of the Supreme Court relating to separation of the races in its public institutions are, as a matter of right, null, void and of no effect; and the General Assembly declares to all men that as a matter of right, this state is not bound to abide thereby."

THIS scheme, thought up by the Richmond News-Leader, is presented with a great allegation of support from Madison and Jefferson. Supposedly paraphrasing Madison's Virginia Resolutions of 1798, it is in fact a garbled hodgepodge; its actual counterpart, in the great "nullification" battle of the 1830's, was denounced by Madison and unanimously condemned by the Virginia General Assembly of 1833-34. The crucial words "null, void and of no effect" were added to Madison's 1798 draft by W. C. Nicholas at Jefferson's suggestion, and were unanimously stricken out by the House of Delegates, as Madison explained later, because they might give "pretext for some disorganizing misconstruction." That is they might be thought to convert the resolutions from a call for united constitutional action into an act of resistance to law.

Concerning Jefferson, who died in 1826, Madison wrote five years afterwards: "It is remarkable how closely the nullifiers who make the name of Mr. Jefferson the pedestal for their colossal heresy, shut their eyes and lips whenever his authority is ever so clearly and emphatically against them." Pointing out that "nullification" (like the "interposition" now proposed in Virginia) put it in the power of a small minority of states to give the law to the great majority, Madison wrote in December, 1831: "For this preposterous and anarchial pretension there is not a shadow of countenance in the Constitution, and well that there is not, for it is certain that with such a deadly poison in it no constitution could be sure of lasting a year."

IN THE same letter, to President Jackson's private secretary and his own close friend Nicholas Trist, Madison said of the fundamental issue—the denial of national supremacy:

"A supremacy of the Constitution and laws of the Union, without a supremacy in the exposition and execution of them, would be as much a mockery as a scabbard put into the hands of a soldier without a sword in it."

The man who wrote those words is being cited in Richmond today as the legal and historical authority for the asserted right of Virginia to nullify the Constitution.

Court Cafeteria Refuses Negroes at Fairfax Trial

Star P. A-20 Fri. 2-17-56

A group of colored persons attending the rape trial of four youths in Fairfax Circuit Court yesterday were denied admission when they tried to eat lunch in the Courthouse cafeteria.

Francis Rathwick, operator of the lunch concession in the basement of the courthouse, said 13 men and women asked to be served.

Washington D.C.

Attorney James Raby, representing three of the colored youths on trial, said other colored persons had asked him about eating in the cafeteria. Mr. Raby said he made inquiries and was told the cafeteria operator would serve sandwiches to colored persons at a table in the hall.

"I told the people who talked to me about it not to go down to the cafeteria after I checked," said Mr. Raby. "I didn't know anyone had gone down there."

Mr. Raby said some of the people involved were parents of the colored youths on trial. He said there was no other place for them to eat so they went without lunch.

Mr. Rathwick said he could not admit them because the law in Virginia prohibits non-segregated eating places. He said he asked Judge Paul Brown for advice, but the judge would not order him to admit the colored persons. Judge Brown had no comment on the incident.

The four youths are being tried by Judge Brown for the rape of a 29-year-old white woman in a lover's lane along Arlington boulevard last July 26.

Negro Reply Attacks Leasing Of Parks To Escape Mixing

Advertiser P. 3-C
Fri. 3-16-56

RICHMOND, Va., March 15 (AP) — Negro attorneys have told a federal appellate court the State of Virginia cannot escape anti-segregation precedents by leasing a state park to a private operator.

"If the state allows the performance of governmental functions to devolve upon a non-governmental agency, that agency assumes those attributes of government which bring the constitutional safeguards into play," they said in a brief filed with the court yesterday.

SEASHORE LEASED

The case, now in the U.S. Court of Appeals of the 4th Circuit, tests whether Virginia may lease Seashore State Park to a private operator without specifying that civil guarantees will be observed.

The outcome of the case could have far-reaching effect on any plan to provide grants from state funds for pupils attending private schools. Virginia's Gray Commission, named to study means of avoiding enforced integration in the public schools, has proposed such a plan.

Written arguments were filed with the court by attorneys for the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People in answer to papers filed earlier by Atty. Gen. J. Lindsay Almond Jr. Almond has attacked as "unwarranted" Norfolk Federal District Judge Walter E. Hoffman's enjoining the state against leasing the park without a guarantee that racial segregation would not be enforced.

Verbal arguments will be heard next Wednesday by the court. The same court banned segregation in publicly - operated recreation facilities last year.

The Seashore Park case arose in 1951 when four Negroes filed a civil suit complaining they had been denied admission. When Hoffman ruled in their favor, the state closed the park which is just a few miles from Virginia Beach. In deciding the case, Hoffman ruled that segregation was unlawful not only in a state-operated facility but in a state-owned park leased to a private operator.

Negro Civic Heads Hold Va. Meeting

Post + Times Herald P. 6-B
Wash. 3-18-56

Eighteen of the Nation's prominent Negro educators and civic leaders met quietly in Virginia recently to talk over rising racial tension in the South and what to do about it.

Out of this meeting, held in Capahosic, Gloucester County, on the York River, came reports that some of the Negroes requested the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People to ease up, at least temporarily, its efforts to push desegregation in the South.

But Roy Wilkins, NAACP president, denied these reports yesterday. So did other persons present at the session. Said Wilkins:

"All history has shown that, if you don't do a little nudging, you don't get anywhere. Our program remains the same: we are continuing to urge desegregation and confer upon it with any officials in any locality who want to talk.

Strategy Shift Sought

"And in the 'hard core' states, where we have received nothing except inaction, it is likely suits will be filed—if the plaintiffs come forward and want to sue."

But it is known there is a segment of the NAACP that now believes it wise to shift strategy, to let the states of most resistance alone for a while and to turn to those localities where desegregation could be accomplished more easily.

This proposal poses a problem for the NAACP, however, because such a shift, some members feel, would be interpreted as defeat. After all, the law—the Supreme Court decision—is on their side, they say.

Manifesto Is Problem

Another problem faces the NAACP. Some members have been put on the spot by the Southern manifesto criticising the Supreme Court desegregation decision. That call for every legal effort to overthrow the decision was signed by more than 100 Southern Congressmen—some of them considered by the NAACP and other Negroes as "progressive" in racial relations.

The NAACP believes these particular legislators signed the manifesto as a political expedient for "home consumption." The organization wants these men reelected—but cannot say so publicly for fear such indorsement would defeat them.

Some members of the NAACP believe these signers will work for "progressive" race relations again—after election.

The meeting at Capahosic was called by Dr. F. E. Patterson, former president of Tuskegee Institute and now director of the Phelps-Stokes Fund of New York, a foundation dedicated to the education of Negro youth in the United States and Africa.

Among those attending were Ralph J. Bunche, United Nations Under Secretary; Rep. William L. Dawson (D-Ill.) of Chicago; President Charles S. Johnson of Fiske University, Nashville, Tenn.; President Rufus E. Clement of Atlanta University and Dr. Charles H. Thomson, dean of the Howard University Graduate School.

Those attending the meeting said it was "exploratory" in nature, that no conclusions were reached and it was intended to lead to future bi-racial meetings on the racial tension subject.

Dr. Patterson issued a short statement at the conclusion of the session, held on March 3 and 4.

"Their aim is to achieve the more effective use of reason and good will in overcoming difficulties in desegregation and working toward advances in interracial relations," he said.

Race Parley Idea Hailed

Star P. 2-C
Wash. 4-3-56

RICHMOND, April 3 (AP).—Five Virginia political figures yesterday gave generally favorable comment to President Eisenhower's hint he may invite Southern governors to discuss the South's school segregation problems.

Attorney General J. Lindsay Almond, Jr., said the "conference ... might be a very good idea" and he would subscribe to the idea.

Representative Abbitt, Democrat of Virginia, said he "saw no objections" to the conference. He said the governors and attorneys-general could "certainly let the President know the real problems we are facing down here, and it might do some good."

State Senator Ted Dalton of Radford, a Republican, said "we ought not to neglect any opportunity that may prove helpful."

Representative Tuck, Democrat of Virginia, said he could see no objection to "meeting with the President or anybody else to discuss this problem."

"On the other hand," Mr. Tuck said, "it seems to me this is a matter that can best be worked in the individual States without any interference from Washington. We have had too much of Washington already in this matter."

Richmond Delegate J. Randolph Tucker, jr., a member of the Governor's Commission on Public Education, said he did not see how the conference could do any harm.

SEGREGATION PLEA ON PARK IS DENIED

Times P. 20-C
Wash. 4-10-56

Appeals Court Bars Virginia From Such a Lease Plan —'Negro' Music Fought

RICHMOND, April 9 (AP)—The Fourth United States Circuit Court of Appeals held today that Virginia could not lease seashore State Park under any arrangement that would operate "to discriminate against" members of any race.

It upheld a Norfolk Federal District Court ruling restraining the state, its agents or lessees from denying Negroes, because of race, "the right to use and enjoy" the facilities of the park, near Virginia Beach.

District Judge Walter Hoffman's order had further provided that if the state leased Seashore or any part of the park it must see that the rights of all races were protected.

The state did not open Seashore Park last year and does not plan to operate it this year. However, the seven other state parks for whites and one for Negroes have continued to run.

When the case was argued here March 21 J. Lindsay Almond Jr., Virginia Attorney General, contended that the District Court ruling should be modified.

He argued that its effect would be to restrain the state "from divesting itself of authority" over the park if Seashore were leased to a private operator. Mr. Almond said the state would be held responsible "for the actions of the private citizens over which it has no authrity" and added:

"Our position is that bare legal title permits a lessee to allow anyone he sees fit to enter a state park. The state, in fact, would have no control over that lessee."

Attorneys for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People contended that leasing of Seashore would bring up the possibility of continued exclusion of Negroes.

The Seashore case was initiated in 1951 when four Negroes charged in the Norfolk District Court that they were denied use of the park.

Early in 1955 the Department of Conservation and Development announced plans to lease the park. The case, which had been dormant for several years, came before Judge Hoffman a few months after the department's announcement.

'Negro' Music Protested

Special to The New York Times.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., April 9—Members of White Citizens' Councils have started a campaign against "be-bop and Negro music." They say it contributes to moral degradation of children and serves the cause of integration.

Representatives of seventy-three councils in North Alabama met here over the week-end and voted their approval of an Action Committee appointed by a suburban Birmingham council.

The Action Committee says it will protest the use of such music on the radio and in public gatherings. Action Committee members did not define "Negro music."

ORANGEBURG, S. C., April 9 (UP)—The entire student body at South Carolina State College for Negroes boycotted classes today.

Although none of the 1,498 students appeared willing to say so, the walkout was apparently in protest against a resolution passed by the South Carolina Legislature calling for an investigation of N. A. A. C. P. activity on the campus.

Wildlife Group Seeks State Parks

Post + Times Herald
Wash. 4-22-56

FARMVILLE, Va., April 26—The president of the Virginia Wildlife Federation says his organization will make a "vigorous" fight to have state recreation parks that become involved in litigation over the race issue converted to hunting and fishing areas.

E. Floyd Yates of Powhatan said yesterday the Federation's board of directors voted unanimously to recommend such action. Under the proposal, the state would retain ownership, but jurisdiction over the parks would be assigned to the Commission of Game and Inland Fisheries.

THOMAS R. WARING- EDITOR-DAILY NEWS AND COURIER , Charleston, South Carolina

Who Is A Negro Moderate ?

Thomas R. Waring, editor of the Charleston, South Carolina, daily News and Courier, and vice chairman of the Southern Education Reporting Service, which publishes the Southern School News, recently wrote an editorial in his paper entitled: "Negro Moderates In The South Need Understanding From Whites." Who is a Negro moderate in Tom Waring's book? He is one who has "a reluctance to agitate for racial changes." What does that mean as a practical matter?

Well, the city of Charleston provides a city college for whites, but none for Negroes, and the State of South Carolina provides a military college for whites in Charleston, but none for Negroes. The State of South Carolina provides the University of South Carolina for whites, but none for Negroes; it provides Clemson College (Agricultural and Engineering) for whites, but no such separate college for Negroes; and it also provides Winthrop College for white women, but none for Negroes.

Now, in Tom Waring's book, a Negro moderate is one who is satisfied not to agitate but to let the city of Charleston and the state of South Carolina provide all these things for white children, but none of them for the Negro moderate's children. Is it any wonder that Mr Waring pleads for understanding on the part of whites for such Negroes?

Along with this plea for understanding of Tom Waring's moderate Negro, this editorial says that "white people rightly resent the NAACP and its agitation." Now, why is this right in Tom Waring's book? It is simply and only because the NAACP does not think it is right for the city of Charleston and the state of South Carolina to provide all these educational opportunities for whites and none of them for Negroes. When the NAACP goes into the Federal Courts and seeks to open these educational opportunities to Negroes, then that is the "agitation" which Mr Waring says "white people rightly resent."

Teachers Say Dance Photo Was In Error

World P.P. Sat. 10-13-56

Birm. Ala.

PRINCETON, W. Va. — (ANP) — Photographs of an integrated dance here, taken and published in Life magazine showing a pictorial story on racial integration, were called "a mistake" last week by a principal and two school teachers.

A written report released by School Supt. W. A. Cooke following a meeting with principal Melvin McClain of Princeton High School and two physical education teachers, Mrs. Charlotte Harman and Ward Webb, described the photographs as errors.

One pitcure showed white and Negro s'udents, boys and girls, dancing in the school gymnasium.

The board report said McClain and the two teachers were asked why the Life photograph was permitted to take the pictures when it is against general policy rules to conduct mixed physical education classes for boys and girls.

The crux of the report follows:

McClain gave the photographer permission to take the requested pictures and took him to the gym. McClain told the instructors to allow the photographer to take pitcures of integrated physical education groups.

McClain said he did not see the photographer after that. Mrs. Harman and Webb told the board several pictures were taken of boys and girls in separate groups. They said the photographer, whose name was not given, then asked that the boys and girls combine for one final shot. Mrs. Harman and Webb quoted the photographer as promising that the picture would not appear in the magazine.

The two instructors said they agreed to the final integrated group shot and sent to other classes of children for the picture. The photographer took the picture and left the building.

Bus Protest Case Inspired Ike's Plea

World Pg 1
From Ala.
Fri. 3-23-56

WASHINGTON — (INS) — A question on the trial of Montgomery (Ala.) Negroes accused of fostering a bus service boycott inspired President Eisenhower's call Wednesday for the South to "show progress" toward ending the segregation dispute.

The Chief Executive was asked at his news conference if he would state how he felt "about Negroes being brought to trial for refusing to ride the (segregated) Montgomery buses."

Mr. Eisenhower replied: "Well, you are asking me I think, to be more of a lawyer than I certainly am.

"But, as I understand it, there is a state law about boycotts, and it is under that kind of thing that these people are being brought to trial.

"I think that the statement I made last week on this whole subject represents all the views that I now have to make; and I do believe that it is incumbent on all the South to show progress. That is what the Supreme Court asked for. And they turned it over to local district courts.

"I believe that we should not stagnate, but again I plead for understanding, for really sympathetic consideration of a problem that is far larger, both in its emotional and even in its physical aspects than most of us realize."

Later, when he was asked if he had "any plans to mobilize religious or other leaders of the South" to his stand for moderation and progress on the segregation issue, Mr. Eisenhower referred to the work of Evangelist Billy Graham.

He said the Rev. Mr. Graham, both at home and abroad, tries to "promote mediation instead of conflict, tolerance instead of prejudice."

World Pg 8

Mr. Eisenhower added: "I said that is one thing Billy Graham teaches not only abroad, he teaches it among ourselves, and frankly, I believe that the pulpits do have a very great responsibility here.

"This is a very tough one, and people have to search their own hearts if we are going to get a decent answer and keep going ahead.

"Now, let's don't try to think of this as a tremendous fight that is going to separate Americans and get ourselves into a nasty mess.

"Let's try to think of how we can make progress and keep it going and not stop it. Now that, I believe, the pulpits can help on."

ing he would have been dismissed.

"I have an affidavit from the agent emphatically stating he did not make any such statement to the county solicitor. The county solicitor persists the statement was made.

"The FBI has no interest in whether they planned to try him again or not?" Presto asked.

Negro Bus Line Plan Rejected

Times-Picayune
New Orleans La.

Montgomery Turns Down Boycott Leaders' Idea

MONTGOMERY, Ala., April 2 (AP) —The Rev. M. L. King Jr. and several other leaders of the Negro boycott against Montgomery City Lines buses were denied city permission today to establish and operate an all-Negro bus company.

Lex. 4-3-56

The delegation, most of whom are under indictment on charges of conspiring to boycott the segregated buses, proposed that a new company "owned and operated by Montgomery Negroes" be licensed to "provide adequate transportation for our people."

City Commissioners, who met with the group for nearly 90 minutes, denied the application for a franchise on the grounds that the present bus company is offering "excellent bus service for the entire city."

P. 12

Most of the earlier issues of the boycott, including seating arrangements and a request that Negro bus drivers be employed, were discussed.

Mayor W. A. Gayle, saying bus revenue from the city as a whole would not support two bus companies, suggested the Negroes request Montgomery City Lines to operate buses exclusively for them.

As to an earlier request that Negro drivers be employed on predominately Negro routes, the mayor said, "That is up to the bus company altogether. It's their money, and they have the right to hire whom they please."

Asked after the meeting if the boycotters would confer with City Lines on this point, King said the decision would have to come from the Montgomery Improvement Assn. executive board "and the Negroes of Montgomery."

Likewise, he said any decision on ending the boycott if the bus firm agreed to the employment of Negro drivers would have to be given by Negroes at a mass meeting.

King had introduced members of the group as representatives of the improvement association, of which he is president. The delegation consisted of King, whose conviction and $500 fine on a boycotting charge has been appealed to the Alabama Court of Appeals; Rev. H. H. Hubbard; Rev. W. J. Powell; E. D. Nixon; J. E. Pierce; attorneys Fred D. Gray and Charles Langford and Mrs. A. W. West Sr., widow of a Negro physician.

In support of their proposal, King told the commission, "We are only seeking satisfactory transportation. We don't want to put the other company out of business—that never has been our goal. We are trying to make for wholesome relations and the elimination of tension among the races in Montgomery.

Stating the reasons for denying the Negro franchise Mayor Gayle said "40 or 50 buses are now standing empty."

BUS LINE IS DENIED NEGROES IN SOUTH

Times 4-3-56
New York

Montgomery Turns Down Bid by Boycott Leaders to Set Up Own Company

Lex. 4-3-56

MONTGOMERY, Ala., April 2 (AP)—The Rev. M. L. King Jr. and several other leaders of the Negro boycott against city buses were denide permission today to establish an all-Negro bus company.

The delegation, most of whom are under indictment on charges of conspiring to boycott segregated buses, proposed that a new company, "owned and operated by Montgomery Negroes," be licensed to "provide adequate transportation for our people."

City commissioners, who met with the group for ninety minutes, denied the application for a franchise on the ground that the present company was offering "excellent bus service for the entire city."

Most of the earlier issues of the boycott, including seating arrangements and a request that Negro bus drivers be employed, were discussed.

Mayor W. A. Gayle said bus revenue would not support two companies. He suggested the Negroes request Montgomery City Lines, Inc. to operate buses exclusively for them.

As to the request that Negro drivers be employed on predominantly Negro routes, the Mayor said: "That is up to the bus company altogether. It's their [the company's] money, and they have the right to hire whom they please."

Asked if the boycotters would confer with City Lines on this point, Mr. King said the decision would have to come from the Montgomery Improvement executive board "and the Negroes of Montgomery."

Similarly, he went on, any decision on ending the boycott if the company agred to employ Negro drivers would have to be given at a mass meeting.

He introduced members of the group as representatives of the Improvement Association, of which he is president. The delegation consisted of King, whose conviction and $500 fine on a boycotting charge has been appealed; the Rev. H. H. Hubbard, the Rev. W. J. Powell, E. D. Nixon, J. E. Pierce, Fred D. Gray and Charles Langford, attorneys, and the widow of Dr. A. W. West Sr.

Mr. King told the commission: "We are only seeking satisfactory transportation. We don't want to put the other company out of business; that never has been our goal. We are trying to make for wholesale relations and the elimination of tension among the races in Montgomery.

Permission To Form Negro Bus Line Denied

Post-Herald P. 8
Birmingham Ala.

Montgomery Boycott Leaders Renew Meetings With City Commissioners

Lex. 4-3-56

MONTGOMERY, April 2 (AP)—Leaders of the racial boycott against city lines buses asked in vain today for permission to operate an all-Negro busline in Montgomery.

The City Commission turned them down with the observation that the boycotted Montgomery City Lines, Inc. is offering "excellent bus service for the entire city" and that "45 or 50 buses are now standing empty."

Negroes for 19 weeks have refused to ride the segregated City Lines buses and the company has discontinued some routes and shortened others. Ninety leaders of the bus protest are under indictment for violating the state's anti-boycott law.

Members of a Negro delegation, led by the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., asked the City Commission today for authority to form a new bus company to "provide adequate transportation for our people." They said the company would be owned and operated by Montgomery Negroes."

Mayor W. A. Gayle, speaking for the commission, said bus revenue wouldn't support two lines. He suggested instead the Negroes ask Montgomery City Lines to operate buses exclusively for them.

King, only one of the indicted Negroes brought to trial thus far, told the commission, "We are only seeking satisfactory transportation. We don't want to put the other company out of business—that has never been our goal. We are trying to make for wholesome relations and the elimination of tension among the races in Montgomery."

The Negro Baptist minister was convicted of boycotting and fined $500. He has appealed the fine and the Negro attorneys said they take the case to the U. S. Supreme Court if necessary.

Most of the original issues in the bus boycott—including better seating arrangements and the hiring of Negro drivers—were discussed again today at the 90-minute conference.

Gayle said the employment of drivers "is up to the bus company. It's their money and they have the right to hire whom they please."

After the meeting, King declined to say whether the Negroes would confer with bus line officials. He said that decision would have to be made by the Montgomery Improvement Assn. executive board and "the Negroes of Montgomery."

FEDERAL COURT RULED TUESDAY, JUNE 5, 1956
RACIAL SEGREGATION ON CITY BUSSES IN MONTGOMERY, ALABAMA VIOLATES FEDERAL CONSTITUTION

Judge Lynne dissents in 2-1 decision—

Segregation of bus lines is ruled Montgomery invalid

In his dissenting opinion Judge Lynne declared he felt the "separate but equal" doctrine still applied in intrastate transportation cases such as the Montgomery case.

"Only a profound, philosophical disagreement with the ultimate conclusion of the majority (opinion) 'that the separate but equal doctrine can no longer be safely followed as a correct statement of the law' would prompt this, my first dissent," he said.

THE TEXT, not including footnotes, of the dissenting opinion of Judge Lynne:

"Only a profound, philosophical disagreement with the ultimate conclusion of the majority 'that the separate but equal doctrine can no longer be safely followed as a correct statement of the law' would prompt this, my first dissent. But I should consider myself recreant both to conscience and duty in withholding my views because of the affection and esteem which I bear for my associates.

"For many years as a trial judge in the state and federal system I have endeavored faithfully to understand and apply precedents established by the opinion of appellate courts. This was not a blind obedience to a legalistic formula embodied in the rule of stare decisis. It was the result of a simple belief that the laws which regulate the conduct, the affairs, and sometimes the emotions of our people should evidence not only the apparance but also the spirit of stability. News P.15

"JUDGES OF TRIAL courts frequently find themselves in disagreement with the rationale of an old, but clearly controlling precedent. That is so because their positions do not insulate them from those changing physical and metaphysical concepts which form a part of the life process. But they are neither designed nor equipped to perform the legislative function of putting off the old and putting on the new. To arrogate to themselves this prerogative, in my humble opinion, would be the first, fatal step in making hollow the proud boast that ours is a 'government of laws and not of men.'

"Judge Rives, just the other day, delivering the opinion of the Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit, sitting en banc, in Howard v. United States—F. 2d—(April 20, 1956), stated my position, clearly and concisely:

"'In the fact of such recognition by the Supreme Court of a test of criminal responsibility, we do not feel at liberty to consider and decide whether in our opinion the recent modification of such test in the District of Columbia is sound or unsound, nor whether some other test should be adopted. This circuit follows the law as stated by the Supreme Court and leaves any need for modification thereof to that court . . .'

THE MAJORITY recognize, it was conceded in oral arguments by counsel for plaintiffs, that Plessy V. Ferguson, 163 U. S. 537 (1896) (providing for separate but equal facilities in intrastate Louisiana trains) is precisely in point, and that its holdings have been repeatedly followed in later transportation cases. Its authority obviously was unaffected by the action of the Supreme Court in dismissing the appeal in South Carolina Electric and Gas Co. vs. Flemming, — U. S. — 24 L. W. 3280. The citation of Slaker vs. O'Connor, 278 U. S. 188, is convincing that it did not place the stamp of its approval upon the decision of the Fourth Circuit in Flemming vs. South Carolina Electric and Gas. Co., 224 F 2d 752, but simply concluded that its judgment was not final and hence that the appeal did not lie. 26 U. S. C. A. 1254(2).

"IN COMPLETE agreement with the Fourth Circuit's opinion in Flemming that the separate but equal doctrine can no longer be safely followed as a correct statement of the law, the majority conclude that Plessy vs. Ferguson, in which that doctrine made its first appearance 60 years ago, has been implied, though not explicitly overruled. While I share their great respect for Judge Parker, Soper and Dobie, I do not at all agree.

"A comparatively new principle of pernicious implications has found its way into our jurisprudence. Lower courts may feel free to disregard the precise precedent of a Supreme Court opinion if they perceive a 'pronounced new doctrinal trend' in its later decisions which would influence a cautious judge to prophesy that in due time and in a proper case such established precedent will be overturned explicitly. Peculiarly appropriate in this context is the following language of Judge Woodbury, writing for the First Circuit in New England Mutual Life Ins. Co. vs. Welch, 153 F. 2d 260, 262:

'FURTHERMORE we find no indication from anything said therein of a purpose to depart from the rule of the earlier decisions cited above. Under these circumstances we see no occasion even to consider the basic question whether we would adopt the doctrine of Barnette vs. West Virginia State Board of Education, D. C. 47 F. Supp. 251, 253, and Spector Motor Service vs. Walsh, 2 Cir., 139 F. 2d 809, 817, 823, and in extraordinary situations disregard controlling decisions of the Supreme Court not yet explicitly overruled. It will suffice to say that we would feel disposed to consider taking such a course only when there are the clearest indications that the controlling decisions of the Supreme Court, though not formally overruled, would no longer be followed by that court and we find no such indications here.'

"IN 1950, THE Fourth Circuit had before it the case of Boyer, et al, vs. Garrett, et al, 183 F.2d 582, involving an officially adopted rule providing for the segregation of races in athletic activities in the public parks and playgrounds in the City of Baltimore. In affirming the judgment of the district court, the same judges who decided Flemming held:

'The contenton of plaintiffs is that, notwithstanding this equality of treatment, the rule providing for segregation is violative of the provisions of the federal Constitution. The district court dismissed the complaint on the authority of Plessy vs. Ferguson, 163 U. S. 537, 16 S. Ct. 1138, 41 L. Ed. 256, and the princpal argument made on appeal is that the authority of Plessy vs. Ferguson has been so weakened by subsequent decisions that we should no longer consider it bindng. We do not think, however, that we are at liberty thus to dsregard a decision of the Supreme Court which that court has not seen fit to overrule and which it expressly refrained from reexamining, although urged to do so, in the very recent case of Sweatt vs. Painter, 70 S. Ct. 848. It is for the Supreme Court, not us, to overrule its decisions or to hold them outmoded'."

"IN 1955, IN Flemming, an intrastate transportation case, reversing the district judge, the court wrote:

'We do not think that the separate but equal doctrine of Plessy vs. Ferguson, supra, can any longer be regarded as a correct statement of the law. That case recognizes segregation of the races by common carriers as being governed by the same principles as segregation in the public schools; and the recent decisions in Brown vs. Board of Education, 347 U. S. 483, 74 S. Ct. 686, 98 L. Ed. 873 and Bolling vs. Sharpe, 347 U. S. 497, 74 S. Ct. 639, 98 L. Ed. 884, which relate to public schools leave no doubt that the separate but equal doctrine approved in Plessy vs. Ferguson has been repudiated. That the principle applied in the school cases should be applied in cases involving transportation, appears quite clearly from the recent case of Henderson vs. United States, 339 U. S. 816, 70 S. Ct. 843, 94 L. Ed. 1302, where segregation in dining cars was held violative of a section of the Interstate Commerce Act providing against discrimination.'

"WITHIN THIS five-year interval the Supreme Court has spoken pertinently but once, in the case of Brown vs. Board of Education, 347 U. S. 483, since Bolling vs. Sharpe, 347 U. S. 497, did not discuss Plessy vs. Ferguson and appears to have been decided on a partity of reasoning. My study of Brown has convinced me that it left unimpaired the 'separate but equal' doctrine in a local transportation case and I perceive no pronuonced new doctrine trend therein.

"Of course I appreciate the care with which the Supreme Court limits its pronouncements upon great constitutional questions to the narrow issues before it and the only issue in Brown involved a collision between the 14th Amendment and state laws commanding segregation in the public schools. But in Brown the court's opinion referred to Plessy v. Ferguson six times and to its 'separate but equal' doctrine on four occasions. It epitomized its concept of that doctrine as follows: 'Under that doctrine, equality of treatment is accorded when the races are provided substantially equal facilities, even though these facilities be separate.' Its ultimate conclusion was, and this I conceive to be the rationale of its decision, 'that in the field of public education the doctrine of "separate but equal" has no place. Separate educational facilities are inherently unequal.'

"IT SEEMS to me that the Supreme Court therein recognized that there still remains an area within our constitutional scheme of state and federal government wherein that doctrine may be applied even though its applications are always constitutionally suspect and for 60 years it may have been more honored in the breach than in the observance. Granted that the trend of its opinions is to the effect that segregation is not to be permitted in public facilities furnished by the state itself and the money of that state, as in the case of public schools, or public parks, cf. Muir v. Louis-

Ruling may bring first fateful test

Today's decision could be appealed direct to the U. S. Supreme Court and thus may bring the first fateful test of the South's intrastate segregation laws since the high court began striking down Southern racial barriers two years ago.

The suit of four Negro women on which the panel ruled had named the Alabama Public Service Commission among the defendants along with Montgomery city authorities and the Montgomery City Lines. However it was not known immediately what effect the ruling would have on state segregation laws.

The panel ruled that both the city and state segregation laws requiring separate seating facilities for white and Negro passengers violate the U. S. Constitution.

ville Park Theatrical Assn., 347 U. S. 971; Dawson v. Mayor and City of Baltimore, 220 F. 2d 386, affirmed 350 U. S. 877, or municipal golf courses, cf. Rice v. Arnold, 340 U. S. 848; Holmes v. City of Atlanta, 350 U. S. 879, on the plain theory that if that state is going to provide such facilities at all, it must provide them equally to the citizens, it does not follow that it may not be permitted in public utilities holding non-exclusive franchises.

"If that doctrine has any validity, this is such a case in which it has been applied fairly. According to its teaching not absolute, but substantial equality is required. Such equality is not a question of dogma, but one of fact. Under the undisputed evidence adduced upon the hearing before us practices under the laws here attacked have resulted in providing the races not only substantially equal but in truth identical facilities.

"IN MY OPINION the holding of the court in Morgan v. Virginia, 328 U. S. 373, that the attempt of a state to require the segregation of passengers on interstate busses results in the imposition of an undue burden on interstate commerce is wholly irrelevant to the issue before us. And equally inapposite is reference to Henderson v. United States, 399 U. S. 816, which held that rules and practices of interstate railroad carriers requiring the segregation of passengers in dining cars was offensive to Section 3 (1) of the Interstate Commerce Act making it unlawful for a railroad in interstate commerce 'to subject any particular persons . . . to any undue or unreasonable prejudice or disadvantage in any respect whatsoever: . . .'

"THE SUPREMACY of the federal government in matters affecting interstate commerce is axiomatic. Cases involving the exercise of its power in that realm shed no light on 14th Amendment problems. It does seem quite clear that by its terms the Congress is given the power and duty to enforce the 14th Amendment by legislation. Thus the Congress would have the power, thus derived, to proscribe (outlaw) segregation in intrastate transportation. It is worthy of note that for 60 years it has not seen fit to do so.

"While any student of history knows that under our system of government vindication of the constitutional rights of the individual is not, and ought not to be, entrusted to the Congress, its reticence to intrude upon the internal affairs of the several states should caution us against doing so where the path of duty is not plainly marked and when we must hold a clear precedent of the Supreme Court outmoded.

"Because I would dismiss the action on the authority of Plessy vs. Ferguson, I do not reach the procedural questions discussed in the majority opinion. I respectfully dissent."

JUDGE F. M. JOHNSON JR. . . . No bus segregation

JUDGE RICHARD T. RIVES . . . Rules in Montgomery case

Lynne dissents and explains why

News Sun. 6-5-56
B'ham, Ala. p. 1

MONTGOMERY, Ala., June 5—Federal Judge Seybourn H. Lynne of Birmingham dissented from the ruling of his two fellow panel judges which held that segregation on Montgomery city buses was unconstitutional.

Montgomery Segregation On Buses Is Ruled Illegal

Constitution 6-6-56
Atlanta, Ga. Wed. 6-6-56

By REX THOMAS

MONTGOMERY, Ala., June 5 (AP)—Splitting 2-1, a three-judge panel in Federal Court ruled today that racial segregation on city buses in Montgomery violates the federal Constitution.

City and state officials are expected to appeal directly to the Supreme Court in what may become the first clear cut decision by that court on city bus segregation.

The panel, anticipating that, gave opposing lawyers two weeks to submit written suggestions on how the formal anti-segregation order should be entered, and whether a stay should be granted pending an appeal.

Meanwhile in Memphis, the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People filed suit in federal court asking that Tennessee bus segregation statutes be declared unconstitutional.

1. A three-judge court to hold a "speedy hearing" and issue a temporary injunction restraining the City of Memphis and the Memphis Street Railway Co., from enforcing the Tennessee bus segregation statutes.

2. That the court upon a final hearing declare the state law unconstitutional—therefore null and void.

The suit asks that "Negro citizens be granted similar privileges and immunities given all citizens of the United States, due process of law and the equal protection of the laws secured by the 14th Amendment to the national Constitution."

Judge Richard T. Rives of the U. S. Fifth Circuit of Appeals and Judge Frank M. Johnson Jr., of the Middle District of Alabama signed the majority opinion holding bus segregation contrary to the 14th Amendment to the Constitution.

Judge Seybourn Lynne of the Northern District of Alabama dissented, insisting that separate but equal seating facilities for white and Negro passengers are permissible.

Pending a formal order to carry out the panel's findings, no injunction was issued. When it comes, Johnson said it will affect only buses in Montgomery even though state laws were held unconstitutional.

Wed. 6-6-56

To extend it to other Alabama cities would require a separate court order based on today's ruling.

Johnson said it is comparable to the Supreme Court's two-year-old ruling against school segregation which still hasn't affected Alabama directly because this state wasn't named in the litigation which brought the integration ruling.

The Alabama Public Service Commission, one of the defendants in the suit, said "we are deeply shocked" and that the decision will be appealed.

The PSC will seek to have the ruling set aside pending the appeal, the statement said, because "any other action would invite racial conflicts in this state. . ."

In Birmingham, two of the three city commissioners said they plan no changes in segregation laws because of the decision.

The historic decision came six months to the day after the start of Montgomery's Negro bus boycott, a still continuing mass refusal to ride segregated buses.

What immediate effect today's ruling will have on the bus boycott was undetermined. The Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., Negro Baptist minister and one of the boycott leaders, said he couldn't say without discussing the decision with Negro attorneys.

However, he said Negroes will end the mass protest "whenever it becomes possible to go back on city buses on an integrated basis."

King, one of 90 Negroes under indictment for violating Alabama's anti-boycott law and the first defendant brought to trial, called the ruling a "great victory for democracy and justice."

Montgomery's population of 125,000 includes an estimated 50,000 Negroes.

King was fined $500 and costs at his boycott trial and has appealed to higher courts. Trials of other defendants have been postponed pending the outcome.

Mayor W. A. Gayle and City Commissioner Clyde Sellers and Frank Parks declined to say what their next step will be until the formal court order is issued.

REV. ARVIE BANKS, CLANTON, ALA.
BUS BOYCOTT, MONTGOMERY, ALA.

Another Minister Linked To Boycott

Advertiser Fri. 3-16-56 Montgomery, Ala.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., March 15 (AP)—Another Negro minister, the Rev. Arvie Banks, was arrested at Clanton, Ala., yesterday on an indictment charging participation in Montgomery's continuing Negro bus boycott.

He was identified by Sheriff Mac Butler's office here as pastor of a Baptist church at Clanton. His arrest brought the total number of defendants in the mass boycott indictments to 93.

Banks' part in the boycott was not spelled out in the indictment, but he was questioned by investigating officers while in Montgomery since the bus dispute began.

The boycott started last Dec. 5 in protest against segregated seating facilities on Montgomery City Lines buses. It has continued without letup.

Another Minister Linked To Boycott

Advertiser P. 1 Fri. 3-16-56

MONTGOMERY, Ala., March 15 (AP)—Another Negro minister, the Rev. Arvie Banks, was arrested at Clanton, Ala., yesterday on an indictment charging participation in Montgomery's continuing Negro bus boycott.

Montgomery, Ala.

He was identified by Sheriff Mac Butler's office here as pastor of a Baptist church at Clanton. His arrest brought the total number of defendants in the mass boycott indictments to 93.

Banks' part in the boycott was not spelled out in the indictment, but he was questioned by investigating officers while in Montgomery since the bus dispute began.

The boycott started last Dec. 5 in protest against segregated seating facilities on Montgomery City Lines buses. It has continued without letup.

38b 1956

ALABAMA

SENATOR SAM ENGLEHARDT
MONTGOMERY, ALA. BUS BOYCOTT

Alabama Legislator Hits Paper's Fund for Negro

Sunday Star p. 18-A
Washington D.C.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Mar. 24 (AP).—A Citizens Council official today suggested that a New Jersey newspaper, seeking funds to pay a fine levied against the Rev. Martin Luther King, jr., convicted Negro bus boycott leader, is not going far enough in its campaign. Sun. 3-25-56

State Senator Sam Engelhardt of Macon County, executive secretary of the Association of Alabama Citizens Councils, issued this statement on a campaign launched by the Asbury Park Press:

"We think donations to pay King's fine are not enough. Donations should also be solicited to move King, the Montgomery Improvement Association and every member of the National Association for Agitation of the Colored People in Montgomery to Asbury Park.

"If this is done we predict within one year other donations will be requested to move them away from Asbury Park. Apparently the Asbury Park Press' circulation among Negroes has been slipping lately."

Montgomery's Mayor W. A. Gayle, and Associate Commissioners Frank Parks and Clyde Sellers, all members of the Montgomery White Citizens Council, were unavailable for comment.

The newspaper launched its campaign to raise $1,000 to pay a $500 fine levied against Mr. King after he was convicted of violating Alabama's anti-boycott law Thursday.

In a Page One story and editorial, Editor Wayne D. McMurray suggested that readers of his newspaper might want to contribute to the fund to pay Mr. King's fine, court costs and legal expenses.

Costs Total $184.45

Circuit Court Clerk John Matthews said today court costs in Mr. King's case amounted to $184.45.

In a telegram to Mr. King, Mr. McMurray said:

"We of the Asbury Park Press, outraged at the conviction of a fellow American for asserting a right our Constitution guarantees to all, want to help you in your fight for justice. We are starting a fund drive among our readers for money to pay your fine and court costs.

"The Press itself is contributing $50. Checks will be drawn in your name and forwarded to you, or to your attorneys if you prefer."

Reply to Jersey paper—

Englehardt says fund to pay Negro's fine stops too short

News Sun. 3-25-56 p. 6-B

MONTGOMERY, Ala., March 24 — (AP) — A Citizens Council leader Saturday suggested a New Jersey newspaper seeking funds to pay a convicted Negro bus boycott leader's fine isn't going far enough in its campaign.

State Sen. Sam Engelhardt of Macon County, executive secretary of the Assn. of Alabama Citizens Councils, issued this statement on a campaign launched by The Asbury Park Press:

B'ham, Ala.

"We think donations to pay King's (the Rev. M. L. King) fine are not enough. Donations should also be solicited to move King, the Montgomery Improvement Association and every member of the National Assn. for Agitation (sic) of the Colored People (NAACP) in Montgomery to Asbury Park.

"If this is done we predict within one year other donations will be requested to move them away from Asbury Park. Apparently The Asbury Park Press' circulation among Negroes has been slipping lately."

THE NEWSPAPER launched its campaign to raise $1000 to pay a $500 fine levied against King after he was convicted of violating Alabama's anti-boycott law Tuesday.

In a telegram to King, Editor Wayne D. McMurray said:

"We of The Asbury Park Press, outraged at the conviction of a fellow American for asserting a right our constitution guarantees to all, want to help you in your fight for justice. We are starting a fund drive among our readers for money to pay your fine and court costs . . ."

King was reported out of the city and unavailable for comment on the offer.

Deacon causes arrest of Capital Negro pastor

Mirror 3-28
Birm. Ala.
3-26-56
38b

MONTGOMERY, Ala., March 26—(AP)—A deacon filed disorderly conduct charges yesterday against a Negro bus boycott leader because he refused to give up his pastorate at a Negro Baptist Church.

The Rev. U. J. Fields, 25, was arrested by city detectives at the Bell Street Baptist Church yesterday on a disorderly conduct warrant sworn out by Deacon George Durden.

The Negro minister posted $100 bond and was freed pending a hearing Friday in city police court.

Fields, who testified during the boycott trial last week of another Baptist minister, said a "particular group" in his congregation voted to remove him because they "do not believe in taking a stand on what our people are pressing for."

BUT DURDEN said the action to remove Fields was not connected with his boycott activity. He said the congregation approved Fields' ouster last week "to keep peace and harmony" in the church.

The minister charged the vote was taken at an unannounced meeting attended largely by the "particular group" opposing him. He said he plans to continue with his ministerial duties.

Fields said "pressure was put on some of my parishoners from outside" because of his anti-segregation activity. "I do have a faction in my church who disagree and many of them can be used by outsiders," the minister added.

FIELDS TESTIFIED before the Grand Jury which indicted the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. and more than 90 other Negro leaders for taking part in the 17-week-old bus boycott here. The boycott began Dec. 5 in protest to segregated seating.

He was also called by the state to testify last week at the four-day trial which ended in King's conviction for violating Alabama's anti-boycott law.

He was questioned about the activity of the Montgomery Improvement Assn., a Negro organization which the state claimed has promoted the bus boycott. Fields is secretary of the MIA.

FIELDS REFUSED to take the oath required of witnesses because he said he does not swear. Circuit Judge Eugene Carter did not insist that he be sworn in.

However, when prosecution attorneys asked several questions about the MIA leadership and Fields said he could not remember, Judge Carter warned him to "tell the truth."

File Charge On Pastor In Boycott

Constitution
Mon. 3-26-56
Atlanta, Ga.
p. 5

Had Refused To Quit Pulpit

MONTGOMERY, Ala., March 25 (AP)—A Negro minister who testified during the bus boycott trial last week was charged with disorderly conduct today because he refused to give up his pastorate.

The Rev. U. J. Fields said the ouster order was voted by a "particular group" within the congregation of the Bell Street Baptist Church which "does not believe in taking a stand on what our people are pressing for."

38b

Fields, 25, was released under $100 bond after being arrested this morning at the church on a warrant sworn out by George Durden, deacon in the church. He will be given a hearing in City Police Court Friday.

Durden said the congregation voted to remove Fields from the pulpit solely "in the interest of peace and harmony within the church." He said the removal order was not connected with Fields' activity in the prolonged bus boycott here in protest to racial segregation.

But Fields charged that "pressure was put on some of my parishoners fro moutside" because of his "progressive" stand on racial questions.

"I do have a faction in my church who disagree and many of them can be used by outsiders," the Negro minister said.

Durden said the church congregation voted last week to remove Fields from the pastorate. But the minister said the vote was taken without advance notice at a meeting attended largely by members of a group opposing him. He said he plans to continue his duties as minister.

He was also called by the state as a witness last week during the trial which ended in the conviction of the Rev. M. L. King, another Negro Baptist minister, for violating Alabama's antiboycott law.

The prosecution questioned Fields about the activity of the Montgomery Improvement Assn., Negro organization which the state tried to show was responsible for continuing the bus boycott. Fields is secretary of the MIA.

Fields refused to take the oath required of witnesses because he said he did not swear. But he promised to tell the truth and Circuit Judge Eugene Carter said that would be enough.

38b 1956 ALABAMA

MONTGOMERY, ALABAMA. BUS BOYCOTT
REV. ROBERT S. GRAETZ

The Mechanics Of The Bus Boycott

Advertiser
Tues. 1-10-56

It Costs $200 A Day For A Fleet Of 250 To 350 Cars; Together With The Story Of A Little Known White Pastor Who Has An All-Negro Congregation

By Tom Johnson Of The Advertiser Staff

Montgomery, Ala.

A YOUNG WHITE minister clad in the vestments of the Luthern Church stood in his pulpit on a Sunday last month and calmly urged his congregation to give its fullest support to the Negro boycott of Montgomery buses.

P. 4-A

JOHNSON

He told of his plans to make his own car available to a "share the ride" pool, organized to transport Negroes unable to afford taxis, and indicated he was about to assume an active part in the conduct of the boycott. He said:

"Let's try to make this boycott as effective as possible, because it won't be any boycott if half of us ride the buses and half don't ride. So if we're going to do it, let's make a good job of it." Then he began his prepared sermon, "The Blessings Of God's Covenant," taken from the 31st chapter of Jeremiah.

Startling as they seem, Pastor Robert S Graetz' remarks fell on no shocked ears and no one stamped from the room indignantly. On the contrary, there was enthusiastic approval from the 210 members who make up the congregation of the Trinity Lutheran Church on Cleveland Avenue. It is an all-Negro congregation. Graetz is their pastor—one of only two Lutheran ministers so situated in Alabama (the other is in Birmingham).

POOL OF 250 TO 350 AUTOS

In the days following his Dec. 4 sermon, Graetz put in as much as 16 hours a day carrying on his church duties and helping to organize what was to become a crippling boycott of buses by Negroes.

Graetz hauled passengers in his new Chevrolet from 6 a.m. to 9 a.m., pausing only to load or discharge passengers or to gas his car. As a member of a transportation committee, he helped organize a pool of 250 to 350 private cars and establish pickup and dispatch points for transporting Negroes to and from work.

He dashed off a letter to other white ministers on his much-used mimeograph machine, acquainting them with "certain facts" concerning the boycott and concluding: "Please consider this matter prayerfully and carefully, with Christian love. Our Lord said, 'Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me.'" (Some of Graetz' stationery carries the biblical quotation, "And the Angel of the Lord spake unto Phillip saying: 'Arise, go toward the South,' Acts 8:26.")

In the evenings, he attended mass meetings where boycott leaders made progress reports and passed the plate to raise money for operational expenses—mostly gasoline. (The meetings are held Tuesdays and Thursdays, rotating from church to church.)

In short, Bob Graetz did as much as any Negro minister or layman to make the boycott effective and to raise some $7,000 to support it.

'SPONTANEOUS DEMAND'

By last week, as the boycott moved into its second month, the young minister had slackened his pace somewhat. He no longer serves on the committee and he attends few meetings—in order, he says, to press his "natural advantage" as a minister. He fears his presence at mass meetings might be a stigma that would lessen his effectiveness in gaining support for the Negroes.

He was still, however, a far from inactive "first lieutenant," working with other ministers and staying in contact with "the general," who seems to be the Rev. M. L. King, pastor of Dexter Avenue Baptist Church and a policy-making leader of the boycott. (Graetz has had "little influence" on the planning, leaving that to others.)

It didn't take Graetz long to get thoroughly wrapped up in the Negro affairs after arriving in Montgomery in late June. By the time the boycott developed, he already was acquainted with most of the principals, including Rosa Parks.

He says: "She must have figured that, if the Lord wanted to make her the goat, she was willing."

Graetz, a boyish-looking 27, of medium build, first heard of the arrest "at about third hand" on Saturday, Dec. 3, a day or two after it happened. At about the same time, he began to get word of an impending protest movement. He thought at first it involved boycotting the buses for just one day and that its purpose was to protest the arrest of Rosa Parks. But he was told later that the principle grievance was over previous "abuses" of Negro bus patrons and that the protest was aimed directly at the bus company.

When the first mass meeting was held at Holt Street Baptist Church on the Monday night following the arrest, Graetz said there was a "spontaneous demand" for a boycott of indefinite duration and Negro leaders, caught unprepared, hastily drafted a resolution to that effect. It urged all citizens "regardless of race" to refrain from riding the buses and called for the cooperation of employers and car owners to help in transporting the protesting bus riders.

$200 A DAY A CAR

It was then that Graetz took the transportation committee assignment. An executive committee was organized to run the campaign. Both groups were made up almost entirely of ministers "because it's almost impossible to bring pressure" against them.

Dispatch stations were established in all predominantly Negro areas to furnish transportation between 6 a.m. and noon each day. Homeward-bound workers were given a prepared list of pickup stations where they could wait for private cars.

Ministers urged their congregations to make special offerings to buy gasoline for the car pool—a heavy expense. It costs about $200 a day to keep the cars running. On the first Sunday, about $1,800 was raised. More money rolled in from churches in other cities—New York, Philadelphia, Mobile, Tuscaloosa, Tuskegee—and from "anonymous white friends." Altogether, Graetz said nearly $7,000 had been collected "at last report" and that was a "rather sizable balance."

While most of the money was spent for gasoline, some of it was used for legal aid. Some was spent to buy advertising to give "our side" of the protest. ("Protest" is the right word, says Graetz; it isn't a boycott.)

THE HIGH SHERIFF

Graetz hauled as many as 40 or 50 passengers a day, while driving some 50 miles. When he was offered money, he carefully decline to accept it, suggesting that the passenger "multiply the number of rides by 10c" and contribute that amount at the mass meetings. It was during this period that Graetz had his brush with the law.

As he tells the story, Graetz had been driving about two and one-half hours on the morning of Dec. 19 when he parked by a meter near Dean's Drug Store on Monroe Street to pick up five Negroes going to Normandale. He was careful not to park in a nearby taxi zone.

GRAETZ

As he crossed Dexter Avenue, a siren sounded from the car behind him and he pulled to the curb. A man who Graetz said he later learned was Sheriff Mac Sim Butler walked up and said: "What are you doing—running a taxi?"

Graetz explained the Negroes were "friends" and not passengers. Butler accused him of picking up passengers in a taxi zone and ordered Graetz to follow him to the county jail.

There, Graetz was placed in a room marked "deputy sheriff" and left alone for a few minutes. "For which I was very grateful," Graetz says. "I had a little prayer session."

NO, SAID THE JUDGE

Another man who Graetz assumed was a deputy came in and lectured him on religion, politics and patriotism. "We like things the way they are here," he said. "We don't want anybody trying to change them."

Shortly, Graetz said, Butler returned from the courthouse and said he had tried to charge the minister with running a taxi and hauling Negroes in violation of segregation laws but "the judge wouldn't let him."

He was not threatened, says Graetz, but "they were very rough and gruff."

He was released after about a half hour "under the definite impression they didn't like what I was doing," he recalls wryly.

NATIVE OF WEST VIRGINIA

Graetz is a native of Charleston, W.Va., and went to high school there. He became interested, but not very active, in inter-racial activities during that period. Once, he planned to arrange a meeting of young white members of the Lutheran League with some young Negroes. But he "just never got around to inviting anybody."

It was at the Lutheran Capital University and Seminary in Dayton, Ohio, that Graetz began to work with Negroes in earnest. He organized a campus race relations club made up of white and Negro students who met regularly to hear speeches. Once, Graetz was introduced to the late Walter White, the NAACP agitator, and heard the NAACP founder say that race relations were improving because of the large number of whites involved in the movement.

"Naturally, I just beamed," Graetz says, "because that really fit me."

In debating clubs, his arguments contained a broad socialistic strain but no one was concerned. His father, an engineer for Libby-Owens-Ford Glass Co. at Charleston, told his son that "someone once said that a young college man who doesn't become a socialist at some time before he is 25 has no heart, and one who clings to that view after 25 has no brain." "I'm past that stage now," says Graetz. "In fact, I'm a capitalist with 30 shares of Libby-Owens-Ford."

CAME HERE 2 YEARS AGO

The one time that he voted was in a West Virginia Democratic primary four or five years ago, and all his candidates lost. He considers himself an Eisenhower Democrat.

Graetz came to Montgomery after two years as an "intern minister" at a predominantly Negro Church in Los Angeles. The American Lutheran Church, knowing his views on race relations, suggested him for the Cleveland Avenue congregation as a successor to a Negro minister, the Rev. Nelson Trout, who by a coincidence, went to the same Los Angeles church that Graetz had left three months earlier.

With his wife and two children, Graetz moved into an unfinished parsonage next door to the church. The six-room ranch-style home was finally completed in November. The children, Margy, 3, and Bobby, 2, play in the picket-fenced backyard. Mrs. Graetz, 26, expects another child this month.

Because of Graetz' many activities—he also preaches at Clanton and Wetumpka—he and his wife have had little time for "social life," but his defiant stand on racial matters has left him no shortage of friends. "We have many high class friends among both Negroes and whites—pastors and lawyers and just plain citizens," says Graetz. "I have made a new friend every day since the boycott began."

For relaxation, he and Mrs. Graetz play "some kind of game every night," no matter how late it is when Graetz finishes his day's work. Usually it's gin or rummy or crokinola, a game Mrs. Graetz gave him for Christmas.

A MOTHER'S CONCERN

Though not the only white person active in the boycott, Graetz is the only one who makes no secret of his activities. Graetz knows of one white who drives a carload of Negroes to work every morning, and there are "numerous reports" of white women who have told their maids not to worry if late for work because it's "understandable."

What do his parents think of Graetz' part in the boycott? His mother called Christmas and told him to be careful. She also inquired anxiously if Dr. Lechleitner knew what Graetz was doing. Dr. R. D. Lechleitner is executive secretary of the Board of American Missions of the American Lutheran Church and, as a matter of fact, he doesn't know of Graetz's activities. But he will shortly. Graetz has just mailed him a full report. (If Dr. Lechleitner happened to read the Dec. 22 edition of the national Negro magazine Jet, he does know something about it. That edition carried a picture of Graetz and a story about him.)

If his parents share Graetz' views on racial matters, it is unlikely that his great-grandfather would have approved his namesake's activities. Robert Graetz I came to America from Berlin to tend the German Lutheran flocks in parts of New York and Ohio. And it was to them alone that he ministered.

"He wouldn't even talk to Swedish Lutherans," Graetz says laughingly. He felt the Swedish ministers should look out for the Swedes and Catholics for Catholics. He wasn't much of a missionary. Besides, he had his hands full with the Germans."

SOUL AND SOLE

Graetz doesn't think the boycott will end until something "really satisfactory" is agreed upon. The Negroes, he says, have endured abuses for too long to rush back to patronizing the bus company. With the car pool working well, few of them have suffered any great inconvenience. Some even get better service now, he says—thy're picked up nearer their home and delivered closer to their work. And, besides, they're downright enjoying themselves.

Graetz says one 72-year-old man who had ridden the bus 30 or 40 years sits on his front porch and laughs heartily every time a bus drives by. A woman reported gleefully that the buses were driving by her house "as naked as can be."

Some are more serious. A Negro woman "who had walked halfway across town" was given a ride by a minister who asked if she was tired. She replied:

"Well, my body may be a bit tired, but for many years now my soul has been tired. Now my soul is resting. So I don't mind if my body is tired, because my soul is free."

Graetz thinks of himself as a radical although not as much as he once was. ("I was really radical in college.") He uses another vague word—"reactionary"—in describing the Southern viewpoint. It is doubtful, though, if Gaetz is as radical as he likes to think. His strongest expression on segregation is that the process should be speeded up some but should occur gradually. He is not given to florid, incendiary speeches of the upjlifting variety, but it is clear that he is intensely interested in the welfare of individual Negroes.

ACKNOWLEDGES IGNORANCE

It is also clear that the South is not what Graetz ignorantly envisioned it to be. "I thought Negroes were shot if they walked down the street," he says. So what is responsible for his taking a stand that makes him a marked man in a white Southern community? Perhaps that question is best answered by a few excerpts from some of his recent writings and conversations:

"The reactionary element in the South will stop at nothing to maintain their strangle-hold on the Negro population, whom they still hold in virtual economic slavery."

"I have been told that I am a kind of symbol to my people. Many of them had long ago concluded that it was scarcely possible for a white person to be a Christian. But now they know that, with some of us, Christianity is more than pious profession of the lips."

"Sometime ago, I read that the first requisite of a successful missionary was that he become color blind. I figured that the same was true of my work here."

"I know that I shall be critized for my stand. I may even suffer violence. But I cannot minister to souls alone. My people also have bodies."

Pastor Graetz Is Threatened; And Quickly Receives Clyde Sellers' Protection, As Phone Gushes Praise, Abuse

Advertiser 1-12-56

Montgomery Ala

By Tom Johnson

THE REV. ROBERT S. GRAETZ made the following sleepy notes after a telephone call at 2:15 a.m., Tuesday.

"White man who seemed to be drunk demanded that I come and give him taxi service like what has been furnished to the dark complected people. Suggested we set up a car pool for white peopl so [they] can save the 15c fare. Refused to give name.

After The Advertiser, containing the story of his ministry at a Negro Lutheran church on Cleveland Avenue appeared in general circulation a few hours later, Graetz was beseiged by the after-clap of a surprised, and in many cases angry, indignant, white citizenry.

And he, in turn, was surprised by the number who called to express their support of his work. A few dropped by to speak to him in person.

As of late yesterday, Pastor Graetz had logged 30 telephone calls as a direct result of his boycott activities becoming known.

Twelve whites and nine Negroes made friendly calls. Eight calls were of the unfriendly sort, four of them downright hostile.

At 3:35 p.m. Tuesday, a caller threatened that "something might happen" unless Graetz got "out of town by nightfall." Two hours later, three other calls came from the same person in quick succession.

Clyde Sellers Comes Through

BY THAT TIME, Graetz had informed police and a couple of detectives were on hand. When the phone rang the last time, Graetz quickly passed it to one of the officers, who grinned and said: "I heard him all right."

Some time later, Graetz received one of the "nicest calls" since his troubles began. The caller was Police Commission Clyde Sellers, who had learned of the threats shortly after the young pastor called the police.

Almost immediately, Graetz says, Sellers told him: "You know I don't agree with what you believe but I do believe that every man has the right to his own beliefs."

Then Sellers, a White Citizens Council member, assured Graetz, the former NAACP organizer, that nothing would happe nto him, that police cars would watch the pastorate all night to discourage any violence.

Graetz Joins Investigation

THE TWO had a lengthy discussion of the boycott issues, with Sellers expressing the opinion the "boycott has failed." He also informed Graetz of incidents that led him to believe the nearly unanimous abstention of Negroes from riding buses was not entirely voluntary.

Graetz, "thoroughly surprised," said he had heard of no instances where protesting Negroes were pressured, but he promised "to investigate."

Graetz was impressed that the police commissioner should make a friendly call.

Negro Son-In-Law

NOT SO FRIENDLY was the letter from a Union Springs "white man," with the white underscored three times. Its cryptic contents: "May you have for a son-in-law the blackest Negro that ever originated from the wilds of Africa."

A telephone call Tuesday evening: "Pastor, if I was you I wouldn't call myself a pastor. You're a no-good Son-of-a-bitch."

An "old white lady" who said she was a member of an "old family and knew all the city officials" offered her Oldsmobile for use in the car pool.

A man from Macon County said there are "thousands of white people who are determined to right the wrongs that have been done." He added that race relations are "splendid" in Shorter, Ala.

38b 1956

ALABAMA

CLARENCE MITCHELL, NAACP

Vote Down 'Barbarism', Boycott Negroes Urged

Constitution p. 6
Atlanta, Ga. Mon. 4-9-56

MONTGOMERY, Ala., April 8 (UP)—Clarence Mitchell, Washington director of the NAACP, today urged Montgomery's Negroes, presently engaged in a bus boycott, to get out and vote to "save the South from a retreat to bararism and poverty."

Mitchell, speaking before a Negro voting association at the First Baptist Church here, blasted Alabama election laws aimed at keeping down the Negro vote and criticized Southern political leaders who call for federal aid but balk at federal control.

Negroes in Montgomery were still carrying on an effective boycott of the city buses although the first defendant charged with conspiring in the boycott was convicted and 89 other face similar charges.

The boycott started last December as an objection to the "Jim Crow" seating laws maintained on the city buses.

PHOTOSTATIC EVIDENCE

Mitchell said there is "actual photostatic evidence" that some county officials in Alabama who turned down many Negro voters, but did not overlook questionnaires by white voters who admitted they were members of organizations set up to overthrow the government of the United States.

"This is the natural result of a blind unreasoning campaign to prevent all of the people of Alabama from expressing their will," Mitchell said.

The Washington Negro leader said Missouri, which has a population about the same as Alabama, usually records from 1,250,000 to 1,800,000 votes in an election while in 1950 Alabama elected a U. S. senator with a little over 125,000 votes.

Mitchell said the fact that Southern states do restrict Negro voting is one reason that Southern politicians find it hard to get elected to high national posts, such as the presidency.

PRAISES KEFAUVER

He said that Sen. Kefauver (D-Tenn), who hopes to win the Democratic presidential nomination, is the only candidate "who stands a chance to overcome this handicap."

"No one can predict how Sen. Kefauver will fare at the Democratic national convention," Mitchell said, "but he has shown the world that not all Southern officials favor throwing eggs and stones at the Autherine Lucys who seek an education...and that the lynchers of Emmett Till are not the only spokesmen for the South."

38b 1956 ALABAMA

BON VOYAGE — is bade the Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy, of Montgomery, Ala., as he boards plane, 'loaded down' with Los Angeles' check for $5688.27. results of protest rally at Olympic auditorium and luncheon given by the local ministry in the Alabama minister's honor. At left is Lee A. Merriwether, executive secretary, Naacp, and at right, local businessman Leon Harrison.

Montgomery Negroes Walk In Peaceful Demonstration

Commercial Appeal P. 1 Sat. 2-25-56 Memphis, Tenn.

Few Ride Buses And Cabs As Date Is Set For Boycott Trial—Newspaper Executives Endorse Proposal For Bi-Racial Study Commission

(Picture on Page 36)

By JAMES EWING
Staff Writer

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Feb. 24.—Alabama's racially torn capital weathered its tensest day of the 11-week bus boycott Friday without incident as thousands of Negroes walked in passive but peaceful resistance to efforts to get them back on city buses.

Most of those who walked were going to work for white bosses, some for miles through an early morning drizzling rain.

About 150 walked to the courthouse, where 89 pleaded innocent to charges of entering into a conspiracy in their boycott against the buses.

A half a dozen others walked up the hill to the Capitol, where about 75 of the state's newspapers and publishers gave unanimous endorsement to Gov. James E. Folsom's proposal for a bi-racial commission to help work out a solution to race problems.

Not All Comply

The decision to avoid vehicles of all kinds for a 24-hour period was part of the strategy adopted at a mass meeting of about 2,500 Negroes at the Negro First Baptist Church Thursday night.

Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy, pastor, had urged that "race-loving Negroes" shun all forms of auto transportation for one day to show they can walk if they have to.

Not all the city's Negroes obeyed the suggestion. Some were seen riding in private cars and taxis but a taxicab driver said business was down considerably.

A few Negroes are still riding the city buses. One of them, Will Massey retired employe of the bus company, said he opposed the boycott.

Massey said it would have long since ended "if the preachers would quit stirring it up." Massey said Negro preachers are "preaching strife and trouble when they ought to be preaching the Gospel."

24 Ministers

Of the more than 100 Negroes against whom indictments were returned, 24 were ministers. The charges against one of them were dropped in court Friday morning after Circuit Solicitor William F. Thetford said the minister, Rev. A. W. Wilson, testified before the Grand Jury.

Circuit Judge Eugene Carter set March 19 as the date to begin trial of the others.

The charges against the boycott leaders were brought under an Alabama law of 1921 to prevent labor boycotts. It makes it illegal for any two or more persons to enter into a conspiracy to prevent a firm or person from carrying on a lawful business. Violators are subject to a $1,000 fine and six months imprisonment or both.

The boycott began Dec. 5 after a Negro woman, Rosa Parks, was fined $14 in City Court for refusing to move to the colored section of the bus. Her conviction was upheld in Circuit Court but she filed notice of appeal to the Supreme Court.

The mass arrests of the boycotters has touched off nationwide protests among Negro leaders.

Commercial Appeal

Company Losing

Montgomery, with a population of 135,000, is about 45 per cent Negro. Well over half the riders on city buses were Negroes and the company has lost heavily since the boycott started.

The meeting of newspapermen called in the Capitol Friday by Governor Folsom was aimed at finding a solution not only to the Montgomery problem but those at other trouble spots, such as Tuscaloosa, where a Negro coed will resume her efforts next week to gain admission to the University of Alabama.

Governor Folsom said the bi-racial commission would have about 11 members from all sections of the state. P. 2

He said they would be leaders of both races rather than "the wild and woolly elements of the colored people or the extremists among the white people."

The six-foot, eight-inch Governor was warmly praised by the newspapermen for his decision. He received loudest applause, however, when he predicted, "The Negro and white children will not be going to the same schools in our state at any Governor Folsom admitted he was "a little bewildered at how race relations have deteriorated" since his last term as governor in the 40s.

'World Is Looking'

He said, "The whole world is looking at Alabama today" as the state grapples with its race problems.

James Mills, publisher of the Birmingham Post-Herald, was named chairman of a steering committee to plan formation of the commission.

The meeting in the House chamber was filmed for a national television circuit and covered by reporters and photographers for Time, Life, Newsweek and other national news magazines in addition to representatives of the major wire services and Southern newspapers.

A threatened march of Negroes to the Courthouse in protest against the mass arrests was abandoned in favor of the passive resistance movement.

In Charleston, S.C., meanwhile, Roy Wilkins, executive secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, declared the Montgomery indictment of Negro leaders was "the Soviet communism method."

In a speech before the Southeast regional NAACP convention, Wilkins said white Citizens Councils have created "the climate in which violence has occurred." He declared United States "senators cannot go about the country preaching lawless defiance of courts and constitutional government without sharing the responsibility for the violence which may ensue."

Through the Citizens Councils, Wilkins said, "the hoodlums have been given the green light."

Nationwide Stoppage Asked By Pastor

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—(AP)—A one-hour work stoppage and a day of prayer for every Negro in the nation was proposed Friday in support of the Montgomery, Ala., bus boycott.

Representative Adam Clayton Powell (D., N. Y.), Negro pastor of a 15,000-member New York congregation, said Negro leaders have agreed on such a demonstration March 28 — a Wednesday.

It would be known as "National Deliverance Day of Prayer," with no Negro of any age attending school or working between 2 and 3 p. m.

As a preliminary, one-hour prayer sessions will be held in New York Negro churches starting next week, and mass meetings will be held in key Negro churches.

REV. RALPH D. ABERNATHY (BOYCOTT

Associated Press Wirephoto

THE JAILED PASTOR of Montgomery's First Baptist Church, the Rev. Ralph Abernathy, smiles as he hugs a parishioner in front of the jail yesterday after he was brought in for taking part in the Negro bus boycott.

Courier-Journal P. 1

Negro Leaders Arrested For Boycotting Buses

Thurs. 2-23-56

Louisville, Ky.

16 Ministers Among 115 Accused of Violating Alabama Law In 11-Week Segregation Protest

Courier-Journal

By The Associated Press

Montgomery, Ala., Feb. 22.—Negro religious and political leaders, including 16 ministers, were arrested on boycotting charges today in a wholesale roundup of defendants indicted by a grand jury for their mass protest against segregation on City buses.

The grand jury returned indictments late yesterday against 115 defendants accused of taking an active part in the 11-week-old racial boycott against Montgomery City Lines buses.

Dates for their trials will be taken up Friday at their arraignment.

Thousands of Negroes have refused to ride the buses since December 5, when a member of their race, Mrs. Rosa Parks, was fined $14 for refusing to move to the colored section of a bus. City and State laws require such segregation.

Sentenced to Jail

Mrs. Parks was sentenced to 14 days in jail in lieu of the fine today after Circuit Judge Eugene Carter, who ordered the grand-jury investigation, turned down her appeal from the previous conviction in City Court.

She appealed Judge Carter's decision to the State Supreme Court and immediately afterward was arrested on a boycotting indictment.

Judge Carter upheld City and State segregation laws when the issue was raised in Mrs. Parks' defense. He imposed the jail sentence after she refused to pay the fine and announced she planned to appeal the conviction.

Charged Under State Law

All the defendants taken to the County Jail and fingerprinted were released as soon as they put up bond of $300 each. They were charged with violating a State law against organized, illegal boycotting. The maximum sentence for violation is six months in jail and $1,000 fine.

As the roundup of boycott defendants continued, there were these other developments:

1. Governor James E. Folsom invited newspaper editors and publishers to a conference in his office here Friday to discuss racial problems.

Draft Appeal Denied

2. Fred D. Gray, 25-year-old unmarried Negro attorney under indictment on a charge of unlawful practice growing out of the bus boycott, lost an appeal from a draft-board order reclassifying him 1-A. He had been deferred from military service as assistant pastor of a Negro church.

3. City attorneys filed an answer in United States District Court along with a motion to dismiss a pending suit seeking to outlaw City and State laws which require bus and railroad segregation.

Courier-Journal

It was that lawsuit which brought Gray's indictment last week. He was charged with filing the complaint without the consent of one of the five Negro women whose names were signed to the antisegregation petition.

P. 2

Political Leaders Arrested

Two of Montgomery's most active Negro political leaders were among those arrested on boycotting warrants today: E. D. Nixon, former state president of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, and Mrs. Jo Ann Robinson, a teacher at Alabama State College for Negroes in Montgomery.

Nixon, a Pullman porter, is president now of the Montgomery Progressive Democratic Association, a politically active organization, and Mrs. Robinson heads the Women's Political Council.

A small dynamite bomb exploded in the front yard at Nixon's home the night of February 1, but no one was injured.

The Negro ministers arrested included D. S. S. Seay, a leading figure in the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church throughout the world and former executive secretary of its Home Missions Board.

Tucker To Defend 3 In Bus-Boycott Case

Louisville attorney C. Ewbank Tucker said yesterday he would represent three of the ministers arrested at Montgomery, Ala., on charges of taking part in a bus boycott.

Tucker is counsel for the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church. He said the three ministers belong to that denomination.

Associated Press Wirephoto

THE WOMAN WHO TOUCHED OFF Montgomery's Negro bus boycott, Mrs. Rosa Parks, is fingerprinted by City Policeman D. H. Lackey after her arrest yesterday. Mrs. Parks, a seamstress, refused to move to the back of a bus last December. Besides being arrested for her role in the boycott, she lost her appeal yesterday of a $14 fine imposed for violating Alabama segregation laws.

Courier-Journal

Thurs. 2-23-56

P. 2

Louisville, Ky.

Parley Asked To Aid Negroes

Post + Times Herald P. 2
Sat. 3-3-56

A demand that President Eisenhower call an immediate White House conference to protect the civil rights of Negroes was made yesterday by Rep. Adam Clayton Powell Jr. Washington, D.C.

Powell spoke at Charter Day exercises in Andrew Rankin Memorial Chapel, marking the the 89th anniversary of the founding of Howard University.

The New York Congressman also asked that white citizens councils in states defying the Supreme Court decision on racial segregation be placed on the subversive list of the Justice Department. "They are as subversive as the Communist Party," he said. Powell said he had written Attorney General Herbert Brownell yesterday, making this request.

In repeating his Feb. 22 request for a conference of Negro and white leaders on the racial problem, Powell aimed darbs at both the Administration and Adlai Stevenson for their attitudes on the issue.

He called Stevenson's "moderation" proposal "middle-of-the-road shilly-shallying, pussy-footing, double-talking." Powell asked Stevenson, as titular head of the Democratic Party, to use every legal method to prevent Sen. James O. Eastland (D-Miss.) from gaining chairmanship of the Senate Judiciary Committee, which passes on civil rights issues. The request was made prior to the Senate's approval of Eastland for the post yesterday.

Annual alumni awards for distinguished post - graduate achievement went to Llewellyn J. Scott of 38 I st. ne., for social work; Frederick D. Wilkinson of 1914 10th st. nw., for education, and Dr. August C. Terrence of Opelousas, La., for public service.

Scott is founder and director of Blessed Martin DePerres

Hospice, a local home for indigent men. Wilkinson, registrar of Howard University since 1920, has established numerous registrar training programs and positions in colleges. Dr. Terrence, president of the National Medical Association, has long actively fought for the right of the Negro to vote.

The three award winners spoke last night at a Charter Day banquet in Baldwin Hall.

Prayer Day Planned By Negroes Here

Plans for local observance of a March 28 day of prayer in behalf of Negro victims of prejudice were made yesterday at a meeting of the nterdenominational Ministers Alliance, hel d in Mount Carmel Baptist Church.

Purpose of the observance is "to organize the spiritual forces of America, to bring to bear the power of righteousness against the power of injustice," according to Rep. Adam Clayton Pawell (D-N.Y.).

Local plans include a special one-hour public program at noon March 28 in Vermont Avenue Baptist Church, and an 8 p. m. meeting in Metropolitan Baptist Church.

Program committees were appointed yesterday by the Rev. W. H. Jernagin, pastor of Mount Carmel Baptist Church and chairman of the meeting.

Outlying preliminary plans for the observance, Rep. Powell urge that leadership be only by clergymen, that meetings be held only in churches and that "we use our weapon only prayer —nothing else."

IKE ASKED TO ACT ON BOYCOTT CASE

Times - Picayune
Sun. 2-26-56

AME Bishops Urge End to 'Tragic Persecution'

(News of Other Developments on Page 20.) P. 1

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25 (AP)—Bishops of the African Methodist Episcopal Church Saturday appealed to President Eisenhower to act against what they called the "tragic persecution" of leaders of a Negro boycott of buses in Montgomery, Ala. New Orleans, La.

The A.M.E. Council of Bishops passed a resolution calling on Eisenhower to "place the full power of the executive branch of our government against this tragic persecution of innocent Americans."

The council addressed a similar resolution to Atty. Gen. Brownell and another to Gov. James E. Folsom of Alabama, praising his proposal to create a biracial commission to settle differences between Negroes and whites.

Twelve of the council's 13 bishops met in a closed session. They issued a statement denouncing the arrest of clergymen and others on charges they conspired to keep Negroes from riding Montgomery busses in protest against segregation.

Ike's Aid Prods Congress

Taking cognizance of the boycott today, the White House indirectly prodded Congress to speed action on President Eisenhower's proposal to create a commission to consider civil rights problems.

Bryce N. Harlow, administrative assistant to the President, said the boycott and other incidents served to point up the need for action.

Harlow made his comment in a letter to Rep. Powell (D-N.Y.), a Negro, who asked White House action two days ago to protect the indicted Negroes.

Harlow told Powell that his telegram has been brought to the attention of Brownell and the justice department would give Powell "further advice as promptly as possible." This is a customary step in such matters.

'Speed Enactment,' Appeal

Harlow's letter to Powell added:

"I have also been asked to advise you of our view that this incident is one of a number recently in public notice which reinforces the President's state of the Union recommendation that the Congress establish a commission to consider actions having civil rights implications.

"Unfortunately there has been no congressional action since January to implement this recommendation of the Presiden.t It is hoped that you and your colleagues will find your way clear to speed the enactment of this legislation in this session."

Referring to the Montgomery bus boycott, the A. M. E. bishops said in their statement:

"We promise not only our prayers and moral support but any material aid in support of efforts to meet the situation with justice by nonviolent and constitutional means."

'MORE OF A LAWYER'

Advertiser P. 1

President Gets Question On Montgomery Trials

Thurs. 3-22-56 - Montgomery, Ala.

WASHINGTON, March 21 (AP)—President Eisenhower in a press conference yesterday discussed Montgomery's bus boycott trials in answering a question of a New York newspaperman.

Robert G. Spivack of the New York Post asked the President: "Mr. President, with regards to the situation in Alabama, how do you feel about Negroes being brought to trial for refusing to ride the Montgomery buses?"

The President replied:

"Well, you are asking me, I think, to be more of a lwayer that I certainly am.

"But, as I understand it, there is a state law about boycotts, and it is under that kind of thing that these people are being brought to trial.

"I think that the statement I made last week on this whole subject represents the views that I now, all the views I now have to make; and I do believe, that it is incumbent on all the South to show some progress. That is what the Supreme Court asked for. And they turned it over to local district courts.

"I believe that we should not stagnate but again I plead for understanding, for really sympathetic consideration of a problem that is far larger, both in its emotional and even in its physical aspects that most of us realize."

(The New York Post has two staff artists covering the Montgomery boycott trials. They are drawing courtroom pictures for publication in the New York newspaper.)

In other press questioning:

J. Anthony Lewis, New York Times — Mr. President, do you have any plans to mobilize religious or other leaders of the South to your point of view of moderation and progress on the segregation?

A—Well. . . That is one thing that Billy Graham teaches not only abroad, he teaches it among ourselves and, frankly, I believe that the pulpits do have a very great responsibility here.

This is a very tough one, and people have to search their own hearts if we are going to get a decent answer and keep going ahead.

Now, let's don't try to think of this as a tremendous fight that is going to separate Americans and get ourselves into a nasty mess.

Let's try to think of it of how can we make progress and keep it going and not stop it. Now that, I believe, the pulpits can help on.

Edward P. Morgan, American Broadcasting Co. — Mr. President, a number of prominent Southern conservative Democrats supported you actively in 1952, and many of these since have indicated their defiance of the Supreme Court's decision on segregation.

In view of what you said just a moment ago, would you accept such support in '56?

A—I don't believe they expressed their defiance. I believe they expressed their belief that it was in error, and they have talked about using legal means to circumvent or to get it, whatever the expression they have used.

I do not believe that anyone, the ones that I know, have used the words "defy the Supreme Court," because when we carry the point. when we carry this to the ultimate, rember that the Constitution, as interpreted by the Supreme Court, is our basic law.

Advertiser

The one thing is, though, the basic law appears to change as I pointed out last week. It was one thing in 1896, and it is a very greatly different thing now. P. 2-4

So, there are emotions, very deep emotions, connected with this problem. Consequently, these people, they have, of course, their free choice as to what they want to do. As far as I am concerned, I am for moderation, but I am for progress; that is exactly what I am for in this thing.

Bus Protest Case Inspired Ike's Plea

Daily Worker
Thurs. 3-22-56
Atlanta, Ga.

WASHINGTON — (INS) — A question on the trial of Montgomery (Ala.) Negroes accused of fostering a bus service boycott inspired President Eisenhower's call Wednesday for the South to "show progress" toward ending the segregation dispute. P. 1

The Chief Executive was asked at his news conference if he would state how he felt "about Negroes being brought to trial for refusing to ride the (segregated) Montgomery buses."

Mr. Eisenhower replied: "Well, you are asking me I think, to be more of a lawyer than I certainly am.

"But, as I understand it, there is a state law about boycotts, and it is under that kind of thing that these people are being brought to trial.

"I think that the statement I made last week on this whole subject represents all the views that I now have to make; and I do believe that it is incumbent on all the South to show progress. That is what the Supreme Court asked for. And they turned it over to local district courts.

"I believe that we should not stagnate, but again I plead for understanding, for really sympathetic consideration of a problem that is far larger, both in its emotional and even in its physical aspects than most of us realize."

Later, when he was asked if he had "any plans to mobilize religious or other leaders of the South" to his stand for moderation and progress on the segregation issue, Mr. Eisenhower referred to the work of Evangelist Billy Graham.

He said the Rev. Mr. Graham, both at home and abroad, tries to "promote mediation instead of conflict, tolerance instead of prejudice."

Mr. Eisenhower added: "I said that is one thing Billy Graham teaches not only abroad, he teaches it among ourselves, and frankly, I believe that the pulpits do have a very great responsibility here.

"This is a very tough one, and people have to search their own hearts if we are going to get a decent answer and keep going ahead.

"Now, let's don't try to think of this as a tremendous fight that is going to separate Americans and get ourselves into a nasty mess.

"Let's try to think of how we can make progress and keep it going and not stop it. Now that, I believe, the pulpits can help on."

38b 1956

ALABAMA

GOV. JAMES E. FOLSOM
BUS BOYCOTT, MONTGOMERY, ALA.

Folsom Fails In Six Bus Protest Halt Attempts

World P. 1
Fri. 3-16-56
Birmingham Ala.

MONTGOMERY, Ala.— (INS) — Alabama Gov. James Folsom disclose Tuesday he has held six unsuccessful conference in an effort to bring about a settlement of the boycott of city busses by Montgomery Negroes.

Folsom said he held three meetings with Negro boycott leaders and three meetings with Montgomery Mayor W. A. Gayle. Boycott Leaders contend they want bus seast on a "first come-first served" basis and "courteous treatment" Mayor Gayle has called the boycott an atempt to end segregation, which he said is required by state law.

In a prepared statement Gov. Folsom called upon boycott leaders and mayor Gayle to strive to reach a settlement "so that life can return to normal in our Capital City."

The Boycott began Dec. 5 with arrest of a Negro woman for refusing to move to the rear of a city bus. Eighty-nine leaders and participants subsequently were indicted charged with conspiring to injure the Bus Company's business. They are scheduled for trial at the court term which begins next Monday.

The Bus boycott, meanwhile, continues, with virtually all Negroes refusing to ride, with a resultant loss of about 60 per cent of the company's business.

Council lauds boycott jury, blasts Folsom

News P. 1
Wed. 3-29-56
Birmingham

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Feb. 29—(AP)—A biracial organization last night approved the indictment of Negro bus boycott leaders here and charged that Gov. James E. Folsom "has not proven competent during these grave and grievous times."

The charge against Folsom was included in a resolution which put the Central Alabama Citizens Council on record as opposed to a biracial commission which might try to solve racial disputes outside the framework of Alabama's segregation laws.

NEWSMEN WERE barred from the "members only" meeting in the Montgomery City Hall, but police estimated 3000 persons attended. The Council claims 12,000 members in this area.

Another resolution commended the Montgomery County Grand Jury which last week indicted 100 Negroes, including 24 ministers, for violating Alabama's anti-boycott law in their protest against racial segregation.

The Council also called on state officials to continue enforcement of segregation laws and changed its name from the Central Alabama Citizens Council to the Montgomery County Citizens Council.

State Sen. Sam Englehardt of Macon County, chairman of the organization, said after the meeting that the resolution naming Gov. Folsom did not mean the council would not support an "independent" biracial commission that would try to mediate racial disputes.

BUT HE SAID it opposed the Legislature creating such a commission as was recommended by Gov. Folsom yesterday in his proclamation ordering another special session of the Legislature beginning tomorrow.

Englehardt, who released copies of the resolution after the meeting, said it was feared a biracial commission carrying authority given by the Legislature might possibly try to erase existing segregation laws.

In commending the Grand Jury which returned the boycott indictments, the council said "sinister" influences are at work in Alabama. The 12-week-old bus boycott, the resolution said, is a notorious and flagrant violation of all customs and traditions of our city and state."

News P. 4

THE BOYCOTT has been under way since Dec. 5 in protest to segregated seating required on buses by state and city laws.

Leaders of the protest movement, many of them Negro ministers, promised at a rally Monday night to continue the boycott despite the indictments.

Ninty Negroes arrested thus far on the indictments were all freed under $300 bond each pending trial. The anti-boycott law was passed by the Legislature in 1921 for use in labor disputes.

Boycott Settlement Urged by Folsom

Post & Times Herald
Wed. 3-14-56

MONTGOMERY, Ala., March 13 (AP)—Gov. James E. Folsom publicly called on the Mayor of Montgomery and leaders of the Negro bus boycott today to bring about a settlement of the boycott so that life can return to normal in our capital city."

Washington D.C.

Folsom said he has conferred "privately" three times with boycott leaders and three times with Mayor W. A. Gayle, "trying to settle this dispute." Negroes began their boycott of Montgomery City Lines buses last Dec. 5 in protest against segregated seating facilities. City and state laws require segregation.

38b 1956

ALABAMA

GOV. JAMES E. FOLSOM
MONTGOMERY, BUS BOYCOTT

Folsom Fails In Six Bus Protest Halt Attempts

Daily World
Wed. 3-14-56
Atlanta Ga.

MONTGOMERY, Ala.— (INS) — Alabama Gov. James Folsom disclose Tuesday he has held six unsuccesful conference in an effort to bring about a settlement of the boycott of city busses by Montgomery Negroes.

P. 1

Folsom said he held three meetings with Negro boycott leaders and three meetings with Montgomery Mayor W. A. Gayle. Boycott Leaders contend they want bus seast on a "first come-first served" basis and "courteous treatment" Mayor Gayle has called the boycott an atempt to end segregation, which he said is required by state law.

In a prepared statement Gov. Folsom called upon boycott leaders and mayor Gayle to strive to reach a settlement "so that life can return to normal in our Capital City."

The Boycott began Dec. 5 with arrest of a Negro woman for refusing to move to the rear of a city bus. Eighty-nine leaders and participants subsequently were indicted charged with conspiring to injure the Bus Company's business. They are scheduled for trial at the court term which begins next Monday.

The Bus boycott, meanwhile, continues, with virtually all Negroes refusing to ride, with a resultant loss of about 60 per cent of the company's business.

End Of Boycott Urged By Folsom

Post Herald P. 6
Wed. 3-14-56

MONTGOMERY, March 13 (AP) —Gov. James E. Folsom publicly called on the mayor of Montgomery and leaders of the Negro bus boycott today to "bring about a settlement of the boycott so that life can return to normal in our capitol city."

Folsom said that he has conferred "privately" three times with boycott leaders and three times with Mayor W. A. Gayle, "trying to settle this dispute."

The governor recalled that he has asked the Legislature to create a bi-racial commission to seek a settlement of racial differences.

Birmingham, Ala.

The proposal is under consideration now.

38b 1956

ALABAMA

REV. U.J. FIELDS
MONTGOMERY, ALAL. BUS BOYCOTT

DEACON SIGNS WARRANT

Advertiser 3-2-A
Montgomery, Ala.
3-26-56

Negro Cleric Arrested On Misconduct Charge

BY JACK SMITH

The Rev. U. J. Fields, local Negro minister who testified during the bus boycott trial last week, was arrested yesterday on a disorderly conduct charge on a warrant signed by a deacon of his church.

Fields, pastor of the Bell Street Baptist Church, said he was ordered to relinquish the pastorate of the church because a "particular group does not believe in what I'm doing in regards to taking a stand on what our people are pressing for."

George W. Durden, who signed the warrant, said "this was just a means of getting him out of the church," and denied that the disorderly conduct charge had any connection with the current bus boycott.

Fields was released under $100 bond after being arrested at the church yesterday morning He will be given a hearing in city police court Friday.

Durden, a deacon of the church, said Fields was voted out as pastor of the church two weeks ago and added yesterday was the first Sunday Fields had been back. "This has been working for four or five months and just came to a head," Durden declared.

Durden said the congregation voted to remove Fields from the pulpit solely "in the interest of peace and harmony within the church."

But Fields charged that "pressure was put on some of my parishoners from the outside" because of his "progressive stand on racial integration."

Fields, 25, testified before the grand jury which returned indictments against 90 Negro leaders for taking part in the 17-week-old bus boycott.

He was called by the state as a witness last week during the trial which ended in the conviction of the Rev. M. L. King, another Negro Baptist minister, for violating Alabama's anti-boycott law.

Bomb Bus Boycott Pastor's Home

Minister, Family Out of Town at Time of Explosion

Courier, p.12
Pittsburgh, Pa.
Sat. 9-1-56 38b

(Special to the Courier)

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — A bigoted vandal, throwing with gimlet-eyed accuracy, tossed a bomb into the home of a white pastor here and the resultant explosion caused unestimated but heavy damage to the interior of the one-story brick structure.

The unknown culprits struck stealthily at the home of the Rev. Robert Graetz, pastor of the all-Negro Trinity Lutheran Church around 3:15 A. M. Saturday morning, Aug. 25.

The explosive was tossed through a picture window on the front porch.

■

SPECTATORS COULD not see the inside of the house because local police have established a barricade around the structure. The blast climaxed a campaign of terror which has been directed at the pastor for his friendship with Negroes ever since he arrived in Montgomery from California.

The Rev. Mr. Graetz has been playing a key role in the nine month-old boycott of Montgomery's city bus lines. Fortunately for the minister, and his family, they had left the city for a rest after he had unsuccessfully attempted to spearhead an interracial meeting here with the Rev. M. L. King, pastor of the Dexter Avenue Baptist Church and president of the Montgomery Improvement Association as main speaker.

The bombing is the latest link in a chain of threats and vandalous acts directed against the minister and his family.

■

SEVERAL MONTHS ago, the Lutheran pastor was threatened by unknown parties and after the threats all four tires on the family car were cut up while the machine was parked in the yard.

As curious onlookers milled up and down the street in front of the Graetz home they saw a pair of huge policemen seated on the porch. A rope barricade has been stretched around the house for "protection."

Dynamite tossed on Ala. home

Afro-American
Sat. 9-1-56
Baltimore, Md.

(Special to AFRO)

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — Efforts of a 27-year-old blond Lutheran pastor to unite this community's colored and white members of the clergy into a common bond of brotherhood were rebuffed with three sticks of dynamite early Saturday morning.

P.1

Target of the bombing was the Trinity Lutheran parsonage of the Rev. Robert Graetz, who fortunately had carried his family on a vacation trip and was not at home at the time of the blast.

38b

The dynamite bomb, third since the bus boycott began last December, shattered the windows of the modest bungalow, broke the lock off the front door and left a huge crater-like hole in the front lawn.

* * *

OBSERVERS expressed their belief that the bombing was the work of the White Citizens Council, an organization of bitter - end segregationists which has mush-roomed in recent months in this central Alabama city.

The motive for the outbreak of violence directed toward the Rev. Mr. Graetz can be traced to letters he mailed out to all of the white clergy in the city ten days ago.

The letter pointed out that since they had never heard the "other side" of the bus protest, in the interest "of Christian harmony and justice" they should hear an address by the Dr. M. L. King Jr., on August 23.

* * *

DR. KING, president of the Montgomery Improvement Association, which is spear-heading the bus protest, had been scheduled to address a meeting of the interracial Montgomery Council on Human Relations in the auditorium of Alabama State College.

The invitation to the white ministers to attend was sent out by the Rev. Mr. Graetz in his role as program chairman of the interracial organization.

When word of this effort to build racial harmony spread, reaction was quick to set in.

Afro-American

A LEADING white Baptist minister sent out letters pleading with his fellow pastors not to "fellowship" with the colored clergymen.

P.2

The letter implied that if any white minister showed up at the Thursday meeting, he would be branded as a traitor and ostracized in the white community.

38b

The Baptist minister's appeal to reject the Graetz invitation was given prominent display in the Montgomery Advertiser.

The appeal obviously had the desired effect as none of the white ministers dared show up and thus by his presence admit belief in the Fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of men.

* * *

IT REMAINED for Montgomery's Mayor W. A. Gayle, a member of the White Citizens Council, to add a note of ridiculousness to the whole affair.

He suggested in a newspaper interview that perhaps the Rev. Mr. Graetz had bombed his own home in an effort to once again focus national attention on the bus boycott.

The mayor had made similar observations when the home of Dr. King was bombed on January 30 and when two nights later a stick of dynamite was thrown at the home of E. D. Nixon, who serves as treasurer of the Montgomery Improvement Association.

* * *

MAYOR GAYLE pledged that the police department would do everything possible to uncover the identity of the dynamite tossers.

He had made a similar promise in the two previous bombings. Thus far no arrests have been made in any of the outbreaks.

One witness to the Saturday morning dynamiting told the AFRO that he saw an automobile occupied by three white men draw up in front of the Lutheran parsonage about 3 a.m. just before the blast occurred.

He was unable to identify any of the car's occupants. He did obtain the license number of the automobile, however, and this information has been turned over to police.

The car sped away after the lethal package had been thrown into the yard, the witness said.

* * *

DR. KING, who was out of the city on a speaking engagement, was unavailable for comment Sunday.

The Rev. Mr. Graetz has been supporting the boycott since it began and serves as a board member of the Montgomery Improvement Association.

He is a native of Clarksburg, W.Va., and came to the pastorate of Trinity Lutheran Church two years ago from Los Angeles.

He is a graduate of Capital University and Seminary at Columbus, O., and has often spoken out about the failure of white Montgomery ministers to take a stand on the side on "moral righteousness" as he termed the bus protesters.

MASONS GIVE $100,00

BALTIMORE — Grand Master Willard W. Allen told delegates from 69 lodges at the Masonic Temple in his annual address that integration is not a southern problem alone. He said that the Masons had given the NAACP over $100,000 during the last five years.

The Rev. Graetz Is Wrong

Advertiser p.4-A

THE Rev. Robert Graetz, the white Lutheran pastor who is active in the Montgomery bus boycott, is undoubtedly a man of considerable courage, however misguided some of his efforts may be.

Tues. 9-18-56 38b

But courage cannot always be equated with wisdom. In his latest charge of a conspiracy to boycott the boycott by denying liability insurance, Graetz is guilty of gross misstatements of the facts.

Montgomery, Ala.

In the first place, the insurance business in Montgomery, as elsewhere, is highly competitive. Whatever the racial convictions of an insurance agent, we doubt that there are more than one or two in this city who could afford to refuse legitimate business because of a difference of opinion with the applicant.

The cars operating in the car pool are losing their insurance coverage for simple actuarial reasons: as insurers discover the purpose for which the car is being used, they are cancelling policies because of the nigh risk nature of taxis.

Now, of course, the boycott brass does not admit—cannot admit—these cars are taxis. While it is probably true that no direct fares are paid, revenue is derived via a thinly disguised church contribution system designed to protect the car pool driver from prosecution for license violation.

An insurer, however, is concerned only with the use of the car and the risk involved. The cars are operated under conditions more risky than most taxis, the drivers are less competent, and the mileage is at least as great as that of the average Montgomery taxi. So, for the insurer, automobiles used in the boycott are taxis, camouflage be hanged.

Why then do not the boycotters apply for taxi insurance? In the first place, taxi insurance runs almost eight times the cost of private automobile insurance.

In the second, the boycott drivers could not apply for taxi insurance without admitting what they have all along denied, an admission that would be a confession of illegal operation.

Then, too, we could find no local insurer who will write taxi insurance even when the nature of the business is admitted and the high rate tendered. The risk is too great.

Finally, taxi's would have to be insured as a fleet and not as individual automobiles. Assuming that the boycotters could find an insurer who would write such a policy, they couldn't do it without confessing their illegal operations. (For an explanation of Alabama's "Assigned Risk Plan," see Mr. Starke's letter today.)

In many instances, the boycott automobiles—including those shiny new station wagons masquerading as church cars—have been guilty of notoriously bad driving, resulting in a number of accidents. Insurers know this, even though police in recent months have bent over backwards to avoid arrests for any but the most outrageous examples of carelessness or violation of the laws.

Mr. Graetz says that some of the boycott automobiles have insurance. In the opinion of an experienced Montgomery insurance man (who says, incidentally, he will write all the Negro auto insurance he can get if the drivers are reliable and sober) is invalid because the applicant for an automobile to be used privately was fraudulent.

Mr. Graetz would be less than human if by now, in his loneliness as the only white minister in the boycott, he hadn't developed something of a persecution complex. But in this case, he seems to have been misled by his boycott associates.

The Assigned Risk Plan

Editor, The Advertiser:

I have noted the article in Monday's Advertiser regarding statements made by Rev. Graetz in connection with the providing of insurance on the bus boycott vehicles.

Taxi cabs and private livery risks have not in many years produced a favorable loss ratio for insurance companies, hence it should not be difficult to understand their reluctance to provide this coverage. However, there exists in Aalbama a voluntary agreement between the insurance companies and the state whereby the companies doing business in Alabama provide such coverage under a plan known as "The Alabama Assigned Risk Plan."

Under this plan almost any individual, firm or corporation can procure bodily injury and property damage insurance except those who have been convicted or skipped bond for two or more, or twice on one, of the 11 more serious traffic violations, among which are driving while intoxicated, leaving the scene of an accident, driving during revocation of license. Certain physically impaired risks are also ineligible under the plan.

I believe that upon investigation you will find that any deserving risk can procure insurance under this plan at no additional cost. Most local agents are prepared to assist the insuring public in this matter when requested to do so. The plan is under the able management of S. E. Southard whose offices are in the Comer Bldg., Birmingham, Ala. BOLLING P. STARKE.

Montgomery.

HIS HOME BOMBED—The home of the Rev. Robert A. Graetz, pastor of Montgomery's Trinity Lutheran Church, was the target of dynamite tossers early Saturday. Dr. Graetz was not at home. He is the only white minister who has participated in the bus boycott and serves on the board of the Montgomery Improvement Association.

Bombing Victim—This photo of the Rev. Robert S. Graetz was made at the beginning of the Montgomery (Ala.) bus boycott. He is shown as he assisted people into "pool" cars. The white minister, who hails from California, pastors the all-Negro Trinity Lutheran Church in Montgomery.

38b 1956

Racial Bias Aids Russia, Atty Asserts

Informer P. 1
Sat. 5-26-56

HOUSTON — As long as Negroes are denied citizenship, it gives Russia a weapon to fight us with. Attorney Fred Gray of Montgomery, Alabama, told a group of citizens last Thursday night.

Houston, Tex.

The youthful lawyer, who is one of the attorneys defending the Montgomery Boycotters, was guest speaker for the NAACP observance of May 17, 1954, the day the Supreme Court declared segregation in public schools was unconstitutional.

Houston, Tex.

Speaking before a small audience at the YMCA building, Attorney Gray credited the NAACP with having obtained rights under the constitution for Negroes for half a century.

"No other organization has done more in geting these rights than the NAACP," he said and added that someday it would be able to get full citizenship for all. The banquet was sponsored by the local branch in connection, with the current Freedom Fund Drive and the $700 reported for the week brings the total up to $1500 of the $7,000 quota for Houston.

A native of Alabama, Attorney Gray graduated from a law school in Ohio, passed the Ohio bar and the Alabama bar and began practice in 1954.

He reviewed the Montgomery boycott by Negroes of the city buses, which is in its sixth month, and said it was still about 99 percent effective.

"The Negro population in Montgomery was tired of paying the bus company to mistreat them," he said, "if we pay, we are going to be treated right and if they mistreat us, we are not going to ride," he aded.

He said that the Negroes had made various pleas to the bus company officials to abolish certain practices that were detrimental and in the same instance inhuman.

Thep ractice, Attorney Gray said, was to reserve 10 seats on all buses in front for whites. If Negroes got on and filled up all the seats allotted to them they could not sit on any seats among the 10 that may have been vacant.

If whites filled all their reserved seats and more whites got on the buses, Negroes were askec to get up and give them seats, Attorney Gray said. He said tha there had been several other arrests and convictions besides that of Mrs Rosie Parker which set of the boycott.

Included among those previously arrested was a 15-year-old school girl, he said. The girl was carried to jail, in violation of the law that juveniles be carried to the juvenile department and not to jail, he said. He said the girl was "dragged" off the bus by three police officers, put in a patrol car and handcuffed. She made bond after two hours on a charge of assault and battery and disorderly conduct, he said. With the arrest of Mrs Rosie Parks, Negroes decided to do something about it, Attorney Gray said.

"The 30,000 Negroes of Montgomery decided they had been arrested long enough they were tired of abuse and mistreatment-tired of paying the company to mistreat us .... If we pay we are going to be treated right if they mistreat us we are not going to ride."

Atorney Gray said that at first Negroes asked the company to seat Negroes from back to front and whites from front to back; for courtesy from drivers and for some Negro drivers in the predominantly Negro areas, and the company refused. "Wasn't that reasonable?" he said. He continued that they had not asked the bus company to desegregate.

"We knew we would have to go to the court to abolish segregation," he said.

He commended Houston for desegregating buses, but warned that even in Texas, "things are not so sweet as you think they are."

"Negroes all over America must decide we are tired of being treated as second class citizens .... we are just as much American as anybody and are entitled to the same rights .... as long as Negroes are denied citizenship, it gives Russia a weapon to fight us with," he declared.

Gray's draft case being investigated

Afro American P. 1
Sat. 4-28-56

Baltimore, Md.

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — Lewis B. Hershey, director of the nation's selective service, last week began a personal investigation into the case of a colored attorney who was reclassified 1-A after taking part in the famed bus boycott trials here.

Fred D. Gray, 25, the man in question had previously been deferred as acting pastor of a Montgomery church. After the trial of Rev. Martin L. King, leader of the boycott, Gray was reclassified 1-A.

The Montgomery draft board defended its action by saying Gray's reclassifiecation was routine because it has been revealed that the attorney was devoting more than half his time to the practice of law.

State Draft Director James W. Jones said Gray appealed his reclassification to the state appeal board, but was turned down. At this point Hersey asked for Gray's file to review it.

Gray's Trial Slated Friday

Advertiser P. 12-A
Tues. 2-21-56

A Negro lawyer charged with unlawful practice in the filing of a suit in connection with bus segregation laws will be tried Friday in Circuit Court.

Fred Gray, legal spokesman for local boycott leaders, was the first of more than 90 Negroes indicted by the grand jury in connection with the current bus boycott. Gray is charged with filing an antisegregation suit in federal court without consent of one of the five Negro women who signed the complaint.

Montgomery, Ala.

The suit challenges the constitutionality of Montgomery and Alabama laws which require separate seating facilities for the races.

Gray's indictment was based on a statement by Jeannette Reese that she put her signature on the court petition without knowing what she was signing. The statement was made in the presence of Mayor W. A. Gayle and a newspaper reporter.

The Negro attorney insisted the woman knew what she was signing and the purpose for which the suit was entered.

Gray was indicted under an Alabama law which prohibits a lawyer from representing a client without consent. Maximum penalty is a $500 fine and suspension from practice.

Trials of the boycott defendants have been set to begin March 19.

Protest semi-nude photos of NAACP pastor-lawyer in Ala. draft exam case

Afro-American P. 2
Baltimore, Md.
Sat. 7-21-56

WASHINGTON

Protest against the "humiliation and embarrassment" given Fred D. Gray, NAACP attorney in Montgomery, Ala., was made to the Secretary of the Army this week by the NAACP.

Mr. Gray, who handled the suit contesting the constitutionality of the bus segregation laws in Montgomery and the State of Alabama, recently was reclassified 1A by his local draft board.

Previously he had been given a deferred classification because of his part-time service as a minister. The reclassification was made shortly after he filed the bus suit.

* * *

LAST WEEK he was called by the draft board for a physical examination. During the examination, pictures of him semi-nude were taken and published in Montgomery papers.

This was unusual procedure for persons merely called for examination prior to a draft call.

And this was the basis of the NAACP's protest, filed with Secretary of the Army Wilber M. Brucker, by Clarence Mitchell, chief of the Washington Bureau of the NAACP.

* * *

MR. MITCHELL wired Mr. Brucker as follows:

"Profoundly shocked to learn that Army officers gave permission for photographers to take semi-nude pictures of the Rev. Fred D. Gray during physical examination in Montgomery, Ala.

"Daily press report says Mr. Gray was wearing shorts. Military in Alabama advises me that there was an understanding with photographers that picture would be from waist up."

"There is indisputable evidence that White Citizens Councils are pushing induction of Mr. Gray into Army despite the fact that he is a clergyman.

"The latest incident permits the Army to be a party to obvious attempts to humiliate and embarrass Mr. Gray because of his interest in civil rights. Urge that prompt action be taken to discipline those responsible for this misuse of the Draft system and examination process."

* * *

MR. GRAY has worked in the religious field since he was 12 years old and known as the "Boy Preacher." He was serving as assistant pastor of a Montgomery church at the time he was reclassified.

The reclassification was appealed to the State and national Selective Service boards and is currently under review by the Presidential Appeal Board.

Negro Attorney Gets Induction Notice

Post-Herald P. 1
Birmingham, Ala.

MONTGOMERY, Aug. 6 (AP)— A young Negro attorney whose draft status was changed after he became active in the Montgomery bus boycott was ordered today to report for military induction on Aug. 16.

Fred D. Gray, 26, of Montgomery was drafted after the presidential appeals board in Washington turned down an appeal filed on his behalf by the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People. Gray has represented the NAACP in court here.

His departure will leave only one Negro lawyer in this city of 125,000, including approximately 50,000 Negroes. The other attorney is Charles D. Langford, who has worked with Gray in the bus boycott and in a recent court suit against the NAACP.

Gray held a 4-D deferment as a minister until he was reclassified last Spring by his local board. Chairman F. A. Miller explained at the time that the attorney had been given the deferment as acting pastor of a Negro church but that the church had since acquired a pastor.

Miller announced the induction order today. He said he received notice that the presidential appeals board had upheld the 1-A classification on a 2-1 vote.

Gray had no comment on the announcement. He was single at the time he was first reclassified but has since married.

While the appeal was still pending in Washington, the bespectacled young lawyer was called up last month for a preinduction physical examination and was found acceptable.

The state appeals board agreed with the local boards' action in reclassifying Gray last Spring and the NAACP asked the presidential board to review the case.

Gray also was indicted by a grand jury last February for unlawful practice, an outgrowth of the mass Negro boycott of segregated city buses which is still in effect. But the charge was dropped at the request of the state.

The attorney was accused of filing an anti-segregation suit in federal court on behalf of a Negro woman without her consent.

BUS BOYCOTT LAWYER GIVEN ARMY CHECKUP

Appeal P. 2

Negro Lost Exemption On

Ala. Pastor-Lawyer Induction Delayed

Review of Gray case ordered

WASHINGTON

(Other Boycott Stories Inside)

General Lewis B. Hershey, national director of Selective Service, this week, ordered a Montgomery, Ala., board to reconsider the impending induction of Fred D. Gray, minister-lawyer of Montgomery.

Mr. Gray, 25, an ordained minister and an attorney, has been active in Alabama civil rights cases. He represented the Montgomery bus boycotters.

Until last February he was classified 4-D, the classification for those engaged in ministerial work.

* * *

TWO DAYS after he filed a petition on behalf of the bus boycotters attacking the constitutionality of the Alabama jim - crow transportation laws, he received notification he had been reclassified Class 1-A.

Mr. Gray appealed to the local board, later to the state board, and subsequently to the National Selective Service Board.

While his appeal was pending the Montgomery board, Local 51 gave him a physical examination and ordered his induction. He was scheduled to go into the Army on Sept. 17.

AFTER REVIEWING Mr. Gray's appeal, Gen. Hershey last week wired the Montgomery board that the letters and material he now has constitutes new evidence, and ordered the case reopened and the induction postponed.

The Montgomery board announced that it had refused to reconsider the case.

Chairman of the board, F.A. Miller, was quoted as saying: "The national director of Selective Service asked the board to reopen Gray's case and consider reclassifying him.

"The evidence he asked us to consider was all evidence we had considered before, and we declined to reconsider it."

REV. FRED GRAY

Selective Service officials in Washington were not immediately available for further comment.

MR. GRAY, a native of Montgomery, was known as "the boy preacher," when he traveled with Marshall Keeble for three years. He is a graduate of Nashville Christian Institute, Alabama State College and Western Reserve University School of Law.

He began preaching in 1941 and has served churches in Gallatin, Tenn.; Lenett, Ala.; Cleveland, Ohio and Montgomery. At present, he is assistant pastor at the Holt Street Church of Christ in Montgomery.

Mr. Gray represented Mrs. Rosa Parks, whose arrest and conviction for violating the segregated bus law, touched off the Montgomery bus boycott last Dec. 5.

He also defended the Rev. Martin Luther King, president of the Montgomery Improvement Association which supports the bus boycott, and participated in the court action which resulted in a ban on NAACP activities in Alabama, a decision now under appeal.

It has been generally felt that efforts to put Mr. Gray in military service resulted from his active participation these civil rights matters.

The Negro attorney, a legal spokesman for his race in the continuing bus boycott, was first ordered to report for induction a month ago. He was granted a 30-day delay on instructions from Hershey.

Gray's board ordered him to report for induction again Monday, Sept. 17, but Hershey in effect went over the board's head and postponed it indefinitely.

* * *

THE NATIONAL Selective Service chief has twice requested the local board to reopen Gray's case on grounds of new information. On the second request, board chairman F. A. Miller said, the board found no new grounds for reconsideration and so declined to take up the case again.

Saturday Hershey declined to say what would happen next. He said only that he was waiting for a report of the situation and that he expected to have it in hand early next week.

Whether he has in effect taken the case out of local 51's hands Hershey declined to say. He pointed out that state and national Selective Service directors have the power to intervene in draft orders if questions of procedure are involved.

* * *

GRAY held a draft exemption because he was an assistant pastor in a Montgomery church but when the boycott first attracted attention and he was its legal voice, Gray was reclassified 1-A on the basis that his ministerial duties took only a small part of his time.

Hershey was reported Saturday to have received additional information from a church which Gray had been serving part-time. The information was that Gray is now filling the pulpit on a full-time basis since the regular pastor had left.

Claim To Be Minister

MONTGOMERY, Ala., July 9. —(UP)—Negro bus boycott attorney Fred Gray, who has been draft-exempt more than seven years because of his claim to be a practicing minister, underwent a pre-induction Army physical here Monday.

However, Selective Service officials said the Negro will not be inducted until his status has been cleared by national Selective Service headquarters where an appeal was lodged by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Gray, who will be 26 next December, registered with Selective Service in 1948 and was placed in 4-D Class — the ministerial classification — upon his claim to be an assistant pastor at alocal church.

He was reclassified recently by his local draft board to 1-A. Gray appealed the local decision to the Alabama appeal board where the 1-A classification was upheld. NAACP officials then officially protested to headquarters in Washington.

Gray and another Negro attorney represented the Negro seamstress whose arrest and subsequent conviction for violating a city segregation law on a bus touched off the seven-month-old bus boycott. Gray was also one of the attorneys who filed the suit to do away with segregation on all Alabama public conveyances.

Alabama Boycott Lawyer Refused Induction Review

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Sept. 6 (AP)—Selective Service Board No. 51 refused today to reconsider the impending induction of a young Negro attorney active in the Montgomery bus boycott.

Fred D. Gray, 25, is scheduled to go into the Army Sept. 17. The board chairman, F. A. Miller, said the national director of Selective Service asked the board to reopen Gray's case and consider reclassifying him.

"The evidence he asked us to consider was all the evidence we had considered before, and we declined to reconsider it," Miller said.

Gray defended Negroes indicted for participating in the boycott and also participated in court actions resulting from a state bar on activity of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. The NAACP obtained an earlier review of his case in Washington before he was scheduled here for induction.

Gen. Hershey Acts

It is encouraging to note that General Lewis B. Hershey, national director of Selective Service, has granted reconsideration of the Fred D. Gray case.

The facts in Mr. Gray's draft reclassification speak for themselves. He is a young minister-attorney who for several years was classified 4D by his Montgomery, Alabama local board, then suddenly reclassified 1A and ordered to report for military service.

The reclassification came only two days after Mr. Gray, as a lawyer, had filed a petition attacking the Alabama bus transportation laws as unconstitutional. He also has been active in other civil rights cases.

Because he is nearing 26 and would soon be ineligible for draft, white Alabama groups have been urging his immediate induction. Mr. Gray's appeal to local and state boards fell on deaf ears. Now the case is in Gen. Hershey's hands and we feel certain it will be handled without fear or favor.

This initial move by Gen. Hershey clearly indicates that he will not tolerate abuse of the Selective Service system by local boards. We commend his action, and feel certain that he will remain firm.

A native of Indiana, Gen. Hershey is a former school teacher, ex-National Guard colonel, once taught military science at Ohio State College and was a member of the War Department General Staff.

In the latter capacity, he helped prepare the plans for the wartime Selective Service and served as its director from 1941 to his retirement in 1946. A Republican, he was called from retirement to direct the peacetime Selective Service in 1948.

With this background and his brilliant record as director of the Selective Service, there is no reason to doubt that Mr. Gray's case will get an impartial review.

Bus boycott figure draft date Sept. 17

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Sept. 7 (AP)—A young Negro attorney who has been prominent in the Montgomery bus boycott is scheduled to be inducted into the Army Sept. 17 after the refusal yesterday of his local draft board to reconsider his classification.

Chairman F. A. Miller of Board No. 51 said the national director of Selective Service had asked reconsideration on the case of Fred D. Gray, 25.

"The evidence he asked us to consider was all evidence we had considered before, and we declined to reconsider it," Miller said.

Gray's drafting was appealed by the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People which he has represented here but was upheld by a review board in Washington.

Bus Boycott Leader Wins Delay on Draft

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Sept. 15 (AP)—The induction of Fred Gray into the armed forces has been suspended indefinitely by the National Selective Service director, although the Negro attorney's local draft board has ordered him to report for induction Monday.

Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey announced in Washington Saturday that he had ordered Gray's induction delayed indefinitely.

ATTY FRED.D. GRAY
MONTGOMERY, ALA. BUS BOYCOTT

No Free Buses—Yet

Afro-American

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — "The possibility of setting up a free transportation system will not be explored until we complete our Federal Court case." P. 1

Fred D. Gray, legal advisor for the Montgomery Improvement Association, made the statement to the AFRO, Saturday, as the bus boycott was about to enter its 21st week.

"I am preparing a brief in the appeal for Mrs. Rosa Parks, who was convicted on Dec. 4 for violating the state's segregation laws. Sat. 4-14-56

"It has to be filed by April 28. Baltimore, Md.

"ON TOP of that we have to file a written brief by May 4 in our case that seeks to declare the state's segregation laws unconstitutional," Gray said.

The suit has been filed on behalf of four residents of Montgomery and names as defendants the members of the city commission and the Public Utilities Commission of Alabama.

A hearing on the suit has been set for May 11.

"Meanwhile," Gray says, "our car pool is operating efficiently. The morale of the people is still high and they appear more determined than ever to see justice triumph."

THE REV. MARTIN L. KING and his family have left Montgomery for " a short vacation."

At the same time, Clarence Mitchell, director of the Washington bureau of the NAACP, spoke in Montgomery Sunday before a voter's group.

The Montgomery Improvement Association is planning to launch a citywide drive to encourage residents to register to vote in the coming election.

"We have no intention of asking the Montgomery City Lines to set up an all-colored bus line," Gray said.

THE REV. MARTIN L. KING, president of the Improvement Association, told the mayor that such a decision would have to come "from the executive board" of the association and "the colored people of Montgomery."

Gray told the AFRO that "there is little doubt in my mind that the people would reject such a proposal if offered." Sat. 4-14-56

THE MAYOR'S suggestion, Gray explained, came during a 90-minute hearing of the city commissioners of the association's bid for a franchise. Baltimore, Md.

THE REV. MR. KING, who was convicted and fined $500 by Circuit Court Judge Eugene Carter on March 22 for violating the state's boycott laws, was spokesman for the association.

Other representatives of the Improvement Association were the Rev. H. H. Hubbard, the Rev. W. J. Powell, E. D. Nixon, J. E. Pierce, Fred D. Gray, Charles Langford, Mrs. A. W. West Sr.

* * *

THE MINISTER told the commission:

"We are only seeking satisfactory transportation. We don't want to put the other company out of business; that never has been our goal.

"We are trying to make for wholesome relations and the elimination of tension among the races in Montgomery."

* * *

DURING THE hearing, the three demands of the Montgomery Improvement Association, which brought about the boycott that began 20 weeks ago, were discussed.

* * *

THEY WERE: (1) More courtesy from the bus drivers; (2) a first-come-first-served seating arrangement; and (3) hiring of colored bus operators.

Mayor Gayle again informed the group that the law prohibited a change in the seating arrangement.

As for the hiring policy, the mayor said:

"That is up to the bus company altogether. It's their (the company's) money and they have the right to hire whom they please."

Gray told the AFRO that he felt that the colored citizens of Montgomery would continue to "exercise their right not to spend their money where they aren't hired."

The rejection of the bus franchise leaves the Improvement Association with the alternative of maintaining a "free transportation system."

Bus suit May 11

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — The Federal Court suit attacking the constitutionality of local and state laws requiring racial segregation on buses has been set to be heard on May 11.

U. S. District Judge Frank M. Johnson Jr. informed the attorneys Friday that evidence will be heard by a three-judge court before any motions to dismiss the suit.

Gray's Trial Slated Friday

Advertiser Tues. 2-28-56

A Negro lawyer charged with unlawful practice in the filing of a suit in connection with bus segregation laws will be tried Friday in Circuit Court. P. 12-A

Fred Gray, legal spokesman for local boycott leaders, was the first of more than 90 Negroes indicted by the grand jury in connection with the current bus boycott. Gray is charged with filing an antisegregation suit in federal court without consent of one of the five Negro women who signed the complaint. Montgomery

The suit challenges the constitutionality of Montgomery and Alabama laws which require separate seating facilities for the races.

Gray's indictment was based on a statement by Jeannette Reese that she put her signature on the court petition without knowing what she was signing. The statement was made in the presence of Mayor W. A. Gayle and a newspaper reporter. Ala.

The Negro attorney insisted the woman knew what she was signing and the purpose for which the suit was entered.

Gray was indicted under an Alabama law which prohibits a lawyer from representing a client without consent. Maximum penalty is a $500 fine and suspension from practice.

Trials of the boycott defendants have been set to begin March 19.

Negroes Will - "Crawl First"

Daily World P. 2 Thurs. 4-5-56

Bus Trial Counsel Declares

Atlanta, Ga.

BY CONRAD CLARK

BOSTON—(ANP)— Negroes of Montgomery, Ala., will "crawl first" before giving up their bus boycott, declared Atty. Fred D. Grey on Friday night.

The chief counsel for the indicted leaders of the protest movement was the principal speaker before an audience of 1200 at the Union Methodist Church, South End, sponsored by Sigma Chapter of Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity, the Interdenominational Ministers Alliance of Greater Boston and other civic organizations.

Grey said that the sentiment of the Negroes in Montgomery could be summed up by what an aged woman told him:

"I'll walk and walk and walk, until I drop. And then I'll crawl."

Grey spoke in place of the Rev. Martin Luther King, his client, a Boston-educated leader of the bus boycott who was convicted last Thursday of violating an old Alabama law of conspiracy to boycott.

Rev. King wired his regret for not appearing, saying he has been ordered by his doctor to rest.

Grey said that "the bus boycott is not a racial movement, and it is time for all white people in America to realize the evil of segregation and to do something about it."

He said that in Montgomery, bus drivers have legal powers and "when they talk to you, that's the police talking."

'What fools mortals can be' -- Gray

Afro-American Baltimore, Md. Sat. 7-21-56

WASHINGTON

A spokesman in the office of Secretary of the Army Wilber M. Brucker told the AFRO this

Draft Chief Reviewing File On 1-A Bus Boycott Figure

Post Herald Birmingham, Ala. Fri. 4-13-56

MONTGOMERY, April 12 (AP)— Selective Service Director Lewis B. Hershey is looking over the draft file of a young Negro attorney who was reclassified 1-A while taking an active part in Montgomery's bus boycott.

Fred D. Gray, 25, was deferred as the acting pastor of a Negro church until his local draft board in Montgomtry put him in 1-A and made him subject to induction several weeks ago.

The board said it was a routine reclassification because it became known that Gray was devoting more than half his time to th epractice of law.

State Draft Director James W. Jones said the attorney appealed his reclassification to the state appeal board but was turned down. Then Gen. Hershey asked for the file to review it, Jones said.

Hershey can recommend a further review by state authorities or he can send the file to the Presidential Appeal Board.

Gray was one of the defense attorneys for the 90 Negroes indicted for boycotting segregated Montgomery City Lines buses.

week that the Army was investigating the taking of a semi-nude photograph of the Rev. Fred D. Gray, attorney-minister of Montgomery, Ala., while the latter was being examined for possible induction into the Army.

The Rev. Mr Gray, militant NAACP attorney and one of the leaders of the bus protest movement in Montgomery, said he was of the opinion the incident was meant to degrade and humiliate him. Ala

"What fools these mortals be," was the tenor of the Rev. Mr. Gray's remarks as he discussed the publication of the photograph and an article by Bunny Honnicker in the edition of the Montgomery Journal meant to go to white readers only. The Journal publishes a separate edition for colored readers.

Pointing to Mr. Gray's participation as an attorney in the various phases of the bus boycott, bus segregation and NAACP injunction cases, the photo-accompanied article went on to say:

* * *

THIS GREAT champion of his people, "stripped to his shorts, with a thermometer between his teeth is just another possible inductee."

The newspaper took photo-photographs of some of the 30 or so white inductees examined at the same time, but published only the picture of the Rev. Mr. Gray in a "we brung him down" slanted story.

The Rev. Mr. Gray has not

Attorney Freed In Bus Bias Case

Herald-Tribune New York, N.Y. Sat. 3-3-56

MONTGOMERY, Ala., March 2 (AP).—A charge of unlawful practice against Fred D. Gray, negro attorney and legal spokesman for bus boycotters, was dismissed in Circuit Court today when the state admitted it does no have jurisdiction.

The action nolle prossing the case came at the outset of Mr. Gray's scheduled trial. Solicitor William T. Thetford said the state could not prosecute the attorney because the offense for which he was indicted took place in a Federal building. Mr. Thetford said the issue would be brought to the attention of United States Attorney Hartwell Davis for Federal prosecution if he sees fit.

Mr. Gray, twenty-five, was indicted for unlawful practice growing out of an anti-segregation suit attacking Alabama bus segregation laws which he filed in Federal Court in the name of five Negro women. He was indicted after one of the women, Mrs. Jeanetta Reese, said later she had not given permission for the action.

even protested to the editor of the paper against this type of journalism; but Clarence Mitchell, NAACP Washington bureau head, protested the incident to the Secretary of the Army. (See accompanying story).

* * *

THE 25-YEAR-OLD minister-attorney is appealing the recent change of his draft to status 1-A before the Presidential Appeal Board in Washington, and it is feared by the White Citizens Council and other hate groups in this state capital that he may evade military service.

The Journal's article pointed out that he had been draft-exempt for seven years, having been classified as 4-D (ministerial exemption) since 1948.

If he is not inducted before December, 1956, when he becomes 26 years of age, he will miss induction, the article stated, because the Army does not draft men who are over 25.

It was charged by the White Citizens Council that pressure was being exerted by the draft board to have the Rev. Mr. Gray deferred, but this was denied by a board member who was called in Washington and who stated that the board was non-political and not amenable to pressures of any sort.

* * *

MR. GRAY also chuckled at the remark of a Citizens Council member that while his case was being appealed his wife might have a baby which would lead to his deferment.

"I've just come back to Montgomery from a three-week honeymoon with my wife," he said, "so now they expect her to have a baby before December."

THE REV. MR. GRAY revealed that Circuit Judge Walter B. Jones had acceeded to the petition requested last week by Atty. Gen. John Patterson that the State NAACP turn over to the attorney general most of its records with relation to the injunction asked protesting the barring of its activities in the state.

The judge ordered the records surrendered to the attorney general by July 16 and postponed the injunction hearing scheduled for July 17 to July 24 so the state's attorneys could examine the papers.

Patterson, in his original request for an anti-NAACP injunction charged that the organization's activities "are causing irreparable injury to the property and civil rights of the residents and citizens of Alabama."

* * *

HE SAID the association had paid Mrs. Autherine Lucy Foster and Mrs. Polly Myers Hudson to sue for admission to the lily-white University of Alabama and had fostered the Federal three-judge suit that had led to bus segregation being branded as unconstitutional.

He sought the records to prove these allegations which NAACP attorneys, including the Rev. Mr. Gray, labeled as "mere conclusions."

* * *

THE RECORDS which the NAACP was ordered to produce include:

Copies of all charters of branches and chapters of the organization in Alabama and a complete list of all members and employees, including their addresses;

The names and addresses of all persons authorized to solicit NAACP memberships and contributions during the past 12 months;

Cancelled checks on its financial transactions in the state for the last 12 months; correspondence, telegrams and other records pertaining to the NAACP and Mrs. Foster and Mrs. Hudson as well as to the Federal court suit growing out of the bus boycott.

The bus boycott, which has been going on for over six months, is continuing without any untoward incidents, the Rev. Mr. Gray reported.

Gray to ask Ike review

Afro-American Baltimore, Md.

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (ANP) —Fred D. Gray, 25-year-old attorney and minister, who has been active in the boycotts of city buses, gave notice last week that he may ask President Eisenhower to review a ruling by the National Selective Service Appeals Board upholding his 1-A classification.

The Rev. Mr. Gray was ordered to report for induction into the Armed Forces Aug. 16.

The lawyer had been classified 4-D for eight years, until he began handling the case of five women who filed suit to outlaw Montgomery and Alabama segregation laws.

SHORTLY AFTER the suit was filed, the local draft board reclassified him 1-A. He appealed the case to the national board, which ruled on it last week.

appeal board in Washington now considering an appeal of Gray's 1-A draft classification, requested additional information on the case.

Miller said Gray was called in and requested to answer a number of questions about his present employment. The answers have been reduced to writing and forwarded to the board in Washington, he added.

The attorney, who argued the case for a group of Montgomery Negroes contesting city and state segregation laws, was exempted from the draft for sometime as a part-time Church of Church minister.

When an issue was made of his draft status, Gray's local board reviewed his case and changed his 4-D (ministerial deferment) classification to 1-A. An appeal was taken in the attohney's behalf by the vancement of Colored People.

A final decision on whether the recently-married attorney will have to serve a tour of duty in the armed forces rests with the presidential appeal board.

While the review was pending in Washington, the Rev. Mr. Gray was given a pre-induction physical examination and found acceptable.

"I feel that the only reason my draft status was changed was because of my activities in the bus boycott," the Rev. Mr. Gray said.

* * *

"SINCE 1948, I have been classified as 4-D by the local draft board. There never was any objection by the board to that classification given to me as assistant pastor of Holt Street Church of Christ.

"Then only a few days after I became active in the boycott, was called in by the draft board and told that I was classified 1-A. No reason was given.

Chairman F. A. Miller of the board said that the deferment was originally given the Rev. Mr. Gray because he was "active pastor" of the church, but that the church since has acquired a pastor.

"THAT ISN'T the case, the Rev. Mr. Gray said in reply. "I am still assistant pastor and have been conducting services each Sunday this summer."

The young lawyer was married last month. If he is inducted there be only one colored lawyer left in Montgomery, Charles D. Langford. Langford has worked with the Rev. Mr. Gray in the bus boycott and a recent court suit filed against the NAACP.

Army Physical Is Passed By Bus Boycott Attorney

Post-Herald Birmingham, Ala.

MONTGOMERY, July 10 (AP)—Negro Atty. Fred D. Gray, legal spokesman for the seven-month-old Montgomery bus boycott, passed his Army pre-induction physical examination yesterday.

F. A. Miller, chairman of local Selective Service Board 51, where Gray is registered, said he was informed by Army recruiting headquarters that Gray met the Army's physical requirements.

Wed. 7-11-56

Meanwhile, the local board official said the presidential were permitted to take "semi-nude pictures" of him.

Mr. Gray was a leader in the Montgomery bus boycott. In a telegram to Army Secretary Wilber M. Brucker, Mr. Mitchell said the Army had become "a party to obvious attempts to humiliate and embarrass Rev. Gray because of his interest in civil rights."

INDUCTION IS DELAYED

Commercial Appeal

Drafting Of Negro Attorney Put Back To Sept. 17

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Aug. 14. —(AP)—At the suggestion of National Selective Service officials, the induction of Negro Atty. Fred D. Gray into the armed forces has been postponed until Sept. 17.

Memphis, Tenn.

James W. Jones, state Selective Service director, announced Tuesday that the delay was ordered at the request of Lt. Gen. Louis B. Hershey, national Selective Service director.

Gray, 25-year-old attorney who has been active in the Montgomery bus boycott and a Federal Court suit challenging city and state bus segregation laws, had been scheduled for induction Thursday.

Wed. 8-15-56

'Semi-Nude Photo'

World-Telegram & Sun New York City, N.Y.

NAACP Says Army Humiliated Boycotter

Thurs. 7-12-56

By the United Press

WASHINGTON, July 12.—A spokesman for the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People accused the Army today of abetting "attempts to humiliate and embarrass" a Montgomery, Ala., Negro leader by permitting him to be photographed in his shorts.

The Montgomery Negro is Fred D. Gray, 25-year-old attorney who was classified 1-A by his draft board last February despite his contention he also is a minister.

According to Clarence Mitchell, director of the NAACP's Washington bureau, Mr. Gray was given a pre-induction physical examination on Monday and photographers

Bus-Segregation Laws Get New Test Today

Courier-Journal

Supreme Court Will Hear Suit If Appeal Made

Louisville

Montgomery, Ala., May 10 (AP) —Bitterly contested City and State bus-segregation laws, upheld only yesterday by State Court, face another, perhaps more significant, test tomorrow in Federal Court.

A three-judge panel, whose decision can be appealed direct to the United States Supreme Court has been convened to hear a suit by four Negroes challenging the racial barriers responsible for a mass boycott of city buses in Montgomery.

The suit, filed as an outgrowth of the boycott now in its sixth month, seeks an injunction to stop City and State officials from enforcing the segregation laws, and a declaratory judgment holding the statutes unconstitutional.

Some judicial officers, including Cirouit Judge Walter B. Jones in Montgomery and the Public service Commission in South Carolina, contend the April 23 ruling of the Supreme Court in a South Carolina case did not decide the segregation issue. The trial here may therefore, produce the first clear-cut finding by the Supreme Court.

The action of the three-judge panel can be reviewed direct by the Supreme Court while the South Carolina case involved in the April 23 decision goes back to a lower court for trial.

Defendants in the complaint challenging validity of Montgomery City and Alabama State laws are Montgomery City Lines, which operates the city's only bus service; the City Commission whose three members all belong to the white Citizens Council, the chief of police, two bus drivers, and the members of the Alabama Public Service Commission.

Five Negroes orginally filed the suit, but the name of Mrs. Jeaneatta Reese was stricken from the complaint after she told Mayor W. A. Gayle in the presence of newspapermen that she did not know what she was signing.

Negro attorney Fred Gray, who filed the suit in court, was indicted by a Montgomery County grand jury on a charge of unlawful practice on the strength of Mrs. Reese's statement, but the charge was dropped at the request of the State.

The suit points out that two of the complaining Negroes, Claudette Colvin and Mary Louise Smith, were arrested for violating the City segregation laws. It also cites the arrest of a Negro seamstress, Mrs. Rosa Parks, which touched off the long bus boycott last December 5, although Mrs. Parks is not one of the plaintiffs.

Negroes by the thousands have refused to ride the buses since the day Mrs. Parks was fined $14.

Case for states' rights—

News P. 11-4

Judge Jones' opinion hits bull's-eye on segregation

Birmingham, Ala. Sun. 5-13-56

BY HUGH W. SPARROW
News staff writer

MONTGOMERY, Ala., May 12 —Circuit Judge Walter B. Jones apparently scored a bull's-eye in his recently opinion upholding constitutionality of the state and local bus segregation laws.

His opinion was loudly acclaimed here as being an excellent presentation of the case of states' rights against the increasing encroachment on those rights by federal authorities.

Judge Jones received requests for copies of his opinion from many people throughout the South.

That part of the opinion dealing with states' right question is as follows:

"THIS COURT, in deciding the case now before it, does not sit as a legislative body to make law. That is not the function of the courts. Their function is to declare and construe the law as it is made and written by the law-making departments of our governments. Courts cannot, under the guise of construction make a law. The making of laws is exclusively the function of the legislative department of the government.

"The question now before this Alabama court, a court of one of the sovereign states of the Union, can be answered by a reference to the federal Constitution, to a part of the Bill of Rights in the United States Constitution, one neglected of recent years and practically forgotten by the federal courts. Yet it is a part of the United States Constitution which, if it had not been put in the federal Bill of Rights would have prevented the adoption of the federal Constitution. It is a part of the Constitution which was regarded as absolutely essential in the formative days of our country. The Founding Fathers were agreed that there should be an amendment to the Constitution making plain and clear that unless the states delegated to the federal government a power or prohibited to themselves the exercise of a power, then the States reserved that power to themselves in their people.

"THE SECTION of the Bill of Rights which the Judge of this court has taken an oath to support and maintain, is Amendment X to the Constitution, which declases:

"The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the states respectively, or to the people."

"This states a great principle of American constitutional law, and states it in such simple words that the meaning can be understood by all. There is neither ambiguity nor doubt in the language of the Tenth Amendment. If the power claimed by the United States, or by its law-making Supreme Court, is not a power delegated to the United States, nor a power the sovereign states of the union have denied themselves, then that power is expressly reserved to the states or to the people of the states.

"WHERE IN the United States Constitution (may we ask) is there any delegation of power to the United States Government to say that a state cannot make reasonable regulations for the carriage of passengers on public conveyances wholly within the state?

"Where in the federal Constitution is there one word, one sentence, or one paragraph, saying that the sovereign states of this Union, the states which created the federal government, and many of whose constitutions antedate the federal Constitution, are prohibited from making, in the exercise of the police power of the state, reasonable rules for the separation of the races in buses carrying passengers in a city or between two points wholly within the state?

"The federal Constitution neither delegates the power claimed to the United States, nor does it prohibit the power to the states of the Union.

"WE MUST ALWAYS remember that the government of the United States is one of limited powers. It cannot exercise any power of government not granted to it by the states. The federal government gets whatever powers it has, and only such, as are ceded to it by the states of the Union. All other rights and powers, necessary to maintain our dual system of government, remain in the states. And in the states these powers rightfully remain. They have never been ceded or given to the national government at Washington.

"The court can nowhere find in the federal Constitution any grant of the power to say to the sovereign states of the Union: "You cannot regulate within the borders of your own cities and states the carriage of passengers by bus. You cannot require white passengers to occupy seats in one part of the bus and Negro passengers seats in another section of the bus."

"THE CONSTITUTION, torture its wording as you may, nowhere gives the federal government at Washington, nor the Congress of the United States, nor the United States Supreme Court, the power to forbid a state, in the exercise of its police power, to separate passengers using buses from one point to another point wholly within a given state. The power claimed for the federal government by the Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals does not exist and never has existed. It is a power reserved to the states and their people. The courts are without power to enlarge the sphere of federal control and operations, and they have no power to legislate.

"THE CIRCUIT COURT of Montgomery County, Alabama, mindful of its obligation to support and maintain the United States Constitution, must declare that under the Tenth Amendment to the United States Constitution the power to regulate the intrastate carriage of passengers on buses in Alabama is a power reserved to the state of Alabama. It has never surrendered this power to the United States Government, nor given it to the Supreme Court at Washington, and this court will not be a party to filching the power from the state."

Court Ruling May End Alabama Bus Boycott

Herald Tribune P. 25

Tues. 4-24-56

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Apr. 23 (AP).—The Supreme Court's decision out-lawing all bus segregation may bring an early end to Montgomery's Negro bus boycott.

A suit attacking constitutionality of city and state segregation laws is already on file in Federal court. A hearing is scheduled May 11 before a three-judge panel.

Jack Crenshaw, attorney for Montgomery City Lines whose buses have been boycotted by Negroes for nearly five months, said "offhand it sounds like the Supreme Court said Alabama's statutes are unconstitutional."

Expects Court Order

"It indicates the court has adopted the same rule as that for schools," he continued, "and if so, I would anticipate that a court order will be entered here (May 11) along the same line."

Alabama was not directly affected by today's court ruling, but an order from the three-judge panel next month could apply the decision to this state.

Meanwhile, a leader in the Montgomery boycott, the Rev. M. L. King jr., appealed to members of both white and Negro races to use "calm reasonableness."

"All persons of good will will seek to comply with this decision," Mr. King said. He called it a ruling that "all lovers of democracy will welcome" and a "reaffirmation of the fact that segregation in any form is a cancer in the body politic which must be removed before our democratic health can be realized."

City officials planned to confer to see what effect the court ruling will have on the boycott.

Negroes have refused to ride segregated Montgomery City Lines buses since Dec. 5, the day a Negro woman was fined $14 for refusing to move to the rear of a bus.

Both state and city laws require segregation in all public transportation.

Jack Owen, chairman of the Alabama Public Service Commission, whose agency supervises bus travel between Alabama cities, said "I am going to do everything I can to maintain segregation in Alabama."

Alabama Judges Say Segregation On Buses Legal

Star P. 3

Sat. 5-12-56

Washington

MONTGOMERY, Ala., May 12 (AP).—Two members of a three-judge Federal Court panel, hearing an attack on Montgomery city and Alabama State bus segregation laws, said they didn't think the United States Supreme Court has outlawed intrastate bus segregation.

Their comments from the bench came yesterday during closing arguments on a suit by four Montgomery Negro women.

The judges gave no indication when they would announce a decision, saying, "This is an important case and will be studied and deliberated." They had been asked for an injunction against enforcement of the municipal and State bus segregation laws and to declare the laws unconstitutional.

Their decision is expected to be appealed directly to the Supreme Court and might result in the first clear-cut decision on the separate but equal doctrine on intrastate buses.

On April 23 the high tribunal sent back to lower courts a case involving city buses in Columbia, S. C.

Some attorneys interpreted the refusal to hear the case as a decision against intrastate bus segregation, but others thought it only a procedural move requiring final disposition of the case in lower courts before coming before the Supreme Court.

One Judge Silent

Judge Richard T. Rives of the Fifth United States Circuit Court of Appeals, presiding at yesterday's five-hour hearing, said he didn't construe the April 23 action as a decision on the merits of bus segregation.

District Judge Seybourn Lynne of the Northern District of Alabama agreed. There was no comment from the third judge, District Judge Frank M. Johnson, jr., of the Middle District of Alabama.

City Attorney Walter Knabe and Alabama Assistant Attorney General Gordon Madison also concurred. But Robert Carter, New York Negro attorney for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, insisted the separate but equal doctrine "has been overturned" by the Supreme Court in every other field and possibly in intrastate transportation.

Mr. Carter said there is room for doubt on what the Supreme Court decided last month.

That issue was one of the major ones in closing arguments, but two others were prominent in the hearing.

One was whether the Federal panel had jurisdiction in the case. The other was whether Montgomery's five-month-old bus boycott by some 50,000 Negro residents started as a protest against specific phases of bus segregation and only developed later into the broad attack on it involved in this suit.

Suit Filed Feb. 1

Enforcement of a State law must be involved for a panel such as the one sitting yesterday to have jurisdiction. Defendants in the suit against Montgomery City Lines, Inc., two bus drivers, the police chief, the three city commissioners and members of the Alabama Public Service Commission argued that only municipal ordinances were involved.

Negro attorneys brought out during three hours of testimony, however, that some Negroes had been charged with violating State laws during the boycott.

The suit was filed February 1, after the boycott began December 5 when a Negro woman, Mrs. Rosa Parks, was fined $14 for failing to comply with bus segregation laws.

When the boycott began, Montgomery Negroes asked the city for specific changes of the bus segregation system, but later broadened their stand to one against the system itself.

Testimony yesterday indicated that Negro solidarity developed by the boycott enabled them to challenge segregation laws they had long oppose.

City attorneys countered this line with a persistent effort to show that Negroes were willing to live under the segregation code until recent weeks.

In Montgomery, a hearing was scheduled to begin today in the United States District Court before a three-judge panel on a suit challenging constitutionality of city and state segregation laws in this connection.

It seems clear to this paper that there is no adequate basis for any action on the assumption that intrastate bus segregation has been knocked out.

Bus Segregation Is Still The Law

Advertiser p. 4-A

THE effect of Judge Jones' decision Wednesday, ordering Montgomery City Lines to abide by city and state segregation ordinances as they have always done, is to reaffirm segregation on transportation as the law in Montgomery.

Nor can the bus company argue that it recognizes the higher authority of the U.S. Supreme Court, because the Supreme Court hasn't ruled, not even on South Carolina's laws, certainly not Alabama's.

Today, of course, an entirely new and separate phase of the dispute will begin in U.S. District Court with the hearing of a suit challenging the constitutionality of city and state laws requiring segregation on transportation. The court might hand down any number of decisions, but if it declares bus segregation invalid and this view is upheld on appeal, this could have the ultimate effect of dissolving Judge Jones' order.

Intrastate Bus Segregation Issue Pending

News p. 18 Thu. 5-17-56

Judge Walter B. Jones, in granting an injunction against application of the recent integration order of the Montgomery bus company and upholding state and local segregation law in the company's operations, declared: "There is no straight out decision of the Supreme Court of the United States holding that a state or city may not require the separation of the races on buses where carriage of passengers is solely intrastate."

B'ham Ala.

A recent United States Supreme Court order in a South Carolina case was widely interpreted as holding segregation on local buses was unconstitutional. But this interpretation of the order has been challenged in some quarters, the contention being that the court did not pass on the constitutional issue but remanded the case for hearing on its merits.

It seems plain to us that there is question as to just what the Supreme Court's order meant.

Judge Jones appears to us to be on sound ground in holding that the court has not passed directly on the constitutional issue.

The South Carolina Public Service Commission yesterday issued a statement declaring that state laws requiring segregation of intrastate bus and railroad passengers "are in full force and effect," that the Supreme Court ruling had "no effect on the validity or enforceability of the laws of this state."

The commission said the South Carolina case has not been tried on its merits in the district court, that "the Supreme Court's action therefore merely means that the case is not yet ripe for its decision."

The U.S. Supreme Court did not, as it was first reported, outlaw bus segregation April 23, but merely refused to review the South Carolina case because the question of damages had not been settled in the lower court.

Unless and until Judge Jones' order is set aside by a higher state court, or superseded by some federal court order, segregation is still the law on Montgomery buses and the bus company must, under threat of citation for contempt, enforce it. Judge Jones' injunction order said:

Ala. J. 5-11-56

Ordered, adjudged and decreed by the court that the respondent company do withdraw the order it has issued to its employes, same being contained in the bulletin No. 5-56 [which the company hastily issued on the day of the Supreme Court's misinterpreted order, apparently without bothering to ascertain whether the Supreme Court had actually invalidated bus segregation] dated April 23, 1956, with reference to seating of passengers on buses, and the said respondent, its agents, servants and employes, be, and each is hereby required to comply with and abide by all the provisions of the ordinances of the city of Montgomery and the statutes of Alabama relating to the seating of white and Negro passengers in separate portions of the conveyances of the respondent operated within the city of Montgomery and its police jurisdiction.

That means the bus company and its drivers must enforce segregated seating or risk going to jail for contempt.

Montgomery Negroes Tell Court Of Abuse by City's Bus Drivers

Times p. 20-C

Defense Opens Case in Boycott Trial With Recital of Threats and Insults

New York City

—Pastor Renews Peace Offer

Thurs. 3-22-56

By WAYNE PHILLIPS

Special to The

MONTGOMERY, Ala., March 21—Montgomery Negroes testified today that they had stopped riding the city buses because of shooting and threats and insults by drivers.

None of the score of witnesses said he had stopped riding the buses because of the protest movement led by the Montgomery Improvement Association headed by the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

Mr. King is on trial for conducting an illegal boycott. Eighty-nine other Negroes have been arrested on similar charges.

The association was formed by Negroes after the arrest of Rosa Parks, a seamstress, for refusing to give up her seat to a white person. Most Montgomery Negroes have refused to ride the city buses since Dec. 5, when she was tried. They have used a pool of 30 cars organized by the association.

Seek Greater Courtesy

The Negroes have demanded, through the association, that the bus company assure greater courtesy by drivers, seat Negroes on a "first come, first served" basis and employ Negro drivers on predominantly Negro routes.

Dr. King said today that the protest movement could be settled now on the basis of those demands even though the protest has been extended to a general attack on segregation in city transportation.

The defenseopened by seeking to establish a "just cause" for Negroes' refusal to ride the buses. Three leaders of Negro civic associations testified that they had asked city and bus company officials for better riding conditions on several occasions since 1952.

Among their complaints were discourtesy and insults by drivers, being forced to stand beside empty seats reserved for whites, being left behind while going to the rear door, and drivers' picking up white passengers at every block, but colored passengers only at every other block.

Mrs. Thelma Glass, a member of the Women's Political Council, testified that nothing had been done by the bus company or city officials about any of the complaints except the refusal to stop at every corner.

Tells of Gun Threat

Mrs. Sadie Brooks, a member of the Civic Federation, testified to the reluctance of drivers to make change for Negroes. She told of a bus driver who had forced a Negro off the bus at the point of a gun when the man offered a dollar bill to be changed.

Another woman, Mrs. Stella Brooks, testified that she had stopped riding the buses in 1950 because her husband had been shot to death when, she said, he refused to obey a driver's order to stay off the bus. Her testimony was stricken on the ground that she had not witnessed her husband's death.

A succession of other witnesses told, often in emotional terms, of repeated threats and verbal abuse by drivers.

After the prosecution had rested this morning, Fred D. Gray, one of the eight Negro attorneys defending Dr. King, asked that the case be thrown out. He contended that it had not shown any illegal activities by Dr. King or his associates.

Circuit Judge Eugene W. Carter ruled against the motion, which had raised a series of constitutional questions expected to be used as the basis of an appeal should Dr. King be convicted. The defendants have waived their right to jury trial.

FINE DEALT BUS BOYCOTT LEADER

Times-Picayune

Sentence Suspended Pending Defense Appeal

Fri. 3-23-56

By REX THOMAS

MONTGOMERY, Ala., March 22 (AP)—The first of the Negro bus boycott leaders, Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., was convicted after a four-day trial Thursday and defense attorneys immediately began an appeal that may lead ultimately to the United States supreme court.

New Orleans

King, 27-year-old pastor of the Dexter Avenue Baptist church in Montgomery, was fined $500 for violation of Alabama's seldom-used antiboycott law for his part in the 17-week-old boycott against segregated city buses.

La.

The fine was suspended, however, after Negro defense lawyers served notice of appeal. They have said they will take the appeal to the US supreme court if the state appellate courts uphold the conviction.

Court reconvened a short while later and King also was charged with court costs of approximately $500 in addition to the fine.

Sentence Suspended

Under a formality of court procedure, however, the fine and costs were converted into a jail sentence since he chose to appeal rather than pay the money. He was sentenced to a total of 386 days. But the sentence was suspended when the defendant posted an appeal bond of $1000.

As he left the courthouse, the minister was cheered by waiting Negroes with shouts of "Behold the King" and "Long live the King."

Circuit Judge Eugene Carter, presiding over the trial in the absence of a jury, could have fined King $1000 and added a six-month jail sentence under the state law. But he said he decided on a lesser penalty because it was shown in testimony that the 27-year-old minister used his influence throughout the mass bus protest to urge his people to refrain from violence.

Other Trials Postponed

Circuit solicitor William F. Thetford announced immediately after the verdict was read that the state had agreed to postpone the trials of 89 other boycott defendants pending King's appeal.

The 90 Negroes were indicted by a grand jury Feb. 21.

In a statement to newsmen following his conviction, King said the verdict "will not increase or diminish in any way my interest in the protest."

"We will continue with the protest in the same spirit," he continued, "with nonviolence, passive resistance, and using the weapon of love."

(International News Service)
REV. MARTIN LUTHER KING JR.

Times-Picayune

There was no demonstration in the courtroom, but Negro spectators crowded around King outside as he left the courthouse.

The minister expressed confidence to reporters that the federal courts will throw out his conviction and hold the Alabama law unconstitutional.

P. 8

Mistreatment Claimed

Defense attorneys Fred D. Gray of Montgomery and Arthur Shores of Birmingham insisted in their closing arguments that the state had failed to prove King committed any unlawful acts and that Negroes had a justifiable reason for refusing to patronize the bus company.

Nearly two score Negro witnesses had testified of repeated acts of verbal abuse and mistreatment in the past decade at the hands of white bus drivers, and defense lawyers argued the boycott was the culmination of those experiences.

Gray contended that King had done nothing whatever to prevent the bus company from carrying on a normal business.

Shores, on the other hand, argued that the Negroes had a just cause for refusing to ride the buses and that whatever King did "he has done perfectly within his own rights as guaranteed within the constitution.

In their pretrial arguments and repeatedly during the four-day hearing, the Negro lawyers injected the question of federal constitutional rights in the trial, admittedly with a view to taking their case into federal court if necessary.

Insists Case Is Proved

Thetford, in his final argument, insisted that the state had proved its case and that King had been clearly identified as "the leader" of the continuing bus protest.

He described the defendant as one of a "selfish little group of men seeking power and influence among their race and seizing this opportunity."

King, testifying in his own behalf earlier Thursday, denied commission of any unlawful act and said he had never urged other Negroes even to refrain from riding the buses.

He emphasized also that he had carefully steered clear of violence during the boycott; that he admonished Negroes to follow a policy of non-violence and passive resistance to oppression.

Thetford produced minutes of the group's organization meeting, however, which listed King as chairman of the resolutions committee.

Boycott Support Cited

The resolution urged all residents of Montgomery to refrain from riding buses and was adopted at a Negro mass meeting the night of Dec. 5, the date the bus protest began.

King and other witnesses agreed that most of if not all the improvement association's efforts thus far have been directed at supporting the boycott.

State's attorneys completed their testimony with seven rebuttal witnesses, including six veteran bus drivers who denied they had ever mistreated any Negro passenger.

Recalled as a prosecution rebuttal witness Thursday was the bus company manager, J. H. Bagley. He testified he had fired 21 drivers in 10 years for discourtesy to passengers.

Bagley also produced a performance report by his parent company, National City Lines, Inc., of Chicago, based on a spot check of Montgomery buses last November. The manager said it failed to show one instance of driver discourtesy.

Rev. M. L. King Answers Faulkner On Gradualism

Pittsburgh Courier

Sat. 4-28-56

Columbus, Ohio (ANP)—Speaking for a crowd of 400 $10-a-plate dinners in Columbus last Saturday night, Dr. Martin Luther King, leader of the Montgomery, Ala. bus protest, answered novelist William Faulkner who recently cautioned Negroes to slow up.

In his address to the Ohio NAACP, Dr. King went to some detail to reply to Faulkner who recently wrote an open letter to Life Magazine in which he urged Negroes to slow down in their drive for first class citizenship.

"Tell Mr. Faulkner, who encourages the use of gradualism, that segregation is a cancer to the American way of life and that one does not treat cancer by rubbing vaseline on it," stated Rev. King.

All through his address the speaker emphasized the idea that the protest in Montgomery was being conducted without violence and with love of fellowman and love of country as the most important ingredients.

"We do not have hate in our hearts, we do not want to put the bus company out of business, we want to put justice in business," declared the Rev. Mr. King.

Rev. King pointed out that the reference to the Negroes' refusal to ride the segregated buses in Montgomery as a boycott is incorrect. "It is a protest. We refuse to cooperate! We refuse to pay our dime to be treated in the manner to which we are objecting."

State develops new boycott evidence

News Tues. 3-20-56
Birmingham Ala.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., March 20—(AP)—Prosecuting attorneys developed fresh testimony today that a newly-formed Negro organization has devoted most of its efforts to supporting the segregation boycott of Montgomery city buses. P. 6

The Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., first of 90 Negro leaders called to trial on indictments growing out of the bus boycott, is president of the Montgomery Improvement Assn. which was formed last Dec. 5, the day the Negroes began their mass refusal to ride segregated buses.

PURPOSE OF THE testimony was to try to link King to what the state calls a conspiracy to hinder operation of the bus company, Montgomery City Lines.

Mrs. Erna Dungee, financial secretary of the improvement association, was back on the witness stand for the second day to identify checks paid out by the organization. Many of them, she said, went to drivers who have used cars in a motor pool which has provided transportation for Negroes during the boycott.

Mr. Dungee also testified that she saw King at many of the mass meetings held at Negro churches twice a week since the boycott started, and that the 27-year-old Baptist minister spoke at some of the rallies. But she said she couldn't recall what he said except that he discussed "the protest," which is the Negroes' term for the dispute.

THE FINANCIAL secretary also said collections of money were taken up at every mass meeting she remembered and that "I'm sure" some of the money went to the improvement association.

Mrs. Dungee said the Negro organization has performed no direct function besides supporting the bus boycott and has spent no money "directly" for any other purpose. She said the association did help out with baskets for needy Negroes but she didn't recall spending any of the organization's money for that purpose.

A Baptist minister who refused to swear an oath as a witness followed Mrs. Dungee on the stand and told of the organizational meeting of the Bell Street Baptist Church in Montgomery, told the court. "I don't swear. It's against my religious conviction. But I promise to tell the truth."

Circuit Judge Eugene Carter agreed that was good enough.

FIELDS, SECRETARY of the improvement association, testified the organization grew out of a meeting of the Montgomery Interdenominational Ministerial, a group of Negro ministers.

On one question, he said his notes showed three members appointed a committee but that his minutes didn't show what committee it was and "my memory does not allow me to recall."

Questioned about the appointment of a transportation committee, he said his minutes bore an entry about a transportation committee but "I see those words and they don't make sense to me now."

THE CHAIRMAN of the association's transportation committee, Rufus Lewis, testified the purpose of his group was to provide transportation "to those who want it in preference to riding the buses."

Lewis described in detail the working of a car pool of some 200 automobiles which has provided rides to and from work for some several thousand Negroes since the boycott began. He said passengers assemble at some 43 dispatch stations each morning and gather again at pickup stations at the close of the day to get rides back home.

Asked if he had ever made a transportation report to King as president of the association, Lewis said he didn't recall but that reports were made at mass meetings.

With the battery of Negro defense attorneys still to present their case, the trial of King may well run through tomorrow. It may be weeks or even months before the trials of all 90 defendants can be completed.

The Negroes have all exercised their right to demand separate trials. All have waived the right to trial by jury, leaving it up to Circuit Judge Eugene Carter to decide on their guilt or innocence.

Yesterday Mrs. Dungee identified bank deposits totaling about $30,000 made out in the name of the Improvement Assn. She also identified photostats of checks totaling almost $5000 signed by herself and King in payment for gasoline.

A previous Negro witness yesterday, the Rev. A. W. Wilson, a member of the Improvement Assn.'s executive committee, told the court that as far as he knew the organization had done nothing besides seek "better treatment" for Negroes on buses.

J. H. Bagley, manager of the bus company and the first witness called yesterday, identified King as one of the Negro leaders who told him they thought the boycott would end if certain demands were met.

Among the 90 defendants scheduled for trial after King is Mrs. Rosa Parks, the seamstress whose conviction for refusing to move to the back of the bus brought on the continuing protest movement. Negroes have stayed off the buses since Mrs. Parks was fined $14 on Dec. 5 for violating state and city segregation laws.

Associated Press wirephoto

DEFENSE IN BUS BOYCOTT CASE
. . . Fred Gray (left) and Arthur Shores talked with Rep. Charles C. Diggs Jr. (right), (D., Mich.) on steps of Montgomery Courthouse.

Magazine Spotlights Rev. M. King

Afro American
Baltimore, Md.
Sat. 6-4-56

NEW YORK — "If we are arrested every day, if we are exploited every day, if we are trampled over every day, don't ever let anyone pull you so low as to hate him."

This, according to an article in the current issue of Redbook Magazine, is one of the statements recently made by the Rev. Martin L. King Jr., as he urged the people of Montgomery, Ala. to use the "weapon of love" in their bus campaign.

Calling the Rev. Mr. King a "new and striking" type of leader, the article notes that his advocacy of passive resistance has presented the Southern prosegregationists with a "new, and to many, perplexing view" of the Southern colored man.

"Its success," the article continued, "has demonstrated clearly the powerful uniting force of a movement based on the principle of love for all people and grounded in a snese of the righteousness and justice of its cause."

Frontiers To Honor Dr. M. L. King And Mrs. Rosa Parks

Daily Herald
Augusta, Ga.
Wed. 9-5-56

The Atlanta Frontiers will spearhead a citizens committee to honor Atlanta born Dr. M. L. King, Jr., and Mrs. Rosa Parks, both of Montgomery, Alabama. The testimonial will see the presentation of the second annual citizenship plaque and citation by the local service club group. The program is tentatively scheduled for mid-October.

During the weekly meeting at Joe's Holiday Room the president, Jesse O. Thomas, was urged to plan a community wide participation program, and to invite community leaders in on the planning participation.

In other action the Frontiers scored the action of members of the Atlanta Police force for the long standing policy of citing postal employees during the performance of their duties with traffic violation charges. Of particular interest is the fact that only Negroes have been victims of the local policy some policemen.

Significantly it was a Frontiersman who was the most recent affected. Recently James W. Hawkins was cited for illegal parking while picking up mail from postal boxes in the Odds Fellows Building, the Herndon Building, Auburn and Butler Streets and the Sub-Station in the Drug Store. Later the case was dismissed.

A detailed report of this case and others were heard by the Frontiers. It was indicted that more recently the postal employees have had a rash of these charges by police officers in various areas of the city.

The Frontiers further went on record commending Mr. Hawkins for his action in the interest of all postal employees. They said "it is the consensus of the Frontiers that this was a significant act in establishing the right of all Negro government employees to perform his duty."

The members also especially observed the appointment of Mrs. Ralph C. Robinson as a resource person on the staff of Area Superintendent, Dr. Bowen. She is the wife of Frontiers Projert Chairman, Ralph C. Robinson.

The Frontiersmen discussed the importance of getting-out-the vote and the value of an informed electorate. Here plans were outlined on how a voter can secure detailed facts on various candidates.

Hamilton Douglas, Jr., and Luther V. Alverson, are scheduled to address the Frontiersmen during their weekly luncheon next Tuesday. They are candidates for ujdgeships in the September 12 primaries.

MONTGOMERY PROTEST TRIALS HALTED: PASTOR FINED $500

Lawyers Say Case May Go To U. S. Supreme Court

Daily World 4/1
Atlanta, Ga. 4-1-56

BY ROBERT H. DENLEY

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — (INS) — The Rev. M. L. King, Jr., was found guilty Thursday of conspiring to sustain Montgomery's long bus boycott and fined $500.

Judge Eugene W. Carter, who made the decision in the jury-less trial explained he reduced the punishment well below the maximum in recognition of the Negro minister's attempt to prevent violence during the boycott that began last December 5.

The trials of 89 other Negroes on similar charges were postponed pending the Rev. King's appeal to the State Supreme Court.

King, who was released immediately under bond, told newsmen:

FIGHT PLANNED

This will not dininish in any way the interest in the Bus protest we will continue the protest in the same protest in the same spirit."

Judge Carter's decision, issued immediately after attorneys completed final arguments, was delivered to a hushed court room made up predominantly of Negroes.

The jurist said:

"Because of this defendant's activities in trying to prevent violence I think it it fair to find him guilty but fine him only $500."

The maximum punishment under the 30 year old anit-boycott law is a fine of $1,000 and six months in jail.

After the sentences, Negro spectators shook hands with the minister, but there was no demonstration.

Robert Carter, National Association for the Advancevent of Colored people legal staff member from New York who participated in the trial said:

"We think that if a conviction can be sustained under this law, the law itself is unconstitutional. We will take it to he U. S. Supreme Court if necessary."

The next step is an appeal to the Alabama Supreme Court which upheld the validity of the anti-boycott law in 1942 under which the Rev. King was convicted.

In final argument, Solicitor William Thetford asserted that the boycott was not sustained by spontaneous portest of Montgamery's 45,000 Negroes but by "A selfish, little band of men seeking power over their own race. They saw an opportunity to get it through this Bus protest."

Daily World

Thetford said that the defense only contention was that King had a "just cause or leagl excuse to enter into this conspiracy." He added "I submit they decided to continue the boycott before they had any idea what their excuse would be."

Thetford said in his 30 minute final argument:

"I submit that a great majority of the colored people of Montgomery want to go back to riding but are afraid to do so."

He said that acts of violence, including the shooting up of several Buses in the early stages of the boycott, "were a natural and logical consequence of the hysteria built up by this defendant and others. Those acts were committed in furtherance of the aim of 16 or 18 men who were the original conspirators and who organized this boycott."

Defense Attorney Fred Gray argued that the state had failed to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that the Rev. King violated the law. He added:

"The state has utterly failed to show this defendant made any attemp to restrain people from riding the Buses."

Defense Attorney Arthur Shores, NAACP lawyer from Birmingham, Ala., said we contend there was a just cause or legal excuse for this defendant to do whatever he has done, and that he has committed no unlawful acts."

'I Have Faith'

Afro-American 4/8

By AL SWEENEY
Staff Writer

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — "Frankly, I don't know how it will end. But I have faith in the future and confidence that we are right.

"Ultimately, right will triumph because we believe that God is with us."

It was the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. speaking.

He answtred queries of the AFRO at busy headquarters of the Montgomery Improvement Association located in the Pine Room of the Citizens Club on the western limits of Montgomtry.

Sat. 4-7-56

THE TYPEWRITER of four typists were clacking away on letters of acknowledgement on the thousands of organizations and individuals who sent messages and money to the association in support of its "passive resistance" protest movement.

The movement was nearing the end of its 15th week. The Rev. Mr. King was signing the acknowledgements, answering the telephone, and advising members of his staff on the various phases of the operation.

Baltimore, Md.

"I note that one writer said that you were just getting around to reading the life of Gandhi and that the 'passive resistance' movement was inspired by his life," the writer said.

* * *

"YES I NOTED that. But, that isn't true. I have been a keen student of Ganhi for many years.

"However, this business of passive resistance and non violence is the gospel of Jesus. I went to Gandhi through Jesus.

"The techniue was developed by Gandhi," the Rev. Mr. King said.

I have heard that you were a student of Dr. Howard Thurman dean of the chapel at Boston University and that much of your philosophy has been influenced by him, he was told.

* * *

"IT'S STRANGE that you mention that at this particular time. Because I signing a note to Dr. Thurman, whom I greatly admire.

"But, I never took one of his courses. He is a good friend of mine, but I would not say that I was a student of his. He is a fine man I greatly admire him, though."

How the movement began has been told. Why the Rev. Mr. King was chosen as its leader has not.

"I couldn't tell you why I was chosen as the leader, either," says the Rev. Mr. King.

* * *

HE HASTENED to add that this "was a movement of the masses and not that of any single individual. The leadership is a corporate one and I am merely in name only."

As for the philosophy of love, the Rev. Mr. King says that he cannot too strongly emphasize "the power of love."

"I feel it transcends all power. The sheerp ower of love will overcome our enemines.

"We have no room for resentment or hatred. We have to make others understand our position and this can only be done through the weapon of love," he said with great sincerity.

* * *

THE REV. MR. KING stands 5 feet 4 inches and weighs about 140 pounds.

He did his undergraduate work at Morehouse College in Atlanta. He received his bachelor of divinity degree from Crozier Theological Seminary in Chester, Pa.

While attending Crozier, he took graduate courses at the University of Pennsylvania.

In June, 1955 he received a doctor's degree of divinity from Boston University.

* * *

"AFTER RECEIVING my degreem from Boston University," he said, "I received numerous offers to teach or serve as an administrative assistant in one of several colleges.

"However, I got the call to the Baptist Church here in Montpulpit at the Dexter Avenue Baptist Church here in Montgomery. I wanted the experience of the pulpit, so I accepted.

"There have been several excellent ministers in the pulpit of the Dexter Avenue Church in the past. Such men as Dr. Vernon Johns, my immediate predecessor, who is retired in Virginia;

"Dr. Ralph Riley, president of the American Baptist Seminary; Dr. Gregory, Dr. Jackson, now a pastor in Connecticut; and Dr. R. T. Pollard, president of Selma University."

* * *

THE REV. MR. KING is the third generation of ministers. His maternal grandfather, the Rev. A. D. Williams, pastored at the Ebenezer Baptist Church in Atlanta for 37 years.

His father, the Rev. Martin Luther King Sr., has been pastor at the Ebenezer Church 24 years.

"What about the report that your father holds title to the church and not the trustees as in most churches?" I asked the young minister.

"You know there isn't a word of truth in that report. I have been hearing that since I have been a youngster. I don't know how it got started."

* * c

THE REV. MR. KING is married to the attractive former Mis Corretta Scott of Marion, Ala. Mrs. King is a graduate of Antioch College at Yellow Springs, Ohio.

The Kings met in Boston, Mrs. King was attending the New England Conservatory of Music studying voice.

A lyric soprano, she was a concert singer up until she gave birth to a daughter, Yolanda Denise, four months ago.

The Kings have been married three years. They reside in a modest bungalow at 301 S. Jackson St.

SINCE THE demonstration began, Mrs. King has received many anonymous phone calls. Many of them she said were obscene and contained "very disconcerting" threats.

How does she feel about them and the general atmosphere, since the demonstration?

"Well, I am not afraid. I feel that we are right in the sight of God. He will watch over us and there is no need for fear."

The Rev. Mr. King revealed that the improvement association had applied for a jitney service franchise.

* * *

"WE WERE turned down and plan to apply again. If the franchise is not granted, perhaps we will run a free jitney service.

"I think that we could do with about 100 station wagons. We could operate the free transportation system through contributions in our churches.

"I can't see where it would be illegal to do this as long as we were not operating a service for hire," he said.

* *

"MAYBE THIS will be the answer. At this point I don't know how this movement is going to end.

"But, we know that we are not going to accept the humiliation that we endured under the old system.

"We ask only that we be treated with the proper respect that should be accorded all human beings."

Bus boycott group sets up own bank

Afro-American P. 17

Baltimore, Md.

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — The newest project of the Montgomery Improvement Association, sponsors of the bus boycott now in its sixth month, is the establishment of a savings and loan bank.

Sat. 5-19-56

The Rev. Martin L. King announced that such a project was in the offing last week.

At Thursday's mass meeting, he circulated questionnaires among members of the association to determine whether they were interested in such a bank.

THE PASTOR explained that many of the city's banking and loan institutions were becoming hesitant in financially assisting "our people."

"Let's build our own financial empire right here in Montgomery," he challenged.

It was explained that such a savings and loan company to be established in a town as large as Montgomery must have at least 300 shareholders. . .

* * *

NO SHAREHOLDER could purchase more than shares amounting to $5,000. The minimum total of shareholders is $400,000.

The proposed savings and loan company in Montgomery will sell shares at $5 each.

The questionnaire asks the respondent if he is interested in establishing a bank in Montgomery and if interested, how many shares he would want.

Negroes Vote To Continue Bus Boycott

Advertiser

Fri. 4-27-56

Montgomery, Ala.

Resolution Asks City To Withdraw Threat To Drivers

P. 1

By STEVE LESHER

More than 3,000 cheering Negroes unanimously approved a resolution to continue the five-month-old boycott of city buses until the city withdraws its threats to arrest passengers and drivers who violate existing segregation laws.

Rev. M. L. King, president of the Montgomery Improvement Assn., read the resolution proposed by the executive committee of the MIA. The resolution praised the Supreme Court and National City Lines Inc. and its local subsidiary for their stands for desegregation.

The resolution began by reviewing the Negroes' reasons for beginning the boycott and continued by reporting the Supreme Court's decision made last Monday and the orders issued by the bus company.

SEVERAL CITIES

After stating reliable sources reported white and Negro passengers ride integrated buses in "several Southern cities, including Richmond, Va.; Little Rock, Ark.; Dallas, Tex., and others," King continued:

"Whereas the public officials of . . . Montgomery and . . . Alabama have indicated . . . that they intend to . use all means available, including the arrest of bus drivers and passengers who refuse to abide by and obey the segregation laws . . it is . . . agreed that the conditions heretofore existing remains the same because of the position taken by our public officials.

"Be it therefore resolved that we, the Negro citizens of Montgomery, Ala. . . . will continue to carry on our mass protest . . ."

The resolution was greeted with a thunderous ovation from the Negroes who massed in Day Street Baptist Church.

King urged that Negroes "not abuse" their "new rights and privileges." He added "a great adjustment needs to be made" among the Negroes.

PRAYERS FOR BAGLEY

He urged the throng to pray for the recovery of J. H. Bagley, superintendent of Montgomery City Lines Inc., who suffered a heart attack early Wednesday.

He also urged prayer for the City Commission "to lift them from the darkness of injustice . . ."

Meanwhile, no solutions to the conflicts in their stands were forthcoming from a lengthy meeting yesterday afternoon between officials of National City Lines Inc. of Chicago, Montgomery City Lines Inc. and Montgomery city commissioners.

REVOKE CHARTER

In a statement issued earlier by Mayor W. A. Gayle and City Commissioner Frank W. Parks and Clyde C. Sellers it was indicated the city would seek to revoke the bus company's franchise if the company failed to uphold segregation laws.

Vice President Benjamin W. Franklin of National City Lines, parent company of the local firm, has taken a stand that the company "is not a police body. We will not enforce segregation and we will not enforce integration." Franklin said the company would "certainly help" a bus driver "if he was arrested for obeying our instructions."

Advertiser

After the two and one-half hour meeting in the offices of City Atty. Walter Knabe, Mayor Gayle issued the following brief statement:

P. 2-A

"The City Commission has. . . taken the position that the . . . decision of the . . . Supreme Court did not pass on the statutes of Alabama and the . . . City of Montgomery. We are now advised that there is a question as to whether the Supreme Court passed . . . on the statutes of South Carolina.

NO CONCLUSIONS

"We have conferred with representatives of the City Lines but have reached no conclusions. Our conferences will be resumed on . . . Friday or Saturday.

"The City Commisison adheres to the position it has originally expressed that it will enforce all applicable Alabama statutes and city ordinances."

Montgomery City Lines representatives had "no comment" to reporter's questions. At the meeting besides the city commissioners, Knabe and Franklin were City Clerk Silas Cater, City Atty. Miles S. Hall, National City Lines Atty. Robert Thrun and Montgomery City Lines Atty. Jack Crenshaw.

Franklin said later that no meeting with Negro leaders had been planned.

38b 1956

ALABAMA

REV. M.L. KING
MONTGOMERY

MONTGOMERY NEGROES TO CONTINUE WALKING

Daily world P.1

Fri, 4-27-56

Not One In Meeting To Oppose Move

Atlanta, Ga.

By PAUL BURTON

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — (INS) — Montgomery's Negroes voted unanimously at a mass meeting last night to continue their bus boycott of almost five months in protest against racial segregation on public vehicles.

More than 2,500 persons jammed into the Trinity Baptist Church to voice approval of a resolution calling on the officers and board of directors of the Montgomery Improvement Association "To do any and all acts that are deemed necessary to perfect our desires."

WAVED ARMS

The whole congregation stood up, shouting and waving their arms when the Rev. Martin Luther King, Jr., unofficial leader of the Bus boycott who chaired the meeting, called for the resolution.

The Rev. B. D. Lambert, Baptist Minister, moved that the resolution be adopted unanimously and declared:

"The Negroes of Montgomery will never go back to Jim Crow Buses." not a single person stood up when King asked if there were any opposed.

The church was filled to capacity more than an hour and a half before the meting was called to order shortly after 7 P. M. The assembly engaged in singing religious songs before the meeting got under way with an opening prayer.

The Montgomery City Lines, Inc., a subsidiary of National city lines Inc., of Chicago, has met all the demands of the Negroes except one the hiring of Negro bus drivers for predominantly Negro routes.

The Montgomery Improvement Association the organization established to coordinate the boycott, indicated today that it has softened this demand.

Fred Gray, attorney for the Association, said.

"We Want Negro applicants to receive the same consideration as white applicants."

Formerly, the MIA demanded that the bus company must hire Negro drivers before the boycott could be ended. But B. W. Franklin, Vice president of National City lines, said he believed this was impossible in the near future because of union contracts which require furloughed men to be rehired before new men are considered.

HEAR SUIT MAY 11

Two lawsuits attacking the municipal and state statutes requiring segregation are in the courts, and there was speculation prior to the meeting that the boycott would not be called off until these suits have been resolved.

Daily World

One of the suits is scheduled to be heard in Federal court on May 11.

Boycott leaders, including Rev. King and Attorney Gray, said today, however, that the boycott could end before the litigation is concluded.

P. 4

Gray said the Negro driver issue was important not only because Negro passengers prefer them, but, also from an economic standpoint

"We give the bus company more than 70 per cent of its business," He said"and we feel some of that money should come back to us.'

The Bus Company issued a desegregated order last Monday, but city officials have threatened any violators of municipal segregation ordinances.

This morning's meeting held behind closed doors and lasting two and one half hours, brought only a reaffirmed and even stronger segregation stand from the commission.

In brief statement, issued after the meeting, the commission said it had formally taken the stand that the U. S. Supreme Court ruling last Monday, which led the Bus Company to order desegregation, applied only to South Carolina.

The Bus Company Representatives have no comments to make on the conference.

Further conferences are scheduled for today or Saturday.

Trial May Show If Protesting Is A Conspiracy

Daily Mord P.1

Wed. 3-21-56

Atlanta, Ga.

By CHARLES H. LOEB
NNPA Correspondent

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — The issue at Montgomery, when you have cut through the legal sparring in Circuit Judge Eugene W. Carter's courtroom, is whether it is an illegal conspiracy for Negroes in Alabama to unite behind cohesive leadership to protest inequality of treatment.

For the moment, it concerns treatment on the privately-owned, leased through the city, bus lines. But before the trial concludes it will inject itself into almost every phase of relationships between Negroes and whites in the state of Alabama.

The strong impression here is that it will not be decided in this courtroom.

The State of Alabama contends that the mass meetings held in Montgomery's Negro churches, the employment of drivers in a car pool to carry those who refuse to ride the buses, the voicing of demands for more courteous treatment, equitable seating on a first-come-served basis, and the employment of Negro bus drivers, is an act of conspiracy.

The Rev. Martin Luther King says it isn't. He is the first to be tried.

As this is being written, two days of legal jousting have been completed between well-trained white lawyers acting for the state and well-trained Negro lawyers acting for Rev. King, 23 other ministers, and others who make up the laymen.

In spite of all the objections raised by a corps of Negro lawyers, the story of how and why the MIA was born, and how it operates, and how much it costs to operate, and what gives it direction, will get into the records.

Negro lawyers have been overruled 116 times already in their efforts to keep these things out of the record.

But already, with only four witnesses questioned, the state has introduced records and exhibits to show that at least $30,000 has been disbursed by the MIA.

Everybody in Montgomery knows it already, word for word. They know their leaders and are following them.

Martin Luther King, Jr., whose stature grows bigger and bigger under abuse, after the bombing of his home, during each hour of his trial, has told them to tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth.

He seems eager to get on the stand to set the pattern.

"We believe we are right. The truth can't hurt us," he tells his co-defendants.

"We were tired of getting second class treatment in exchange for first class fares."

"We wanted a dime's worth of ride for a dime."

"We kept begging for it."

"They kept refusing it."

It is difficult to see how that process can do anything but hurt the segregationists' cause. For even eventual upholding of this conviction—which is by no means certain—would not kill the idea of nonviolent use of economic power. Meanwhile at every step there would probably be a continuance of bad publicity for the methods adopted to enforce white supremacy. Also, unhappily, there may be a spreading use and abuse of boycotts, damaging to both races and to the South as a whole.

The Montgomery boycott developed as a protest by most of the city's 50,000 Negroes against discrimination on the busses. In the King trial there was abundant testimony intended to show justification—which might be a defense under the law. It left little doubt that treatment of the Negroes on busses fulfilled but half of the "separate but equal" standard.

Southerners honestly convinced that the two races will do better if kept separate—at least in certain associations — will find their case damaged by the ugly evidence of insult and humiliation in this record. Senator Eastland recently declared segregation was not based on any sense of racial superiority. But as practiced it is often hard to disengage from manifestations of white "supremacy" which are not pretty even when as unconscious as the discrimination practiced in the North.

Negroes have by no means been the only ones to employ economic weapons in the segregation struggle. Whites months ago began firing or denying

What Other Papers Say

Call P. 18

DESEGREGATION: ECONOMIC WEAPONS

Fri, 4-6-56

(From The Christian Science Monitor)

Kansas City, Mo.

The Negroes of Montgomery, Alabama, have started something which will not be stopped by the conviction of the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., on the charges of organizing an illegal boycott. The bus boycott is not halted. Trials of 89 other defendants were suspended pending appeal of the King case, and that may take several years to reach a final adjudication.

credit to Negroes who signed petitions for desegregated schools. Whites have set in motion some of the most harmful rumor-bred boycotts of business firms accused—usually with no truth—of aiding the NAACP. Whites, indeed, appear to have suffered most, being also on the receiving end of boycotts by Negroes for supporting the White Citizens Councils.

It is clear that the economic weapons are dangerous ones, and southern leaders are deeply concerned by the harm they are doing. One remedy is to expose the false reports which start many of them. But a more fundamental answer is also being sought in steps to cultivate moderation and positive improvements in race relations. Leaders in Montgomery would be well advised to follow this course.

So far the Negroes there have had all the best of it—especially in national and world opinion. They have asked for a rule which obtains on busses in other southern cities like Memphis. This still aims at segregation, but with a first-come-first-served rule. Whites are seated in front, Negroes in the back, but either race may overflow its own area if there are seats available. Whites at present are in the poor position of trying to compel Negroes to ride busses. Also to stand even though there may be empty seats.

Moreover, some of the Negro leaders appear to understand that the spirit in which economic weapons are used is vital. They have emphasized calmness and nonviolence. Mr. King pleaded on one occasion, "We must use the weapon of love. We must have compassion and understanding for those who hate us." Economic power, if exercised in that spirit, will not be easily stopped.

Trial of Negro Boycotters in Process

State Press P. 1

Rev. King on Stand 89 Others Waiting

Thu. 3-23-56

The trial of the 90 Negroes who were indicted in the Montgomery bus boycott went to court this week in that city. The trial will probably run for weeks and weeks, because each defendant has been granted an individual and separate trial. Circuit Judge Eugene Carter is the presiding judge during the trial of Reverend Martin Luther King, jr., whose case is the first to be heard.

Little Rock, Ark.

The state's attorneys are attempting to show that Negroes who rode the bus during the boycott have been threatened. Testimony along that line has been taken during the early hours of the trial, but the judge has allowed only part of the testimony to go into the records. Attorneys for the defense scored when they got from one of the prosecution witnesses, that he had heard the Reverend Mr. King and other ministers appeal to their race to shun any act of violence. This witness was city editor of the Montgomery Advertiser.

Inspite of the trial of the Reverend Mr. King, and the indictment of 89 others awaiting trial - - the courageous Negroes of that Alabama city are still walking.

Miss. Regional Meeting

Courier P. 1 (Sec. 2)

Rep. Powell, Dr. King, Dr. Howard to Talk

Sat. 4-28-56

Pittsburgh, Pa.

JACKSON, Miss.—Some ten thousand are expected to attend the fifth annual meeting of the Regional Council of Negro Leadership here Friday, April 27.

The crowded one-day, three-session meeting will bring together the greatest array of Negro leadership in the history of the state.

Top speaker will be Congressman Adam Clayton Powell, New York, member of the U. S. House of Representatives. The big speaker list will also include the Rev. Martin Luther King and the Rev. B. T. Lamerth, both of Montgomery, Ala.; Bishop Thomas H. Primm, New Orleans, AME prelate; the Rev. Paul Hayes, Hot Springs, Ark., and Dr. T. R. M. Howard, Mound Bayou.

Forty of the state's heads of various organizations will gather in the morning to draft resolutions seeking a bi-racial committee to explore present race tension. Following this, 1,000 ministers of all denominations will gather in a panel on "The Role of the Church in the Present Transition."

Tougaloo and Campbell College choruses and the Cordettes will furnish music.

$10-Per-Plate

Courier

Rallying 400 Hear Dr. King In Columbus

Sat. 4-28-56

Pittsburgh, Pa.

P. 1 (Sec. 2)

COLUMBUS, Ohio (ANP) — Speaking for 400 $10-a-plate diners in Columbus, Dr. Martin Luther King, leader of the Montgomery (Ala.) bus protest, answered novelist William Faulkner who recently cautioned Negroes to "slow up."

In his address to the Ohio NAACP, Dr. King went to some detail to reply to Faulkner who recently wrote an open letter to Life magazine in which he urged Negroes to slow down in their drive for first-class citizenship.

"Tell Mr. Faulkner, who encourages the use of gradualism, that segregation is a cancer to the American way of life and that one does not treat cancer by rubbing vaseline on it," stated the Rev. Mr. King.

P. 32

Aug. 3-20-56

Memphis, Tenn.

Commercial Appeal

TRIAL RECESS—A noon recess yesterday allowed Negro bus boycott leader Rev. M. L. King Jr. to escort his wife to lunch. King was the first of 90 indicted Negroes to go on trial in the Montgomery bus incident.

Mistreated People Of Montgomery Get Sympathy Plus Cash

Globe P.1 Fri. 3-23-56

Methodist Pastor Speaks To 2,100 Citizens Of Cleveland, Saying "We Decided To Go to Jail Together," Prayer Meeting Is Told Car Pool Patriots Have Raised $3,500 Expense For 91 Days; Protest Surrendering Seats To White Passengers

Nashville, Tenn.

Cleveland, Ohio, March 15.—"Perhaps you've heard that Negroes will not stick together. Well, if you hear it again, remember Montgomery, Alabama."

This was the admonition given here last week by one of the 24 ministers indicted in Montgomery in February for their participation in a mass Negro protest against discrimination in Montgomery city buses. A total of nearly 100 Negroes were indicted.

Addressing a crowd of 2,100 persons at a prayer-protest rally, sponsored by the Cleveland NAACP the Rev. L. Roy Bennett recounted that "we decided to go to jail together instead of one by one."

A total of $3,301.64 was donated by the audience to aid the Montgomery group in its fight against segregation and to help in the legal defense of those arrested there.

Mr. Bennett, a Methodist minister in Montgomery, related:

"Our story started in April, 1955, when a young girl refused to give up her seat on a bus, thereby violating city and state law, was jailed and fined. She had moved across an imaginary line set up by the bus driver.

WOMAN REFUSED TO GIVE UP SEAT

"Then, last December, a woman who had sat in the same bus seat for years refused to give it up to a white man. That was the straw that broke the camel's back. She was arrested, and that night there was the biggest and most spontaneous mass meeting ever seen at our church.

"We had to do something to stop the brutality of police and the drivers. We set December 5 as the day for our protest, in which no Negro would ride on a bus . . . We, the six or seven thousand Negroes gathered at our Dexter Avenue church that night, set up three things to accomplish:

"First, to request more courtesy to our people from the bus lines; secondly, to seek a seating arrangement on the basis of first come first served, and, thirdly, to request the employment of Negroes as bus drivers of the predominantly Negro lines.

Globe

"December 23 was the last of the meetings we had with city officials. They refused any compromise on our first two points. On the third they said union rules would take a little time for any integration of Negro drivers into the union.

P. 4

NEGROES HAVE WALKED AND WALKED

"Since then Negroes in Montgomery have walked and walked and walked . . . In a sense it is a spiritual movement and a passive movement. While we are walking, the bus line has lost $3,500 a day. Imagine, $3,500 a day for 91 days. We're going to fight until we can sit down where we darn please."

The call for funds at the meeting was led by the Rev. Angus C. Hull, Jr., of the Cleveland Baptist Association, who also served as moderator.

Other persons participating in the program included Dr. James E. Levy, president of the Cleveland NAACP; Charles P. Lucas, former executive secretary of the Cleveland NAACP; the Rev. A. Henson Jarmon, NAACP committee member and church pastor; Ralph Rudd and Jack G. Day of the Civil Liberties Union; and Arnold Walker of the Urban League.

The meeting was held on March 1.

Council Head Outlines Plan For King Fund

Advertiser P.1 Montgomery, Ala. Sun. 3-25-56

A Citizens Council leader yesterday suggested a New Jersey newspaper seeking funds to pay a convicted Negro bus boycott leader's fine isn't going far enough in its campaign.

State Sen. Sam Engelhardt of Macon County, executive secretary of the Association of Alabama Citizens Councils, issued this statement on a campaign launched by the Asbury Park Press:

"We think donations to pay King's (The Rev. M. L. King) fine are not enough. Donations should also be solicitied to move King, the Montgomery Improvement Assn. and every member of the National Association for Agitation of the Colored People (NAACP), in Montgomery to Asbury Park.

"If this is done we predict within one year other donations will be requested to move them away from Asbury Park. Apparently the Asbury Park Press's circulation among Negroes has been slipping lately."

DRIVE FOR $1,000

Montgomery's Mayor W. A. Gayle, and Associate Commissioners Frank Parks and Clyde Sellers, all members of the Montgomery Citizens Council, were unavailable for comment.

The newspaper launched its campaign to raise $1,000 to pay a $500 fine levied against the Rev. King after he was convicted of violating Alabama's anti-boycott law Thursday.

In a page one story and editorial, Editor Wayne D. McMurray suggested that readers of his newspaper might want to contribute to the fund to pay King's fine, court costs and legal expenses.

Advertiser

Circuit Court Clerk John Matthews said the court costs in King's case amounted to $184.45.

In a telegram to the Rev. King, Editor McMurray said:

P. 2-B

"We of the Asbury Park Press, outraged at the conviction of a fellow American for asserting a right our constitution guarantees to all, want to help you in your fight for justice. We are starting a fund drive among our readers for money to pay your fine and court costs.

3-25-56

"The Press itself is contributing $50. Checks will be drawn in your name and forwarded to you, or to your attorneys if your prefer."

The Rev. King was reported out of the city and unavailable for comment on the offer.

The Asbury Park Press editorial observed that segregation is "un-American and undemocratic" and said Montgomery Negroes were justified in insisting on a "first come, first served" seating arrangement on city buses.

$1,016 Sent From K.C. For Montgomery Cases

Call P. 2 Fri. 4-6-56

Kansas City, Mo.

The Kansas City NAACP branch C.P. announced this week that it had received and sent to its New York office $1,016.25 for the Montgomery, Ala., bus cases.

Thirty-six churches and individuals made the contribution through the local office.

Those making the contributions were: U.P.W.A.-C.I.O local No. 20; Macedonia Baptist church, S.Townsend, Galilee Baptist church, Randall Meade, St. Paul Baptist church Jeremiah Cameron, Hortense Black, Church of God in Christ, Carl R. Johnson, New Bethel A.M. E. church, Blue Valley Baptist church, Allen Chapel A. M. E. church, Second Baptist church, Willis A. M. E. church.

Jackson Memorial Baptist church Byrd Jackson, Jamison Temple A. M. E., Mount Pleasant Baptist church, Douglass Neighborhood Council, Pleasant Green Baptist church, Park Avenue Baptist church; Independent Packing House Workers, Local 12, Greenwood Baptist church, Effie G. Irvine, Bethany Baptist church, United Packing House Workers C.I.O. local 15, Olive Street Church of God in Christ, Highland Avenue Baptist church, Fellowship Baptist church, St. Paul Presbyterian church, Bethel A.M.E. church Southside Baptist church, Woodrow Austin.

All the money being sent to the N.A.A.C.P. from throughout the country is being used in defense of the people in Montgomery whose cases are now in the courts of that state. Other persons or groups desiring to make similar contributions are invited and urged to send them to the N.A.A.C.P., 231 Lincoln Building, 18th and Vine, Kansas City, Mo.

Master X's donation to Rev. King

Afro-American Sat. 3-31-56 Baltimore, Md.

RICHMOND

(Picture Page 18)

A 40-passenger bus will be sent to Montgomery, Ala., to aid in the 16-week-old bus protest.

The bus is being offered by Jesse L. Boland, 400-pound spiritual advisor known as "Master X." It has already been accepted by the Rev. Martin L. King, president of the Montgomery Improvement Association and alleged leader of the celebrated "passive resistance movement."

P. 6

IN A LETTER to Mr. Boland, the Rev. Mr. King said:

"We would gladly accept the bus. . . ."

The bus is one of three purchased by Mr. Boland several months ago. It is valued at $13,000. Mr. Boland, in a letter to the Rev. Mr. King, explained that he was in sympathy with the Montgomery movement and would gladly give one of his buses, if it was needed.

However, the bus needs tires, battery and some general repairs to put it in first class condition. About $3,000 is needed. Mr. Boland said the bus could be sent as a contribution from the citizens of Richmond, if the public would provide funds to get the bus into shape.

* * *

A CITIZENS committee is already at work on a fund-raising program designed to get the bus to Montgomery.

The bus will be painted white, will fly the American flag, and will carry lettering "from the citizens of Richmond, Va."

Most of the contributions are expected to be made on Wednesday, March 28, which will be known as "Montgomery Day" throughout the freedom loving world.

Local churches have planned special prayer meetings and will send moral and financial support to the tension-ridden Alabama city.

* * *

THE MOTOR POOL carrying citizens to and from work is costing $200 a day. Though effective, it is expensive and a bus would cut the cost of the project.

Boland is an old hand at buying surplus equipment. Once he purchased a huge seaplane, capable of carrying over 100 persons. The ill-fated ship ran aground and sank in the Baltimore harbor in 1951.

The Rev. Mr. King wrote that he felt the bus could be used as the property of one of the churches in Montgomery.

THE REV. MR. KING wrote:

"We are deeply grateful to you for your interest in our situation here in Montgomery. I am sure that our people would be more than happy to accept your offer of a good serviceable bus.

"The lawyers seem to feel that there is no legal basis for denying the rights for a bus to run without a franchise so long as the transportation is free and of course all of our transportation is free.

"I am sure that such a gift would be of tremendous help in alleviating our transportation problem.

"In short I would say that we would gladly accept the bus. Please extend my best regards to all of the persons of Richmond interested in our cause."

Negro Files Data In Boycott Appeal

Commercial Appeal 8/10

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Aug. 10. —(UP)— More than 500 pages of testimony transcribed in the trial of Rev. M. L. King, convicted bus boycott leader, were filed with the state Court of Appeals Friday.

Memphis Press

They are being filed in preparation for an appeal of the fine given the Negro for his part in the racial demonstration.

King was convicted and fined $500 in March for fostering an illegal boycott against Montgomery city buses. He was one of 90 Negro ministerial and lay leaders indicted by a Grand Jury for breaking a little-used anti-boycott law in a protest over segregated seating on city buses.

Court of Appeals clerk Charles Bricken said the court was in recess for the summer and the case would not be submitted for its review before Oct. 4, the day it is scheduled to return.

The bulky document was completed by court reporter Hallowell Lewis at a cost of between $1,400 and $1,500 to be borne by King.

Martin King vs Grover Hall

Informer Sat. 8-11-56

In the August 3rd issue of U. S. News and World Report, the Rev Dr Martin Luther King, Jr, president of the Montgomery Impovement Association, presents the Negro side of the bus strike. The white side is presented by Editor in Chief Grover C. Hall Jr, of The Montgomery Advertiser, white daily newspaper. A comparison of the two views makes rather clear the basic difference between Negroes and whites on the issue of segregation in the South.

Boston Times P.12

Editor Hall does not pretend to offer any moral basis for the position of the whites. He takes his stand simply and solely upon naked power and force. He says: "This way or that, the whites are going to ride. There isn't going to be any desegregation of buses for, before that, the bus line would be abolished. The question for Dr King is, therefore, how long he can maintain his jitney tansportation for his 50,000 followers."

On the issue of the naked force and power of the South against the force and power of the Federal Government, Editor Hall says that the Negro and his leaders "let themselves come to think that what they sought could be had purely by dispensations from the courts, Congress and the White House." But against that he says that the segregationists are now led by "brains of the kind that checkmated and wore down the Federal Government in the 1870's."

Dr King, on the other hand, does not put his trust in the power and force of the Federal Government, although it is obvious that that force and power are sufficent to put down the segregationists. if the Federal Government does not surrender as it did in the 1870's. Instead, Dr King says: "America's motive for giving the Negro freedom must not be merely to compete with godless Communism. It must be done in the final analysis, not because it is diplomatically expedient but because it is morally compelling. So we must press on because it is morally right to press on."

So, there we have it. The segregationists of the South make no claim that they are morally right or just. They claim only that they have the physical and other naked power and force to keep on segregating Negroes, and that they can checkmate and wear down the superior naked force and power of the Federal Government as they did in the 1870's.

While Negroes have hopes that Federal power will not surrender as it did in the 1870's, yet they do not place their reliance ultimately upon this power. Negroes ultimately place their case at the bar of moral and Christian right and justice. History teaches that slavery could not be preserved by the naked power and force of the slaveholders. Negroes are confident that segregation cannot be preserved by the naked power and force of the segregationists.

Paper Will Pay Fine For Pastor

Daily World Atlanta Ga. Sat. 3-31-56

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — A new Jersey newspaper has launched a fund drive to pay the fine and court costs of Rev. Martin Luther King, one of the leaders in the mass boycott of segregated buses, it was disclosed here Saturday.

P.1

The Asbury Park Press started its campaign with a front page story and editorial by Editor Wayne D. McMurray.

Rev. King, pastor of Dexter Avenue Baptist Church and president of the Montgomery Improvement Association, was fined $500 Thursday after a 4 -day trial on charges of conspiring to boycott city buses

Editor McMurray sent this telegram to Rev. King:

"We of the Asbury Park Press, outraged at the conviction of a fellow American for asserting a right our Consititution guarantees to all want to help you in your fight for justice. We are starting a fund drive among our readers for money to pay your fine and court costs.

"The Press itself is contributing $50. Checks will be drawn in your name and forwarded to you, or to your attorneys if yu prefer."

The New Jersey editor said the goal of the Press drive is $1,000, and any money collected above that will go to the pastor to help him pay his legal costs.

Mr. McMurray also explained that if eventually the clergyman should be acquitted and the fine and costs revoked, Rev. King would have the use of the money to pay his legal fees.

The editorial in the Asbury Press said segregation was "un-American and undemocratic," and declared that Negroes in Montgomery argued "Justifiable that they should be allowed to sit where they choose on city buses...."

God's Seeming Deception Topic For Dr. M. L. King

Advertiser Sat. 9-15-56 Montgomery, Ala.

"When God Seems to Deceive Us" is the subject of the message to be delivered by Dr. M. L. King Jr., minister, at the Dexter Avenue Baptist Church on Sunday. P.2-B

The morning anthem will be "The King of Love My Shepherd Is" by Shelley. Soloists will be Dr. W. D. Pettus, Mrs. Athalie Smiley, Mrs. Geraldine Nesbitt and Miss Alice James. Mrs. Althea Thompson Thomas, organist, will play Handel's "Pastoral Symphony" for the preulude and his "Largo" for the postlude. The processional hymn will be "God of Our Fathers" and the recessional hymn, "Take My Life." A cordial invitation is extended to the general public to share the inspiration of the worship service.

SN 9-15-56

The church family was happy on last Sunday to welcome into the fellowship Lindsay D. Draper, of Alabama State College faculty.

Meetings during the week have been held at the residences of Mesdames Claude Shannon and Rena Shipman.

Listed among the sick and shut-ins are Mesdames Lula Blair, Lillian Bibb, Mattie Capleton, Sallie Madison, Eva Nealey, Gertrude Phillips, Ludie Randall, Myrtle Tennille, Mary Tatum, Janie Williams; P. H. Hobson, Mat F. Moore and Deacon S. D. Turner.

The Joint Boards of Ushers and the Young Matrons Circle of the Woman's Missionary Society are continuing their elaborate plans for the formal presentation of Mrs. Corietta Scott King in voice recital on Sunday, Sept. 30. The entire church family is expected to participate in this effort sponsored jointly by these two groups, The Woman's Missionary Society is also taking the initiative in the meeting of the Montgomery-Antioch Assn. scheduled to hold its annual meeting at Dexter Avenue later during the month. The membership will be asked to assist in the provision of physical comforts for those delegates who will be in attendance.

Dr. and Mrs. King report a most stimulating session of the National Baptist Convention at Denver last week. It is anticipated that some echoes of this convention will be given on Sunday morning.

Dr. W. E. Anderson gave the review of the lesson for the Church School on last Sunday. Friends and members of the church are urged to join in the regular study of God's word through the church school headed by Julius J. Alexander and through the Baptist Training Union headed by Mrs. Louvenia Herring. R. D. Nesbitt, adviser for the joint ushers, is asking for a meeting of all ushers immediately following the morning worship on Sunday.

Bus-Boycott Leader Convicted; Fined $500

Courier-Journal P. 1
Fri. 3-23-56 Louisville, Ky.

Judge Suspends Negro Minister's Sentence After Attorneys Serve Notice of Appeal

By The Associated Press

Montgomery, Ala., March 22.—The first of the Negro bus-boycott leaders, the Rev. Martin Luther King, Jr., was convicted today. Defense attorneys immediately began an appeal that may lead ultimately to the United States Supreme Court.

Trial of the other defendants was postponed.

King, 27-year-old pastor of the Dexter Avenue Baptist Church, was fined $500 plus $500 court costs for violation of Alabama's seldom-used antiboycott law for his part in the 17-week-old boycott against segregated city buses.

The fine and costs were converted into a jail sentence since he chose to appeal rather than pay the money. He was sentenced to a total of 386 days.

Penalty Not Maximum

The sentence was suspended, however, after Negro defense lawyers served notice of appeal. They have said they will take the appeal to the U. S. Supreme Court if the State appellate courts uphold the conviction.

The minister pledged several hours later at a Negro mass meeting that the mass boycott would go on "no matter how many times they convict me."

Florida's Governor asked President Eisenhower yesterday to call a conference of Southern Governors to discuss race relations. Story on Page 3.

King said:

"Maybe the idea of freedom in the Southland will be born right here in the Cradle of the Confederacy. Now we are determined. No longer are we content to accept second-class citizenship. We are determined to struggle for justice and equality until we achieve it."

Circuit Judge Eugene Carter, presiding over the trial in the absence of a jury, could have fined King $1,000 and added a six-month jail sentence under State law.

But he said he decided on a lesser penalty because it was shown in testimony that the minister used his influence throughout the mass bus protest to urge his people to refrain from violence.

Circuit Solicitor William F. Thetford said immediately after the verdict that the State had agreed to postpone the trials of 89 other boycott defendants pending King's appeal.

Crowd Cheers Minister

The 90 Negroes were indicted by a grand jury February 21.

As King left the Courthouse the minister was cheered by waiting Negroes with shouts of "behold the king" and "long live the king."

King expressed confidence to reporters that the federal courts will throw out his conviction and hold the Alabama law unconstitutional.

Defense attorneys Fred D. Gray and Arthur Shores insisted in their closing arguments that the State had failed to prove King committed any unlawful acts and that Negroes had a justifiable reason for refusing to patronize the bus company.

Nearly two-score Negro witnesses had testified of repeated acts of mistreatment in the past decade at the hands of white bus drivers, and defense lawyers argued the boycott was the culmination of those experiences.

Courier-Journal

In pretrial arguments and repeatedly during the four-day hearing, the Negro lawyers injected the question of federal constitutional rights, admittedly with a view to taking their case into federal court if necessary.

Says State Proved Case

P. 24

Thetford, in his final argument, said the State had proved its case and that King had been clearly identified as "the leader" of the continuing bus protest.

He described the defendant as one of a "selfish little group of men seeking power and influence among their race and seizing this opportunity."

King, testifying earlier today, denied commission of any unlawful act and said he had never urged other Negroes even to refrain from riding the buses.

He emphasized also that he had carefully steered clear of violence during the boycott, and that he admonished Negroes to follow a policy of nonviolence and passive resistance to oppression.

White Pastor Testified

The white pastor of an all-Negro congregation, the Rev. Robert S. Graetz, also testified he had never heard King ask other Negroes to stay off the buses.

State's attorneys completed their testimony with seven rebuttal witnesses, including six veteran bus drivers who denied they had ever mistreated any Negro passenger.

Negro witnesses for King said they were called such names as "niggers" and "ugly black apes" by bus drivers, that they were forced to stand while seats remained vacant in white sections of buses, and at times forced to give up their seats to white passengers.

Discourtesy Charge Denied

The purpose of that line of testimony was to establish a cause for the bus-protest movement. Alabama's antiboycott law prohibites a conspiracy or agreement to withhold patronage "without just cause or legal excuse."

The bus-company manager, J. H. Bagley, testified he had fired 21 drivers in 10 years for discourtesy to passengers.

Bagley also produced a performance report by his parent company, National City Lines, Inc., of Chicago, based on a spot check of Montgomery buses last November. The manager said it failed to show one instance of driver discourtesy.

Attorneys Show Up With Stiff Defense

Post-Herald Birmingham, Ala. Tues. 3-20-56

Charges Against Three Are Dropped

BY NICHOLAS C. CHRISS
United Press Staff Writer

MONTGOMERY, March 19—A young Negro minister who led a boycott of segregation buses to assert the "dignity" of his race went on trial today as the first of 90 defendants to be prosecuted under an obscure law.

A panel of Negro attorneys immediately put up a barrage of objections, most of them sustained, as the State called the manager of the City Bus Lines as first witness against the Rev. M. L. King, 27.

P. 1

J. H. Bagley, manager of the City Bus Lines, described how the Reverend King had asked the transit system to assure Negroes more courtesy from drivers and "first come, first served" seating.

The number of defendants was cut from 93 to 90 as the State decided it did not have enough evidence against three, including one of the 25 Negro clergymen originally indicted.

Demurrers contending that the defendants were charged illegally were denied by Circuit Judge Eugene Carter before the trials began in a creaking ante-bellum courtroom where the crowd was limited to 100, nearly all defendants, for fear the floor might collapse.

Calling King as the first defendant, Judge Carter told other defendants they "might as well go on home" because King's trial probably would last "two or three days." But virtually all held their seats.

King is the recognized leader of the boycott, which in its 15th week has plunged the bus system into economic chaos. He told a prayer meeting on the eve of the trials that the demonstration has given Negroes "a new sense of dignity and destiny."

Judge Carter refused to admit a state exhibit, later described as a handbill calling for a mass meeting of Negroes to discuss continuing the boycott beyond its original one-day limit. He said the prosecution would first have to prove a conspiracy existed.

All the defendants were charged with conspiring to interfere with the normal carrying out of a business under a little-used 1921 law originally enacted to combat the Ku Klux Klan. The boycott began after a Negro seamstress was convicted of violating the segregated seating law.

Bagley testified that Negro trade on the segregated buses, where an adjustable wooden barrier confines Negroes to the rear, had dropped 90 to 95 per cent during the boycott.

When Bagley began talking about the Negroes' "demands" on the company to provide equal seating privileges, Carter upheld defense objections to the phraseology. Again, he said, the fact of a conspiracy would first have to be proved.

Six Negro attorneys conferred repeatedly with Arthur Shores, Birmingham Negro lawyer who was barred by Judge Carter from actively defending the case because he is not a member of the local bar. Shores was attorney for Autherine Lucy, the Negro co-ed recently expelled from the University of Alabama.

Post-Herald

The state insisted that it was hoping to present an "overall" picture through Bagley's testimony but Judge Carter upheld defense objections that many of Solicitor William Thetford's questions were "leading."

P. 2

At a recess for lunch, King was cheered by some 100 Negroes on the courthouse grounds. He told them the arrest of Rosa Parks, the seamstress, had been the primary cause of the boycott although that only climaxed a series "of humiliating events to Negroes."

He emphasized that the boycott was "passive resistance" and said "one of the great glories of American democracy is that we have the rights to protest for our rights."

Judge Carter at the outset granted separate trials but the defendants had waived their right to be heard by a jury.

Cases dismissed were those of Alfred Ellis, Booker T. Holmes and the Rev. M. C. Cleveland, all Montgomery Negroes.

Defense attorneys asked that all the charges be thrown out on the grounds the old anti-boycott law was illegal, but Carter overruled their demurrers.

About 25 reporters were the only white persons, in addition to court officials, in the courtroom. M. V. Kamath of the Press Trust of India, Ltd., was seated with the white reporters after a bailiff questioned his race.

Rep. Charles C. Diggs (D., Mich.) took a seat with the Negro press. He said he had brought with him $5000 collected in Detroit to help Montgomery Negroes run their car pools in competition with the bus company.

Convicted bus boycott leader readies appeal

News P. 1
Birm. Ala.
MONTGOMERY, Ala., 3-23-56

MONTGOMERY, Ala., March 23—(AP)—Negro bus boycotters were expected to continue their mass protest with renewed determination today despite the conviction of a top leader in the anti-segregation campaign.

Defense attorneys, meanwhile, are readying plans to appeal the boycott conviction of the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. all the way to the U. S. Supreme Court if necessary, in what may prove to be another far-reaching test of the South's segregation laws.

King himself, speaking at a mass meeting last night, promised to continue leading the protest movement "no matter how many times they convict me."

THE 27-YEAR-OLD Negro minister was found guilty by Circuit Judge Eugene Carter yesterday and fined $500 for violating Alabama's anti-boycott law as a leader in the 17-week-old campaign against segregated seating on city buses. The fine was suspended after notice of appeal was served.

Last night the young Baptist pastor vowed to continue fighting for "justice and equality," declaring that "maybe the idea of freedom in the Southland will be born right here in the Cradle of the Confederacy."

The emotion-charged Negro crowd that jammed the Holt Street Baptist Church gave King a thunderous ovation when he appeared.

King, pastor of the Dexter Avenue Baptist Church, told the hymn-singing audience that "freedom doesn't come on a silver platter. Some of the things we have to go through are a necessary part of our campaign. There can never be growth without growing pains."

IN ADDITION to the $500 fine which was suspended, King was also charged with court costs of approximately $500. That, too, was converted into a jail sentence totaling about 386 days since he chose to appeal rather than pay the money.

King, as did 89 other Negro leaders still awaiting trial on similar boycott charges, had exercised his right to a non-jury trial.

The guilty verdict was announced by Judge Carter at the end of a four-day trial. Circuit Solicitor William F. Thetford immediately announced that the state had agreed to postpone the trials of other defendants pending King's appeal.

Carter could have sentenced King to six months and fined him $1000. But the jurist said he took into consideration testimony which indicated King repeatedly appealed to his people not to use violence in the bus protest.

THE MINISTER was hailed by Negroes as he left the courthouse with shouts of "behohld the king" and "long live the king."

King told newsmen the verdict "will not increase or diminish in any way my interest in the protest." He said it would continue with "non-violence, passive resistance and the weapon of love."

During the trial, the state sought to show that the Montgomery Improvement Assn., a newly-formed Negro organization, had kept the boycott alive with periodic mass rallies and had directed the operation of a car pool which transported Negroes. King is president of the MIA.

On the other hand, a battery of Negro defense attorneys challenged constitutionality of the state law which prohibits a conspiracy or agreement to hinder operations of a business "without just cause or legal excuse."

By presenting witnesses who testified that Negroes were mistreated by bus drivers, the defense also tried to prove that a "just cause" existed for the boycott which has dealt a financial blow to the bus company since last Dec. 5.

King, testifying in his own behalf yesterday, said further that he had never urged Negroes to refrain from riding the buses.

ARRIVE AT TRIAL—Rev. M. L. King Sr., father of the indicted boycott leader at Montgomery, escorts his son's wife to court where trials of 93 Negroes started yesterday. (United Press Telephoto.)

Associated Press Wirephoto

THE REV. ROBERT A. GRAETZ, left, talks with the Rev. M. L. King, Jr., after testifying yesterday at Montgomery, Ala., in the bus-boycott trial of the latter.

Mississippi Governor Answered By Rev. King

A telegram to the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., leader of the Montgomery bus boycott, from Mississippi Governor J. P. Coleman cautioning the Negro minister not to fulfill a commitment to speak in Jackson, Miss., was answered yesterday by King.

King, in a wire to Coleman, said he is "not scheduled to speak in Jackson, Miss. When the invitation was extended some months ago I made it clear I could not accept . . . If I had accepted . . . I would feel it my moral responsibility to come to Mississippi in spite of your most cautious warning."

King added in the wire that "You (Coleman) stated that in view of my record my coming to Mississippi would be a great injustice to Negro people. I think if you observe my record carefully you would discover that it is more the record of a peace maker than a peace breaker."

The 279-word telegram added that King was "quite gratified to learn from your (Coleman's) telegram that racial conditions are more peaceful in Mississippi than ever before."

"I would ask you to consider, howerer," the message continued, "that peace is not merely the absence of negative force — tension, confusion, the murdering of Emmett Till, and the Rev. George Lee — but the presence of some positive force — love, justice and goodwill."

Dr. Martin L. King Of Montgomery, Ala. To Speak At Hampton Institute, Va.

Hampton, Va.- Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., pastor of the Dexter Avenue Baptist Church of Montgomery Alabama, will be the speaker at the first All-College Assembly of the year at Hampton Institute on Thursday, September 27, at 7 P. M. in Ogden Hall. He will report "The Montgomery Story."

Dr. King, a native of Atlanta, Georgia, is a product of Atlanta University and the Booker Washington High School of Atlanta. He graduated from Morehouse College in 1948 and then entered Crozer Theological Seminary where he graduated at the head of his class in 1945. While at Crozer he served as president of the student body and upon graduating, he received the Pearl Plafiner Award for being the "most outstanding student" in his class. He also received the J. Louis Crozer Fellowship, which gave him the opportunity to work toward the Ph. D. Degree at the University of his choice. On June 5, 1955, Dr. King was awarded the Ph. D. degree by Boston University in Theology. He has also done work at the University of Pennsylvania and at Harvard University where he was a special student in philosophy.

Dr. King, who is also President of the Montgomery Improvement Association, is recognized as the leader of the Montgomery City Bus Lines boycott by Negroes of that city. The association, under King's leadership operated a car pool to transport thousands of Negroes who joined in the movement, which was in protest against segregated seating. The boycott has been 95 per cent effective.

Dr. King, along with 89 others was indicted on a charge of breaking a 1921 statue outlawing boycotts of legal businesses, which was originally designed to apply in times of labor strife. King was tried, convicted and fined $500.00. His case is now being appealed.

Since December 5, 1955, when the boycott began, Rev. King has become a nationally known figure, receiving awards from the National Urban League and Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity, and being featured at meetings throughout the country, telling the story of the struggle for equality by the Negroes of Montgomery.

Negro Pastor Faces Judge as Alabama Opens Bus Boycott Trial at Montgomery

Inquirer P.4

MONTGOMERY, Ala., March 19 (UP)—A young Negro minister, first of 90 scheduled defendants, went on trial today on charges of conspiring illegally in a city bus boycott. Inq. 3-20-56

The Rev. M. L. King, 27, who said he supported the boycott of segregated buses to assert the "dignity" of his race, was the first defendant. Philadelphia

Circuit Judge Eugene Carter repeatedly ruled that conspiracy must be proven at the outset.

PERMITTED MEETING Pa.

One of the first witnesses, the Rev. A. W. Wilson, testified that he was a member of the Montgomery Improvement Association, the Negro organization blamed by the State for the boycott.

Mr. Wilson testified that he permitted a mass meeting in his church about Dec. 5, 1955, but did not take part in it, he denied he knew whether the improvement group organized its transportation, finance and contract committees that night in anticipation of the boycott.

REFUSED TO MOVE

The boycott began last December after a Negro seamstress was convicted of refusing to take a back seat in violation of the city segregated seating laws. The defendants, originally 93 but reduced to 90 today when the State dropped three cases, were charged under a 1921 law against any conspiracy which prevented a normal business operation.

A panel of Negro attorneys put up a barrage of objections earlier, most of them sustained, when the State called the manager of the bus company as the first witness against King, 27.

J. H. Bagley, manager of the Montgomery City Bus Lines, described how Mr. King had asked the transit system to assure Negroes more courtesy from drivers and "first come, first served" seating.

All the defendants were charged with conspiring to interfere with the normal conduct of a business under a little-used 1921 law originally enacted to combat the Ku Klux Klan. The boycott began after a Negro seamstress was convicted of violating the segregated seating law.

Defense attorneys asked that all the charges be thrown out on the grounds the old antiboycott law was illegal, but Judge Carter overruled their demurrers.

Rev. King's Own Story Of Montgomery Boycott

Chicago, Ill.

Defender P.1 Sat. 3-31-56

By ETHEL L. PAYNE

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — "Peace can be obnoxious if it is not a true peace without a compromise. Violence is the seed of its own destruction. Even if violence is visited upon us, we will not return it."

Those are the words Martin Luther King, jr., a 27-year-old 20th century disciple, spoke a few hours after a judge gave him a choice of paying a $500 fine or serving 386 days at hard labor for "conspiring to sustain Montgomery's four-month old bus boycott. He is appealing.

The Rev. King is president of the Montgomery Improvement Association and the first of 90 persons to go to trial for conspiracy in the bus boycott case.

In an exclusive interview, Dr. King declared:

POWER OF LOVE

"We intend to use the power of love as our only weapon in this struggle. Perhaps in some way, we can negate the opposition.

"Christ came to bring peace, but where he went, he started a conflict of ideas between the old order in which selfish evil was dominant and the new order in which self is denied, and love is the motivation of life.'

"So it is with our struggle, here in Montgomery. We will never falter. But we will continue on until righteousness shall run down like the river.

"This movement from the very beginning was a spontaneous outgrowth of natural resentment over long and continued abuses. It came from the people and it is truly a people's movement. One could say this is really a part of the worldwide revolt of subjugated peoples in their yearning for the dignity that belongs to free men.

"I did not seek the leadership of the movement, but as a minister, with strong convictions on the inherent right of all men, I could not shirk my responsibility when it was placed upon me. We have no bitterness. Neither we can tolerate segregation, because it is an evil which divides men and destroys good will.

Chicago, Ill.

"We know our cause is just and have faith that we will win. "I firmly believe that all men are basically good and that ultimately good will triumph over evil. Throughout history, man has struggled to achieve self respect.

LAW ABIDING

"We are law-abiding citizens and we are loyal to our country and our flag. One of the great traditions of democracy is the right to protest. I am the servant of the people; to carry out their will.

"The only thing I have urged throughout all of this is to let your conscience be your guide and to refrain from violence. My wife has been loyal through all of this ordeal although the strain has been great upon her.

"She has said: 'I know my husband is right and even if it means the sacrifice of personal comfort and safety, I shall stand by him.'

"Day and night since the beginning of this non-violent, passive resistance movement, we have been subjected to threats and intimidations, but this will not stop us.

"We are more determined than ever to go on. The 50,000 Negroes of Montgomery are more united than ever. They are strong and their morale and their courage is high.

"These are the times that try men's souls. But they have proved that where a people are God fearing and prayerful, no evil can befall them.

"The eyes of the world are watching us, but we are not pursuing our course because of this. We are determined to carry through our fight because it is the only right and decent thing to do.

"Somehow, I believe that the world will be better for this."

Defender P.1 Sat. 3-31-56 Chicago, Ill.

REV. MARTIN LUTHER KING, jr. and his wife, Coretta. are flanked, by friends as they leave courthouse in Montgomery, Ala. following his conviction last week for conspiracy in the bus boycott.

CLIMBING STAIRS of courthouse in Montgomery, Ala, are Rev. M. L. King, Jr., (left) and Rev. Ralph Abernathy, These young clerics are leaders of the three-month-old Montgomery bus boycott. Rev. King was found guilty of conspiracy last week and is appealing his conviction to the Alabama supreme court.

Gradualism No Cure To Bias

Daily World Sun 9-9-56 Atlanta Ga

Rev. King Tells Baptists

By TASCHEREAU ARNOLD

DENVER, Colorado — The 5,000,000 strong National Baptist Convention moved into its final business session at City Auditorium Saturday and prepared final touches on resolutions dealing with the explosive school integration and Civil Rights issues.

Keynote for civil rights action by delegates was made late Friday afternoon by Dr. M. L. King Jr., who led the Negro Bus Protest in Montgomery.

"The cancer of segregation cannot be cured by gradualism. The United States cannot afford to slow up in the move toward justice. The very life of the nation and its future position in world affairs, depend upon how we dispose of the matter of racial integration."

SYMBOL OF HOPE

Dr. King at 27 has become the symbol of hope for much of the south's colored population and he lashed out at the nation's churches.

"It is both appaling and shameful that 11 a. m. each Sunday is the most segregated hour in Christian American. It s a disgrace that here in America we find more integration in the sports arena and in night clubs than in our churches."

SCIENTIFIC PROGRESS

..He warned that America's scienti-

He warned that America's scientific progress has "far outstripped moral and spiritual development."

"It's bad sign when the scientific means by which we live outdistances the spiritual ends for which we live, "King arrived.

He also told the delegates to be prepared to suffer in the fight for freedom." "Freedom is not a lavish dish the white man will serve up and Negroes need only furnish the appetite," he pointed out. "The tension and mob actions in the south today represented the necessary pains of the birth of anything new."

Dr. T. J. Jemison of Baton Rouge La., secretary of the convention told delegates "If a man is choking me I don't want him to release me gradually -- I want him to turn me loose now."

STAMP PROGRAM

Daily World

In other business Friday the body adopted a resolution urging the U. S. Post Office Department "consider" outstanding Negroes in its commemorative stamp program.

Dr. H. J. Jackson of Chicago, convention president, is scheduled to deliver a convention sermon at 11:30 a. m. Sunday at the auditorium. Also Mrs. Esther Misth of Atlanta will have charge of a great foreign Mission Meeting Sunday afternoon.

Rev. A. M. Reeves Griffin Ga. pastor Achaia Baptist Church moderator Cabin Creek Assn, was outstanding here; so was Rev. A. L. Collins, pastor, new prospect Baptist church.

Rev. and Mrs. T. Arnold, Mrs. Ruby Calmore, Pasadena Calif., Rev. Arnold's cousin Mrs. Frankie Cooke, Pasadena Calif., spent Saturday sight seeing. The Arnolds will do likewise Sunday before entraining for Atlanta Sunday at 5:30 p. m.

The Convention closes Sunday and will hold its next session in 1957 at Kansas City Mo.

King Selects Sunday Topic

Advertiser Montgomery Ala

Dr. M. L. King Jr., minister of the Dexter Avenue Baptist Church, will speak on Sunday from the subject: "The Dream That Did Not Come Through." The morning anthem will be "O Worship the King" by Nichols, with Mrs. W. D. Pettus as soprano soloist. The processional hymn will be "A Mighty Fortress" and the recessional hymn "Hark, Hark, My Soul." The public is cordially invited to share the inspiration of the services.

12-20-56

The annual observance of Woman's Day on last Sunday was a great success. Flowers were placed on the altar by the Smiley and Morris families in memory of their sister, Miss Etta Mae Smiley who died 18 years ago.

The service committee headed by Mrs. F. W. Taylor planned and executed a social hour following the morning worship. Those assisting were Mesdames and Misses Emerette Austin, Cherrye Ballard, Margaret Beverly, Claris Chambliss, Olivet Dean, Bautine DeCosta, Jean Nesbitt, Geraldine Preston, Grenetta Ross, Ida B. Smiley, Rebecca Stringer, Joretha Walker, Jimmie Walton, Minnie Wood and Evelyn Wysinger.

Handling the financial side of the occasion was a special committee headed by Mrs. Thelma Austin Rice and including the following women: Mesdames and Misses Cynthia D. Alexander, Henrietta Austin, Curlie Bibb, Beulah Brewer, Warren Brown, Verdie Davie, Delores Sankey Davis, Fannie Mae Doak, Mattie Gilchrist, Ruby Henderson, Louvenia Herring, Effie Jackson, C. Elizabeth Johnson, Bessie Kerr, Daisy Meadows, Marguerite Moore, Mary L. Morgan, Thelma S. Morris, Geraldine Nesbitt, Hattie Mae Smiley, Lillie Thomas, Leola Whitted, Mary L. Williams and Hattie Wood.

Dr. King during the week has filled speaking engagements in Durham, N.C., for the Business & Professional Men's Club; at Syracuse, N.Y., for the state convention of the Unitarians and at Steelton, Pa., for the Pennsylvania State Baptist Convention.

Mrs. King was presented in voice recital at Chicago's Olivet Baptist Church, pastored by Dr. J. H. Jackson, president of the National Baptist Convention.

The Social-Political Action Committee of the church, headed by Mrs. Mary Fair Burks is announcing a clinic on voter-registration to be held in the downstairs auditorum after the worship service on Sunday, Oct. 28.

Newly-elected presidents of the August and October Clubs have been announced as Beverly Booth and Mrs. Mary Lewis Morgan, respectively.

Meetings during the week have been held at the residence of Miss Verdie Davie and Mrs. Daisy Meadows.

4,000 vow to walk til bitter end

Afro-American Sat. 5-5-56 Baltimore, Md.

By ART CARTER
AFRO Managing Editor

MONTGOMERY, Ala. —"We will never go back on jim-crow buses."

Making the above declaration with vociferous applause and unanimous approval, citizens of Montgomery Thursday night vowed to continue the bus boycott until "justice and democracy prevails."

More than 4,000 perspiring men, women and children overtaxed the Day Street Baptist Church for a mass meeting at which the decision was made.

By a standing vote, with no dissenters, the members of the Montgomery Improvement Association approved the 200-word resolution urging continuance of the boycott.

* * *

THE RESOLUTION was read by the Rev. Martin Luther King, president of the MIA, who hurried to the meeting after an executive session of the MIA officers at which the resolution was drawn.

The seven-part resolution cited the April 23 decision of the U.S. Supreme Court declaring unconstitutional intra-state bus transportation in South Carolina.

It pointed to orders of the National City Lines, parent organization of the Montgomery City Lines, to cease enforcement of the local laws requiring segregation on city buses.

It also called attention to the change of bus policy in other southern cities, notably Richmond, Va., Little Rock, Ark., and Dallas, Texas.

* * *

THEN THE resolution pointed out that Montgomery city officials have indicated, both orally and in writing, that they "intend to and will use all means available to continue segregation on local buses."

It said that city officials had said they would do this even if it is necessary "to arrest bus drivers and passengers who refuse to abide by and obey the segregation laws of Montgomery."

This, the resolution pointed out, means that "conditions heretofore existing remain the same because of the position taken by our public officials."

And because of this position, the resolution concluded: "We, the colored citizens of Montgomery, do now and will continue to carry on our mass protest until such time as the matters (stated above) are clarified; and we hereby authorize and direct the officers and board of directors of the Montgomery Improvement Association to do any and all acts that it deems necessary to perfect our desires."

Baltimore, Md.

THE REV. MR. KING hardly completed reading the resolution before the Rev. B. D. Lambert jumped up from his sitting position on the floor near the front of the church and made a motion to adopt it.

"God is on our side and we will never go back on jim-crow buses," the Rev. Mr. Lambert declared. He lamented the fact that city officials did not and apparently would not do what the highest court of the land had asked that they do, but suggested that they may be forced to do so come May 11.

May 11 is the trial date for the court suit testing the constitutionality of Montgomery City and Alabama state laws on public transportation.

* * *

A DOZEN seconds were made for the Rev. Mr. Lambert's motion, then the resolution was adopted with loud applause and a two-minute standing vote. The Rev. Mr. King called three times for dissenting votes but received none, with someone yelling the "nayes are dead."

The Rev. Mr. King expressed gratitude to the National City Lines for the stand it had taken, emphasizing that the bus company had acted in "good faith."

Then he pointed out amid tremendous applause that "we are not out to put the bus line out of business, but simply seeking to put justice in business."

He urged the walkers to "carry on in the same rational and dignified manner that they have in the past." He added, "eveutually democracy will prevail on the buses and when segregation does go away we want to be able to go into it with dignity."

* * *

THE YOUTHFUL passive resistance" leader emphasized that whatever victories may come will not be a victory alone for the 50,000 Montgomery citizens nor the 16,000,000 American colored citizens, but "a victory for justice and for democracy the world over."

"Let us not abuse our new rights and continue to walk with head high," he concluded.

Others who spoke at the rally were the Revs. A. Sanders, R. J. Glasco, B. J. Sims, Ralph D Abernathy, W. J. Powell, B. W. Hilson, M. C. Cleveland, and Dr M. W. Jones, who presided.

The temperature in Montgomery hovered around the 72 degree mark, and it was at least 20 degrees hotter in the church but many came three hours before the schedule 7 p.m. starting time to get vantage seats in the edifice.

* * *

THOSE WHO tried it two hours earlier were rewarded with standing room on the main floor, while the "late comers" were forced into the basement where a public address system was erected, or had to stand outside and listen through the open windows.

Before the meeting had its formal opening those assembled sang hymns and prayed, all of this being done spontaneously. They prayed for the "guidance of God" in reaching a decision.

The heat was so oppressive that the men were coatless and many wore open collars, the women, some with children lap sitting, wore sleeveless dresses, and all used newspapers and books for fans—that is all that did not have a real fan.

* * *

ADDED TO the normal heat of the church was the fact that newsreel and newspaper cameramen were all over the place with huge lights trained on the singers.

Cars were parked for blocks around the church, though many walked to the meeting. Another mass meeting is scheduled for Monday night at the Holt Street Baptist Church.

With the stalemate of the bus boycott seemingly unbreakable at this point, all attention this week switched to the legal phase of the city segregated transportation laws scheduled for a test in Federal court on May 11.

Fred D. Gray, 25-year-old attorney who represents the Montgomery Improvement Association in the suit contesting the constitutionality of the intrastate and city bus segregation, Friday was huddled for several hours with opposition lawyers.

Gray, along with city, state and bus company attorneys conferred on details of the pending suit in the attorney general's office.

* * *

THE ATTORNEYS agreed on a series of stipulations — uncontestable facts. This was done to save time of arguing the points when the case goes to trial.

Meanwhile the city continued to maintain its position that the bus segregation must be obeyed, and the bus boycott went on as it has for the past five months.

* * *

IN BRIEF the latest developments as of Saturday were:

1. After two meetings between the National City Lines officials and city commission members, there was no change of attitude on the part of city authorities.

2. Following the second session, Mayor W. A. Gayle issued a statement, declaring the city "will require the bus company to follow to the letter existing segregation laws.

3. Benjamin W. Franklin, vice president of National City Lines, stood firm on the company's instructions to bus drivers not to enforce the segregation laws..

4. There was no change in the Montgomery Improvement Association's decision to continue the boycott until city officials withdraw their threats to arrest passengers or drivers who did not enforce segregation.

* * *

THIS DECISION was voted unanimously by the MIA in a mass meeting attended by 2,800 persons Thursday night at the Day Street Baptist Church. Another mass meeting was scheduled for Monday night.

As of Saturday there was no indication of any further discussions between city officials and bus company executives, thus leaving final solution to the bus protest up in the air.

At the same time there was no further comment on the city's threat to revoke the company's franchise by court action if it fails to comply with segregation laws. This franchise was renewed only six weeks ago.

* * *

THE TEXT of the city commission's statement after the second meeting with company officials read:

"No agreement has been reached. The city commission has advised that all laws and ordinances will be enforced and that the commission will require the company to follow to the letter all laws and ordinances."

The impasse developed last week in the wake of the Supreme Court action in refusing to review a lower court decision in South Carolina.

This decision declared segregation on busses in Columbia, S.C., unconstitutional, and has been interpreted as outlawing all intra-state bus segregation.

* * *

ON THE HEELS of the decision, J. H. Bagley, superintendent of the Montgomery City Lines, issued orders to company drivers not to enforce the segregation laws.

Immediately city officials countered with an announcement that drivers or passengers disobeying the segregation laws would be subject to arrest.

The bus company's notice read:

"We have been advised that the Supreme Court of the United States rendered a decision the effect of which is to hold unconstitutional all segregation of the races on buses.

"Under the circumstances, the company has no choice except to discontinue the practice of segregation of passengers on account of race and drivers will no longer assign seats to passengers by reason of their race."

* * *

THE NATIONAL City Lines, Inc., has headquarters in Chicago and operates bus franchises in more than 30 cities, a majority of them in the South.

Several cities elsewhere, notably Little Rock, Ark. and Dallas, Texas, immediately changed the segregation policy of seating bus riders to one of integration.

The order for the local company was signed by J. H. Bagley. Two days later Mr. Bagley suffered a heart attack.

At Thursday's mass meeting, the Rev. Martin Luther King, president of the Montgomery Improvement Association, asked the assembly to "pray for Mr. Bagley's recovery."

His condition was reported "improved" Saturday morning.

Mayor Gayle with Commissioners Clyde Sellers and Frank Parks on the heels of the company order declared there would be "no change" in the city commission's policy and followed it with threats of arrest.

* * *

THEY SAID: "We're going to enforce the state and city ordinances just as we have been doing, and we expect the bus company to continue to abide by these laws."

Then the MIA, in its mass meeting, outlined all the developments and in the face of the situation voted to continue the boycott, with the only hope for an early solution resting on the outcome of the three-judge court trial May 11.

The Rev. Mr. King said, "We'll carry on with the same love and dignity" and will hope that "justice and rightousness will triumph. We are just standing by and waiting."

The 27-year-old minister, one of the 90 persons indicted by a Montgomery County grand jury two months ago for violation of the Alabama anti-boycott law, was convicted and fined $500. An appeal is pending.

* * *

THE CASES of the other 89 persons, 26 of them ministers, has been continued pending the appeal of the Rev. Mr. King.

At the outset of the desegregation decree by the bus company, the Rev. Mr. King indicated that the MIA still felt that one of the points requested in the original protest of the bus segregation was still unanswered.

That was the hiring of colored drivers on predominately colored routes.

No mention of this phase of the protest has been mentioned since. It was not cited in the resolution continuing the boycott.

It has been learned, however, that a roadblock developed along this line as the company's contract with the union would prove a hindrance in any immediate employment changes.

* * *

THE CONTRACT, it is reported, provides for reemployment of any drivers now on furlough before any new drivers may be employed and gives route preference to drivers with seniority.

A MIA official, who preferred not to be quoted, indicated that "we would not expect the company to break its contract." However he indicated that something further may be developed along this line if and when integration on the buses is accomplished.

So the majority of Montgomery's 50,000 colored citizens walk and walk and take advantage of the car pool established shortly after Dec. 5, last, when the boycott began.

There is no clear view for an end to this historic struggle for justice on the buses here.

King Raps Jim Crow Dixie Rule

Defender
Chicago, Ill.
Sat. 4-21-56

By ETHEL L. PAYNE

"We cannot slow up because we have a date with destiny and we must move with all deliberate speed. There are some things we never intend to become adjusted to, lynch mobs, oppression, economical exploitation and political domination. I call upon you to resist with all your heart and strength the forces of evil."

Thus, in clarion tones that rang through the huge Rockfeller Memorial Chapel on the University of Chicago campus last week, the Rev. Martin Luther King, leader of the Montgomery bus boycott, flung down the gauntlet of challenge for all Americans to join in the fight for decency and democ-

1,600 ATTEND MEETING

Standing in the high pulpit in the magnificent Gothic setting of the cathedral, the earnest young minister seemed almost an echo of the great reformer, Martin Luther, whose name he appropriately bears. The audience of 1600 people of all races and creeds who had flocked to listen to this amazing new leader who combines the technique of Mahatma Gandhi with the principles of Christianity sat literally spellbound as he described the passive resistance movement which he organized. His sermon was interrupted a dozen times by prolonged applause.

Defender

Dr. King was the guest speaker at the Jefferson Day Rally sponsored by the Chicago Area Conference of Religious Liberals which includes churches of the Unitarian and Universalist denominations. He was introduced by Dr. Homer Jack, minister of the First Unitarian Church of Evanston, Ill. His topic was "The Declaration of Independence and the Negro" and he likened the present struggle for full equality to the circumstances of slavery which led Thomas Jefferson to frame the declaration.

"CANCER OF SEGREGATION"

Answering the warning of Novelist William Faulkner and the proponents of moderation, the eloquent young Baptist minister said: "The cancer of segregation cannot be cured with the vaseline of gradualism. This is not merely a struggle between Negro and white people. This is a conflict between the forces of light and dark and in the end there will be victory for justice and democracy because love will triumph."

He explained the protest movement reason. "We are not out to put the Montgomery City Lines out of business. We are simply out to get justice in business. We are not fighting the white people of Montgomery. We are out to help them."

Sat 4-21-56

For 300 years, he said, the Negro in slavery and emancipation was docile and submissive to his inferior status in life and as long as he accepted this, there was a peace of stagnant complacency, but an obnoxious peace because it was negative and not positive. Under this, the Negro lost faith in himself and was the victim of a mental paralysis. He came to accept the belief that he was inferior.

Now, he continued, the Negro has awakened and re-evaluated himself, his nature and destiny. He has a new sense of dignity and status and he walks with his head high and no longer hanging low. This, Rev. King said, is because the Negro is inherently religious by nature and the scripture read that Christ said, "I came not to bring peace but a sword." Wherever He went, He started a conflict between the old and the new.

"CONFIDENT WE'LL WIN"

"We are protesting for some interim relief while the courts will decide the matter of whether segregation in local transportation shall be ruled out. We are confident that ultimately we will win the fight."

He described the six tactics used by the city to break the protest. 1. Forcing through negotiation to call off the protest in conferences. 2. Divide and conquer. 3. Spreading false rumors. 4. The "get tough" policy. 5. Physical violence and harrassments. 6. Indictments and conviction.

All six have failed to stop the movement. "This is a drama with not just one actor but 50,000 actors," Rev. King said. Concluding, he said "We must use as our weapons, the love which transcends everything and can make you compassionate with those who hate you. If you can't run, walk; if you can't walk, crawl, but keep moving forward!"

Bus Protest Leaders Head Montgomery Drive

State Press Fri. 4-6-56
Little Rock Ark. P. 1

MONTGOMERY, Ala.—In this small city, where a mass passive resistance campaign against racial discrimination on city buses has become a focus of world attention, a drive to enlist 10,000 NAACP members has been launched under the direction of two leaders of the bus protest.

They are the Rev. Martin Luther King and the Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy. Mr. King was found guilty of violating the Alabama anti-boycott law in a recent trial. His case is being appealed to a higher court.

Miss Lucille Black, NAACP national membership secretary, reported that 1,200 memberships were received from Montgomery immediately following Mr. King's conviction.

In asking local support for the NAACP, Mr. King has told Montgomery citizens that the association has created an atmosphere in which Negroes can use the right of peaceful protest as a powerful weapon against racial discrimination.

Miss Black noted in New York that the steady growth of NAACP membership in the south, as reported by Al Kuettner of the United Press in an analysis of the NAACP, is reflected in membership campaigns now being conducted in Atlanta, Ga., and Miami, Fla.

She said the Atlanta NAACP membership has passed the 6,000 mark.

In Miami, Miss Black said, where the NAACP campaign is a county-wide effort, Dade county NAACP branches are aiming for a minimum of 5,000 members "with good prospects of reaching their goal."

Montgomery Leaders Hail Court Action

Daily World P. 1
Wed. 4-25-56 Atlanta, Ga.

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — (INS) — The leader of Montgomery's highly-publicized Negro boycott of city buses hailed the U. S. Supreme Court decision banning segregation on intra-state conveyances.

"We certainly welcome the decision, and all people of good will welcome it, also," the Rev. M. L. King said.

The Rev. King, who is awaiting appeal on his conviction of violating Alabama's anti-boycott law because of his part in the long Negro protest against the Montgomery transportation system, declared:

"It (the Supreme Court ruling) is a reaffirmation that the principle of segregation in all forms is evil and must be eradicated before our Democratic society will come to full maturity."

"This decision is not a victory for the Negro," the Rev. King said, "but justice and Democracy, and all lovers of Democracy will seek to comply in all good faith with this decision.

In addition to the long bus boycott, which has caused the transit system at Montgomery to reduce its service and raise fares, a Federal Court suit is pending attacking Alabama's State law requiring segregation on intra-state common carriers. This is the same type of law which the Supreme Court said was unconstitutional in South Carolina.

Rev. King Not To Speak In Mississippi

Daily World
Wed. 4-25-56
Atlanta, Ga.

MONTGOMERY, Ala. --(INS)-- The Rev. M. L. King, Montgomery Negro minister, will not speak in Jackson, Miss., Friday, but he said the request of Gov. J. P. Coleman was not responsible.

P. 1

Coleman wired King, and New York Rep. Adam Clayton Powell asking both not to keep speaking engagements in Jackson Friday night.

King said he has not accepted the invitation to attend a regional conference of Negro leaders in Jackson because he has a previous engagement. He said:

"If I had accepted (the invitation) I would go. I would have a moral obligation to go. I want it understood that Gov. Coleman's telegram had nothing to do with my not going."

The Rev. King added:
"I would not have gone with the intention of disturbing the so-called peace of the community, although I wonder what type of peace he (Gov. Coleman) was talking about?"

Montgomery Protest Leader To Speak Here On April 10

World Birm, Ala. 4/1
Fri. 4-6-56

The Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. of Montgomery, Ala., pastor of Dexter Avenue Baptist Church and president of the Montgomery Improvement Association, is scheduled to be guest speaker at a public forum at eight o'clock Tuesday night, April 10 at the Mt. Zion Baptist Church, Sixth Avenue and 63rd Street North (Zion City).

THE REV. M. L. KING JR.

The program is being sponsored by the Pan-Community Council of Zion City.

The guest speaker received his elementary school training in the public school system of Atlanta, Georgia, and his high school training was received at the Atlanta University Laboratory High and the Booker Washington High Schools of Atlanta, Georgia.

The Reverend Mister King entered Morehouse College in 1944 as a Freshman, receiving the A. B. degree from the institution in 1948. After finishing Morehouse, he entered Crozer Theological Seminary, Chester, Pennsylvania, from which he was graduated at the head of his class in 1951. While at Crozer he served as president of the student body and upon graduating received the coveted Pearl Plaque award for being the most outstanding student in his class during his three-year course at the Seminary. He was also awarded the J. Lewis Crozer Fellowship to work toward the PhD. Degree at the University of his choice. While at Crozer, he also enrolled as a graduate student in the Philosophy Department at the University of Pennsylvania.

Upon graduating from Crozer, he enrolled at Boston University graduate school where he received the PhD. Degree. While at Boston University, Dr. King was also enrolled as a special student for two years in the Philosophy Department of Harvard University.

Dr. King began his ministerial career in 1947. He was ordained in the Ebenezer Baptist Church, Atlanta, Georgia, of which his father is pastor.

He served as assistant pastor two years and as co-pastor for four years of the Ebenezer Baptist Church and is presently serving as pastor of Dexter Avenue Baptist Church, Montgomery, Alabama. Since beginning his ministry Dr. King has traveled extensively delivering the message of God.

The public is invited to hear this dynamic educator and pulpiteer. He will speak on the theme: "The Negro's Revaluation of His Nature and Destiny."

A reception in honor of Dr. King will be presented at the First Baptist Church (Zion City) 8th Court North and 88th Street, Rev. F. D. Chiles, pastor, from 6:00 p. m. to 7:30 p. m., the evening of April 10. Dr. A. G. Gaston, prominent businessman of Birmingham, will be the reception speaker. He will discuss the "Negro in Business." The public is invited to share this occasion also.

Where to send your donation

Afro-American P.1
Sat. 4-7-56

If you as an individual or your church, club or other organization wants to help in the defense of the valiant Montgomery passive resisters, send checks or money orders (don't send cash money) to the following address:

The Rev. M. L. King Jr.,
Montgomery Improvement Association,
454 Dexter Avenue,
Montgomery, Alabama

Montgomery Improvement Association have colled for more courtesy, seating on a first-come first-served basis, and Negro drivers for predominantly colored bus routes.

Negro Minister Convicted In Alabama Bus Boycott

Times N.Y. 3/
New York
Fri. 3-23

By WAYNE PHILLIPS
Special to The New York Times.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., March 22—The Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. was found guilty today of leading an illegal boycott against the Montgomery city bus lines. Circuit Judge Eugene W. Carter sentenced the 27-year-old Baptist minister to serve 386 days at hard labor in the County of Montgomery—the equivalent of a fine of $500 and court costs of $500.

The sentence was suspended pending appeal, and Dr. King was released on $1,000 bond. The cases of eighty-nine other Negroes arrested in connection with the Negro protest against the bus lines were continued pending the appeal.

The protest began Dec. 5 over the arrest of Mrs. Rosa Parks, a 43-year-old seamstress, for refusing to give up her seat to a white person.

Nearly all of Montgomery's 50,000 Negroes have refused to ride the city buses since then. They have used a pool of 300 automobiles organized by the Montgomery Improvement Association, which is headed by Dr. King.

The protest movement went on without interruption or incident today. There was every indication it would continue to do so until some agreement was reached with the city and the bus company.

Arthur D. Shores, one of the eight lawyers who defended Dr. King in the four-day misdemeanor trial, estimated that it would take three years for the case to come up in the Alabama Court of Appeals.

There was every indication that the case would go from there through the Alabama Supreme Court to the United States Supreme Court on the ground that the convicition violated the Constitutional rights of Dr. King under the state and Federal constitutions.

The conviction was under a 1921 statute forbidding the hindering of a lawful business without "just cause or legal excuse."

There was no sign of emotion from the predominantly Negro audience as Judge Carter delivered his finding at 3:56 P. M. as soon as arguments were completed.

The spectators—many of them wearing cloth lapel crosses reading "Father, Forgive Them"—quietly left the court during the long wait to determine the trial costs and to set the amount of the bond.

Judge Carter announced that he was finding Dr. King guilty, but would fine him only half the possible penalty because he had continually urged his followers to observe a policy of non-violence.

Prepared for the 'Worst'

"I was optimistic enough to hope for the best but realistic enough to prepare for the worst," Dr. King told those who gathered around him a few minutes after the verdict.

"I am sure that when taken to the high courts of the land it will be proven unconstitutional to convict a person under this law," he said. "We have stood under the aegis of the Constitution throughout this struggle."

"This will not mar or diminish in any way my interest in the protest," the young minister said. "We will continue to protest in the same spirit of non-violence and passive resistance, using the weapon of love."

Mrs. Parks, who was in the courtroom throughout the trial, said the verdict was "just about what I expected—I didn't think we'd do any better than we did." She did not appear as a witness.

When Dr. King emerged with his wife at 4:39 P. M., there was a crowd of about 300 Negroes outside the courthouse.

As he appeared, the crowd applauded and shouts went up "Behold the king," and "Long live the king." The Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy, one of the other defendants, called to the crowd.

"Don't forget the mass prayer meeting tonight."

"You gonna be there?" a Negro in the crowd shouted, and the gathering chorused back, "Yes."

"You gonna ride the buses?" the same Negro cride, and the crowd roared back, "No!"

Dr. King was to address the prayer meeting at the Holt Street Baptist Church. It was at a mass meeting there that the Negroes had decided to extend a spontaneous one-day boycott until the bus company bettered conditions.

The demands of the Mont

$5 Fine Assessed To Negro Pastor In Traffic Case

Afro-American P.1
Montgomery, Ala.
Fri. 2-17-56

A false fire alarm at the church of Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. last week resulted in a $5 traffic violation fine for the pastor of another Negro church in Recorder's Court yesterday.

Patrolman C. T. Rowland said a 1956 Mercury belonging to Rev. Ralph David Abernathy, 29-year-old pastor of the First Baptist Church for Negroes, had rolled unattended into a parked truck causing slight damage.

Rev. Abernathy was charged with failing to set his hand brake. One of the Negro spokesmen in the current bus boycott, Abernathy testified he heard that the Dexter Avenue Baptist Church was on fire, rushed to the scene and parked. When he came back he said he discovered that his car was gone.

Judge John B. Scott fined the minister $1 plus $4 court costs.

N.J. daily gets $1,339 for King

Afro-American P.13
Sat. 4-14-56
Baltimore, Md.

By SAMUEL A. HAYNES

ASBURY PARK, N.J. — "I feel that an injustice has been done a large segment of our citizenry."

This statement was made by U.S. Sen. H. Alexander Smith, one of several distinguished leaders and citizens of both races who sent contributins to the Asbury Park Press last week the Rev. Martin L. King of Montgomery Ala.

The liberal daily launched a drive March 24 for $1,000 to pay the boycott leader's fine and court costs.

* * *

WAYNE McMURRAY, editor, reported that, as of Friday morning people from as far away as California and Pennsylvania had sent a total of $1,339. 82.

The contibutors included two U.S. Senators and a Congressman from New Jersey.

Senator Smith a close advisor to President Eisenhower, told the press:

* * *

"YOU HAVE my heartfelt support in the drive you have been conducting to assist the Rev. Martin L. King with his legal expenses.

"I fell that an injustice has been done a large segment of our citizenry."

* * *

U.S. SENATOR Clifford P. Case, who in 1950, while a member of the House of Representatives, blocked passage of an Amendment to change the Electoral System and who again vigorously opposed another Amendment last week, said in a message wih his gift.:

"I had occasion to mention this drive on Sunday, March 25, on the College Press Conference television program.

"I am grateful for the opportunity to repeat my endorsement.

* * *

"IT SEEMS to me particularly appropriate for people in New Jersey who have always been in the forefront of protecting other people's liberty to contribute of the beleaguered group in Alabama."

Among the contributors to the fund to assist the Rev. Mr. King with his legal expenses was Rep. James C. Auchincloss.

He lost caste with his colored constituents in Ocean, Monmouth and Middlesex counties who attended the national civil rights legislative assembly in Washington, D.C. last month when he called "a lot of noise," refused to see them, and suggested that they go back home.

* * *

AMONG OTHER contributors to the fund who represented

many races, creeds and nationalities were:

Mrs. Gealdine Thompson of of Middletown Township, one of the most influential Republican women leaders in the state a friend of minorities, and a veteran member of the board Of Control of the Department of Institutions and Agencies.

Also Mrs. Barbara M. Sprengger, Bakersfield, Calif.; Mrs. Priscilla. Halpern, Riverside, Calif; he Rev. Gleen Finchbough, Hamburg, Pa.; and Mrs. B. W. Baker, Jamaica, L. I.;

* * * *

THE SECOND Baptist Church Long Branch; the Second Baptist Church. Asbury Park; the Elks Civil Liberties League of Monmouth County, Fred, Dempsey American Legion Post 266, Nepunte and the Westside Community Center.

Also Dr. E. A. Robinson, William Dean, Mr. and Mrs. Leon Davis, Defar's Towing Service, The Golden Harmonaires, William Knuckles. Marie Aldarelli, and the First Ward, 5th District GOP Club.

Boycott Leader Says Negroes Just Want Justice

Mon. 3-26-56

New York, March 25 (AP)—The Rev. Martin Luther King, Jr., convicted Alabama-bus-boycott leader, said today Negroes in the United States "are not seeking to defeat the white people," but are merely fighting injustice.

Negroes in Montgomery, he said, "are willing to receive violence, but we will not return it."

King spoke at a Brooklyn rally sponsored by the Business and Professional Women's Club.

"We in Montgomery have discovered a method that can be used by the Negroes in their fight for political and economical equality," King said. "We fight injustice with passive resistance."

"And it works," he told the cheering congregation.

The Montgomery Story Inspiring

Wheeling P. 3-B

THE courageous and unified action of Montgomery, Alabama Negroes in the current bus boycott is indeed inspiring, moving and morale building. In spite of the recent pressure of jailing over 100 leaders (largely ministers) for their part in the boycott, they have stood firm in their resolve not to ride the busses. Instead they have vowed to continue their mass protest against "oppression" and dedicated themselves to a swelling movement of "passive resistance."

New Orleans, La.

All over the country Negroes have nothing but admiration for those brothers and sisters in Montgomery who are "standing up and being counted" for what they believe to be a just cause. This show of strength and unity is based on solid ground, as indicated in the most recent remarks by the leaders in the movement.

Said one of the leaders, Rev. Martin Luther King:

Sat. 3-3-56

"If we are arrested every day, if we are exploited every day, if we are trampled down every day . . . let nobody pull so low as to hate them . . . We must use the weapon of love. We must have compassion and understanding for those who hate us. So many people have been taught to hate, taught from the cradle. They are not totally responsible! . . . It is not a conflict between the white race and the Negro race. It is a conflict between justice and injustice!"

It is becoming increasingly obvious that Negroes are serious in being tired of the oppressions, humiliations and intimidations they have experienced through the years. Now that the President, the United States Supreme Court, spurred by enlightened public opinion have acted to see that first class citizenship embraces all citizens regardless of race, creed or color, Negroes are in no mood to accept anything less than what the law says they are entitled to as American citizens and human beings.

The tyrannical and hysterical actions of the race hating, white supremacists to defy law and order and to crush the desires and aspirations of Negroes to be treated and respected as law abiding citizens is daily winning public opinion and friends over to the side of the Negro. The sane, intelligent white people of goodwill of this country are becoming fed up with the glaring imperfections of our professed beliefs in democracy and christianity. They are becoming tired of the defiance and arrogance to the American spirit of fair play and justice exhibited by the white supremacists and pro-segregationists.

Lawlessness and defiance to the Supreme Court, democratic and christianity principles will not long continue to be countenanced by the American people.

Associated Press Wirephoto

NEGRO MINISTER CONVICTED: The Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., right, who was found guilty in the Montgomery, Ala., bus boycott case. He is shown talking yesterday with the Rev. Robert S. Graetz, a defense witness.

Negroes Air Gripes At Bus Boycott Trial

Herald Thurs. 3-22-56

Miami, Fla.

MONTGOMERY, Ala. —(INS) — Bitter, long-standing grievances over their treatment on Montgomery buses spilled forth from Negro witnesses Wednesday as the defense of one of their ministers, Rev. M. L. King Jr., opened in Circuit Court.

As the prosecution rested its case against the 27-year-old Baptist Negro minister accused of leading a bus boycott, the defense tried but failed to get an immediate verdict in favor of the defendant.

P. 2-A

King is the first of 90 Negroes, including 24 ministers, to go on trial in connection with the boycott that began on Dec. 5.

All of the defense witnesses told of mistreatment or discourtesy on Montgomery buses and some said they stopped riding before Dec. 5.

Circuit Judge Eugene Carter is hearing the case without a jury.

Montgomery's 16-week bus boycott apparently was triggered by Mrs. Rosa Parks' arrest after she refused to move from one seat to another when ordered to do so by the bus driver.

The state ended its case at mid-morning with the testimony of Mayor W. A. Gayle who said he attended about 20 conferences designed to settle the boycott. He testified he adopted a so-called "get tough" policy in late January because "nothing else could be done by the city to end the boycott."

Defense Rests in Alabama Bus Boycott Trial

World-Telegram Sun

By the United Press.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., March 22.—The defense rested at 11:25 a.m., (CST) (12:25 p.m. EST) today in the trial of the Rev. Martin Luther King, 27-year-old Negro minister and the first of 90 defendants to be tried on conspiracy charges in connection with the Montgomery bus boycott.

Thurs. 3-22-56

Following closing arguments by attorneys for the state and the defense, the cas ewill be decided by Circuit Court Judge Eugene Carter, since Mr. King and the other 89 defendants waived jury trial.

Mr. King was the last of more than three dozen defense witnesses. He testified that Montgomery Mayor W. A. Gayle called him soon after the mass boycott of city buses by Negroes began Dec. 4 and made a compromise proposal for settling it.

The boycott, now in its 15th week, grew out of a one-day walked to work in protest demonstration by Negroes, who against the segregated seating arrangements on city buses.

Mr. King said he told Mayor Gayle he would have to take up the mayor's proposal with the people.

Mr. King also was questioned about the Montgomery Improvement Assn., which he heads. This organization was formed after the boycott began.

He said "any citizen interested" could become a member.

He denied, in answer to a question by one of his attorneys, that he had ever urged members to refrain from riding buses.

"I said let your conscience be your guide," he said.

The minister said a city proposal to reserve the first 10 seats on a bus for white passengers and the 10 rear seats for Negroes, plus a guarantee of courtesy, was "turned down by the people."

Throughout defense testimony, Negro lawyers representing Mr. King have hammered at the idea that the boycott began spontaneously before the mass demonstration, and that the MIA was not devoted exclusively to conducting and supporting the bus boycott.

Today's first witness, Mrs. Willie Chism, said she has not ridden on a city bus since October, 1954, because a bus drove off too quickly when she was getting off at her stop. She said she was pregnant at the time.

Bus Boycott Leader Says Plan Works Bids All Negroes Emulate Gandhi

Herald Tribune Mon. 3-26-56

New York, N.Y.

P. 6

By Paul Tobenkin

The Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King jr., who was convicted last week for his part in leading the bus boycott in Montgomery, Ala., called yesterday upon all Negroes of America to follow the example in Montgomery and press for immediate integration by passive resistance.

"We can't slow up," he said. "We have our self-respect. We are on the highway of freedom to the goal of equality, and we can't slow up because we have a date with destiny."

Discussing the methods of non-violence and passive resistance which have brought national notice to the city where he is pastor of the Dexter Ave. Baptist Church, Dr. King declared that the 50,000 Negroes there "have borrowed from a litte brown-skinned man in India, Gandhi, the message that brought the British Empire to its knees."

Says Plan Can Work

He explained that "We have proved in Montgomery that it can work in America. What we are doing is refusing to co-operate with injustice. We are refusing to spend our money."

Dr. King spoke in the partially-completed Concord Baptist Church at 833 Marcy Ave., in the Bedford-Stuyvesant area of Brooklyn. He addressed an overflow crowd of 2,500 persons meeting under the auspices of the National Association of Business and Professional Women, a Negro organization.

The next step on the way to complete freedom in this country, he said, is for all Negroes to emulate the Montgomery experiment. "Let us take a stand for the elimination of all segregation. It is evil. It is slavery covered up with niceties," he declared.

Dr. King's was the first trial in a group of persons charged with violation of a 1921 Alabama statute forbidding organized boycott. The Negroes began it last Dec. 5 in an effort to get equal treatment on the buses. They carried it on through the efforts of the Montgomery Improvement Association, of which Dr. King is president. He is now appealing his conviction and he told his audience that no matter what the disposition in his case, the boycott will go on until local Negro demands are met.

He spoke eloquently and forcefully, studding his talk with Greek and Latin allusions as well as frequent references to the Bible. He was ofter interrupted with cries of "Amen" and applause.

Covering the history of slavery in America since 1619, he noted that Alabama was the cradle of the Confederacy. "For the first time in years," he said, "the cradle is rocking."

Seek Equal Treatment

Specifically, he explained, the Negroes want equal treatment on the buses. Generally, they want equal treatment with all men. "We have come to realize that the measure of a man is his soul and not his color. The Negro has come to a new found dignity," he said.

The methods used against passive resistance have varied, he pointed out, from court action to violence in the bombing of his own home and from negotiation to attempted devision among Negro leaders. But their followers have given them unanimous support, he explained, an dthey expect the support to spread.

The speed of resistance will grow, too, he said, pointing out that "We can't slow up because of our great love for America and for democracy."

As the main speaker of the meeting, Dr. King talked for an hour and twenty-five minutes. Among the other speakers was Abe Stark, president of the City Council, who called upon the President to urge an immediate dismissal of the charges against the remaining eighty-nine persons still awaiting trial on bus boycott charges.

State Rests in Bus Boycott Case; Defense Hints Early End of Trial

World-Telegram + Sun Wed. 3-21-56

New York, N.Y.

By the United Press.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., March 21.—The state rested today in the trial of th Rev. M. L. King, first of 90 Negro defendants to be tried for violating Alabama's anti-boycott law in connection with the 14-week Negro boycott of Montgomery city buses.

P. 9

Defense attorneys indicated they will be able to complete their testimony today, which would send the case for decision to Circuit Court Judge Eugene Carter.

Mr. King and the other 89 defendants waived jury trial and exercised their right to be tried separately.

Final prosecution testimony came from J. H. Bagley, manager of the Montgomery city bus lines, who was recalled to the stand for the third time during prosecution testimony.

Whites Removed.

Mr. Bagley read three reports from the company files on instances when Negro women had been ejected from the buses. The bus boycott began after a Negro woman, Rosa Parks, was arrested and fined for refusing to give up her seat at request of a driver last Dec. 1.

Mr. Bagley was asked whether he had any reports of white persons being removed from buses.

"Yes sir, I have," he replied. "I have some reports of white people removed from buses for disorderly conduct and refusing to move in sections of the bls."

Earlier Mr. Bagley testified that his company quit trying to serve predominantly Negro areas of Montgomery after the boycott began lost Dec. 4 because the buses were being shot at and stoned.

Mayor on Stand.

Mr. Bagley was followed to the stand by Montgomery Mayor W. A. Gayle, who described several meetings he held with Negro leaders in fruitless attempts to settle the boycott.

Mr. Gayle said, "I want everyone to know we did all we could." A Negro defense attorney asked: "Did you think your joining the White Citizens Council could help anything?"

Judge Carter sustained an objection to the question, and it was not answered.

King Montgomery Leader, Here For Series Of Talks

World-Tel. Tues. 4-10-56

Birm., Ala.

The Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., dubbed the "Moses of Montgomery" comes here today for a series of speeches.

He is scheduled to appear at the 18th Street Branch YMCA at one o'clock this afternoon as guest of the Hungry Club which shifted its meeting from Thursday.

Dr. King, pastor of fashionable Dexter Avenue Baptist Church, Montgomery, Ala., is slated to make a speech at eight o'clock tonight at the Mount Zion Baptist Church, Sixth Avenue and 93rd Street, Zion City. The Rev. A. L. Bratcher is pastor of the church.

The program at Mt. Zion Baptist Church is sponsored by the Pan-Community Council.

First Baptist Church of Zion City, 8th Court North and 88th Street, is giving a reception in honor of Rev. King at six o'clock this evening. The Rev. F. D. Chiles is pastor of the church.

In Montgomery, Dr. King is president of the Montgomery Improvement Association. He is serving along with the Rev. Ralph David Abernathy as co-director of the NAACP membership campaign in that city.

Herald Tribune
Mon. 3-26-56
p. 6
New York, N.Y.

Herald Tribune photo by Don Rice

BUS BOYCOTT LEADER SPEAKS HERE—The Rev. Martin Luther King at the Concord Baptist Church, 833 Marcy Ave., Brooklyn, yesterday with the Rev. Gardner C. Taylor, pastor of the church, and Mrs. Helen Maxwell, president of the Brooklyn chapter of the National Association of Business and Professional Women, which sponsored the meeting.

'Nation's heard our plea, we're grateful'

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.
Sat. 3-17-56

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — "The nation has heard our plea and we are grateful."

The Rev. M. L. King, head of the Montgomery Improvement Association, which has been staging a 13-week "passive resistance movement" protest against the racial policies of the Montgomery bus lines, made the statement.

p. 2

Officials of the improvement association revealed that about $12,000 had been received from sympathizers in all parts of the nation, last week.

* * *

THE LARGEST DONATIONS came from New York City and Chicago.

Last week, the Rev. Thomas L. Kilgore flew down from N.Y.C. to present the association with a check for $3,200.

On Monday, $2,844 was collected at a meeting at Bethel Baptist Church.

An estimated throng of 12,000 persons overflowed the church, its grounds and nearby property.

EIGHTY-NINE members of the association who have been indicted for violating the state's boycott laws are slated to go on trial during the week of March 18.

Meanwhile, Fred D. Gray, 25-year-old legal advisor for the group, has been cleared of a charge in the state court filed by Mrs. Jeannette Reese.

She accused Mr. Gray of filing a suit in U. S. District Court attacking the segregation policies of the bus lines without her authorization.

* * *

THE GRAND JURY indictment was nol prossed on March 2 on a motion by City Solicitor William Thettford, who said that the case was filed in a Federal court, hence the state had no jurisdiction.

The information which led to the indictment, Thettford said, was turned over to the U. S. District attorney for appropriate action.

Negro Pastor Found Guilty in Southern Bus Boycott

Daily Tribune
Fri. 3-23-56

BULLETIN

Montgomery, Ala., March 22 (AP) — The Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. was convicted today as a leader in the Negro boycott of segregated city buses and was fined $500. Defense attorneys filed notice of appeal.

Chicago, Ill.

Montgomery, Ala., March 22 (AP)—The Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. denied today that he ever encouraged any Negro to refrain from riding segregated city buses during the 17 week-old mass boycott.

The Negro Baptist minister, 27, first of 90 Negroes called to trial on boycotting charges, also testified in his own defense that never at any time did he advocate violence during t he boycott; instead, he said, he had urged his people to refrain from violence.

Defense attorneys rested their case at the conclusion of King's testimony. The state announced it would have some rebuttal evidence before the guilt or innocence of King is turned over to Circuit Judge Eugene Carter to decide in the absence of a jury.

Call White Pastor

Despite King's disavowal of urging Negroes to stay off the buses, Circuit Solicitor William F. Thetford sought to show that the Negro minister at least indirectly was a party to that.

Earlier, the white pastor of an all-Negro church who has helped in the boycott testified he has never heard King urge other negroes not to ride the buses.

The Rev. Robert S. Graetz, 27, identified himself as a member of the Montgomery Improvement association, which has supported the bus boycott and is made up almost entirely of Negroes.

The white minister also tes-

The Rev. Robert Graetz [left] and the Rev. M. L. King Jr.

tified he has driven his own car in a motor pool which has provided transportation for the boycotting Negroes, but said he has received no money or gasoline as some of the other drivers have.

Tells of Continued Boycott

The Rev. Mr. Graetz testified that as he understands it the association intends to continue the boycott until its original demands for better seating arrangement on city buses are granted or until some compromise is reached. But he quoted King as saying that the prospects of an acceptable compromise are slim.

The white clergyman said he has heard King on several occasions tell other Negroes he was not in favor of threatening or intimidating anyone who chose to ride the buses. The state has attempted to show that Negroes who did try to use the buses were threatened or otherwise intimidated.

Negro Pastor Convicted in Bus Boycott

Inquirer Fri. 3-23-56 Philadelphia Pa.

386-Day Jail Term Suspended; Speedy Appeal Launched

P.1

MONTGOMERY, Ala., March 22 (AP).—The first of the Negro bus boycott leaders, the Rev. Martin Luther King, Jr., was convicted today. Defense attorneys immediately began an appeal that may lead ultimately to the U. S. Supreme Court.

Mr. King, 27-year-old pastor of the Dexter Avenue Baptist Church, was fined $500, plus $500 court costs, for violation of Alabama's seldom-used antiboycott law for his part in the 17-week-old boycott against segregated city buses. The trials of 89 other Negroes on similar charges were postponed pending Mr. King's appeal.

JAIL TERM SUSPENDED

The fine and costs imposed on the pastor were converted into a jail sentence since he chose to appeal rather than pay the money. He was sentenced to a total of 386 days.

The sentence was suspended, however, after Negro defense lawyers served notice of appeal. They have said they will take the appeal to the U. S. Supreme Court on constitutional grounds if the State appellate courts uphold the conviction.

Circuit Judge Eugene Carter, presiding over the four-day trial in the absence of a jury, could have fined Mr. King $1000 and added a six-month jail sentence under the State law.

MODERATION CITED

But he said he decided on a lesser penalty because it was shown in testimony that the minister used his influence throughout the mass bus protest to urge his people to refrain from violence.

Judge Carter said Mr. King, had "started a fire he couldn't stop" as president of a new Negro rights organization which the State said conceived, financed and executed the boycott. The 90 were indicted Feb. 21.

In a statement to newsmen, Mr. King said the verdict "will not increase or diminish in any way my interest in the protest."

'WEAPON OF LOVE'

"We will continue with the protest in the same spirit," he continued, "with nonviolence, passive resistance and using the weapon of love."

As he left the courthouse, the minister was cheered by waiting Negroes with shouts of "behold the King" and "long live the King."

Fred D. Gray and Arthur Shores, defense attorneys, insisted in their closing arguments that the State had failed to prove Mr. King committed any unlawful acts and that Negroes had a justifiable reason for refusing to patronize the bus company.

BUS DRIVERS ACCUSED

Nearly two-score Negro witnesses had testified of repeated acts of mistreatment in the past decade at the hands of white bus drivers. Defense lawyers argued the boycott was the culmination of those experiences.

State's attorneys completed their testimony with seven rebuttal witnesses, including six bus drivers who denied they had ever mistreated any Negro passenger.

Negro defense witnesses said they were insulted by bus drivers, forced to stand while seats remained vacant in white sections of buses, and at times forced to give up their seats to white passengers.

The bus company manager, J. H. Bagley, testified he had fired 21 drivers in 10 years for discourtesy to passengers. Bagley also produced a performance report by his parent company, National City Lines, Inc., of Chicago, based on a spot check of Montgomery buses last November. The manager said it failed to show one instance of driver discourtesy.

Defense Uses 28 Witnesses In King Trial

Advertiser Thurs. 3-22-56 Montgomery Ala.

Lawyers Try To Show Negroes Mistreated While Riding On Bus

P.1

By TOM JOHNSON AND FRANK McARDLE

Defense attorneys in the Montgomery bus boycott trials yesterday summoned 28 Negro witnesses to the stand to describe alleged mistreatment of Negroes on Montgomery City Lines buses in the last decade.

It is expected that the trial of the Rev. M. L. King, boycott leader and first of more than 90 people indicted on charges of violating the state boycott law, will be concluded today.

The trial is before Circuit Judge Eugene Carter who will rule on the guilt or innocence of the Rev. King.

FORMAL ARGUMENTS

Formal arguments will be presented by both defense and prosecution staffs today.

As Negro defense attorneys called witness after witness yesterday, it was understood that they were attempting to show "just cause" in the grievances of the Negroes in their refusal to ride Montgomery City Lines buses.

Among defense witnesses were R. A. Parks, 634 Cleveland Ave., husband of Rosa Parks whose arrest set off the bus boycott; Rosalie Murray and Martha Kate Walker, 707 Ellerwood St.

These and other grievance witnesses testified that they had been subjected to "unpleasant conditions" while riding the buses. They said they had encountered abusive language from drivers, instructions to move to the rear of the buses under threatening conditions, and other forms of mistreatment.

QUIT RIDING

Rosalie Murray said that she quit riding the buses "because if 50,000 other Negroes could stop riding them, I could too."

Martha Kate Walker said her blind husband suffered an injured leg when the drive of a bus closed the door and caught his foot before he had cleared the step when getting off the bus.

nant wife was forced to give her seat to a white woman and "everywhere you find more than one Negro you will find criticism of the buses." He admitted he was one of the indicted boycotters and a NAACP member.

The general questioning line was on whether the witness had ridden city buses, if he had suffered "unpleasant experiences," the manner in which drivers addressed the passengers, and the seating arrangements.

The witnesses said the drivers had habitually referred to them as "niggers," "ugly apes" and in other deragatory wordage.

After calling three witnesses, including Mayor W. A. Gayle, the state rested its case at 10:35 a.m.

Negro Atty. Fred Gray immediately asked the court to exclude all of the state's testimony and return a judgment in favor of King.

After listening to Gray's extensive arguments, Judge Carter overruled the motion and ordered trial to proceed.

The defense motion was based on the contention the state's evidence was "legally insufficient" to warrant a conviction, failed to show a criminal conspiracy, and failed to implicate King in any unlawful acts against the bus company.

Advertiser

Gray also argued the state anti-boycott law, as applied to King, was in violation of rights guaranteed by the state and federal constitutions — rights of free speech and worship, assembly, due process of law and petition for redress of grievances.

P. 6A

Even if there was a conspiracy Gray said, the state had not shown that the Negroes didn't have a legal excuse.

(State law says boycotts are illegal unless there is "just cause or legal excuse.")

Gray questioned the testimony of two Negroes who testified they were threatened for riding the buses. He said Ernest Smith is an employe of the county (courthouse janitor) and "it is quite likely he would testify that way."

UNKNOWN PERSON

The other witness, Beatrice Smith, who said she was beaten and cut by an unknown person, is employed by the mother-in-law of Mayor Gayle, Gray said.

Gayle, called as a state's witness soon after yesterday's morning session began, testified the City Commission had met "directly or indirectly" with the Negroes more than 20 times since the boycott began.

He said the commission had offered the Negroes a seating plan reserving the 10 rear seats for Negroes and the 10 front seats for white passengers, with the rest of the bus to be filled on a first come, first served basis.

Though "just as fair to Negroes as to whites," the plan was turned down, said Gayle.

Gayle described a meeting Jan. 21 at which three Negro ministers met with the commission and "agreed" to a plan for ending the boycott.

One of the ministers, the Rev. Benjamin F. Moseley, later "repudiated" the agreement, Gayle testified.

Gayle was questioned about the bi-racial committee he named in mid-December to seek a solution to the boycott. He said he named representatives of business, labor, the P-TA, and the ministry as white members.

DEFENDED MEMBERSHIP

He said King accused the white members of being "prejudiced."

Under questioning of King's lawyers, Gayle said one of the committee members was Luther Ingalls, a member of the Montgomery Citizens Council.

Then Gayle defended his own membership in the council by saying, "I wouldn't join anything unlawful." He said he joined in January.

Gayle testified the "get tough" policy he announced Jan. 31 was designed to end the boycott by persuading white persons not to give aid to the protesting Negroes and by urging patronage of the bus company.

"I did just the opposite from the colored people who asked people to refrain from riding," he said.

Gayle was asked his views of the demand for Negro bus drivers on certain city lines. He said he had "nothing to do with the administration" of the company.

As for the Negroes' request for first come, first served seating on all bus routes, Gayle said it would violate the city and state laws requiring equal facilities for white and colored.

ON SOME LINES

Bagley testified earlier that a similar seating arrangement to the one offered by Gayle already is in force on some lines.

He said the rear 10 seats are reserved for Negroes when buses are traveling through predominantly white sections and the opposite is true through Negro sections.

Company policy regarding seating was set up, Bagley said, by the City Commission under the segregation laws of the city and the state.

He added it is the "policy of the bus company to obey" all laws.

Bagley admitted he had received a number of complaints of driver discourtesy but said they came from white and Negro.

City Detective Jack Shows, who with Detective K. W. Jones investigated the boycott, was put on the stand briefly to testify that while parked outside the Negro First Baptist Church, he heard "someone introduced as a Rev. King." But he admitted he never saw the speaker and could not swear that the defendant King, was the person who spoke.

After the state rested, defense attorneys called several witnesses in an attempt to show that Negroes had sought "relief" from the bus company numerous times prior to Dec. 5, when the boycott started.

'ABUSES' TOLD

Other witnesses testified to "abuses" they were subjected to while riding the buses.

Thelma Glass of the Women's Political Council (Negro), testified her group met with the City Commission on several occasions seeking better seating arrangements and other changes in existing bus service.

Sadie Brooks, member of the Civic Federation Club, testified that while riding a bus she saw a Negro passenger threatened because he didn't have the correct change.

"The driver whipped out a pistol," she said, and drove the man off the bus."

Georgia Teresa Gilmore said when she boarded a bus, a driver yelled out to her, "Come out, nigger and go in the back door." When she stepped off the bus to comply with his directions, she said the driver drove away.

She said she determined never to ride the buses again. "When you pay a fare and they count the money, they don't know Negro money from white money," she added.

Richard S. Jordan, a Pullman porter under indictment, testified he and his wife had been forced to move to "make way for white ladies at the Capitol just going two blocks."

'HUNDREDS OF TIMES'

He said he objected to being called "nigger" and "boy."

Della Perkins testified she had been called "ugly black ape" by a driver.

Gladys Moore said she was forced "hundreds of times" to stand when seats were empty in the front portion of the bus and that drivers treated her "just as rough as they can."

She said she resolved on Dec. 5 not to ride the buses again.

Judge Carter asked her why she chose Dec. 5. The woman's answer did not satisfy him and he repeated the question several times before she finally said "because Rosa Parks was tried."

Few white spectators have been present during the three days of testimony. Except for a small section of seats normally used by jurors, the Negroes have occupied the entire courtroom.

Many of them wear crosses on their lapels, reading "Father forgive them."

At one point when they applauded a witness' testimony, Judge Carter rose to his feet and ordered no further demonstrations.

"Even though you feel that way," he said, "you will have to be quiet in the courtroom."

Pastor Fined In Alabama Bus Boycott By Negroes

Post + Times Herald P.1 Fri. 3-23-56 Washington, D.C.

Trial of 89 Other Defendants to Be Postponed Pending Outcome of Appeal

(Picture on Page 31)

MONTGOMERY, Ala., March 22 (AP) — The Rev. Martin Luther King, Jr., was convicted today as a leader in the Negro boycott of segregated city buses and was fined $500. Defense attorneys immediately filed notice of appeal.

At the same time, Circuit Solicitor William F. Thetford announced that the State had agreed to postpone the trial of 89 other defendants, also indicted on boycotting charges pending the appeal of King's conviction.

Under the State's antiboycott law on which King was tried, Circuit Judge Eugene Carter who found him guilty in the absence of a jury could have imposed a fine of $1000 plus a six-month jail sentence. But the Judge said he decided on a lesser penalty because testimony showed that the minister appealed to his race to refrain from violence during the 17-week-old boycott.

King had testified he never encouraged Negroes to refrain from riding buses.

The 27-year-old Negro Baptist minister, first of 90 Negroes called to trial, also testified that at no time did he advocate violence during the boycott but had urged his people instead to refrain from violence.

Despite King's disavowal of urging Negroes to stay off the buses, Circuit Solicitor Thetford sought to show that the Negro minister at least indirectly was a party to that.

Earlier, the Rev. Robert S. Graetz, white pastor of an all-Negro church who has helped the boycott testified he had never heard King urge other Negroes not to ride the buses. The Rev. Mr. Graetz identified himself as a member of the Montgomery Improvement Association which has supported the bus boycott and is made up almost entirely of Negroes. He testified that as he understands it the Association intends to continue the boycott until its original demands for better seating arrangement on city buses are granted or until some compromise is reached.

The white clergyman said he has heard King on several occasions tell other Negroes he was not in favor of threatening or intimidating anyone who chose to ride the buses. The State has attempted to show that Negroes who did try to use the buses were threatened or otherwise intimidated.

Boycott Head Files Data In Alabama

Journal + Constitution Atlanta, Ga.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Aug. 11 (AP)—The Rev. Martin Luther King, leader of a Negro boycott of city buses, has filed 500 pages of high-priced transcribed testimony with the Alabama Court of Appeals.

Sun. 8-12-56

The Negro minister, who must pay the $1,400 to $1,500 expense of compiling the testimony, was fined $500 in March for fostering an illegal boycott against segregated buses. The demonstration began Dec. 5 and is still in progress.

P. 10-A

Nearly 100 other Negro defendants were also charged with violating a seldom-used state antiboycott law, but they will not be tried until King's appeal is completed and decided.

Charles Bricken, court of appeals clerk, said the court is now in summer recess and the case will not be submitted for review until the court reconvenes on Oct. 4.

Appeal Near In Trial Of Rev. King

Defender P.16 Chicago, Ill. Sat. 8-18-56

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — (ANP) —A way was cleared last week for an appeal of the circuit court decision that convicted Rev. Martin L. King, president of the Montgomery Improvement Association and leader of the hard-hitting Negro bus boycott here, when bulky transcripts of the court records involved in the case were completed.

The noted minister was convicted last March of an ancient law charging him with illegal boycotting.

He was found guilty of "fostering an illegal boycott against Montgomery City Transit Co."

Rev. King has headed a powerful Negro crusade to stop riding buses in protest of Alabama's segregated seating system.

The vast record of testimony and evidence in the trial, prepared by a court reporter, will be the largest ever presented in a circuit court for a single case.

More than 560 pages are included in the report, requested by Rev. King's attorneys for an appeal of his conviction to the State Court of Appeals.

The Rev. King case became a test case for the indictment of more than 90 prominent Negro leaders accused of promoting the boycott.

BOYCOTT LEADER TO PREACH HERE

Post + Times New York

Dr. M. L. King of Birmingham Coming to Harlem—Paulists Offer Instruction Series

Sat. 8-11-56

By STANLEY ROWLAND Jr.

Among the guest speakers scheduled for New York pulpits tomorrow is the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., convicted leader of the Negro boycott of buses in Montgomery, Ala.

Dr. King, who is pastor of the Dexter Avenue Baptist Church in Montgomery, will speak at the 11 A. M. service tomorrow at Mount Olivet Baptist Church at 201 Lenox Avenue, near 120th Street. He is appealing his conviction.

At the New York Cathedral (St. John the Divine), the preacher at the 11 A. M. service tomorrow will be the Rev. William S. Turner. He is rector of Trinity Protestant Episcopal Church in New Orleans.

Among other guest preachers will be the Rev. Dr. Joseph R. Sizoo, Professor of Religion at George Washington University in Washington. He will preach at the Riverside Church, Riverside Drive and 122d Street. His subject will be "When Life Seems Futile."

M. L. King Jr. Appeals Fine In Bus Case

Daily Worker Atlanta, Ga. Sun. 8-12-56

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (ANP)—A way was cleared last week for an appeal of the circuit court decision that convicted Rev. Martin L. King Jr., president of the Montgomery Improvement Association and leader of the hard-hitting Negro bus boycott here, when bulky transcripts of the court records involved in the case were completed.

The noted minister was convicted last March of an ancient law charging him with illegal boycotting.

He was found guilty of "fostering an illegal boycott against Montgomery City Transit Co."

Rev. King has since headed a powerful Negro crusade to stop riding buses in protest of Alabama's segregated seating system.

The vast record of testimony and evidence in the trial, prepared by a court reporter, will be the largest ever present in a circuit court for a single case.

More than 560 pages are included in the report, requested by Rev. King's attorneys for an appeal of his conviction of the State Court of Appeals.

King Takes Dexter Pulpit

Advertiser

Dr. M. L. King Jr., will fill the pulpit on Sunday at the Dexter Avenue Baptist Church after a speaking engagement this week at the Virginia State Branches of the NAACP. He was guest contributor for the annual lecture series at Hampton Institite during last week.

P. 2 B

The music for the morning worship will include as the organ prelude by Mrs. Althea Thompson Thomas, organist, "Priere a Notre Dame" by Boellemann. The postlude will be Bingham's "Serabande." The morning anthem will be "How Long Wilt Thou Forget Me" by Pfhueger, with Cleveland L. Dennard as bass soloist.

Flowers will be placed on the altar by Mrs. Lelia Leverette Owens, of New Haven, Conn., and her brother, Emory L. Leverette, of Toledo, Ohio in memory of their mother, Mrs. Emma L. West, who passed on Oct. 4, 1941 and was funeralized from the church where she had long held membership.

The program for the day also includes the regular monthly meeting of the Woman's Council at 5:30, the Sacrament of Holy Baptism at 6:30, and the Sacrament of Holy Communion at 7, with Dr. King delivering the meditation.

New members who joined the church during September will be officially presented to the congregation at the 7 p.m. hour.

On Sunday, Oct. 14, the annual observance of Womans Day will be held at the mornng worship hour. Principal speaker has been announced by Miss Lelia M. Barlow, chairman of publicity, as Dr. Arenia C. Mallory, principal of the Saints Industrial and Literery School at Lexington, Miss., and vice president of the National Council of Negro Women. The observance is an annual project of the Womans Council headed by Mrs. Thelma Hill Anderson.

Dexter Avenue served as host ths week to the 55th annual session of the Montgomery Antioch Distriot Assn. Womens Convention headed by Mrs. Ida McIntosh. A very fruitful three-day session resulted. Thomas E. Jordan and Howard L. Alexander were the official delegates representing the Crusaders supervised by Miss Verdie Davie. A special feature of the program was the official welcome ceremonies on Thursday night, with greetings from Dr. M. L. King Jr., Mrs. E. M. Arrington, C. T. Smiley, Mrs. Evelyn Lewis, and Miss Alfreda Dean and with music by the choir and by Miss Peggye Ann Taylor. A special reading was by Miss Evelyn Wysinger, with piano accompaniment by Miss Grenetta Ross. Meals were served daily in the dining room with the fine cooperation of the local Baptist churches. The praises for the hospitality shown on this occasion.

38b 1956 ALABAMA

REV. RUSSELL A. ROBERTS
ATLANTIC CITY, N.J.
MONTGOMERY, ALABAMA BUS BOYCOTT

Call P.1 Fri. 3-23-56 Kansas City Mo.

FASTING AND PRAYING.—The Rev. Russell A. Roberts, 32, pastor of the Shiloh Baptist church in Atlantic City, N. J., is shown as he approached the 48th hour of his "indefinite fasting" and "praying for all people." The minister told newsmen that "I'm praying for the unrest in the birthplace of the Prince of Peace in Israel, the tension in India and naturally the bus boycott in Alabama." He said that he would keep up his fasting and praying indefinitely and that he would stop "when I feel spiritually that something has happened." He said he will live on a quart of vegetable juice a day during the fast and he sleeps on an inflatable mattress in his church. —INS Photo.

Jersey Minister Begins Fast For Bus Boycotters

Call P.1 Kansas City, Mo. Fri. 3-23-56

Will Live On Vegetable Juice

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J. — (ANP) — The Rev. Russell A. Roberts, 37, pastor of the Shiloh Baptist church, launched a fast and prayer period last week in support of the Negro bus boycott in Montgomery, Ala., and vowed to stay in the pulpit "as long as God gives me strength."

The minister, a former boxer and sparring partner of onetime heavyweight champion Jersey Joe Walcott, put up a cot in his church and said he would live on a quart of vegetable juice a day.

Before starting his fast, Rev. Roberts sent this telegram to President Eisenhower:

"My fervent and prayerful hope is that you will lend the prestige of your great office to the struggle for dignity of the Christian men and women of Montgomery, Ala., speaking out in their behalf and thus in the interests of freedom and democracy."

Cleric ends bus boycott

Afro-American P.3 Sat. 3-31-56

fast virgil

Baltimore, Md.

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. — Rev. Russell Roberts, crusading pastor who submitted himself to the ravages of hunger for eleven days and nights to maintain a Ghandi-like fast in his pulpit, ended his vigil here Wednesday at midnight.

The Shiloh Baptist Church pastor had lived, slept, prayed and fasted in his pulpit "in sympathy with the bus boycott in Montgomery, Ala., and praying for the rights of all people."

Face emaciated, eyes set far back in his head, but still revealing an amazing energy, the minister told friends and church officials: "I have seen the vision I have been seeking and I have received a spiritual sign which will direct my future life."

HE WAS taken from the church to the parsonage. An hour after arriving home, the pastor collapsed, remaining unconscious for one hour

Dr. Harry Sweeney, his physician, said the clergyman had lost 15 pounds and had been under a terrific strain. His only daily nourishment has been a quart of vegetable juice.

Rev. Roberts was a former boxer and sparring mate of Jersey Joe Walcott. Concern of Shiloh Baptist Church members over their pastor's health had reached a climax when he concluded his fasting.

38b 1956 ALABAMA

ATTY. THURGOOD MARSHALL
BUS BOYCOTT. MONTGOMERY, ALA.

THESE MINISTERS are among 33 persons named in Grand Jury indictments charging them with violation of a law banning boycotts in Montgomery, Ala. Ministers, who are leading the bus boycott, were among those charged with persuading Negroes to stop riding city buses rather than take a back seat to whites. From left are: Rev. A. D. Abernathy of the First Baptist Church; Rev. Garner (who was not indicted); Rufus Lewis, manager of the Citizens Council; Rev. Leroy Bennett; Rev. W. F. Alford, Beulah Baptist church; Rev. J. I. Cherry, Jericho A. M. E. church; Rev. H. H. Herbert, Bethel Baptist church, and Eli Judkins.

Thurgood To Defend 90 Arrested In Boycott Case

Defender
Chicago, Ill. Apr. 3-3-56

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — Thurgood Marshall, one of the top constitutional lawyers in the country, who has seldom lost a civil rights case in U. S. courts, arrived in Montgomery Tuesday to "move-in" on the bus boycott case in which 90 Negroes have been arrested and indicted.

Marshall, general counsel for the NAACP, left New York after mobilizing all of the vast legal resources of the organization — the same organization that carried public school segregation cases before the U. S. Supreme Court and won.

The mass bus boycott — launched almost 90 days ago — has caused the arrest and indictment of at least 90 persons. Twenty-three of them are ministers. All are charged with conspiring, through the boycott, to injure the transit company's business. Under a 1929 Alabama law this is a misdemeanor.

All 90 defendants pleaded not guilty last Friday when they were arraigned. Marshall told the Defender he would take charge of their defense. A sizeable staff of NAACP administrative help also moved-in on Montgomery for the duration of the court fight which starts March 17. The NAACP has provided funds to pay bonds of those arrested.

The arrests of boycott leaders have seemingly cemented the resistance of Negroes against segregated seating on Montgomery busses. Friday, they observed a "total walking day" by shunning all motor vehicles.

It appeared 100 percent effective; Negroes walked to and from their jobs, with no demonstrations.

At a seven-hour "prayer meeting" that started about 3 p.m., and lasted until 7 p.m., Thursday approximately $2,500 was raised to further the boycott movement by 5,000 persons.

The boycott brought praise last week from Dr. Ralph J. Bunche, United Nations undersecretary-general and Nobel Prize winner. He said Negroes "are doing heroic work in the vineyards of democracy."

Dr. Bunche wired Rev. Martin Luther King, jr., a boycott leader arrested last week, that the Montgomery boycott and its attendant mass arrests provided "an inspiring chapter in the history of human dignity."

Defender

He urged the protesters "stand firm and united in the face of threats and resorts to police state methods of intimidation."

Meanwhile, Gov. James Folsom launched a bi-racial study of segregation problems in the state of Alabama.

Folsom, who has steered a moderate course between diametrically opposed groups favoring and opposing segregation, told leading Alabama editors, publishers and educators last week that he believes Alabama's traditional pattern of racial segregation would continue for "sometime to come."

NAACP Leader Warns Of Negro Vote Boycott

Evening Star Apr. 1-B
Washington, D.C.

Thurgood Marshall, chief counsel for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, declared here last night that no political party or candidate for President is going to get the first Negro vote until it does something that looks "awful close to civil rights."

The chief counsel of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People told a NAACP rally that nothing will deter his organization from its aggressive program for full desegregation in the United States.

Phila 3-12-56

He said tremendous advancement has been made in many places and some in Southern States. He urged the crowd not to lose heart.

If necessary, he asserted, the NAACP will "go underground" in the Southern States which, he said, are trying to outlaw his organization.

Mr. Marshall spoke at the Vermont Avenue Baptist Church to a crowd of Negroes which the sponsors estimated at 2,500. The rally was held primarily to raise money and increase the NAACP membership.

The attorney said all politicians would like to get rid of civil rights.

"Whether they like it or not," he said "civil rights is an issue. It was not made so by Negroes but by people in the South who set themescives above God and the law, by people who insist upon rule or ruin."

He bitterly criticized the State of Mississippi for what he called not bringing to justice those responsible for the killing of Emmett Till, the Chicago Negro boy, and for what he claimed was inaction in other Negro killings.

Blasts State and U. S. Authorities

He assailed Alabama authorities in conection with Montgomery bus boycott and the expulsion of Miss Autherine J. Lucy from the University of Alabama.

Likewise, he blasted the Federal Government for not prosecuting race cases. He said the Government has ample authority to act without getting any new legislation.

"It is high time the Attorney General did some traveling in this country," he said. "It is time to do something to protect the integrity of the United States Supreme Court when it is being attacked by every two-bit politician, from Senator Eastland (Mississippi Democrat) on down. And please pardon me for grading upward when I call them two-bit."

Mr. Marshall told the applauding crowd that he was unable to find the difference in a Democratic Party which is represented at the same time by Senator Eastland and Adlai Stevenson, the presidential aspirant.

"Somebody," he said, "has got to divorce somebody," adding that Mr. Stevenson could not expect to get his vote and Senator Eastland's, too.

Shuns Republicans Also

As for the Republicans, he said they cannot get his support until they do something within the power they already have.

He complained nobody does anything to check "hoodlums" and avowed opponents of the Supreme Court" in the South, but everyone wants the Negro to slow down, be patient and "take it easy."

He declared Negroes today are no more impatient than American citizens were at the time of the Revolution. He said if those citizens "had waited until Great Britain was ready to give them their freedom, we would be saying 'Hail to the Queen,' today."

Sixteen Ministers Among Leaders Arrested, Indicted

In Farmer Sat. 3-3-56 P. 1
Houston, Texas

MONTGOMERY — Thurgood Marshall, general counsel for the NAACP, announced over the week-end that the wholesale indictment of Negro leaders here caused the NAACP to marshal its forces, and him to plan to fly here Tuesday with a complete staff to take over.

Negroes' answer to the arrest and indictment of 100 of their leaders, including 16 ministers, is not onlly to continue the 90 per-cent-effective boycott, but to set aside a special day last week where Negroes would walk to their jobs and use no transportation.

The indicted leaders, most noticably the ministers, returned to their churches and communities and held service, advocating no violence on the part of Negroes, but a firm, dignified persistence in the boycott of buses until Negroes are treated more like human beings.

A contrast in the quiet, lawful way in which the Negroes are persecuting their cause begins to win friends all over the nation, and to attract favorable comment internationally.

On the other hand, the whites in Montgomery give every indication of panic and rashness of action. They are using the machinery of government in an effort to suppress the normal rights of the Negroes, in the hope of frightening them into abandoning the boycott.

As they are being met with calm indifference to indictments, threats, and other abuse, whites are finding themselves forced to go from one extreme violation of the law, in the use of the instruments of government, to another. Having begun, they do not know how to stop the illegal uses of the laws and their facilities for government and orderly operation of communities.

THE LAWLESS CHAIN

The lawless chain of events began December 5, when Mrs Rosa Parker was arrested for refusing to give up her seat in the bus to a white passenger. From a fine, she appealed to the circuit court in Montgomery.

In protest the Negro leaders demanded that the bus company and the city adopt the rule that both white and colored begin to fill up the seats from the front and rear of the bus, respectively, and to fill up the seats until there are no more. Then whoever came in would stand, whether white or colored. They decided not to ride the buses until that request was granted and the bus company instructed its drivers to treat Negroes with courtesy and decency, and hired Negro bus drivers on buses serving mostly Negroes.

At first the city officials treated the Negroes' boycott with scorn. Then as it continued, they became alarmed and the bus company went to the City Council and asked for a sharp (50 per cent) increase in rates, giving as its ground the great shrinkage in travel, due to the boycott. The City Council granted the increase in rates, but the bus company is reported to still be in pinched conditions.

Some of the cool heads attempted to work out compromises. One of the last posed was that Negroes have 50 per cent of the bus, and the whites have the other 50 per cent. This was rejected as not practical nor sensible. So the whites went to the not uncommon practice of using the instruments of government to lynch the rights of the Negro citizens of Montgomery.

The grand jury, instructed by the same Circuit Judge Eugene Carter, to whose court Mr Parks had appealed from the fine in the lower court, and the same judge who on Thursday denied her appeal and sentenced her to 14 days in jail, instructed the grand jury "to investigate the illegality of boycotting the buses."

DRAGS OUT OLD LAW

The grand jury dug up a law 35 years old, admittedly enacted to get after men accused of taking labor from the South to the North and never used in any other case except labor cases, to bring in the 100-odd indictments against Negroes, on the ground that they were boycotting the buses illegally.

OTHER INTIMIDATIONS

Attorney Fred D Gray was indicted about a week before, on the charge that one of the five plaintiffs, seeking to declare the city and the state segregation laws illegal in a federal case, had not given her consent to the filing of the suit. Also Attorney Gray's appeal, on his having been classified as 1-A in the draft, was turned down last week by the draft board. Attorney Gray's ground for seeking deferred classification is based upon the fact that he is an assistant pastor of a church.

All of those indicted, including Attorney Gray, were fingerprinted and forced to put up individual bonds in the amount of $300.

In the meantime, the case in the federal court goes on and the city attorneys have filed answer.

Trials under the indictments are scheduled to start March 19. Possible penalties are $1000 fine and a maximum of six months in jail, if guilty.

In the meantime, efforts to compromise go on. Some white merchants are trying to persuade Negro leaders to accept the compromise of the 50-50 bus division. One such merchant is said to have predicted that settlement would be accepted Monday and the boycott would be over.

But it is hardly conceivable that the boycott can end now with all of these indictments out against the leadership of the Negroes, unless the indictments are dismissed.

Here in this capital of Alabama the battle between passive resistance and dictatorial use of the instruments of government, to destroy the will and the rights of the people, are locked in battle. Whether either will give before things break loose, or whether a compromise can be found before violence takes over, is a jumble that lies on the lap of the gods.

Conviction Here May Bring Test For Bus Barrier

Advertiser
Tues. 12-6-55
P. 1

By JOE AZBELL
Advertiser City Editor

The conviction of Rosa Parks, 42, 634 Cleveland Ave., Negro seamstress at a department store here, may cause a court test on segregation of Negroes and whites on Montgomery buses.

Montgomery, Ala.

The Negro woman was fined $10 and costs in Recorder's Court yesterday for violating a state law requiring racial segregation on city buses.

Thousands of Negroes boycotted city buses yesterday and only about 5 to 10 per cent of the Negroes who normally ride the buses broke the boycott. The boycott reflected an "economic reprisal" in protest of the arrest.

APPEAL DECISION

Fred D. Gray, Negro attorney, told Judge John B. Scott he would appeal the decision of the court to Montgomery Circuit Court. The move apparently was intended as the first step in testing the constitutionality of transportation segregation laws in this Cradle of the Confederacy.

Signing the $100 appeal bond for the woman were E. D. Nixon of Montgomery, a former state NAACP president and Gray.

Gray entered a plea of innocent for his client. The woman did not testify. Assisting Gray was another Negro attorney, Charles Langford.

The entire hearing consumed only about five minutes. City Prosecutor Eugene Loe called bus driver J. F. Blake to tell how Rosa Parks refused to leave a seat in the white section and move to the Negro section in the rear last Thursday night. Blake said he asked the Negro woman and other Negro passengers to move to the rear of the bus but the Parks woman refused to leave her seat.

EQUALIZE SEATING

Blake said there were 22 Negroes and 14 whites seated in the 36-seat bus. He sought to equalize the seating, he said, by asking some of the Negroes to move to the rear.

Loe asked Judge Scott to amend the complaint against the Parks woman to make the warrant read a violation of the state law instead of the city ordinance. Gray objected but Judge Scott allowed the amendment.

The state law sets forth as illegal the failure by any person to comply with the assignment or reassignment order of a bus driver to enforce separate facilities for the white and Negro races.

Gray objected that the state law was not a city law and could not pertain to his client. Loe replied the state law covered all transportation.

Passed by the Legislature in 1947, the state statute authorizes bus companies to provide and enforce separate facilities for White and Negro races. Viilation is punishable by a maximum fine of $500.

It was understood that Gray intended to attack the law as unconstitutional but he declined to say specifically. He said that he intended to use "every legal issue to defend my client."

CALM AND QUIET

The court hearing was calm and quiet, and at times witnesses were almost inaudible as they spoke.

The steps leading into the north side of the courtroom and the sidewalk, along with the corridors leading into the east entrance of the courtroom, all were jammed with spectators and witnesses.

Meanwhile, Montgomery City Lines Manager J. H. Bagley yesterday afternoon estimated that some 90 per cent of the Negroes were refusing to ride the buses in protest of the hearing.

The boycott was uncovered Friday after thousands of unsigned circulars were reportedly being spread throughout the Negro districts in Montgomery.

ONE INCIDENT

Advertiser

Acting upon the orders of Police Commissioner Clyde Sellers that there was to be no violence yesterday patrolmen arrested a 19-year-old Negro youth who allegedly tried to restrain a Negro woman from getting on one of the morning buses.

P. 6-H

Fred Daniel, 19, of 1646 Hall St., was jailed on a charge of disorderly conduct, according to Police Chief G. J. Ruppenthal. Arresting Patrolmen R. M. Hammonds and C. A. Weaver said Daniel grabbed a Negro woman by the arm about 7:15 a.m. at the intersection of Hall and Thurman and pulled her away from a City Lines bus she was attempting to board.

NEGRO TAXI CABS BUSY

All Negro taxi cab operators in the city reportedly told their drivers to charge only 10 cents a head yesterday from the hours 4 a.m. to 9 a.m. and from 3 p.m. until 11 p.m. in an effort to make the bus boycott effective.

Several buses seen on downtown streets carried nothing but white passengers from front to rear.

Several thousand Negroes use the buses on a normal day.

Police cars and motorcycles followed the buses periodically to prevent trouble after Sellers said some Negroes reported they were threatened with violende if they rode buses yesterday.

A mass meeting of Negroes was scheduled last night at the Holt Street Baptist Church to discuss "further instructions" in the "economic reprisal" campaign against the Montgomery City Bus Lines.

The circulars distributed in Negro residential districts Saturday urging the boycott yesterday in protest to the arrest of Rosa Parks were not signed. The Rev. A. W. Wilson, pastor of the Negro church where the meeting is to be held, said he would not disclose "under any circumstances" the names of those who asked permission to use the church for the meeting.

He said the meeting was open to Whites as well as Negroes.

Earlier, Bagley had issued a statement saying the bus company "is sorry if anyone expects us to be exempt from any state or city law."

In the Rosa Parks case yesterday, the city was prepared to offer testimony from 11 witnesses. Only three, Blake and two women passengers testified. One of the women said there was an empt seat where Rosa Parks could have sat if she had moved to the rear.

As the boycott started yesterday morning, Negroes stood on downtown street corners waiting for rides or piled into taxicabs. Many walked two or three miles to work in the crisp cold weather.

Most Negro children walked to school and there was a relay auto pickup system operating throughout most of the day.

"The Montgomery City Lines is sorry if anyone expects us to be exempt from any state or city law. We are sorry that the colored people blame us for any state or city ordinance which we didn't have passed.

"We have to obey all lasw just like any other citizen. We had nothing to dow with the laws being passed, but we expect to abide by all laws, city or state, to the best of our ability."

Bagley said he first learned of the circulars today when a woman informed him her maid had brought one of the circulars to work with her. Beagley said he immediately went to the woman's house and obtained the circular and turned the matter over to the firm's attorney, Jack Crenshaw.

Rosa Parks will be represented by Negro Atty. Fred D. Gray, the same lawyer who represented Claudette Colbert, a 15-year-old similar charge several months ago. The young Negro girl was palced on "Indefinite probation" by Juvenile Court Judge Wiley Hill JR.

Circulars Ask Negro Boycott On City Lines

Advertiser
Tues. 12-4-55
P. 1

Unsigned circulars urging Negroes to boycott the Montgomery City Lines Bus Co. Monday—the date of a bus segregation hearing in city court—reportedly were being passed out here yesterday.

The mimmiographed circulars ask all Negroes to "stay off the buses on Monday in protest of the arrest and trial."

This was in reference to Thursday night's arrest of Rosa Parks, who was charged with refusing to accept a seta ssigned to her by Montgomery City Lines bus driver J. F. Blake.

Montgomery

ACCORDING TO RACE

She was charged under Section 11, Chapter 6 of the Montgomery City Code, a section giving bus drivers "police powers" in assigning seats "according to race."

Ala.

J. H. Bagley, manager of the bus company, issued this statement after learing of the circulars:

"The Montgomery City Lines is sorry if anyone expects us to be exempt from any state or city law. We are sorry that the colored people blame us for any state or city ordinance which we didn't have passed.

"We have to obey all lasw just like any other citizen. We had nothing to dow with the laws being passed, but we expect to abide by all laws, city or state, to the best of our ability."

Bagley said he first learned of the circulars today when a woman informed him her maid had brought one of the circulars to work with her. Beagley said he immediately went to the woman's house and obtained the circular and turned the matter over to the firm's attorney, Jack Crenshaw.

Rosa Parks will be represented by Negro Atty. Fred D. Gray, the same lawyer who represented Claudette Colbert, a 15-year-old similar charge several months ago. The young Negro girl was palced on "Indefinite probation" by Juvenile Court Judge Wiley Hill JR.

BOYCOTT BY NEGROES IS REPORTED SUCCESS

Appeal
Tues. 12-6-55

Action Against Buses Called 90 Per Cent Effective

SPECIAL RATES BY CABS

P. 12

By GLENN ANTHONY
United Press Staff Writer

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Dec. 5. —Negroes protesting the arrest and conviction of a Negro seamstress who refused to take a seat in a segregated bus area staged a boycott against city buses Monday that was pronounced "nearly 90 per cent effective."

Memphis

City buses ordinarily crowded in the early morning with Negro workmen, domestics and schoolchildren were left largely to white passegers Monday.

Lexington

Six Instead Of 250

Negroes walked, rode private cars and hired taxicabs to get to work and school. Attendance at Negro school. Attendance at Negro schools was reported almost normal, but school officials said nearly all of the children walked or came by car.

Negro taxicabs companies offered a special rate of 10-cents per person during the early morning and late afternoon rush hours.

One bus driver, S. E. Moseley, reported that in three hours he picked up only six Negro passengers when normally he would carry about 250. Mr. Moseley said one Negro woman who boarded his bus was peered and nooed by a group of Negroes.

In the only disturbance reported in the boycott, a 19-year-old Negro youth, Fred Daniel, was charged with disorderly conduct for allegedly catching a Negro woman by the arm and pulling her from a bus she attempted to board.

Seatstress Is Fined

The boycott was believed to be one of the largest and most effective "economic reprisals" by either race in recent years in the segregated South.

The immediate cause of the boycott, seamstress Rosa Parks, 42, was fined $10 in Recorder's Court Monday. She was arrested by a bus driver acting under special police authority given to bus drivers under the city code.

The driver said the woman refused to move to a Negro section of the bus. A passenger testified there was a vacant seat in the Negro section to which she could have moved.

Don't ride the bus to work, to town, to school, or any place Monday December 5.

Advertiser

Another Negro woman has been arrested and put in jail because she refused to give up her bus seat.

Tues. 12-6-55

Don't ride the buses to work to town, to school, or any where on Monday. If you work, take a cab, or share a ride, or walk.

P. 6-d

Come to a mass meeting, Monday at 7:00 P.M. at the Holt Street Baptist Church for [illegible]

Montgomery, Ala.

CIRCULAR URGING BUS BOYCOTT

This is one of the thousands of circulars which were distributed over the weekend in Montgomery in a boycott program against Montgomery City Lines buses. Ninety per cent of the Negroes who normally ride city buses found other means of transportation yesterday as the boycott was declared a "success" by Negro leaders.

90 Pct. of Negro Riders Ban Buses in Montgomery

Constitution

Tues. 12-6-55

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Dec. 5 (AP)—Negroes boycotted the city bus system today to protest the conviction of a seamstress who refused to take a Jim Crow seat.

The demonstration was called "90 per cent effective."

P. 2

City buses ordinarily crowded in the early morning with Negro workmen, domestics and schoolchildren were left largely to white passengers today.

Atlanta, Ga.

Negroes walked, rode private cars and hired taxicabs to get to work and school. Attendance at Negro schools was reported almost normal, but school officials said nearly all of the children walked or came by car.

SPECIAL CAB RATE

Negro taxicab companies offered a special rate of 10 cents per person during the early morning and late afternoon rush hours.

One bus driver, S. E. Moseley, reported that in three hours he picked up only six Negro passengers when normally he would carry about 250. Moseley said one Negro woman who boarded his bus was jeered and booed by a group of Negroes.

In the only disturbance reported in the boycott, a 19-year-old Negro youth, Fred Daniel, was charged with disorderly conduct for allegedly catching a Negro woman by the arm and pulling her from a bus she attempted to board.

"ECONOMIC REPRISAL"

The boycott was believed to be one of the largest and most effective "economic reprisals" by either race in recent years in the segregated South.

The boycott apparently was called for only one day, but a mass meeting was reported scheduled for a Negro church tonight for "further instructions" in the demonstration.

The immediate cause of the boycott, seamstress Rosa Parks, 42, was fined $10 in recorder's court today. She was arrested by a bus driver acting under special police authority given to bus drivers under the city code.

The driver said the woman refused to move to a Negro section of the bus. A passenger testified there was a vacant seat in the Negro section to which she could have moved.

SEATS BY LAW

State and city ordinances require segregation of bus passengers. The city code gives bus drivers the responsibility to "assign or re-assign passengers to sections of the bus so as to separate the races."

Montgomery city buses use folding metal signs over the seats to mark Negro and white sections.

The woman's brief trial was held in a crowded courtroom, filled mainly with Negroes, and a large group of Negroes stood outside. She was convicted of violating state segregation laws.

Her attorney, Negro Fred Gray, immediately filed notice of appeal and signed a $100 appeal bond for his client.

Negroes Boycott Buses In Protesting Arrest

Courier-Journal

Tues. 12-6-55

Montgomery Segregation Law May Be Tested After Woman Is Fined $14 for Not Moving

Louisville, Ky.

By The Associated Press

P. 1

Montgomery, Ala., Dec. 5.—An emotional crowd of Negroes voted tonight to continue a boycott of city buses as the threat of a court test of segregated transportation facilities loomed.

A throng estimated by police at 5,000 roared approval when Negro leaders urged that the bus boycott that started this morning be extended.

Thousands of Negroes who normally use the buses refused to ride them, protesting the arrest of Mrs. Rosa Parks. She was fined $14 in Police Court today for disregarding a driver's order to move to the rear of the bus last Thursday.

Crowd Sings Hymns

Negro passengers, under a municipal segregation ordinance, ride in the rear of buses here, white passengers in front.

Spokesmen at the meeting said the boycott would continue until people who ride buses are no longer "intimidated, embarrassed, and coerced."

They said a delegation of citizens is ready to help city and bus-line officials develop a satisfactory and equitable program.

The hymn-singing crowd overflowed the Negro church where the meeting was held and thronged the streets outside.

Bullet Does Little Damage

Manager J. H. Bagley of the Montgomery City Bus Lines said a bullet from a .22-caliber rifle hit the rear of a bus tonight in a Negro business and residential district. It did little damage.

The boycott was organized after circulars were distributed in Negro residential areas urging "economic reprisal" against the bus company.

Mrs. Parks appealed her $14 fine and was released under a $100 bond signed by Negro attorney Fred Gray and a former state president of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, E. D. Nixon.

Gray and Charles Langford, another Negro lawyer representing the 42-year-old department-store seamstress, refused to say whether they plan to attack the constitutionality of the segregation laws affecting public transportation.

Charge Is Changed

No hearing on the appeal has been set in Circuit Court.

The Supreme Court in Washington already has before it a test case against segregation on buses operating in Columbia, S. C. The United States Circuit Court of Appeals in Richmond, Va., has ruled in this case that segregation must be ended. If the Supreme Court sustains the decision, the effect will be to outlaw segregation in all states and cities.

Mrs. Parks was first charged with violating a City ordinance that gives bus drivers police powers to enforce racial segregation. But at the request of City Attorney Eugene Loe the warrant was amended in court today to charge violation of a similar State law.

Passed by the Legislature in 1947, the State statute authorizes bus companies to provide and enforce separate facilities for white and Negro races. Violation is punishable by a maximum fine of $500.

80 or 90 Pct. Boycott Buses

Even though Mrs. Parks was fined for violating the State law, a section of the City code provides that any violation of State law is automatically a violation of the City law if a companion ordinance exists.

The bus line is operated by a subsidiary of National City Lines at Chicago.

Manager Bagley estimated 80 or 90 per cent of the Negroes who normally use the buses joined the boycott. He said several thousand members of the race ride the buses on a normal day.

One Negro was arrested on a disorderly conduct charge after officers said he tried forcibly to prevent a Negro woman from boarding a bus.

Montgomery Bus Situation Same

Herald
Fri. 12-30-55

MONTGOMERY, Ala. —(SNS)— The refuse-to-ride campaign ignited over alleged mistreatment on the Montgomery City Lines moved into its 26th day with no signs of settlement in sight.

The stay-off-the-buses action was touched off by the Dec. 1 arrest and Dec. 5 conviction of Mrs. Rosa Parks under the Montgomery move-back segregation laws.

Meantime in a half-page ad in The Montgomery Advertiser-Journal last Sunday, Dec. 25 the protest leaders called attention to alleged "bitter experiences of our people who have, at various times, been pushed around, embarrassed, threatened, intimidated and abused in a manner that has caused the meekest to rise in resentment.' '

Herald Tribune

The statement was signed by "The Negro Ministers of Montgomery and Their Congregations; The Methodist Ministerial Alliance, the Rev. J. W. Hayes, president; The Baptist Ministers Conference, the Rev. H. H. Hubbard, president and the Rev. R. D. Abernathy, secretary; The Inter-Denominational Ministerial Alliance, the Rev. L. Roy Bennett, president and the Rev. J. C. Parker, secretary; and, The Montgomery Improvement Association, Dr. M. L. King, Jr., president and the Rev. U. J. Fields, secretary.

Meanwhile the seventh in a series of twice-weekly informational mass meetings was scheduled for Day Street Baptist Church pastored by the Rev. M. C. Cleveland.

The protest statement listed seven general complaints, namely, lack of courteous treatment (2) seating arrangement, (3) arrests, (4) two fares (5) making change, (6) passing up passengers and (7) physical torture.

The group is asking for (1) "assurance of more courtesy be extended the bus-riders, (2) that seating Arrangements be on a "first come, first served" basis and that 'Negro bus drivers be employed on the bus lines serving predominantly Negro areas."

'At no time," the statement said, "have the participants of this movement advocated or anticipated violence.' It added that "this is a movement of passive resistance, depending on moral and spiritual forces."

"There has not been any coercion on the part of any leader to force any one to stay off the buses." It suggested "the rising tide of resentment has resulted in a vast majority of the people staying off the buses willingly and voluntarily."

In a lengthy letter to The Montgery Advertiser, Dec. 28, a person who signed as "Robert H. Wilmer Birmingham, Ala., complained about the paid-advertisement statement and also charged that "You (THE ADVERTISER) give more space to letters from Negro preachers and a few white people who don't seem to realize the seriousness of what is happening, than you do to the solid opinon of the community."

The Wilmer letter said the writer "talked with dozens on the subject some of them colored friends. Without an exception the rank and file of the white are definitely against it ,and nine out of ten Negroes don't know what it is about and are simply terrorized."

"If there was ever a time in Montgomery when sane, responsible Negro leadership is needed it is now. Where are those Negro leaders who have prosperous businesses and have found Montgomery a place of friendship and cooperation among both races?" the Wilmer letter asked.

The Wilmer letter said, "one man, A Rev. King (he holds a Phd., from Boston University and is pastor of downtown Dexter Avenue Baptist Church), has been quoted over and over as calling different people' unfair."

(It has been rumored that the upper-hand leadership in Montgomery has tried to get some of the other civic leaders to repudiated Rev. King. Instead, it is said, this has driven these leaders to support him more steadfastly.)

(In Birmingham, reporters checked "Polk's Birmingham City Directory, 1956'" but did not find the name "Robert H. Wilmer' listed in it. Nor was it listed in the telephone directory."

Civic leaders here said that they would like to see Mayor W. A. Gayle attend one of the mass meetings and put any proposal he had before the group's leadership. However this leader said he was not speaking for the authorized spokesmen.

The city bus lines officials have announced that all bus service will be suspended for one day Sunday, Jan. 1 because of the fall-off in patronage. Services had been halted for Dec. 25-26 because of the same circumstance.

Montgomery Leaders Hold 3rd Meet On Bus Situation

Daily Tribune
Fri. 12-16-55

BY EMORY O. JACKSON

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — Civic leaders were scheduled last night to hold the third in a series of citizens mass meetings at First Baptist Church pastored by the Rev. R. D. Abernethy to discuss developments and plans in the 14-day-old boycott of the Montgomery City Bus Lines, an affiliate of the National Transit Lines of Chicago, Ill.

1. Civic leaders said that they expected to discuss their grievances with a representative of the National Transit Lines on Wednesday, Dec. 14.

2. A mass meeting was held Monday night, Dec. 12 at Bethel Baptist Church pastored by the Rev. H. H. Hubbard to discuss transportation aid machinery. Spokesmen for the mass meeting said that over 200 automobile owners had volunteered to use their cars free to help assist persons needing unprovided transit service.

3. W. C. Patton, of Birmingham, state NAACP field secretary, said that he was scheduled to meet with the executive committee of the Montgomery Branch NAACP to get a first-hand account of the situation.

4. The organized leadership has not said whether they plan to prepare for a legal test of the bus segregation laws. No discussion has been heard on anything touching directly on a proposed court assault on the passenger laws.

Meantime, the Montgomery Improvement Association headed by Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., erudite pastor of famed Dexter Avenue Baptist Church, issued the following prepared statement:

STATEMENT OF NEGRO CITIZENS ON BUS SITUATION

"We have heretofore stated the position of the Negro Citizens of Montgomery with reference to the local bus situation. As good citizens we want to comply with the law until the law is changed or is overruled. However, we feel that we have the right to insist that the law be fairly administered.

"In answer to our request that the Montgomery City Lines adopt a policy of loading buses from rear to front with colored passengers and from front to rear with white passengers and that all passengers be permitted to retain their seats on a "first come—first served" basis, with reservation of seats for any particular race, the bus company contends that such an arrangement would be in violation of the law and particularly the Act of July 1, 1947, (General Acts of Alabama, 1947, No. 130, Page 40.)

"In answer to this contention we would like to call attention to the pertinent provision of Section 1 of that Act, which reads as follows:

"Section 1. All passenger stations in this state operated by or for the use of any motor transportation company shall be authorized to provide separate waiting rooms, facilities, or space or separate ticket windows, for the white and colored races but such accommodations for the races shall be equal. All motor transportation companies and operators of vehicles, carrying passengers for hire in this state, whether intrastate or interstate passengers, are authorized and empowered to provide separate accommodations of each vehicle for the white and colored races. Any officer or agent of such motor transportation company or operator, in charge of any vehicle is authorized to assign each passenger or person to a division, section or seat on the vehicle designated by such company or operator or by such officer or agent for the race to which the passenger or person belongs..."

"We believe that this Act was not intended to apply to buses operating within a single municipality, but only to those under the jurisdiction of the Alabama Public Service Commission. However, it should be noted that under the provisions quoted the method of handling the seating of passengers is left entirely to the transportatiton companies themselves. They are authorized and empowered to provide separate accommodations but are not directed or required to take any action whatsoever.

"The Legislature, it seems clear, wisely left it up to the transportation companies to work out the seating problem in a reasonable and practical way, subject to the limitations of reasonableness and equality of treatment to all passengers, regardless of race.

"It should be further noted that even under the City Code of Montgomery (Chapter 6, Section 10 and 11) no person, white or colored, can be required to give up a seat unless there is a vacant seat in the portion of the bus to which the passenger is assigned.

"We feel that there is no issue between the Negro citizens and the Montgomery City Lines that cannot be solved by negotiations between people of good will and we submit that there is no legal barrier tot such negotiations."

Says Law On Boycott Would Work Both Ways

Daily World
Atlanta, Ga.
Wed. 12-28-55

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — Citing a state stature against boycotts, the Montgomery ADVERTISER noted, in a recent editorial, that if the law applies to Negroes who refused to ride the city buses because of Jim Crow practices "it would apply with equal force to some of the economic sanctions against Negroes contemplated by White Citizens Councils. It would seem to work both ways."

The law, the constitutionality of which The ADVERTISER questions, forbids the arguments for the purpose of conducting boycotts and also fordis the publication and circulation of "any notice of boycott."

According to THE ADVERTISER, "The perpetrators of the bus situation distributed mimeographed leaflet asking other Negroes not to ride. But if they are guilty of breaking the law which seems to usa a restriction on free speech—the proposal of the White Citizens Councils (in Dallas County, for instance) to keep a list of Negroes suspected of advocating race mixing would seem to violate" the section of th law which forbids blacklisting.

THE ADVERTISER has expressed opposition to boycotts by either group. The present bus boycott, the newspaper asserts, "makes an innocent sufferer of the bups company The quarrel of the Negroes is with the LAW. It is wrong to hold the company a hostage."

Montgomery Bus Situation Same

Daily World p. 2
Atlanta, Ga.

MONTGOMERY, Ala. —(SNS)— The refuse-to-ride campaign ignited over alleged mistreatment on the Montgomery City Lines moved into its 26th day with no signs of settlement in sight. 12-30-55

The stay-off-the-buses action was touched off by the Dec. 1 arrest and Dec. 5 conviction of Mrs. Rosa Parks under the Montgomery move-back segregation laws.

Meantime in a half-page ad in The Montgomery Advertiser-Journal last Sunday, Dec. 25 the protest leaders called attention to alleged "bitter experiences of our people who have, at various times. been pushed around, embarrassed, threatened, intimidated and abused in a manner that has caused the meekest to rise in resentment.' '

The statement was signed by "The Negro Ministers of Montgomery and Their Congregations; The Methodist Ministerial Alliance, the Rev. J. W. Hayes, president; The Baptist Ministers Conference, the Rev. H H. Hubbard, president and the Rev. R. D Abernathy, secretary; The Inter-Denominational Ministerial Alliance, the Rev. L. Roy Bennett, president and the Rev. J. C. Parker, secretary; and, The Montgomery Improvement Association. Dr M. L King, Jr., president and the Rev. U. J. Fields secretary.

Meanwhile the seventh in a series of twice-weekly informational mass meetings was scheduled for Day Street Baptist Church pastored by the Rev. M. C. Cleveland.

The protest statement listed seven general complaints, namely, lack of courteous treatment (2) seating arrangement, (3) arrests. (4) two fares (5) making change, (6) passing up passengers and (7) physical torture.

The group is asking for (1) "assurance of more courtesy be extended the bus-riders, (2) that seating Arrangements be on a "first come, first served" basis and that 'Negro bus drivers be employed on the bus lines serving predominantly Negro areas."

'At no time," the statement said. "have the participants of this movement advocated or anticipated violence.' It added that "this is a movement of passive resistance, depending on moral and spiritual forces."

"There has not been any coercion on the part of any leader to force any one to stay off the buses." It suggested "the rising tide of resentment has resulted in a vast majority of the people staying off the buses willingly and voluntarily."

In a lengthy letter to The Montgery Advertiser, Dec. 28, a person who signed as "Robert H. Wilmer, Birmingham, Ala., complained about the paid-advertisement statement and also charged that "You (THE ADVERTISER) give more space to letters from Negro preachers and a few white people who don't seem to realize the seriousness of what is happening, than you do to the solid opinon of the community."

The Wilmer letter said the writer "talked with dozens on the subject some of them colored friends. Without an exception the rank and file of the white are definitely against it ,and nine out of ten Negroes don't know what it is about and are simply terrorized."

"If there was ever a time in Montgomery when sane, responsible Negro leadership is needed it is now. Where are those Negro leaders who have prosperous businesses and have found Montgomery a place of friendship and cooperation among both races?" the Wilmer letter asked.

The Wilmer letter said, "one man, A Rev. King (he holds a Phd., from Boston University and is pastor of downtown Dexter Avenue Baptist Church), has been quoted over and over as calling different people' unfair."

(It has been rumored that the upper-hand leadership in Montgomery has tried to get some of the other civic leaders to repudiated Rev. King. Instead, it is said, this has driven these leaders to support him more steadfastly.)

(In Birmingham, reporters checked "Polk's Birmingham City Directory, 1956'" but did not find the name "Robert H Wilmer' listed in it. Nor was it listed in the telephone directory."

Civic leaders here said that they would like to see Mayor W. A. Gayle attend one of the mass meetings and put any proposal he had before the group's leadership. However this leader said he was not speaking for the authorized spokesmen.

The city bus lines officials have announced that all bus service will be suspended for one day Sunday.

The Tip-Off

Daily World
Fri. 12-23-55 p. 13

BY EMORY O. JACKSON

It took an incident on a bus, specifically, the arrest of Mrs. Rosa Parks, a fine, ,up-minded, meek-mannered, Christian woman to fire up and solidize the total leadership of the group in Montgomery, Ala.

This point is stressed at the twice-a-week community pep rallies in Montgomery, the "Cradle of the Old Confederacy" and the prospective new ground of a fresh quality of Democracy.

Atlanta, Ga.

History has a way of re-making itself in localized, present-day events

The birth of the Christ Child was opposed by a king nearly 2,000 years ago. The birth of a new dignity for a segment of the population in Montgomery is opposed today by the ruling hand. The Montgomery story and the Bethlehem story are centuries apart but close enough to tie in with humanity.

The Rev. Martin Luther King, Jr., a Baptist minister, helping to give the protest the spiritual direction, the sense of mission, the idealism which it needs. He says that "our weapons are protest and love." In reminding the followship that love will win, he often tells the story of how Mahatma Gandhi, the emaciated emancipator, liberated India with his non-violence campaign.

What he seems to be trying to do is to find a suitable adaptation of the Gandhi philosophy and method and apply it to the Montgomery problem. So far there has been a blend of protest and purchasing power. The issue spotlighted is that of mistreatment, Racial segregation seems to breed racial mistreatment. Keep this in mind.

Attend one of the informational mass meetings and you come away with a feeling that the leaders know what they want, how to go after it, and the price they will have to pay to get it. All of the leaders speak the same language, even if the tone, emphasis and color varies. One speaker summed up the goal when he said, "We are sacrificing that you may sit where you please" on the transit buses.

One minister pointed out that this was the first time in this pre-Civil War city that the ministers of all denominations had come together as one in a cause like this. Injustice inflicts a hurt on humanity. The churches are made freedom stations. Another minister declared, "We are able to carry this thing on for 12 months." That is the pulpit talking and the pulpit is power.

Ministers relish the fact that something has come along which is "throwing the ministers together." They are learning of each other; loving each other; understanding each other; sensing each other's strength. This type of spirit is seeping down through the followers.

Dr. King has called on the people not to get weary. He reminds them that "Negroes were born walking." He relates a number of walking stories. "We were raised walking," he reminds them. "Walking is nothing new . . . walking never hurts us." He told of the long distances some still had to walk to get to school. He might also have pointed out that Jesus Christ was described as a vigorous walker.

The walking stories seem to borrow something from the Gandhi program of sacrifice.

The eloquent Rev. King in a flush of oratory told a gathering on Dec. 15 that "we are going to fight until we take the heart out of Dixie." Heart of Dixie is the symbol of Jim Crow, it seems to me.

Usually at this season of the year I try to do a column in the spirit of Christmas. Yet the Montgomery story had to become my Christmas column. Merry Christmas to all.

COMPROMISE URGED IN RACIAL DISPUTE

Commercial Appeal p. 2

Committee Fails To Get Truce In Bus Boycott

Sun. 12-18-55

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Dec. 17. — (AP) — Another conference seeking a truce in the 14-day racial segregation boycott by Negroes of city lines buses failed Saturday.

A committee of eight Negro members couldn't get together on a resolution to postpone the boycott until Jan. 15, after the Christmas and New Year's holidays.

Negro members voted solidly against calling off the demonstration until they get some assurance that officials of the Montgomery City Lines, Inc., will meet their demands.

Rev. M. L. King, pastor of the Sexter Avenue Baptist Church and president of the Montgomery Improvement Association which is spearheading the campaign, said his group still insists that the bus company:

1. Assure more courtesy on the part of bus drivers toward Negro patrons.

2. Establish a seating policy of "first come, first serve" with Negroes filling seats from the rear to the front and white people from the front to the rear.

3. Employ Negro bus drivers on predominantly Negro routes.

Mayor W. A. Gayle named a committee to work up resolutions seeking to compromise the differences. After the resolution calling for a four-week truce failed, the group agreed to meet again Monday for another try.

K. E. Totten, Chicago, vice president of the National City Lines, holder of the Montgomery franchise, sat in on the conference.

5,000 Voice Support of Bus Boycott

DIXIE'S "NEW LOOK"—Bitter crowds, who perhaps for the first time are really sticking together to fight just one of Montgomery's (Ala.) racial injustices, are "packed to the ceiling" in the Holt Street Baptist Church in a busline boycott meeting. This crowd boiled after 42-year-old Rosa Parks, "a seamstress and churchgoer" was convicted for "disorderly conduct" on a bus segregation violation charge. Alabama laws require Negroes to stand even though the "white seats" may be unoccupied, and are often forced to get up out of "colored seats" if the bus is crowded and a white patron wishes to take a "colored seat."

PUTTING A FOOT DOWN—An irate crowd of nearly five thousand Negroes in Montgomery, Ala., tried to get into the Holt Street Baptist Church in support of the city-wide boycott against the Montgomery city buses. The group voted to ask all citizens of Montgomery to refrain from riding buses until the transportation situation clears up to the "satisfaction of citizens" who ride and patronize them. Many stood outside, unable to enter the church. The Rev. M. L. King, pastor of the Dexter Avenue Baptist Church, told the crowd "We must stick together and work together if we are to win our rights as Americans."

The Tip-Off

BY EMORY O. JACKSON

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — (SNS) - Counter moves, in the form of a warning from the Montgomery City Hall to taxicab operators, about fare regulations have gone out.

This should, then, also be an excellent opportunity to check into taxicab regulations to see whether they hug the law closely in other ways. Passenger hauling on a restricted basis and parking privileges at the bus and train terminals look odd to a visitor.

Taxicabs apparently were picking up some of the slack growing out of the riders rebellion which started Dec. 5. Particular incident setting off the drift away in Negro bus riding was the arrest packing away to jail, and subsequent trial and conviction of Mrs. Rosa Parks, an upstanding, civic-minded, church-working woman of attractive character.

She was seated in a bus when the driver reportedly asked that she remove herself so that a male white passenger who had boarded the bus at a later time could slide into the seat she held. Mrs. Parks is said to have disobeyed his request, which under Montgomery segregation, and the circumstances, was an infringement upon the bus racial ordinances.

What seems to have cut the feelings of the group to the quick was the alleged administration of the bus law. Civic leaders charged that Mrs. Parks was humiliated more by the manner of executing the law than by the law itself. The core issue seems to be that of treatment under the segregation laws. Keep that in mind.

After reported shooting and throwing of bricks into buses traveling routes in densely Negro areas, the bus company halted services in this area. This perhaps aided the alleged boycott by the group. Substitute service was provided by the community leaders, with taxicabs fattening on the traffic.

About one week after the boycott, city officials cracked down on so-called "cut-rate taxicabs." Cabs licensed to haul Negro persons reportedly were hauling passengers at 10 cents a head, in violation of city law. (The city laws also require that cabs specify whether they will haul Negro or white passengers exclusively). Montgomery law requires a minimum 45 cent fare.

Whether bus or taxicab, the segregation law controls.

If the stay-off of the buses by Negro riders is a boycott, then, it too is an infraction of the law. But the bus segregation law, the restrictive taxicab ordinance and the boycott have never been tested before the last bench. All of these events could have the power of a great questioning, an awakening, which would culminate in a challenge of undisturbed laws. The Montgomery awakening could work wonders and bring about changes which will stun and startle.

One of the significant contribution made by the bus riders protest is the spotlighting the quality of civic leadership the group has. Ministers were in the forefront and nobody of goodwill and democratic tendencies could likely find fault.

In light of the disturbed bus service in Montgomery all of the leaders involved might read with advantage the essay by Steven Runciman on "Feudalism — Not For Export" which appears in the Dec. 10 issue of The Saturday Review. He points out that some of the leaders in olden times "loved the law, and they were not going to prejudice the traditional rights of their order even if the Kingdom perished."

He adds: "The old order went down with the flags flying. But its desperate gallantry came too late; it could not wipe out all of the folly of previous years."

Talk with some of the group's civic and spiritual leaders and you sense a new strength. It is an untested civic strength which could find an unrevealed source of cosmic backing. These are the facts of history, not merely of Southern life. Eventually right rule will replace that other kind of rule. The doctrine of "white rule" offends the declaration of democratic rule.

The Shape of Things

38b

The Two-Way Squeeze

The "economic pressure" that is the stock in trade of the White Citizens Councils can be a two-way squeeze —especially in those sectors of the South where Negroes, by their labor and by their spending, provide so much of the economy's life-blood. However menial their jobs, however small their individual purchasing power, if all the Negroes of a Deep South town or county were to stay home for even one day, that area would be paralyzed.

In Montgomery, Alabama, recently an impressive demonstration of this latent strength occurred when the Negro community—some 40,000 strong—declared a boycott against the city bus lines. The incident provoking the ban was the arrest of a seamstress who refused to give up her seat at the order of a driver. The driver testified that he had twenty-two Negro passengers and fourteen whites in his thirty-six-seat bus, and he ordered the woman and others to move back to "equalize" the seating.

Such incidents have been all too frequent in "the Cradle of the Confederacy": last summer a fourteen-year-old Negro girl was dragged off a bus by three policemen and taken in handcuffs to jail because of a refusal to relinquish her place to a white man. A bus driver left his vehicle to beat up a mentally deficient Negro who had "bothered" him from the sidewalk. Drivers have been said to carry guns in their cash boxes to "settle" disputes about transfers and change-making. Because of the stored-up resentment these caused, no organization or leader can be said to have inspired the boycott. "The leaders were led," said one Negro minister. "It was a vertical thing, sweeping through all our people. It was the most amazing thing I have ever seen, and the most heartening."

On the first day of the boycott, December 5, motorcycle police escorted buses on their routes and patrolmen were stationed at major stops. But the buses rolled along, as empty as husks, while long lines of Negro workers trudged with quiet purposefulness to their jobs. Parents formed car pools to get their children to school. The Negro taxicab companies offered a special rate of a dime a person to any place in the city. Bus-line officials admitted that the boycott was 95 per cent effective.

That same day, the arrested woman was convicted and fined $14. Her attorneys announced their intention to appeal the verdict with a clear view toward getting a federal ruling on the constitutionality of segregation in intrastate transportation. That night 5,000 Negroes overflowed the auditorium and lawn of a church and voted to continue the boycott until the bus line agreed to halt the "intimidation, embarrassment and coercion" of Negro patrons.

This dramatic display of unity may well inspire the Negro residents of other Southern cities to similar action. But whether it does or not, most observers agree that it has severely discouraged the White Citizens Council's recruiting drive in Montgomery.

Blockade To Fairness

In Montgomery, Alabama, civic leaders have been protesting against alleged shabby treatment some riders of the city buses have received. Specifically, an outstanding woman who reportedly refused to get out of her seat and give it to a white male passenger, was allegedly arrested, carted off to jail, and fined in court. Segregation is a blockade to fairness.

She was accused of failing to (1) obey a bus driver who is authorized by law to seat passengers according to the segregation law. She, then violated the (2) segregation law. Montgomery buses have no section marked or designated for any segment of the population. By arrangement, white passengers are seated (or seat themselves) from the front and Negro passengers are seated (or seat themselves) from the rear.

It would appear that nearly always the bus drivers, not the passengers, are involved in the controversy. The segregation law in effect makes them policemen. For under the law, they can tell white and Negro passengers where they must sit. Segregation becomes dictation.

Segregation laws can no longer find constitutional support in the federal courts. Until a legal attack is made, however, city and state segregation laws will continue, we believe, to be used as excuses for mistreatment of Negro persons.

With good law on their side to help erase, bad law, there should be legal action to resolve the issue if it is not met otherwise. It is clear that Montgomery citizens will not be able to ride the city buses in peace so long as the segregation laws give to the bus drivers the instructions to become the wardens of Jim Crow.

38b 1956 ALABAMA

MRS. ROSA PARKS, MISS BETTY JEAN ADAMS
AND MR. WOODROW CANTY
MONTGOMERY, ALA. BUS BOYCOTT

MRS. ROSA PARKS (center [illegible] for violating Alabama's Jim Crow laws touched off the now famous Montgomery bus boycott, goes over clippings on the case at 5112 Peoria with Miss Betty Jean Adams and Woodrow Canty. Enroute to Seattle and Spokane, Wash., to fill speaking engagements for the NAACP, Mrs. Parks was the guest of Miss Adams in Chicago during stopover between planes. Canty, now, of Chicago was a neighbor of Mrs. Parks in Montgomery. Miss Adams lived in the Parks home while attending school in Montgomery.

Segregation in Court

Last Dec. 3 Mrs. Rosa Parks, a Negro seamstress in Montgomery, Ala., was arrested for refusing to give up her bus seat to a white. The arrest triggered into action the Negroes' resentment over segregation. The following evening Montgomery's Negro leaders met in a Baptist church to chart their course. On Dec. 5 they launched a boycott of all city buslines. Since then 90 per cent of the Negroes in Alabama's capital city have refused to board a bus.

Last Tuesday, six months to the day after the boycott started, the Negroes won a legal victory. A three-man Federal Court in Montgomery ruled that city and state laws requiring segregation on Montgomery buses violated the Federal Constitution. The ruling will not become effective until the court issues an injunction against enforcement of bus segregation laws, and even then city authorities may force a postponement by appealing to the Supreme Court. Nonetheless Montgomery has been put on notice that it is only a matter of time until segregation in public transport is banned.

When it is banned—and not until then—the Negroes will start riding the buses again. One of their leaders, the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., said last week that the boycott would end "whenever it becomes possible to go back on city buses on an integrated basis."

No End Seen for Bus Boycott

"EQUALITY WORTH FIGHTING FOR"—Mrs. Rosa Parks of Montgomery, Ala., right, told Marnesba Tackett, left, Los Angeles NAACP membership drive chairman, that equality is worth fighting for and she has again refused to give up her seat to a white man.—Simpson Photo.

'Negroes Together In Ala.'

—MRS. ROSA PARKS

LOS ANGELES—There is no foreseeable end in sight for the Montgomery bus boycott, Mrs. Rosa Parks, 43, whose arrest started the long walk, told a press conference here.

Mrs. Parks said she was convinced that racial equality is "worth fighting for" and that she would refuse again to give up her bus seat to a white man if the situation repeated itself.

The bus boycott started three days after Mrs. Parks was arrested Dec. 5 for refusing to obey a bus driver's order to give up her seat. She was fined $14, based on Alabama's segregation law.

■

Mrs. Parks, a board member of the militant Montgomery Improvement Association, said that 75 per cent more colored Americans than whites had previously patronized the bus lines before the boycott, but none ride them now.

MRS. ROSA PARKS

. . . boycott to on't end

She was principal speaker at the local NAACP's closing membership drive meeting at Second Baptist Church here Sunday. The Rev. J. Raymond Henderson, an active NAACP worker, is pastor of the church.

Rosa Parks Makes Plea In Capital

WASHINGTON — (ANP) — "Support the NAACP, live up to the ideals of Mary McLeod Bethune, stick close to Christianity, don't give up faith, and one day we will have the Democracy we are all hoping for."

This was the advice given by Mrs. Rosa Parks to the women attending the "New Crusade" conference sponsored by the National Council of Negro Women at the Statler hotel.

Mrs. Parks, whose arrest in Montgomery, Ala., six months ago set off the bus boycott in that city, pledged to "continue in every way I can to make Democracy a reality."

RAPS SUPREMACY MYTH

"Coming up in a segregated society does something to you — not only to the oppressed, but also to the oppressor," said Mrs. Parks. "The sooner the myth of white supremacy is done away with, the better off we will be. There is only one race — the human race — and we are all children of one God."

Mrs. Parks referred to the Supreme Court decision on school segregation as a "second Emancipation." But nothing will be done about it unless the people do something themselves on a community level.

This courageous woman felt it was her responsibility to do something toward promoting equal justice in her community. She recalled having heard Mrs. Bethune speak, sometime back in the 40s.

She remembered that this great leader advised her audience to prepare themselves for any opportunity which might arise, even if one never comes.

INSPIRED

Perhaps it was this advice which inspired Mrs. Parks to attend workshops at the Highland Folk school in Tennessee to discuss desegregation. "This was my first experience of living in an integrated society," stated the speaker.

When she returned home she realized how complacent or contented the people were. She had learned that you must fight for your rights, that you cannot look to the other group to do it for you.

Anxious to do her part to promote better conditions for her people, Mrs. Parks joined the NAACP and worked in many civic groups. "The people of the community knew me," she said. "They knew that I was not a person to say very much. I was not an agitator or troublemaker."

That is why they became so excited, and even angry, when they heard of her arrest for refusing to give her seat to a white passenger.

Montgomery Negroes Call Off Bus Boycott, Hear No Violence Plea

Integration Order Served By Marshals

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Dec. 20 (AP)—Jubilant Montgomery Negroes decided tonight to end their long boycott tomorrow morning and ride buses again, without the restrictions of racial segregation.

The action came at a mass meeting of several hundred hymn-singing, cheering Negroes celebrating the U. S. Supreme Court's order banning bus segregation in Montgomery. The order went into effect earlier today.

URGES NO VIOLENCE

A boycott leader, the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., urged his people to patronize the buses but warned them against violence. An outburst of applause greeted his recommendation.

A second mass meeting at another Negro church across town followed the first gathering in the church where the boycott began the night of Dec. 5, 1955.

"This is a time when we must evince calm dignity and wise restraint," King pleaded. "Emotions must not run wild. . . If we become victimized with violent intents, we will have walked in vain and our 12 months of glorious dignity will be transformed into an eve of gloomy catastrophe."

SCHOOLED IN APPROACH

A "laboratory institute period" followed King's speech in a church auditorium filled with singing, cheering Negroes. Its purpose was to acquaint Negroes with "some of the things that might be expected" when they ride integrated buses.

The Negroes have been schooled in recent weeks in a nonviolent approach with constant emphasis on remaining peaceful "even if others strike first."

Enforcement of city and state laws requiring separate seating of white and Negro passengers was ordered halted in Montgomery shortly before noon when U. S. marshals served writs of injunction carrying out the decision handed down by the Supreme Court Nov. 13.

A notice to drivers was posted at the office of Montgomery City Lines, Inc., which operates the city's only bus service. It contained a copy of the injunction writ along with instructions to bus operators to cease enforcing segregation laws.

The bus company manager, J. H. Bagley, said it will be impossible to resume full service on all former routes immediately but that will be done "as fast as possible." Many drivers were laid off and routes through predominantly Negro sections of Montgomery were discontinued during the boycott.

The injunction directed against city and state authorities and the bus company, Montgomery City Lines, Inc., was first issued last June 19 after a three-judge federal court panel held the segregation laws unconstitutional.

Pending appeal to the Supreme Court, the restraining order was suspended and put into effect immediately when formal notice of the Supreme Court ruling arrived here in the mail.

Although the decision knocked out the state law as well as a Montgomery city ordinance requiring bus segregation, the injunction against continued enforcement applied only to Montgomery, the birthplace of the Confederacy.

Presumably, it will take a separate court order to extend it to other Alabama cities.

Montgomery Buses Told to End Bias; Negroes Plan Test

By The United Press.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Dec. 20—The United States Supreme Court order ending bus segregation here went into effect today. Negroes announced they would end their year-long bus boycott tomorrow "prepared for the worst."

"I certainly hope there will be no violence," said the Rev. Martin Luther King, leader of the boycotters, "but realism compels us to realize it is a possibility."

"We hope this transition [to non-segregated seating] can be made without difficulty," Mr. King added. "However, we are prepared for the worst."

The high court order, denying city and state appeals for a rehearing in the bus case, arrived at the local United States district court today. Marshals immediately began serving writs of injunction on city and state public service commission officials ordering an end to segregation on the transit line.

Birmingham Target

The order applied only to Montgomery, but in Birmingham, the state's largest city, a Negro group said it considered the segregated bus law now null and void throughout the state.

Police Chief G. J. Ruppenthal, who received one of the Federal writs, said he had no plans for "putting on extra officers."

Negro leaders asked the city to afford them protection tomorrow in "danger zones" described by them as the end of bus routes and dark streets.

Mr. Ruppenthal said "our policemen will be covering their regular beats."

The City Commission here said, "Althoug we consider the Supreme Court's decision to be the usurpation of the power to amend the Constitution we have no alternative but to recognize it."

However, it said "that not to say that we will not continue through every legal means at our disposal, to see that the separation of the races is continued on the public transportation system here on Montgomery."

Commissioner Warns

C. C. Owen, Public Service Commission president, meanwhile notified all intra-state carriers in Alabama that the decision "does not purport to enjoin its commission from enforcing the state laws requiring segregation of races except to the extent that such state law may apply only to transportation in the city of Montgomery."

Montgomery became a testing ground for South segregation laws when the city's 40,000 Negroes virtually all ceased riding the buses last December protesting mistreatment by white drivers.

Five Negro women entered the suit ultimately decided by the Supreme Court.

Negroes sought the right of first come, first served seating and more courteous treatment and when the city and state refused to lower the color barriers the boycott persisted. Negroes rode to work in car pools and the bus line suffered heavy financial loss.

Mr. King and eighty-nine other Negro leaders were arrested under an old law against economic boycott. The case of Mr. King, who faces a possible year in prison, comes up on appeal of his conviction this Friday.

Special to The New York Times.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Dec. 20—A Birmingham Negro group asked the Birmingham City Commission today to end segregation on public buses immediately.

If the commission did not meet their request, the group said in a prepared statement, "Negroes plan to ride the buses unsegregated."

"If there is any interference with the Negroes riding buses unsegregated, we will take whatever action is necessary," said the Rev. F. L. Shuttleworth, president of the Alabama Christian Movement for Human Rights.

The group was formed here last year after Montgomery Negroes began their boycott.

Birmingham's City Commission will meet next Wednesday. City commissioners had agreed several weeks ago on a "no comment" attitude on the bus segregation issue pending a study of any petitions such as the one filed today.

A Birmingham ordinance forbids Negroes and whites to sit together at public gatherings and in public conveyances.

The Negro group also sent a letter to the Birmingham Transit Company, requesting it to desegregate its buses, remove white and Negro seating signs and hire Negro bus drivers.

The letter to the Transit Company also asked that seating be on a "first come, first served" basis. The company made no comment immediately.

December 19, 1956

INTERGRATED BUS SUGGESTIONS

This is a historic week because segregattion on buses now been declared unconstitutional. Within a few days the Supreme Court Mandate will reach Montgomery and you will be re-boarding Integrated buses . This places upon us all a tremendous responsibility of maintaining, in face of what could be some unpleasantness, a calm and loving dignity befitting good citizens and members of our Race. If there is violence in word or deed it must not be our people who commit it.

For your help and convience the following suggestions are made. Will you read, study and memorize them so that our non-violent determination may not be endangered. First, some general suggestions:

1. Not all white people are opposed to integrated buses. Accept goodwill on the part of many.
2. The whole bus is now for the use of all people. Take a vacant seat.
3. Pray for guidance and commit yourself to complete non-violence in word and action as you enter the bus.
4. Demonstrate the calm dignity of our Montgomery people in your actions.
5. In all things observe ordinary rules of courtesy and good behavior.
6. Remember that this is not a victory for Negroes alone, but for all Montgomery and the South. Do not boast! Do not brag!
7. Be quiet but friendly; proud, but not arrogant; joyous, but not boistrous.
8. Be loving enough to absorb evil and understanding enough to turn an enemy into a friend.

NOW FOR SOME SPECIFIC SUGGESTIONS:

1. The bus driver is in charge of the bus and has been instructed to obey the law. Assume that he will cooperate in helping you occupy any vacant seat.
2. Do not deliberately sit by a white person, unless there is no other seat.
3. In sitting down by a person, white or colored, say "May I" or "Pardon me" as you sit. This is a common courtesy.
4. If cursed, do not curse back. If pushed, do not push back. If struck, do not strike back, but evidence love and goodwill at all times.
5. In case of an incident, talk as little as possible, and always in a quiet tone. Do not get up from your seat! Report all serious incidents to the bus driver.
6. For the first few days try to get on the bus with a friend in whose non-violence you have confidence. You can uphold one another by a glance or a prayer.
7. If another person is being molested, do not arise to go to his defense, but pray for the oppressor and use moral and spiritual force to carry on the struggle for justice.
8. According to your own ability and personality, do not be afraid to experiment with new and creative techniques for achieving reconciliation and social change.
9. If you feel you cannot take it, walk for another week or two. We have confidence in our people. GOD BLESS YOU ALL.

THE MONTGOMERY IMPROVEMENT ASSOCIATION
THE REV. M. L. KING, JR., PRESIDENT
THE REV. W. J. POWELL, SECRETARY

Dr. Reddick Analyzes Ala. Bus Situation

Daily World

Thurs, 2-2-56

By WILLIAM GORDON
Managing Editor,
Atlanta Daily World

P. 1

Issues back of a city bus boycott and the growing political climate of the state of Alabama were uniquely analyzed yesterday at the "South's most famous forum."

Atlanta Ga.

Dr. L. D. Reddick, young historian and head of the department of history at Alabama State College, was the guest speaker for the Hungry Club at the Butler Street YMCA.

A cross-section of Atlanta's civic and community groups, including educators, a group from Emory University and two college presidents, ignored the weather and came to hear Dr. Reddick praise the leadership of Governor Folsom and pay respects to the work of a brilliant young minister.

YOUNG MINISTER

The latter, Dr. M. L. King, Jr., pastor of Dexter Avenue Baptist Church, has been at the head of a movement by Negroes in Montgomery protesting the "inadequate and sometimes insulting conditions they face on city buses."

Dr. King came into the national and international spotlight when he assumed leadership of this movement. The boycott began nearly two months ago when a woman, Mrs. Rosa Parks was asked to get up while riding a bus and give her seat to a white man. She declined to do so and was arrested.

UNANIMITY OF SPIRIT

Almost spontaneously, it seemed, Negroes agreed to stay off the buses in Montgomery. Out of this action by Negro citizens the movement caught unanimity of spirit and Dr. King was brought into the picture as the leader. The protest has worked so smoothly under his leadership that anti-Negro elements in Montgomery announced a "get-tough policy." On Monday night the home of Dr. King was bombed.

Analyzing the political climate of Alabama, Dr. Reddick called Governor Folsom a "tall broad-shoulder ed man, with a kindly face and a direct manner."

He added that Folsom has never found it necessary to race-bait. "He gives the lie to those who say that it is essential that politicians in the Deep South campaign on a racist platform, if they would be elected."

RACIST ATTITUDE

The governor is popular with the masses, Dr. Reddick said, but he's having difficulty with the legislature. However, none of this seems to make him take a racist attitude, he pointed out.

Dr. Reddick said that although sentiment for nullification has developed in several Southern states, Folsom has announced the move as "Hogwash."

"As a student of history," Dr. Reddick said, "we thought that the nullification question had been settled in 1832 when President Andrew Jackson notified John C. Calhoun that federal troops would be sent into South Carolina if necessary, in order that federal law, prevail there as elsewhere."

Moving into the issues of Montgomery, Dr. Reddick said, "The ancient figure of speech is quite apt here: "The eyes of the world are on Montgomery."

SOURCE OF TROUBLE

The historian told how national newspapers and magazines have taken an interest in current issues there. He added:

"It may well be that the Negroes of Montgomery are defining for us all, the form and the nature of the Negro's response to the present crisis in race relations."

He went to the source of the trouble in Montgomery. He said the visitor to the city before last December would have been "astounded to see Negroes packed and jammed in the city's buses during the rush hours, standing up, hanging on straps from ceiling, not sitting down in empty seats beneath them in the front of the coach. The front seats were reserved for white people." The job of seating was left with the bus driver, he said, and bus operators would demand that Negroes keep in a certain section of the bus. These demands, he added, were all too often "insulting." This continued until the present movement went into effect December 1, 1955.

In thier protests, Negroes asked for three things:

Courteous treatment by bus operators; that passengers be seated on a first come-first served basis and that Negro bus operators be employed on buses that serve predominantly Negro neighborhoods.

BOYCOTT SUCCESSFUL

For nine weeks now, the ex-bus riders have stuck it out and refused to go along with requests of city officials.

Dr. Reddick says the boycott is successful, first of all, because it was a "real grievance. Second, because the leaders have not competed against each other. Third, because the whole Negro community has cooperated. Fourth, because Montgomery is a compact little city, many people could walk to town anyway. Fifth, because transportation pools have been set up for those having to ride.

"As we see it," Dr. Reddick said, the immediate objectives of the bus boycott are limited objectives. This is important," he added, "in that this is a demonstration of the organization, discipline, leadership and sustained morale of the Negro people, that if necessary, will be called upon for bigger things to come."

Daily World

Attempts by the city commission to negotiate with Negroes for a settlement have been unsuccessful. City officials have even gone so far as to announce that an agreement had been reached, but Negroes failed to follow this "fake" settlement.

P. 6

"Since then the police have been harrassing and arresting Negro automobile drivers, some of whom have not had a traffic ticket in years," he pointed out. He added that some of the buses have even been put back on the line, but that Negroes continue to ignore them.

But inflammatory appeals have borne some fruit, the speaker said. He referred to a stick of dynamite thrown on the front porch of Dr. King, chief spokesman for the movement. He said, here again, Negroes have met this provocation with discipline and have not yet launched a counter offensive.

Negro citizens have followed the calm and "intelligent advice" of Dr. King in that "no violence should be initiated by Negroes." With this the young minister has taken even a more firm stand on the bus protest. He said violent action by those who threw the dynamite has only served to intensify the will of the people to carry on their boycott.

At the end of the question and answer period, Rev. M. L. King, Sr., father of the young minister, spoke briefly on his recent visit to Montgomery Rev. King admitted that the situation in Montgomery was tense, but that he had faith and hope in the ultimate out come. He also praised Governor Folsom for being an "honest governor."

BROUGHT APPLAUSE

Suggestion from Dr. Brawley of Clark College brought applause when he asked that financial assistance be sent to the people of Montgomery.

Dr. Reddick called the picture of Alabama and specifically that in Montgomery "a classic struggle for democracy and human dignity. It is a struggle," he added, "in which we are all involved. It is a strugle that could do with legal and financial assistance. It is magnificent. It must not fail. Victory at Montgomery means victory for us all."

Montgomery Has An Opportunity

Daily World

Surely such a peaceful neighbor as Montgomery, Alabama has no desire to enter competition with another neighbor, the state of Mississippi for the unfavorable headlines rendering that state such a painful disservice.

Thurs. 2-2-56

Since early in December, Montgomery has been in the picture as one of those municipalities where a reasonable grievance of her colored population has gone unmet. The situation has been allowed to drag along to a near violent state.

P. 4

Upon the arrest and subsequent fining of Mrs. Rosa Parks, a Negro seamstress for the alleged refusal to surrender her seat to a white man. They felt that such treatment visited upon Negro patrons had reached the straining point and with no other immediate effective weapon, a boycott of the buses was resorted to.

Atlanta, Ga.

The grieved citizens luckily selected as their leader, Dr. M. L. King, Jr., pastor of Dexter Avenue Baptist Church, who in cool deliberations made appeal after appeal in an effort to ameliorate the situation. All through the struggle he possessed himself with dignity and patience and rendered credit to the cause of the citizens and the city at large for his reasonableness and cool demeanor.

The citizens asked three things: The seating of passengers in the order of their arrival; more courtesy exercised on the part of drivers and the employment of Negro drivers in predominantly Negro settlements.

Any fair-minded person will see no unreasonableness of the request made by the Negro citizens of Montgomery.

Certainly no breach of policy and no serious hindrance in the service would obtain from this modest appeal.

As the affair enters into its third month, there is apparently no letup in its intensity; those who had the opportunity of settling the affair before it reached such a critical crisis refused proper action.

Appeal after appeal was made to the authorities; the city's Mayor Gayle to the contrary is reported to have initiated a "get tough" policy which had its timely reactions of more strained relations. Hence, subsequent to his "get tough" speech, the home of the Rev. King, Jr., was bombed.

It is highly hoped that the Mayor will exercise his high powers in the direction of the peace of the city and the safety of its citizens; that his good offices and influences may be of such as to occasion peace between the colored citizens and the transit company and in the meantime realize that the reasonable requests they have made for the peace of all concerned, would enhance the city's usefulness far more than the bombing of the home of a law-abiding citizen.

Surely Montgomery will find no pleasure in revenging such a fine opportunity of its own making.

Bus Firm Puts Official Okay On Franchise

Advertiser Montgomery, Ala. Thurs. 2-16-56

A new 10-year franchise for Montgomery City Lines has been officially accepted by the bus firm, the City Commission was notified yesterday. P. 1

A letter informed the commission that the franchise, which becomes effective March 8, was satisfactory to the national firm which operates the local bus company.

The expiring franchise was granted for 20 years in 1936.

A public hearing on a rezoning petition from the Normandale Development Corp. was set for March 8. If approved, the rezoning will allow the shopping center to expand to the south.

COMMISSION OKAY

Already approved by the City Planning Commission, the Change now must be okayed by the City Commission.

Developers of the project have promised nearby homeowners that no drive-in restaurant, night club, bowling alley or other noisy establishments will be included in the addition.

A new system of lighting and buffer-type landscaping have also been promised.

In other business, the commission agreed to amendment of the city's agreement with the Housing Authority of the City of Montgomery, providing for a profit-sharing arrangement when two projects are completed.

When construction bonds on Victor Tulane Courts and Jackson Heights are retired in 40 years, receipts will be divided between the authority and the city "in proportion to the aggregate contribution" each has made to the projects.

Charles Rogers, director of the authority, estimated the proportion would be about five to one.

Employment of Robert C. Copeland as a clerk II was approved, as was a retail beer license for C. W. Willis and C. H. Cummings, operators of Mike's Cafe, 526 Columbus.

Advertiser

The franchise approved by the bus company, and in its last stages before official acceptance by the city, is substantially the same as the old one. P. 2-A

However, there are two main differences. In the event the company should cease operation, the "rolling stock" does not become the possession of the city, as the old franchise provided.

In another section of the franchise, "boycott" is listed for the first time as one of the disabling factors over which the company would have no control.

City officials have said the differences are minor, because there are legal weapons that would prevent the company's dropping the franchise without just cause.

Mayor W. A. Gayle was not present for the meeting. He left earlier to attend a two-day conference on national defense—a conference called by President Eisenhower.

The mayor is expected to return to Montgomery during the weekend

Montgomery's Boycott

Advertiser

The Sylacauga News

At first we had some sympathy for the colored bus riders in Montgomery, feeling there was probably room for compromise when buses are overcrowded, but now with their tactics of boycott, that sympathy is no longer existent. Boycott is too often the action of a prejudiced minority to enforce their will against a majority, rather than accept the findings of arbitration. In the Montgomery incident the colored people have been their own worst enemy, and the unhappy inevitable result might teach them to trust themselves rather than imported leaders or imported leadership.

Bus Riders Won't Mix Despite Segregation Ban

Star Wed. 4-25-56

MONTGOMERY, Ala., April 24 (AP).—Montgomery's newly integrated city buses remained segregated for all practical purposes today, while Negro boycotters and city officials debated their next moves.

Washington, D.C.

The traditional assignment of seats according to race was ended yesterday by bus company decree. The few Negroes who rode buses, however, made no attempt to sit in the fron section formerly reserved for white persons. P. 7-A

No tense incidents between the races have been reported.

The desegregation order, far from immediately ending troubled transportation problems in Montgomery, created a sharp split between the City Commission and the bus company. The status of the prolonged Negro bus boycott also was still in doubt.

Mass Meeting Slated

Negro leaders said a decision on ending the 5-month-old protest movement may be made tomorrow night at a mass meeting of members of their race.

Bus officials said the number of Negroes riding yesterday on the first day of desegregation was about the same percentage that has continued to ride despite the boycott. That figure had been previously estimated by the company at from 5 to 15 per cent of the normal load.

Vice President B. W. Franklin of National City Lines, parent company of the Montgomery City Bus Lines, flew here from Chicago last night and promised to meet with newsmen today.

The desegregation order and his statement at Chicago yesterday that the company would make no attempt to enforce segregation on buses drew immediate answer from city and State officials here. They insisted Alabama bus segregation laws are still in effect and would be strictly enforced.

The parent company's decision followed a United States Supreme Court ruling Monday holding bus segregation unconstitutional. National City Lines operates bus franchises in several other Southern cities—Mobile, Ala.; Jackson, Miss.; Tampa, Fla.; Tulsa, Okla.; and Beaumont, Wichita Falls and El paso, Tex.

City Issues Warning

The three-member Montgomery City Commission yesterday issued a warning that it expects "the bus company and all other persons to abide by existing laws and ordinances." They said the Supreme Court ruling affected only South Carolina."

Police Commissioner Clyde Sellers said he would order the arrest of "any passenger or bus driver who indulges in desegregation."

"As far as I'm concerned, this damn thing (the Supreme Court decision) applies only to South Carolina. I'm going to enforce all city laws to maintain segregation."

Mr. Sellers admitted, however, that a Federal suit attacking bus segregation in Montgomery may soon bring a court order to desegregate here. The suit, an outgrowth of the bus boycott, is scheduled for a hearing May 11 before a three-judge Federal panel.

President C. C. Owen of the Alabama Public Service Commission sent a telegram to President Roy Fitzgerald of National City Lines in Chicago demanding withdrawal of the integration order. And he warned all other carriers operating in Alabama to adhere strictly to existing segregation laws "or suffer the consequences."

Want Negro Drivers

A boycott leader indicated yesterday that an end to the prolonged protest movement may hinge on the bus company's attitude toward hiring Negro drivers for predominately Negro routes.

The Rev. Martin Luther King, jr., Negro Baptist minister, said the boycott would continue at least until the mass meeting tomorrow night. At that time, he said, the Montgomery Improvement Association probably would make a recommendation to fellow Negroes or at least "discuss alternatives" for ending the boycott.

Mr. King is president of the MIA, a Negro organization formed to promote the boycott which began December 5 in protest to segregated seating on buses. The movement started the day that Mrs. Rosa Parks, Negro seamstress, was fined $14 for refusing to move to the back of a bus.

Mr. King has appealed a $500 fine he received on conviction of violating Alabama's anti-boycott law. About 90 other Negro leaders were also indicted on the same charge, but haven't yet been tried.

Press Views On Ala. Bus Case Decision

Afro-American Sat. 11-24-56 P. 13

Baltimore Md.

Editorial comment from a cross-section of the nation's leading newspapers on the U.S. Supreme Court's unanimous decision (9-0) in the Alabama bus case clearly indicates that the high court's order struck a death blow to separate seating in intra-state transportation.

Herewith are several excerpts from daily newspapers around the country:

RALEIGH (N.C.) NEWS AND OBSERVER:

The unanimous decision of the Supreme Court in the Alabama bus case that State or local laws requiring segregation on buses are unconstitutional fixes the status of that question.

It is most unlikely that any future litigation on this subject will be carried to the Supreme Court. It will be disposed of by local courts.

This question might as well be regarded as settled and forgotten.

* * *

ASBURY PARK EVENING PRESS:

Every fairminded American will applaud the action of the U.S. Supreme Court in wiping out racial segregation now enforced under the authority of state and local laws.

But the feeling of satisfaction that fairminded people experience in reading the Court's ruling is followed by regret that such action on the part of the nation's highest tribunal was necessary.

Actually, if a man is a citizen of the United States why should he have to resort to court action to receive the same treatment as is accorded his fellow citizens whose skin is a shade lighter?

Bus transportation is a public facility; the buses operate on the public streets which belong to all the people; they charge every passenger the same fare. By what right do they tell one citizen he may sit where he pleases and tell another that he must sit in a certain seat?

And by what strange process of reasoning do the operators of the line justify their conduct? For if the bus company or the municipal government has the right to assign seats to people of dark complexions why can they not, in future, prescribe seating arrangements for people with blue eyes and blond hair?

An injustice such as this, perpetrated on the colored man, may conceivably be visited upon his white brother in other times.

* * *

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH:

By a brief order of only 11 words—"the motion to affirm is granted and the judgement is affirmed" — Chief Justice Warren and his eight associates put the final stamp of unconstitutionality on racial segregation in buses. — This case came up from Montgomery, Ala., scene of the widely-noticed bus boycott.

The Supreme Court order, which upheld a ruling of the Fourth Federal Court of Appeals, dealt also in effect with racial segregation on buses in all states which have enacted Jim Crow transportation statutes.

There is no such thing as justice if it does not extend to bus riders in Montgomery. The Supreme Court members know this and that is why these orders have been handed down from our highest bench.

* * *

WASHINGTON (D.C.) POST:

Segregated seating in city buses, one of the most conspicuous, cruel and pointless manifestations of Jim Crow, has now formally been declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court.

The "separate but equal" rationale which has been employed ever since 1896 to justify the inequality of segregation has now been entirely discarded. Segregation is revealed for what it has always been — discrimination.

Then the Post editorial quoted Mississippi's Governor J. P. Coleman who declared "Our attitude about this decision will be the same as about the school segregation cases. We will continue to segregate," and commented:

This readiness on the part of responsible state authorities to defy the Supreme Court of the United States is ominous indeed.

If it succeeds and is allowed to gain prevalence, it can have disastrous consequences to national unity.

There is a most urgent need, therefore, for national leadership to remind local officials of their obligations to the United States and its institutions.

* * *

BALTIMORE EVENING SUN:

The Supreme Court's refusal to review the ruling of a three-judge Federal court in Alabama against the state's bus-segregation law seems to exhaust the legal remedies of those who wish to maintain the legal separation of the races on all public vehicles.

The practical situation with respect to segregation on buses and other public conveyances is quite different, however, from the practical situation with respect to public schools.

On conveyances, the Jim Crow line can be obliterated by a mere stroke of the pen, and without any of the administrative changes that are necessary to eliminate school segregation.

The Supreme Court has itself recognized this difference by remanding the school cases to the lower Federal courts with instructions that segregation be ended "with all deliberate speed."

In public transport, such deliberation would be from the practical standpoint ridiculous. You either have segregation or you don't, and for all practical purposes the change can be effected at once.

* * *

NEWARK (N.J.) EVENING NEWS:

Again the Supreme Court of the United States emphasizes that the 1954 decision outlawing public school segregation was no limited repudiation of the separate but equal doctrine of 1896.

Three times now the court has indicated the scope of that decision to have been all inclusive. It ruled first against racial discrimination in the public parks. Then it ruled likewise with reference to public golf courses.

Now the high court declares segregation on buses operating within states is as clearly unconstitutional as segregation in the public schools.

* * *

TALLAHASSEE DEMOCRAT:

Plainly, the Supreme Court of the United States has gone far astray.

Unless it begins to reappraise its position as just one arm of government, or some action is taken to curb its encroachment into the jurisdiction of other branches of government, we genuinely fear this nation will be faced with precedents that will permit a judicial tyranny over the people.

Whether we like it or not, this Alabama bus seating decision will stand because the majority sentiment of the whole nation is against the white southern point of view and no effective national resistence to the Supreme Court's usurpation can be aroused.

The South's only weapon, and its greatest duty to the nation, is to try — as the Florida legislature has — to start a movement to awaken the rest of the states to the danger of encroachment by the Federal judiciary on rights of local self-government everywhere.

Decision affects all Dixie states

Afro-American Sat. 11-24-56

WASHINGTON — Angry screams of certain Southern officials that the Supreme Court's bus desegregation ruling would not affect their states, was seen here as just so much hogwash.

Baltimore Md.

In its action Tuesday, the Supreme Court left no doubt about the unconstitutionality of city ordinances and state laws requiring racial segregation on city buses.

P. 1

And the ruling, while directly affecting Montgomery and Alabama, is applicable to all other states with laws enforcing segregation on such public facilities.

The American

LAWYERS HERE said it would be fairly simple now to knock out similar laws in all Southern states.

P. 2

As the result of the ruling, street car segregation can be knocked out in Atlanta, Savannah, Birmingham, Mobile, New Orleans, Miami, Tallahassee, Jacksonville, Charleston, and any U. S. District judge is now duty bound to automatically issue an injunction against the enforcement of segregation laws as quickly as petitions can be filed.

This means city bus and Columbia, S.C., by merely filing a petition in Federal court for an injunction.

* * *

THE RULING Tuesday was in the form of granting a motion to affirm the judgment of a three judge Federal Court at Montgomery, which outlawed segregation on that city's bus lines.

Colored people in Montgomery have been boycotting buses of the Montgomery City Lines, Inc., since last Dec. 5. Montgomery City Lines is a subsidiary of the National City Bus Lines of Chicago.

In an order, the Supreme Court Tuesday cited its decisions in the school segregation cases, the Baltimore park and swimming pool case, and the Atlanta, Ga. golf course case, in all of which it declared illegal racial segregation imposed by state or city authorities.

* **

THE ACTION of the court leaves no doubt that all state laws requiring or permitting segregated public transportation null and void, and that the fight to end segregation in public transportation has just about been won by the NAACP.

The motion to affirm the judgment of the District Court was filed by the NAACP through Robert L. Carter and Thurgood Marshall, attorneys of the NAACP legal staff; Fred D. Gray, a lawyer-minister whose draft status is the subject of controversy, and Charles D. Langford, Montgomery attorney.

The high court's action was unanimous. The original decision by the lower court was that enforced segregation on buses violated the Federal constitution's guarantees of due process and equal protection of law.

* *

THE LOWER COURT opinion was delivered last June 5 in a 2-1 decision by the three-judge court in Montgomery. Declaring the Alabama laws unconstitutional were Judges Richard T. Rivers of the U.S. Circit Court of Appeals and Judge Frank M. Johnston Jr. of the U.S. District Court.

The suit was brought by Mrs. Aurelia S. Browder, Mrs. Susie McDonald, Miss Claudette Colvin and Miss Mary L. Smith, all of Montgomery.

* *

THE SUIT asked for a permanent injunction against the defendants to restrain the city and state officials and the bus company from enforcing segregation on buses.

The judges, however, withheld the permanent decree pending the appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court.

In their ruling, Judges Rivers and Johnston observed that:

"There is ... a difference, a constitutional difference, between adherence to custom and the perpetuation and enforcement of that custom by law. (Shelly vs Kraemer, 334 U.S. 11, 12;.

"The 14th Amendment provides that 'No state shall ...deprive any person of life, ligerty or property without due process of law; nor deny any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the law.

"Those provisions do not interfere with the police powers of states as long as the state laws operate alike upon all persons and property similarly situated (Barbier vs. Connolly 113 U.S. 27, 31, 31).

"That amendment 'merely requires that all persons subjected to such legislation shall be treated alike, under like circumstances and conditions, both in privileges conferred and in the liabilities imposed.' (Merchant vs. Penn. Railroad, 153, U.S., 380, 390).

* *

"WE CANNOT in good concience perform our duty as judges by blindly following precedent of Plessy vs Ferguson supra, when our study leaves us in complete agreement with the Fourth Circuit opinion in Fleming vs South Carolina Electric and Gas Co., 224 F. 2nd 752, appeal dismissed, April, 1956.

"That the separate but

Bus Boycott Comes To Joyful Ending

Afro-American Sat. 11-24-56 P.1

equal doctrine can no longer be a correct statement of the law.'

"In fact, we think that Plessy vs Ferguson, though not implied, though not explicitly, overruled, and that under later decision, there is now no rational basis upon which the separate but equal doctrine can be validly applied to public carrier transportation within the City of Montgomery and its police jurisdiction.

"The application of that doctrine cannot be justified as proper execution of state police power."

The judges concluded that the segregation laws "violate the due process and equal protection of the law clauses of the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States."

THE REV. FRED GRAY, one of the attorneys for the Montgomery Improvement Association which is leading the bus protest movement in Montgomery, Tueday night told the AFRO he was greatly "elated" over the Supreme Court's bus segregation ruling.

He said the decision would have "a decided effect" on the case against Mrs. Rosa Parks, who has appealed her conviction for disobeying the state's segregation laws by refusing to be jim crowed on local buses.

The attorney pointed out that it might have also an "indirect effect" on the conviction of the Rev. Martin L. King, MIA president, on charges of having violated the local laws in leading the protest against bus segregation.

* **

IN TALLAHASSEE, Florida, where a similar bus boycott has been under way for nearly six months, Dr. M. C. Williams, executive secretary of the Inter-Civic Council, declared:

"We are so happy, we don't know what to say. We feel that we won't have to carry our case as far as the highest court in the land."

Twenty-one persons in Tallahassee currently are appealing a conviction for violation of the state for-hire laws in connection with the bus boycott there.

TO RESIST DESEGREATION

Afro-American

MONTGOMERY, Ala.—Mayor W. A. Gayle Thursday said the Montgomery City Commission does not accept integration as inevitable despite the Supreme Court's ruling outlawing desegregation on the city's buses earlier in the week.

Gayle declared "we shall continue to enforce segregation" to insure "public safety, to protect the peoples of both races and to promote order in our city."

Gayle and Police Commissioner Clyde Sellers appealed to residents to be calm and "cool-headed." Said Sellers: "This is not the time for hotheads, oratory, loud talk or threats."

Vote to end 'long, long' walk

Baltimore, Md.

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — The Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. told the AFRO Thursday that the colored citizens of Montgomery have decided to end the 11-month-old boycott of the Montgomery Bus Company.

He said the boycott will not be over officially, however, until "the U.S. Supreme Court mandate banning bus segregation arrives here," adding the order is expected in two or three days.

"Until that time," the Rev. Mr. King said, "we will keep walking and continue to share rides with friends since the city has a temporary injunction to keep the car pool from operating."

"We had a conference with bus company officials Wednesday night and they agreed to comply with the Supreme Court's ruling as soon as the order gets here," he said.

* * *

THE COLORED citizens of Montgomery voted to end the boycott at two mass meetings held at Hutchinson Street and Holt Street Baptist Churches on Wednesday night. Some 8,000 were in attendance.

Representatives of the Montgomery Improvement Association's board of directors told the two groups that the board recommended that the boycott be ended in light of the high tribunal's decision.

The Rev. Mr. King spoke to the capacity audience at the Hutchinson Street Church. They greeted the board's recommendation with a cheering, standing ovation.

* * *

"IT HAS BEEN recommended that no one ride the buses until the Supreme Court mandate has been turned over to the Federal District Court," the Rev. Mr. King said.

He explained that "we want to avoid needless harassment and meaningless litigation" since riders could be arrested for violating the state and city segregation laws until the order gets here.

Afro-American

The boycott organizer and president of the MIT, said there have been no demonstrations or protesting from white citizens of Montgomery that he knows of.

P.2

He reported that "the colored citizens have remained just as calm as they have throughout the boycott." The MIT board appealed to colored citizens through its represenatives "to be calm and reasonable."

ALTHOUGH THE boycott ended (unoffically) Wednesday, the car pool has been out of operation for several days.

In an effort to break up the car pool, the city received a state court injuction to halt its activities.

The boycotters, Wednesday, were refused a Federal Court injuction to stop city interference.

Some 50,000 persons are believed to have been transported by the car pool since Dec. 5 when the bus company boycott was organized.

Ask speed

WASHINGTON — Attorneys representing the plaintiffs in the Montgomery bus case Saturday asked the Supreme Court to speed up the effective date of its mandate declaring unconstitutional state and local laws requiring segregation on buses.

Normally the court order to the lower court takes 25 to 30 days, and the mandate is not effective until the lower court is notified.

Negro Leaders Hail Boycott As Wedge In Racial Barrier

Advertiser Montgomery, Ala.

Wed. 12-2-56

By NELSON COLE

On the eve of the Montgomery bus boycott's first anniversary today, a Negro historian and a sociologist both acclaimed the protest as a positive instrument to "break racial barriers through non-violence."

P.1

The men were speakers at the second session of the Montgomery Improvement Association's Institute on Non-Violence and Social Change. The mass meeting, attracting nation-wide visitors, will run through Sunday.

Speaking at a luncheon meeting yesterday, Dr. Preston Valien, head of the Fisk University Sociology Department, said studies indicated "the boycott incident has taken the positive form of a great social movement." He also quoted surveys made of both white and colored people as to their "feelings" about the boycott.

"The studies show the masses were far ahead of the leaders, the boycott did not start, in reality, because of just a single incident, and that its organizational prowess has amazed even the experts.

"Through it, the Negro has also gained a new conception of himself and of his right to freedom and dignity," he said.

Preston quoted one Negro maid as telling an interviewer about her "white lady" being approached by the White Citizens Council and asked to "starve your maid for one month by laying her off." The maid reported her employer said, "If I do join the movement, I still want you to come once a week."

The same maid, according to Preston, said her boss asked her what went on at the church meetings. "I told her we sang and prayed. 'You're lying' she tells me, so I said, 'Why don't you come out and see for yourself if you're so curious.' Then I thought to myself, 'Darned if I'm going to come back in here and — out to her all that my people tells me.'"

Advertiser

D. B. Reddick, director of the Alabama State College History department, told delegates that "Negro people, here and now, seem to be the principal carriers of the ideas and ideals of the coming modern South."

P.2-A

"Who are the people that are talking about one world, the United States, integration and universal brotherhood" he said. "Who are the people that reject violence at a time when men everywhere are sick of war and conflict Who are the people that have brought Ghandi to the sretste of Montgomery These are indeed ideals and aspirations of the modern world."

Wed. 12-56

The Negro professor also said the boycott showed "there is a way, even under the most distressing conditions, to transform the old, obsolete pattern of life. We should be grateful for this example, for some of us had feared and concluded that we would have to fight it out. Now we know that the transition can be made peaceably."

He added there were still two important questions yet to be answered:

"First, will our media of communication — our newspapers, radio television, etc. — make the transition less painful for our people (especially those of us who are mixed up) by fair and accurate reporting and by editorially facing forward

"Secondly, if this transition is a positive good for the nation—and perhaps for the world—how much will the nation and the will the Negroes of the South have to continue to carry the main weight of this task alone"

Tomorrow, the institute is stressing a famed Ghandhian principle: fasting and praying. All Negroes, "even those in jail," are being asked not to eat until after 4 p.m. and prayer services will be held in most Negro churches. The day will start by the ringing of church bells at 6 a.m.

From Montgomery To Washington

Courier 12-9
Pittsburgh Pa.

The famous Montgomery boycott case has finally gone to the U. S. Supreme Court, which has now been asked by Alabama legal officials to overturn a decision that outlawed segregation on the city's buses.

The Montgomery bus boycott has continued unabated since Dec. 5, 1955, the leaders have been indicted and fined, the Federal Court, on June 5, 1956, decided that city and state laws requiring separate racial seating were unconstitutional, and the Montgomery Board of Commissioners and the Alabama Public Service Commission were ordered to stop enforcing the jim-crow laws.

Sat. 9-8-56

There is little doubt about how the U. S. Supreme Court will rule in this case (or subsequent ones) because it has already outlawed segregation and discrimination in public accommodation.

Having exhausted the last recourse, white Alabama will then be confronted with the dilemma of obeying or not obeying the law.

Our own view is that Montgomery officials will bow to the will of the high court because there is really no white mass sentiment against unsegregated transportation, most of the opposition having come from a small minority of White Citizens Council members, most of whom do not ride the buses anyway.

Montgomery Bus Boycott Praised

Post Herald p. 17

MONTGOMERY, Dec. 4 (AP)—The year-old Montgomery bus boycott was credited today with showing Southern Negroes that racial barriers can be challenged peacefully.

A history professor at Alabama State College for Negroes in Montgomery, L. D. Reddick, told a Negro-sponsored South-wide Race Relations Institute that the entire nation in indebted to the bus boycotters for pointing the way.

Birmingham

Montgomery Negroes, protesting against segregated seating, have refused since Last Dec. 5 to ride Montgomery City Lines buses.

Wed. 12-5-56

Reddick told a luncheon meeting the boycott has proved "there is a way, even under the most distressing conditions, to transform the old, obsolete pattern of life."

"We should be grateful for this example," he added, "for some of us had feared and concluded that we would have to fight it out. Now we know that the transition can be made peaceably."

"The Old South is gone, the Confederacy is indeed a lost cause," the historian declared. "And a great deal of our pain today, whether we realize it or not, comes from the effort to maintain a set of human relations that were developed to serve a plantation, master-slave society."

Two important questions, however, still must be answered, he continued:

"First, will our media of communication—our newspapers, radio, television, etc. — make the transition less painful for our people (especially those of us who are mixed up) by fair and accurate reporting and editorially facing forward?

"Second, if this transition is a positive good for the nation — perhaps for the world—how much will the nation and the world help to bring it about, or will the Negroes of the South have to continue to carry the main weight of this task alone?"

At Montgomery—

Negro bus boycotting praised by historian

Mer. 931

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Dec. 4—(AP)—A Negro historian said today the nation is indebted to bus boycotting Montgomery Negroes for their pattern of peaceful resistance to segregation.

"Through them," said Prof. L. D. Reddick of Alabama State College for Negroes in Montgomery, "We have seen that there is a way, even under the most distressing conditions to transform the old, obsolete pattern of life."

Mer. 12-4-56

"We should be grateful for this example, for some of us had feared and concluded that we would have to fight it out. Now we know that the tarnsition can be made peaceably."

The historian spoke at a Southwide race relations institute sponsored by leaders of the bus boycott which will mark its first anniversary tomorrow. Montgomery Negroes except for a few dissenters have refused to ride segregated city buses since last Dec. 5.

REDDICK, who teaches history at the college, said there are two big questions still unanswered.

Birmingham

"First, will our media of communication—our newspapers, radio, television, etc.—make the transition less painful for our people (especially those of us who are mixed up) by fear and accurate reporting and by editorially facing forward?

"Secondly, if this transition is a positive good for the nation—and perhaps for the world—how much will the nation and the world help to bring it about, or will the Negroes of the South have to continue to carry the main weight of this task alone?"

REDDICK SAID the South is becoming industrialized faster than any section of the nation except possibly California and asked:

"Are we going to impose on these industries, these cities, these broad highways, these new skyscrapers and the cultural institutions that they help make possible, a set of ideas and human relations that do violence to the service and civilization that these developments represent?"

THE WEEK-LONG racial institute opened last night with a bus boycott leader outlining to his people five ways to speed the "inevitable" end of segregation.

The Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. told a packed church at the opening of a southwide Negro institute on passive resistance to racial segregation that "we must speed up the coming of the inevitable."

King described the five ways Negroes could do this:

1. "We must continue to gain the ballot. . . . One of the basic keys to the solution to our problem." Both the Democratic and Republican Parties have "betrayed" Negro hopes, King said.

2. "In order to control the extenal effects of prejudiced internal feelings, we must continue to struggle through legislation."

3. "We must donate large sums of money to the cause of freedom." Several thousand dollars were collected at the meeting to support the Montgomery Improvement Assn., the group that coordinates the boycott and is sponsoring the institute. King is its president.

4. Negroes must "develop intelligent, courageous and dedicated leadership . . . one of the pressing needs of the hour."

5. And, "we must have the moral courage to stand up and protest against injustice wherever we find it. Wherever we find segregation, we must have the fortitude to passively resist it."

Negroes should "meet every act of violence toward an individual Negro with the fact that there are thousands of others who will present themselves in his place as potential victims," King said.

"This dynamic unity, this amazing self-respect, this willingness to suffer, and this refusal to hit back will soon cause the oppressor to become ashamed of his own methods."

DURING THE BOYCOTT several small bombs have been tossed at the home of its leaders but no injuries have been reported.

In his prepared speech, King paid tribute to white persons in Montgomery for their conduct during the boycott. "If there had not been some discipline and moral sensitivity in the white community, we would have had much more violence," King declared.

"It is only the fringe element, the hoodlum element, which constitutes a numerical minority, that would resort to the use of violence," King said in copies of his speech passed out to the audience. He later said the comments were not included in the delivered speech because of lack of time.

A public forum will be held tonight on "nonviolence in social change." Participants will include the Rev. C. K. Steele, a leader of the Negro bus boycott in Tallahassee, Fla., and the Rev. T. J. Jemison, Negro leader from Baton Rouge, La., where a short Negro bus boycott several years ago protested segregation.

May stay desegregation—

Patterson asks court to reconsider bus ruling

Birmingham News p. 4

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 4—Alabama Atty. Gen. John Patterson yesterday requested the Supreme Court to reconsider its decision ending segregation on Montgomery, Ala., buses.

In a short petition, Patterson stated that the court's decision of Nov. 13 had "wrongfully taken" from Alabama the state's police power.

He said the 10th amendment to the Constitution has been "written out of the Constitution" by the Nov. 13 decision. That amendment reserves for states all power not given to the federal government.

PATTERSON protested that for years such segregation laws have "been generally, even universally, recognized as within the competency of the state Legislatures in the exercise of police power."

Birmingham News 12-4-56

"This has been the expressed opinion of many distinguished and learned justices who have heretofore sat on the Supreme Court," Patterson said.

The high tribunal's decision upheld a ruling by a special three-man U. S. District Court in Montgomery, Ala., which struck down state and Montgomery laws requiring separation of the races on buses.

PATTERSON'S petition said the state respectfully submitted that "laws permitting and even requiring the separation of the races in places where they are liable to be brought into contact do not necessarily imply the inferiority of either race to the other."

There is now "a no man's land in which the state, under the Supreme Court's opinion, is powerless to protect property and prevent breaches of the peace which will inevitably result from the court's decision," the petition added.

The attorney general asked the court to reinstate the principle of separate but equal facilities.

Patterson's petition may automatically hold up desegregation.

On bus desegration—

Judge challenges Brownell's moves

CLAYTON, Ala., Dec. 4——The authority of Atty. Gen. Brownell to try to apply a recent Supreme Court decision against city bus segregation to the entire South was challenged yesterday by Circuit Judge George Wallace.

Wallace said Brownell has no authority to instigate suits against bus segregation laws or to test the laws. Only private individuals can bring such suits, the judge said.

BROWNELL HAS scheduled a conference with U. S. district attorneys from the South next week to discuss application of the Nov. 13 decision on Montgomery city and Alabama bus segregation laws.

Wallace said a statement by Brownell that bus segregation is now a dead letter makes the judge think Brownell "either told a deliberate lie or is one of the most uninformed attorneys general in history." The decision applies only to Montgomery, Ala., Wallace said.

Segregation laws "are still in force and will be enforced in this county," Wallace declared in a charge to the Barbour County Grand Jury.

THE JURY WAS expected to consider charges that W. A. Stokes Sr., a member of the county board of registrars from Eufaula, and Elijah Franklin, a Negro, illegally registered 32 Negro voters. Indictments against them were thrown out earlier on technical grounds.

The names are still on voting lists after a state effort to have them purged was dismissed, also on a technicality.

NEW YORK MAYOR Robert Wagner purchases first two tickets for a benefit concert to be held Dec. 5, at Manhattan Center to commemorate the first anniversary of the non-violent protest against bus segregation in Montgomery, Ala. In photo are (rear) Mrs. Wagner, Mrs. Ralph J. Bunche and Mrs. Roy Wilkins. Kiddies are Andy Levison and Lynn Elda Kilgore.

Sniper Fires On Bus; Wounds Negro Woman

DRIVER CHECKS BULLET HOLE IN BUS
William H. Fullilove, 2805 Locust St.

PASSENGERS GET ABOARD BOYLSTON BUS
At Police Station Following Shooting Incident

Officials Halt Transit Line After Attacks

A Negro woman was wounded in both legs here last night by a sniper's bullet fired from ambush into a city bus carrying 12 passengers.

The same bus was fired on a second time a short while later. No one was reported injured in the second shooting.

Montgomery Police Commissioner Clyde C. Sellers ordered all bus runs halted for the remainder of the night.

LAUNDRY WORKER

The Negro woman was identified as Rosa Jordan, 22, a laundry worker. The bullet pierced one of her legs and lodged in the other, according to attendants at Oak Street Hospital where she was admitted. Her condition was reported as satisfactory.

The first shooting took place on Columbus avenue near Bainbridge street about 6:35 p.m. Whites and Negroes were riding the bus in a segregated seating arrangement.

The second shooting occurred after the Boylston bus had left police headquarters at 7:30 p.m. and almost in the same spot. The second shot glanced off the front window near driver W. H. Fullilove of 2805 Locust St.

BUS RETURNED

The spot where both shootings took place is a fringe neighborhood, housing Negroes on one side of the street, whites on the other. Police said both shots came from the direction of a new Negro housing project.

After the first shooting the bus returned to police headquarters with the dozen passengers, about equally divided between white and Negro.

After interrogation by police, the white passengers boarded the buses to continue the interrupted trip. The Negroes refused to reboard the bus, however.

At almost the same spot as the initial shooting, a bullet glanced off a front window near the driver.

All passengers returned to police headquarters for the second time—riding on the floor of the shot-riddled bus.

After a second interrogation, the passengers were returned to their homes in police squad cars.

Fullilove said most of the riders thought the first shot was a firecracker. But when the Jordan woman screamed, "something hit me . . . I don't know what it is." and they saw the blood on her legs, they realized a sniper was at work.

The Jordan woman was sitting on the left side of the bus, on the driver's side, near the rear wheel on a seat parallel to the windows. The bullet smashed through the steel siding and struck her in the legs.

She was placed under sedative at the hospital, police reported.

City Detective J. C. McKenzie was aboard the return run of the bus when it ran into the second ambush. He ordered all passengers to lie on the floor during the trip to headquarters.

Police combed the area after both incidents but failed to turn up any concrete clues. They said the shots came from the Negro housing project.

An emergency meeting of the City Commission was held at police headquarters in city hall after the first shooting and Police Commissioner Clyde Sellers and Mayor W. A. Gayle ordered suspension of bus operations for the rest of the night. The order was given to the Montgomery City Lines at about 7:15 p.m., Sellers said.

A spokesman for the lines said the buses will resume normal operations at about 6 a.m. Saturday.

WHITE DISSIDENTS STIR BUS CLASHES

New York Times 12-23-56

Some Incidents Attributed to a Montgomery Plot by Segregationists

By GEORGE BARRETT

Special to The New York Times.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Dec. 22—The number of white passengers riding Montgomery's newly integrated buses increased today. However, there were signs that some white supremacists were trying to incite racial fights to "prove" that Jim Crowism must still be maintained in practice—if not by law—on the local buses.

This was the second day that Montgomery's buses ran on a desegregated basis, following a direct order from the Supreme Court. The mood of general unconcern over the issue was reflected in the way whites and Negroes mixed almost without incident as they took the buses to town for Christmas shopping.

But the phrase "almost without incident" contains the real danger that confronts Montgomery as each day passes with no public outcry against desegregation. Small groups of white segregationists, disturbed over the easy transition from long-established customs, apparently are plotting to foment trouble.

Passive Resistance

One incident occurred this morning on a bus that starts in a Negro section and runs through a neighborhood of upper-class white families. A Negro man boarded the bus and took a seat in the front, which used to be reserved for whites. A white woman immediately stood, charged that he had "muttered" at her, and began belaboring him with a book.

He took the attack in silence. Six other Negroes sitting in the bus said nothing and did not move to his defense, adhering to the Negroes' resolve here never to meet violence with violence. Finally, they all rose and quietly left the bus.

Several cars occupied by white men had pulled up behind and in front of the bus. The woman looked at the white bus driver, but he simply asked her if she wanted to make a formal complaint. She retorted that she "might have known that's all that would happen," got out of the bus and entered one of the cars.

Negro leaders did not report that incident to the police. They are deliberately "playing down" all such provocations, determined not to give the white supremacists any chance to exploit the transition process.

Senator Makes Charge

Later, State Senator Sam Engelhardt Jr., Secretary of the White Citizens Council in the state, telephoned the newspapers here to charge that a Negro man had winked at a white woman and invited her to sit down beside him.

Witnesses of the incident said, however, that the Negro's wife had followed him into the bus and was paying the fares when the white woman began striking her husband. The White Citizens Council did not explain why any Negro would invite a white woman to sit with him in a town like Montgomery, or why he would offer her a seat his wife would expect to use.

It is this kind of a created incident that the Negro leaders here fear could set off racial rioting despite their efforts to give no offense.

A "prayer for guidance" has been distributed by the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., leader of the Negroes' year-long struggle to abolish Jim Crow on the buses. He has called upon Montgomery's 50,000 Negroes to display a "calm and loving dignity" through the critical days of the transition.

"If cursed, do not curse back," the Negroes have been instructed. "If pushed, do not push back. If struck, do not strike back. Evidence love and good will at all times."

Most of the passengers on the buses today were Negroes, but a tally made by the bus drivers for the company showed that there were more whites on the buses than there had been on Saturdays during the past few weeks.

BUS INTEGRATION IN ALABAMA CALM

New York Times

Montgomery Quiet on First Day of Change—Single Act of Violence Reported

Sat. 12-22-56

By The Associated Press.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Dec. 21—The Southern tradition of racial segregation ended calmly on city buses here today. Negroes sat where they pleased without interference.

Some chose front seats while white passengers took those farther back. Before the buses were desegregated under a Federal court order that went in effect yesterday, Negroes were seated in the rear.

Only one incident of violence was reported. A Negro woman said she had been slapped and shoved to the ground by a young white man as she got off a bus.

But there was no widespread violence despite earlier predictions of "bloodshed" by some city officials.

Precaution Is Urged

To lessen the possibility of trouble, Negro leaders urged their people to stay off the buses after dark as much as possible for the first few days.

The Rev. Robert Graetz, a white minister who has supported the Negroes, said that precaution had been taken on the theory that the danger was greater at night.

J. H. Bagley, bus company manager, said no service would be provided after 7 or 7:30 P. M. until the demands justifies later runs. Bus schedules have been curtailed since shortly after the mass Negro boycott began more than a year ago.

The report of an attack on a Negro woman came from a Negro spokesman, the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., and was not made to the police department.

Mr. King identified the woman as Mrs. Janie Ruth Wilson, a servant in the home of a white family. He said she had suffered a cut lip but was not seriously hurt.

Attack Not Returned

The minister, who was a leader of the eyar-long mass boycott of city buses before they were desegregated, said Mrs. Wilson had made no attempt to strike back. Negro leaders had urged their people in recent days to remain peaceful during the change to integration, "even if others strike first."

Downtown, a white man watching a Negro board a bus shouted to photographers, "go ahead get that black ——'s picture." But Negroes standing near-by let the remark go unanswered and it ended there.

White passengers for the most part reacted calmly to the end of bus segregation. On one bus, five white women sat down behind a young Negro already seated.

A girl who gave her name as Linda Russell, 18 years old, sat down beside a Negro woman as she boarded a bus in a residential district. Miss Russell told reporters "I figure if they stay in their place and leave me alone, I'll stay in my place and leave them alone."

Four carloads of white men and some in a pickup truck stayed close to a downtown bus stop for part of the morning but left. At one time the men left their cars and conferred on a street corner. Later one of the cars drove off at a signal from three heavy-set white men in a passing automobile.

Ministers Set Example

Police Chief G. J. Ruppenthal said he had received no report of their presence.

Mr. King and other Negro ministers rode buses during the day to set an example for their race. The clergymen described the conduct of bus drivers as "exceptionally courteous."

The drivers, employes of Montgomery City Lines, Inc., had been notified officially of the new integration policy last night. Signs advising Negroes to sit in the rear were gone from the buses today.

Some Negroes continued to sit in the back despite the end of segregation as a requirement of the law. Others sat in seats once reserved for white passengers.

Two city officials, Mayor W. A. Gayle and Police Commissioner Clyde Sellers, testified in United States District Court here last May 11 that the end of bus segregation would bring "violence and bloodshed."

They were witnesses in the court suit that led to the United States Supreme Court decision holding city and state bus segregation laws invalid.

Segregation Ends Quietly On Bus Line

Boston Herald

Actual Incidents Of Race Mingling Few, Far Between

Sat. 12-22-56

Racial segregation on city buses in Montgomery ended serenely here yesterday.

Negro and white passengers seats on buses where they found them, and in isolated instances memberse of the two races sat side by side.

The calm but cautious acceptance of this significant change in Montgomery's way of life came without any major disturbances.

A statement by Police Chief G. J. Ruppenthal last night told the story in full—there were no reports of violence made to the police, no additional officers were called into duty.

NO MASS RETURN

"It was just another Friday before Christmas for us," Ruppenthal said.

There was no mass return to city buses by Negroes. And many of those who did return walked to the rear of the bus to take a seat, just as they had been required to do by law until yeserday.

There was also a scracity of white people on the buses. Even during late afternoon rush hours yesterday most of the vehicles were only partially filled.

Instead of riding the buses, numerous Montgomerians watched them with mixed emotions. Throngs crowded the downtown area during the late afternoon, and every time a bus pulled to a curb to pick up passengers, passers-by stopped to watch.

FEWER PASSENGERS

Bus company officials said last night they were unable to determine to what extent business had increased, but it was apparent the number of passengers yesterday was far below the pre-boycott average.

Wire services reported a Negro woman was struck in the face by a young white man just as she departed from a bus, but police officials said no such incident was reported to them.

Rarely during the day did whites and Negroes sit side by side, the first such case occurring early yesterday morning when a young salesgirl boarded a bus and sat beside a Negro woman although there were seats available which she could have shared with white passengers.

"I figure if they stay in their place and leave me alone, I'll stay in mine and leave them alone," she commented later to newsmen.

BUS INTEGRATION STARTS QUIETLY

Times-Picayune New Orleans, La.

Montgomery Ends Traditional Segregation

Sat. 12-22-56

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Dec. 21 (AP)—The southern tradition of racial segregation ended calmly on city buses in Montgomery today and Negroes sat where they pleased without interference.

In some instances, they chose front seats while white passengers took those farther back. Before the buses were desegregated under a federal court order which went in effect yesterday, Negroes were seated in the rear.

There was only one reported incident of violence. A Negro woman said she was slapped and shoved to the ground by a young white man as she got off a bus.

But there was no widespread violence despite earlier predictions of "bloodshed" by some city officials.

Warns of Night Riding

To lessen the possibility of trouble, Negro leaders urged their people to stay off the buses after dark as much as possible for the first few days.

The Rev. Robert Graetz, a white minister who has supported the Negroes, said that precaution was taken on the theory that the danger is greater at night.

Bus company Manager J.H Bagley said no service will be provided after 7 or 7:30 p.m. until the demands justify later runs. Bus schedules have been curtailed since shortly after the mass Negro boycott began more than a year ago.

The report of an attack on a Negro woman came from a Negro spokesman, Rev. M. L. King Jr., and was not made to police.

Suffers Cut Lip

King identified the woman as Mrs. Janie Ruth Wilson, a servant in the home of a white family. He said she suffered a cut lip but was not seriously hurt.

The minister said Mrs. Wilson telephoned him that a young white man slapped her and shoved her to the ground and then sped away in a waiting automobile bearing an out-of-state tag.

The white man was riding the same bus and got off when Mrs. Wilson and a woman companion debarked, King said.

Times New York Sat. 12-22-56

Associated Press Wirephoto

ON A BUS IN ALABAMA: Negroes in Montgomery were free yesterday to sit where they chose as Supreme Court order banning racial segregation became effective. Among the first riders were the Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy, left, and the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., who had been active in boycott of buses. At right is the Rev. Glenn Smiley of New York.

60 Per Cent Loss

P. 1

"Walkers" Urged To Hold Out In Protest

Daily World

Atlanta, Ga. Tues. 2-28-56

BY PAT J. McDONNELL

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — (INS) — Negro ministers in Montgomery, backed by a mounting support from throughout the nation, urged their people to hold out in a long bus boycott which was termed "a great moral and religious crusade against racial discrimination."

"Segregation can't survive because God is against it," the Rev. M. L. King told his congregation at Sunday services.

When Christians, Negro and white seek out the gospel of God, the Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy said in another church across town:

"It will no longer be the white race this, the Negro race that, but it will be the human race—the christian race."

The Montgomery boycott began Dec. 5 when a Negro woman was arrested for refusing to give her seat on a city bus to a white passenger. Since then, home of two boycott leaders were bombed, and 89 Negroes were arrested, charged with conspiring to create an illegal boycott.

The Montgomery "passive resistance" movement drew support from leading Negro church groups in the nation. New York City ministers set March 28 as a "National Deliverance Day" in a sympathy protest, and there were demands the the U. S. Justice Department move to 'protect' arrested leaders of the boycott.

LOSES BIG

Montgomery mayor, W. A. Gayle said that the city would continue to operate its busses although the transit system is losing 60 per cent of its normal income. He said 'fear' was keeping most of the Negroes off the buses, and added that city officials "have done all we can within the law which we have taken an oath to uphold."

"We have no desire to harm the Bus Company," the Rev. Abernathy said, adding:

"They can run those buses as long as they want to—but they won't run them with Negroes on them until they give us justice."

Referring to stacks of letters and telegrams, many containing contributions and pledging future support he said:

"You are not standing in this thing alone. We'll fight until the walls of segregation crumble."

"God rules the world, and evil will not survive," the Rev. King preached. He urged his congregation:

"Dont get weary. Don't lose foith in me. My faith in man is, at bottom, a faith in good. Believe that the most prejudiced mind in Montgomery, in America, can become a living mind—a mind of good will."

In an obvious reference to another Alabama segregation fight—the attempt of Autherine Lucy to go to school at the University of Alabama, the Rev. King said:

"Thank God, there are some people who can rise above the old and broken down thoughts of their parents, who can rise above their background and their heredity."

Daily World

Miss Lucy, admitted to the University by court order and then excluded after three days of riotous demonstrations, maintained silence on report that her aged farmer-parents had urged her to give up her efforts and attend instead a school where Negroes are "acceptable."

P. 4

The Rev. King told his congregation:

"It is all around us. You hear 'my parents don't agree with me,' 'my community don't agree with me,' but thank God there are people who can rise above superstitution and fear of their background.'

He, like other Montgomery ministers, urged "love instead of hate" and said:

"Don't get discouraged. Don't get mad at man. Man, for all his prejudices, is still young. Give him a chance."

Despite 62 Arrests

Herald

Negroes Continue To Boycott Buses

Thurs. 2-23-56 P. 2-A

Miami, Fla.

MONTGOMERY, Ala. —(INS)— Negro ministers, political leaders, volunteer car-pool operators and the woman whose arrest touched off a mass boycott against Montgomery's City Bus Lines were arrested Wednesday.

By mid-afternoon, 62 Negroes, including 14 ministers, had been taken into custody or had surrendered on grand jury indictments charging violation of an anti-boycott law. In the indictments issued Tuesday the grand jury branded the boycott illegal and an incitement to "racial tension and violence."

Among those picked up were P. M. Blair, unofficial mayor of the city's Negro population; Jammie Parks, head of a Negro high school, and Dr. M. C. Cleveland, of Day Street Baptist Church.

Dr. Cleveland is also chairman of the Foreign Mission Board of Convention.

Rosa Parks, whose arrest last Dec. 1 over her refusal to change seats in a city bus at the driver's request touched off the 12-week-old boycott, was among those taken into custody.

The woman was arrested after her appearance Wednesday before Circuit Judge Eugene Carter who upheld her original fine of $10 plus $4 costs.

Meanwhile, the boycott, which began Dec. 5, continued in full force.

Hundreds of Negroes and whites lined the driveway leading to the jail in a segregated pattern as the accused were arrested or surrendered. They included:

Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy, pastor of the First Baptist Church, the first man to be apprehended.

E. D. Nixon, president of the county Negro Democratic Association, whose home was bombed during the boycott.

Rev. J. W. Hayes and Dr. S. S. Seay, respectively presiding elder and executive secretary of the home missions board of the A. M. E. Zion Churches.

R. James Glasco, secretary of the Negro Ministerial Alliance, where the grand jury charged the boycott originated.

Rev. Leroy Bennett and Rev.

BENNETT

ABERNATHY

A. W. Wilson, of the Holt St. Baptist Church, where the first boycott meeting was held.

Rev. Aaron Hoffman, a Baptist minister.

W. J. Powell, pastor of the Old Ship Methodist Church.

Joe Anne Robinson, president of the Womens Political Action Council of Montgomery.

The Montgomery police carried out the arrests under a 1929 labor law banning boycotts. The law carries jail sentences of six months and fines of $1,000.

Police announced Tuesday night that 115 persons had been indicted by the grand jury but it was not yet certain whether all of them will be arrested in connection with the boycott. Under Alabama law names are kept secret until arrests are made.

Negro Pastor Vows Boycott Will Go On

Wall-Telegram

Tues. 2-28-56

By the Associated Press

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Feb. 28.—A Negro minister indicted in Montgomery's bus boycott told a cheering throng at a mass meeting last night that "no city in the world can afford to make criminals out of 4 of its preachers."

P. 6

New York, N.Y.

This declaration by the Rev L. R. Bennett came after church groups in other sections of the nation took stands over the arrest of 24 Negro ministers here for leading the protest against segregation on city buses.

Mr. Bennett, pastor of the Mount Zion African Methodist Episcopal Church, together with other indicted Negro clergymen spoke at a meeting marking the end of the boycott's 12th week.

Negro Boycott Leader Vows 'Finish' Fight

Inquirer Mon. 2-27-56

Philadelphia, Pa. P. 4

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Feb. 26 (UP).—A leader in the Negro boycott of Montgomery buses said from the pulpit today that his people would see the boycott "to the finish."

The Rev. Martin Luther King asked the members of his Baptist church not to get weary of the hardships brought about by the 12-week boycott of Montgomery city buses, and told them, "No goal was ever attained without sacrifice."

'WE WILL NOT STOP'

The 27-year-old minister, who is president of the Montgomery Improvement Association which has backed the boycott, said, "Even if the boycott ended now, the Negro in Montgomery has achieved a new dignity. But we will not stop now, we will see it to a finish."

Nearly 500 Negroes who jammed into the small Dexter Avenue Baptist Church heard the minister promise that "the prejudiced mind in Montgomery and America can become a kind and loving mind."

'DELIVERANCE DAY'

Meanwhile, in New York the first steps were taken toward the organization of an hour-long nation-wide work stoppage in sympathy with the Montgomery Negroes.

Rep. Adam Clayton Powell, Jr., Democratic member of Congress and a minister, met one hour at his Harlem church with Negro union officials to plan a March 28 "Deliverance Day" demonstration that will call for a one-hour work stoppage by both whites and Negroes across the nation.

Powell said he hoped to win the cooperation of employers, employes and other citizens as well in halting all but vital services from 2 to 3 P. M. on the Wednesday before Easter. He said the hour would be used as an hour of prayer for the Montgomery Negroes.

Citizens Continue To Walk Rather Than Ride Buses

World 2-28-56
Birmingham, Ala.

BY PAT J. McDONNELL

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — (INS) — Montgomery Negroes doggedly continued to walk rather than ride segregated buses Saturday while the U. S. Justice Department studied the mass arrest of 89 boycott leaders with an eye to possible federal intervention.

There was no sign of any compromise in the dispute that has gripped the Alabama Capital since Dec. 5, and one churchman described the city's 50,000 Negro residents as "closer together than ever before."

The White House disclosed that Attorney General Herbert Brownell, Jr. ,has been asked to determine whether the Federal government can or should intervene in the Montgomery case.

NEW LOW

Rep. Adam Clayton Powell, (D) N. Y., who asked for federal intervention, arrest of boycott leaders—many of them church or political figures—"a new low in American barbarism."

There was some hesitation among Montgomery Negroes about endorsing Rep. Powell's call for a nationwide one-hour work-stoppage of Negroes on March 28, as a "passive resistance" demonstration of support for the boycott.

HESITANT ON APPROVAL

The Montgomery leaders described as "encouraging" the messages of moral support from national Negro leaders, but were hesitant to lend approval to the spread of their own movement.

"We have not given this too much study," said the Rev. A. W. Wilson of the national movement, adding that "personally I don't know whether it would be wise" to endorse a national Negro crusade.

He explained:

"The inclination here has been to say that Montgomery Negroes have been 'stirred up by outside agitators.'

"This is not so at all.

This has been a local movement and our people will continue to seek ways of working out our problem. I believe our people will remain united and carry on. But I think we need to wait a while, until things get normal again, before considering any new moves."

89 LEADERS

The Rev. Wilson said that the long bus boycott, marked by bombing of two homes of Negroes and by the arrest this week of 89 leaders on a misdemeanor charge of illegal boycott, "has united our people in a common cause under the banner of the church." He added:

"The future is too uncertain. I would hesitate to say what might happen. But I believe the Negro population today has been brought closer together than ever before.

"I think it has all had a very wholesome effect on the community. Regular church service attendance has increased. Some people who had not been as regular as they should have been, now have come back to seek guidance of the almighty in a time of trouble."

Negro leaders appeared ready to sit tight for the moment. Spokesmen and the executive committee of the Montgomery improvement association, formed to guide the boycott, probably would take no additional action until those arrested on boycott charges this week stand trial the week of March 12.

Nor did city officials have any announced plans of action to settle the dispute pending the trials.

WELL PUBLICIZED

White citizens questioned at random on the streets about the dispute shrugged their shoulders, and generally gave the impression of trying to ignore the wel-publicized "day of walking and praying."

Editors of leading Alabama newspapers viewed the boycott as part of the southwide problem evoked by attempts to end the region's traditional racial segregation. On the suggestion of Gov. James E. Folsom ,the editors decided to have a bi-racial committee study possible ways of easing "tensions."

While the Montgomery boycott wore on, another aspect of the segregation question was to be unfolded Wednesday in Birmingham. A federal court will decide there whether University of Alabama officials should be held guilty of contempt of court for barring a Birmingham Negro, Autherine Lucy, from the Tuscaloosa campus.

Miss Lucy, the first Negro student in the school's 125-year history, was admitted to classes on a federal court order earlier this month, but "excluded" by the school trustees after three days of demonstrations and riots by students and townsfolk.

Editor Expresses Caution For Rep. Powell Movement

Atlanta, Georgia. —(SNS)

In a night letter to Congressman Adam Clayton Powell, C. A. Scott, editor and general manager of the Atlanta Daily World said:

"I appreciate your concern about the Montgomery, Alabama situation but think plan for work stoppage would be unfair to innocent persons. Reports are that Governor Folsom and the U. S. Department of Justice are intervening in Montgomery problem and we believe this will result in a satisfactory solution."

Attorney A. T. Walden, local leader has also expressed a similar interest, stating that such a move as advocated by the famous Congressman, would cause Negroes to lose more friendly support to their cause in Montgomery and hurt the program generally.

Walking And Praying

World 2-28

The protest in Montgomery by a certain segment against what they believe and alleged to be unfair treatment of some patrons riding city buses has now spread over 86 days. This protest which grew out of the arrest and fining of a passenger who refused to give her seat to another rider and push back into the crowded vehicle where she would have to stand up did not originally start out to challenge the bus seating laws in this state. From what we understand it was never planned as a boycott but merely as a protest aimed at conference table adjustment of alleged grievance.

Birmingham, Ala.

Since that time there has been the labeling of the protest as a "boycott" to make the action take on the coloration of violation of Alabama's anti-labor laws which is the real historical foundation of the 35-year old boycott laws. In the earlier stages of the protest, there were conference in which bus company officials, city officials, protest leaders and a special committee appointed by the city's mayor met and tried to find a formula for settling the differences. This failed, partly because of the cloud of emotion, hysteria, and confusion which had been created. The White Citizens Council had started a propaganda campaign which, we think, added only in a negative way.

Ledger 2-28-56

Resistance began to harden on both sides. The issue of the constitutionality of the seating laws was injected by those whose actions and utterances reflected the impression that they were unwilling to improve seating and passenger treatment within the patterns of the versatility of the existing law. Finally the seating issue went to federal court. The protest group was indicted. World attention has now been focused on the protest.

Pressure, persuasion, intimidation, threats and other powers, have been employed to overcome the protest, but without success. Underneath all of this seems to be a moral and spiritual issue. Moral issues sink deeper than social and racial issues.

Alabama boycott laws have legal vitality only when the facts show the actions charged are "without just or legal excuse."

The protest group has alleged numerous grievance in support of the course taken. Simply their stated position has been to seek more courteous treatment for bus riders, seating on a first-come, first served basis and the employment of Negro drivers on buses operating into predominantly Negro residential areas.

Yet involved is still another significant issue. The citizenship issue here is vaster than anything else, it seems. Does one man's citizenship rights count as much as another's? How far will those sworn to uphold the law go toward defending such rights? When such rights are challenged, what is the duty of responsible men? The mutual protection and equal defense of the citizenship rights of all is the cornerstone of an enduring democracy. Citizenship rights can never be defined properly on the basis of section, status, race, or religion. This is where understanding is needed. This is where leadership is needed.

In Montgomery, the segment which feels mistreated is walking and praying that a day of freedom will come. They are calling upon a Power higher than man's authority to help them. This group expouses the teachings of Christ which seem to be at war with the teachings of the WCC.

In time, when all of this is settled, Montgomery is bound to return to its high place among American cities, and with a determination to let good citizenship and goodwill have their way.

Bus Boycott On Till Jim Crow Ends, 4,000 Vow at Montgomery Rally

Special to the New York Post

Montgomery, Ala., April 27.—The five-month bus boycott by Montgomery's Negroes will continue because "we'll never go back to Jim Crowism," 4,000 Negroes voted unanimously at a mass meeting last night.

The voice vote was enthusiastically taken after city and state officials warned that local segregation laws must be observed. If necessary, drivers permitting integrated seating would be arrested, officials said.

The meeting bust into cheers when a resolution calling for continuance of the boycott was seconded by the Rev. B. D. Lambert.

"We have walked for almost 20 weeks and it's only a few days more until May 11," he said.

REV. M. L. KING

He was referring to the date for hearing of a Federal Court suit challenging the segregation laws of the state and city. The suit was a direct result of the boycott begun Dec. 5.

There was another burst of cheering when the Rev. Lambert told the crowd:

"We'll never go back to Jim Crowism."

The resolution stressed that conflict between the city and the bus company—which has ordered mixed seating—has prevented a solution of the bus segregation issue and "we will continue to carry out our mass protests until such a time as these matters are clarified."

It was introduced by the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., boycott leader, who told the rally:

"Don't abuse your rights and privileges. A great adjustment needs to be made among our race."

He urged the crowd to pray for recovery of J. H. Bagley, superintendent of Montgomery City Lines, who had a heart attack Wednesday.

King likewise asked for prayers for the three-man City Commission "to lift them from the darkness of injustice."

Before the rally, bus company officials and the City Commission met for 2½ hours but "reached no conclusions." Another meeting will be held today or tomorrow.

Mayor Gayle, a commission member, has indicated that the city may attempt to revoke the bus company's franchise if the company fails to observe city segregation laws.

The rally resolution pointed out that Richmond, Va., Little Rock, Ark.; Dallas, Texas, and other Southern cities had ended bus segregation following the Supreme Court decision last Monday.

"White and Negro passengers rode together on front seats without incidents, mishaps or disturbance in these cities," it read.

The resolution began by citing early reports that the Supreme Court ruling "held the city ordinances and state statutes requiring segregation on public conveyances for hire intrastate are unconstitutional."

Since the decision legal experts have said that the court did not actually so rule, but simply declined to hear a Columbia, S. C., suit involving bus segregation until a lower court had issued a final decision.

The City Commission was quick to seize upon this interpretation, contending that the Supreme Court order in no way affected state or city segregation laws in Alabama.

Associated Press Wirephoto

This driver is all alone as bus moves through Montgomery, Ala., where Negroes have voted to continue boycott. "Ease That Squeeze" refers to traffic problems, but Negroes, using car pools, ignore it as well as "Ride the Bus" appeals. The boycott is now in the fifth month.

Courier
Sat. 2-11-56
P. 3
Pittsburgh, Pa.

Bomb Target—Broken window panes and spilters litter the porch of the Rev. M. L. King in the wake of the bombing which rocked the pastor's Montgomery (Ala.) home. The Rev. Mr. King is one of the key leaders in the boycott against the Montgomery bus lines.

* * *

Minister Denied Gun Permit

MONTGOMERY, Ala.—Sheriff Mac (Slim) Butler said a request for a pistol permit made Feb. 1 by the Rev. M. L. King Jr. for a night watchman at the latter's home has been denied. The home of the Rev. Mr. King, a leader in the bus boycott, was bombed last week.

* * *

MONTGOMERY, Ala.—Trav.l segregation laws here are under legal attack in a suit filed in Federal Court Feb. 2.

One of the plaintiffs, however, has announced that because of threats she is withdrawing from the case.

Courier P. 3
Sat. 2-11-56
Pittsburgh, Pa.

Second Bombing In Montgomery

Courier P. 3
Sat. 2-11-56

MONTGOMERY, Ala.—Admitting that although they don't agree with the thinking of Negroes boycotting Montgomery bus lines, the pro-segregationist City Commission posted a $500 reward for information leading to those responsible for the bombing of the home of the Rev. M. L. King, a leader in the bus protest.

Another bombing occurred two nights later in the front yard of E. D. Nixon who made national news last summer when he protested the exclusion of Negro Democrats from a Jefferson-Jackson Day dinner in Birmingham.

Both men were away from home at the time of the bombings.

* * *

AT HOME at the King residence was his wife, their seven-month-old baby and the wife of a friend. No one was hurt.

The blast, said to have been caused by a stick of dynamite, or less, ripped the windows of the Kings' den and shattered window panes in the living room.

After the explosion, 300 irate Negroes gathered in front of the King's home, but were told by the young minister, "Don't get panicky . . . we are not advocating violence."

Police Commissioner Clyde C. Sellers also spoke to the group, telling them that he did not condone such acts of violence and "I will certainly do everything in my power to bring the guilty parties to court and put them in prison.

Ernest Walters, the Kings' neighbor, reported he saw a car, driven by a man, stop and speed away at the same time the blast went off.

—BIGGEST and the BEST—

Call
Fri. 2-10-56
P. 1
Kansas City, Mo.

Leader Refuses To 'Run' Despite New Threats Of Death After Bombing

Former NAACP Head Says He's 'Staying Here'

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — (ANP) — A Negro leader whose home was bombed last week said he and his wife "are staying right here," despite new threats of death unless he "gets out of town quick."

"I've been threatened before," said E. D. Nixon, former state president of the NAACP, "and I haven't left yet.

Nixon, a Pullman porter, was on his Montgomery-Chicago run when a bomb was tossed in his front yard. His wife, Mary, and a neighbor's child were alone in the house. Neither was injured.

A few hours after his return Friday, he received threats over the telephone.

Don't Like Fresh "N " . . .

He was warned in the first: "If you don't get out of town quick we'll get you out of action with a gun or another bomb."

The second call, by another persons, said:

"We don't like fresh n - - - s. Get out or we'll fix you."

Nixon, one of the leaders in the two-month-old Negro boycott of Montgomery busses, said he also was threatened last summer after he protested the exclusion of Negro Democrats from a Jefferson-Jackson day dinner in Birmingham.

He was refused an invitation and Gov. G. Mennen Williams of Michigan, the principal speaker, cancelled his engagement because of the segregation issue.

Bombing of the Nixon home came hours after another blast shattered windows and damaged the front porch of the home of Rev. Martin Luther King, 27, who has acted as spokesman for Negroes since the bus boycott began Dec. 5.

Police Chief G. J. Ruppenthal said there have been no new leads in the bombings.

Call

Meanwhile, NAACP Executive Secretary Roy Wilkins called upon James E. Folsom of Alabama to halt the violence against Montgomery Negroes.

P. 4

In a wire to Folsom, Wilkins specifically asked that state officials 'take appropriate investigative and police action to restore law and order in Montgomery, to protect Negro citizens there from further intimidation and violence and to see that those responsible for the bombings are brought to justice."

Wilkins pointed out that "these bombings follow a 'get tough' policy announced by Mayor Gale (of Montgomery) last week as a means of ending the protest movement against city bus segregation."

Mayor Gale, Wilkins noted, "is reported to be a member of the notorious Citizens Councils."

Those Spunky Alabamans

Call P. 18

The Negro people of Montgomery, Ala., are giving members of their race all over the country a lesson in perseverance, courage and determination. Whoever would have thought that a boycott begun early in December would still be almost 100 per cent effective two months later.

Fri. 2-10-56

While the boycott may be frowned upon in some areas, the folks down in Alabama are proving it to be an effective weapon in the fight against segregation. They are proving beyond a shadow of a doubt that "money talks."

Kansas City, Mo.

Irked all along because of the way the "sliding" segregation sign was handled on the city busses and fired into action by the arrest of a woman bus passenger who refused to move behind the sign, the Negroes of Montgomery simply decided to stop riding the busses until they could get fairer treatment. They did not hope for the complete removal of segregation on the busses. They merely wanted their fair share of the seats.

P. 18

The bus company has been made to feel the economic pinch during the last two months. The White Citizens' Council of Montgomery, to which, by the way, belong the mayor and other officials of the town, resent the display of bravery by the Negro citizens and somebody is trying to break the spirit of the colored folk by throwing bombs on their homes, by placing them under arrest for no reason and by other acts of intimidation. But the Negroes are sticking it out, threats or no threats, and are ready, more than likely, to face death for their cause. We didn't know such spunk existed in 'Bama.

The really significant thing in the bus boycott is the way that the Negro people have stuck together for a common cause. The bus company has lost about 75 per cent of its patronage. Ninety per cent of the Negro riders are finding other ways to go to work.

If the Negro people of some northern cities we could name had the "stick-to-itiveness" of the people of Montgomery, Ala., they long since would have had Negro bus drivers on their own transit lines, Negro girls operating telephone switchboards and Negroes employed in other strategic positions.

It looks as if a southern city is going to show us how to fight for our rights. More power to the people of Montgomery! We glory in their spunk.

Fired Minister Offers Apology

Post-Herald Tues. 6-19-56

P. 1

Can't Substantiate Exploitation Talk

B'ham, Ala.

MONTGOMERY, June 18 (AP)—A young Negro minister ousted from his church said tonight he has "no evidence" to substantiate the charges of misconduct he made a week ago against leaders of Montgomery's Negro bus boycott.

385

The Rev. U. J. Fields offered his apology to boycott leaders in a statement prepared for tonight's regular bi-weekly mass meeting to support the six-month-old protest against bus segregation.

Ala.

Last Monday the 25-year-old Baptist minister resigned as recording secretary of the Montgomery Improvement Assn., the coordinating organization for the boycott.

He charged that a few leaders were exploiting the city's 50,000 boycotting Negroes and that funds contributed across the nation to sustain the boycott were being "misappropriated" for "selfish purposes."

The charges were quickly denied by MIA leaders. Fields said a few days later that he would substantiate them "at the proper time."

The minister had no comment today on a 40-0 vote in his Bell St. Baptist Church congregation last night to remove him from the pulpit. A church leader said the action was touched off, after long dissatisfaction, by the charges against the MIA.

Fields' statement tonight declared: "I said what I did about the 'few exploiting the many' and about money being misplaced (not misused) in anger and passion.

"Certainly, there is no evidence available to me to indicate that money has been misplaced and there is no proof that money has been misused by the MIA. . . ."

MIA funds are being used to operate a car pool as a substitute for the city buses that carried 30,000 to 40,000 Negro passengers a day before the boycott began Dec. 5, 1955.

Montgomery Leaders Hail Court Action

World P. 1 Fri. 4-27-56

B'ham, Ala.

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — (INS) — The leader of Montgomery's highly-publicized Negro boycott of city buses hailed the U. S. Supreme Court decision banning segregation on intra-state conveyances.

"We certainly welcome the decision, and all people of good will welcome it, also," the Rev. M. L. King said.

The Rev. King, who is awaiting appeal on his conviction of violating Alabama's anti-boycott law because of his part in the long Negro protest against the Montgomery transportation system, declared:

"It (the Supreme Court ruling) is a reaffirmation that the principle of segregation in all forms is evil and must be eradicated before our Democratic society will come to full maturity."

"This decision is not a victory for the Negro," the Rev. King said, "but justice and Democracy, and all lovers of Democracy will seek to comply in all good faith with this decision.

In addition to the long bus boycott, which has caused the transit system at Montgomery to reduce its service and raise fares, a Federal Court suit is pending attacking Alabama's State law requiring segregation on intra-state common carriers. This is the same type of law which the Supreme Court said was unconstitutional in South Carolina.

Bus Bias Ordered Replaced

World P. 8 Fri. 4-27-56

B'ham, Ala.

Alabama Orders Bus Company To Replace Color Bars Or "Suffer"

MONTGOMERY, Ala. --(INS)-- Montgomery City Bus Lines, Inc., was ordered by the State of Alabama Tuesday to replace the color bars it dropped Tuesday morning, or "suffer the consequences."

The demand came from the president of Alabama's Public Service Commission, as the Capital City's buses began rolling under a new policy of no segregated seating.

It was a paper policy, because the few Negroes riding today moved to the rear of the vehicles of their own accord. City officials vowed to arrest anyone attempting to integrate the races on buses, including drivers.

Most Negroes in the Alabama city stayed off the vehicles as they have done since their boycott began on Dec. 5, but their leaders were meeting to consider their next steps in the long protest.

The bus company adopted its new policy after the Supreme Court held Monday that segregation on Columbia, S. C., buses is unlawful.

Tuesday, C. C. (Jack) Owen, president of the Alabama Public Service Commission, filed a telegram to the bus company ownership, with copies to all other transit firms in the state, saying:

DEFIANT STAND

"All public carriers are hereby directed to strictly adhere to all present existing segregation laws in our state or suffer the consequences."

Owen would not elaborate on the consequences. His telegram was addressed to Roy Fitzgerald, president of National City Lines of Chicago which owns the Montgomery firm. It declared:

"As president of the Alabama Public Service Commission, elected by the people of Alabama, sworn to uphold the segregation laws of this state which include all forms of public transportation, I hereby defy a ruling handed down by the U. S. Supreme Court ordering desegregation on public carriers. Alabama State law requiring segregation of races on buses still stands.

HALT ORDERED

"I demand that you withdraw your order, approving integration on buses in Montgomery."

Mayor W. A. Gayle released a statement after a City Commission meeting Tuesday morning, saying "The City Commission does not consider that the (Supreme Court) decision did construe the Alabama laws or city ordinances by which we are governed. We therefore expect the bus company and all other persons to abide by all existing laws and ordinances."

Police Commissioner Clyde Sellers said, "Anybody trying to race-mix will be arrested, including bus drivers who permit it." Sellers said the court suit attacking Alabama's transportation - segregation laws will be heard in Montgomery on May 11.

Meanwhile, the 25-man executive committee of the Montgomery Improvement Association, which has led the bus boycott, met to draw recommendations. The Rev. M. L. King, Jr., Association president said the recommendations will be put before a mass meeting of Negroes Thursday night. He said:

"There is still the question of Negro bus drivers. There will have to be some solution to that before we end this. The protest is still continuing about 95 per cent effective."

Bus Segregation Was Not Outlawed Monday

Advertiser P. 4-A Mon. 4-30-56

The press in general slipped badly in reporting the action of the Supreme Court in the South Carolina bus case. The Court's terse dismissal of an appeal in this case was widely interpreted by newspapers, including this one, as ending segregation in intrastate transportation. Some reporters eloquently portrayed the Court as embalming the last remains of the separate-but-equal doctrine of Plessy vs. Ferguson. Misled by these sweeping statements, many editors played the story on their front pages as one of the most significant news events of the day. Actually, the Supreme Court had done nothing more than to dismiss an appeal which had been improperly brought.

Montgomery, Ala.

Thus The Washington Post confirms, as we suggested earlier in the week, that the nation's press was guilty of conclusion-jumping and National City Lines of unseemly haste in assuming the Supreme Court had outlawed segregation in intrastate transportation. The Post, in thorough fashion, describes how the error was perpetrated.

The court's per curiam order said only: "The appeal is dismissed. Slaker vs. O'Conner, 278 U.S. 188."

Looking up the 1929 decision cited, reporters picked out such words as "frivolous" and "needlessly consumed our time" and jumped to the conclusion that the court was saying the present appeal was frivolous, thus confirming the Court of Appeals' findings, including the opinion that the doctrine of separate-but-equal is no longer valid.

The significant holding in Slaker vs. O'Connor was dismissal of an appeal because the decree of the lower court was not final. In the South Carolina bus case, the question of damages was still to be decided. Thus the dismissal, The Post now concludes, was "entirely procedural" and not, as is sometimes the case, an affirmation of the lower court's decree.

There are many reasons why the court may refuse to review a case and seasoned reporters should have known this. But The Post concludes, as The Advertiser said Thursday, that the Supreme Court is partly to blame for the national confusion and excitement at such a critical time:

> . . . The court might well ask itself if it is doing all it can to prevent misunderstanding of its decisions. The court has an interest in having its rulings properly understood. A few clarifying words in its order in the South Carolina bus case would have saved the press from its error. Without minimizing the responsibility of the press for accurate reporting, the court might well remember the speed with which news stories are customarily written and give some brief warning of pitfalls into which laymen trying to understand its work may otherwise fall.

We trust National City Lines, which is now very far out on a sagging limb, will remember this lesson.

38b 1956

Alabama justice blind to spirit of the law

Afro-American p. 1 Sat. 3-31-56

Baltimore, Md.

By CHARLES H. LOEB

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (NNPA) —Motion denied!

Here in terse legal language, was Alabama's answer to the Rev. Martin Luther King and to 50,000 of his followers on whether they have the right to petition, assemble, and peacefully protest their grievances.

It was a justice indeed blind. Blind both to the spirit and to the letter of constitutional law.

In fining the militant young Montgomery minister $500, and hearing the defense notice of appeal, Judge Eugene Carter, (with the air of a good Southern gentleman dispensing charity to his faithful retainers), approved a mutual agreement between state and defense lawyers that 91 other defendants arrested with Rev. King remain free on their original bails until such time as the remedies in appeal sought in the King case have been exhausted.

CONTRARY TO expectations, this trial was no farcial performance—no arrogant show of Dixie justice at is worst.

It was not dispensed by a tobacco-chewing, backwoods judge addressing his petitioners of color as "boy," or Rufus, or Mandy.

It was prosecuted by able solicitors; the best the City of Montgomery and the Montgomery City Bus Lines could obtain.

They knew well the law under which they had elected to try as conspirators, Rev. King and those associated with him in operating the activities of the Montgomery Improvement Association.

* * *

THE OLD statute they had dug up in their effort to "put an end to this foolishness" had been tailored to their specifications by another generation of Alabamians who were desperately trying to increase union memberships. Sat. 3-31-56

Its original target was against white workers.

Now, in Alabama's great hour of need it was lying there, rusty, unused, never repealed, to be used against this unprecedented show of racial solidarity.

Among the brilliant staff of defense lawyers there was never any doubt about the outcome, though each of the eight scrupulously refrained from such predicting. Baltimore, Md.

Charles Langford, Arthur Shores, Fred D. Gray, Robert Carter, Orzell Billingsley, Peter Hall, Dr. C. Eubanks Tucker and Edmund Ragan, huddled together over the counsel table, exchanging notes, ferreting out witnesses from the tips handed them by Montgomery leaders, were not simply trying a simple misdeameanor in a small-town Circuit Court.

THEY KNEW what they were doing and they knew that they, or a hundred different combination of their counterparts will have to be doing the same thing all over the stubborn Southland before the fine-sounding pronouncements of the United States Supreme Court can have real meaning for colored people in Montgomery, who must either walk or ride the city buses and hear, over and over again . . "to the rear you n—rs."

Judge Eugene Carter knew that they were not really trying the case before his court.

They were trying it before the Supreme Court of the United States.

To their everlasting credit, legal experts who watched their thoroughness, nodded their approval of their efforts.

OBJECTION. Overruled. Objection. Overruled. Until one lost count after it became apparant that the ratio would run something like 20 overruled to 1 sustained.

But the counsel for the Rev. Mr. King and his associates well knew that some nine millions of colored Americans in 17 states of the South were their real clients.

So they refused to be ruffled by the special inflections state prosecutor Thetford gave to his precise "Nigra" when referring to colored people. The two other solicitors found it quite easy to pronounce the acceptable 'Negro.'

Judge Carter, too was a "Negra" pronouncer, as he sat calm, detached, radiating keen enjoyment of his role—holding the ramparts for the segregationists—holding the fort for the Griffins, Eastlands, Ellenders and Talmadges of the defiant South . . . buying time for a crumbling Confederacy that feels its birth pains again, but is afraid to conceive.

* * *

APPEALS ARE long, drawn-out affairs, and costly, too.

So, the South, Alabama, Montgomery, Judge Carter are making it as expensive as possible and as long delayed as trick laws, manifestos, Citizens Councils, economic squeezes, and police state justice can make it.

The result is inevitable, but though Alabama bought time at Montgomery, they have done little to ease the plight of Northern investors, who have their money sunk into the Montgomery City Lines.

Will colored passengers now board the buses?

Some 500 colored persons outside the courthouse, minutes from the finale, told this reporter "No."

Some added, "Never."

They waited outside to cheer, to hug, and to kiss the little leader they have come to trust and adore, and to crowd around him and his attractive and loyal wife with cries, "Hail the King," "Don't worry, we're still walking."

* * *

AND THE City of Montgomery, too, is paying a dear price for this show of Dixie legal strongarm. It has been pretty expensive, this putting "those n—rs in their places."

Montgomery City Lines has lost more than $300,000 in revenue they once collected from passengers who no longer use their buses.

Before the boycott, (as one witness, Mrs. Georgia Theresa Gilmore declared on the witness stand) bus officials couldn't tell white money from colored money.

Now they can.

The white money is far from enough to support the operation. Testimony revealed that colored riders are 70 percent of the company's customers.

Pardon. Ex-customers.

The City of Montgomery loses too. Its interest was a lush two percent of the gross income, but that's only money.

* * *

FAR MORE important though is the fact that observers with eyes to see and ears to hear concede that it has forever lost its power to divide, disrupt, intimidate, and consequently to exploit its colored citizens.

Its stubbornness against yielding to a limited, almost innocuous request that colored citizens, resigned to live with jimcrow for some time to come, be decently treated, be given a fair transportation bargain for the money they spend and be considered for employment by the firm which, without their patronage cannot operate, has lost them much of the time Judge Carter bought for them in Montgomery Circuit Court.

So, as predicted, the "record" has been written, carefully, painstakingly, by brilliant defense lawyers, acting for a calm, non-violent, but nonetheless determined band of 50,000 Montgomery citizens of color.

The Montgomery "Manifesto," the plea of its colored people for the right to peacefully petition, to peaceably assembly, to due process of law, denied Thursday in Montgomery Circuit Court, is on its way to nine men in the judicial robes of the U.S. Supreme Court.

Time, and timid colored southerners are both running out.

Negroes Continue Mass Boycott Of Alabama Buses

Advocate Sat. 3-31-56

MONTGOMERY, Ala., March 26 —Negroes continued a mass boycott of segregated buses, a New Jersey newspaper launched a fund drive to pay the fine and court costs of a Negro clergyman convicted of leading the boycott.

The Asbury Park Press started its campaign with a page 1 story and editorial by Editor Wayne D. McMurray. Jackson, Miss.

The Rev. Martin Luther King, Jr., pastor of the Dexter Avenue Baptist Church at Montgomery, was fined $500 Thursday after a four-day trial on charges of conspiring to boycott city buses.

A spokesman for Montgomery City Lines, Inc., said Sunday that "there might have been a few more Negroes patronizing the bus line than there have been in the days preceding King's trial.

The Asbury Park editor Sunday, sent this telegram to King:

"We of the Asbury Park Press, outraged at the conviction of a fellow American for asserting a right our Constitution guarantees to all, want to help you in your fight for justice. We are starting a fund drive among our readers for money to pay your fine and court costs.

"The Press itself is contributing $50. Checks will be drawn in your name and forwarded to you, or to your attorneys if you prefer."

McMurray said the goal of the Press drive is $1,000, and any money collected above that will go to the pastor to help him pay legal costs. Advocate

McMurray said if eventually the clergyman should be acquited and the fine and costs revoked, King will have the use of the money to pay his legal fees. P. 7

The Press editorial said segregation was "un-American and undemocratic," and declared that Negroes in Montgomery argued "justifiably that they should be allowed to sit where they chose on city buses. . . ."

Empty Buses Still Roll In Montgomery

New Orleans La. Sat. 3-31-56

Montgomery, Ala. (A N P) — Whatever the State of Alabama hoped to accomplish in convicting Rev. Martin L. King for leading a boycott against city buses, one thing is certain—the buses are still empty.

As the boycott entered its 17th week and Rev. King prepared to appeal his conviction, Montgomery's Negroes stood fast by their oath not to ride the buses unless they could be treated like human beings.

If the intent of the King trial was to break the back of the protest, it failed miserably.

Not only did it fail, it also caused widespread criticism of Montgomery authorities. Most positive reaction came from Asbury Park, N. J., where the Press, the city's only daily newspaper started a fund drive to pay Rev. King's fine. P. 1

Elsewhere, editorial comment was almost unanimous against the trials. Perhaps most representatives of what the papers said is the Chicago Tribune's statement:

"The people of this country are accustomed to strikes. They do not ordinarily regard as criminal the efforts of employees to wring concessions from their employer by joint action directed at ruining him if he does not yield . . .

"In face of that familiar fact, the ordinary man is going to find it hard to understand why some of the customers of a bus company may not do in defense of their human dignity, what all the employees of the same company may do with impunity to gain 50 cents a week. 3-31-56

"In convicting Rev. Mr. King they (city authorities) have managed to provide their opponents with a certified martyr. At the same time they have given the Negroes of Alabama an opportunity to prove that they understand Christian precepts.

"It will be harder from now on o pretend that all the Negroes of labama are so deficient or backard in moral standards that they ust be segregated."

Buses Are Still Empty

Pittsburgh Courier 3-31-56

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (ANP)—Whatever the state of Alabama hoped to accomplish in convicting the Rev. Martin L. King for leading a boycott against city buses, one thing is certain — the buses are still empty.

As the boycott entered its seventeenth week and the Rev. Mr. King prepared to appeal his conviction, Montgomery's Negroes stood fast by their oath not to ride the buses unless they could be treated like human beings.

Negroes Stand Pat in Boycott

Times-Picayune

Undismayed Despite Onset of Legal Reprisals

Sun. 2-26-56

By REX THOMAS

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Feb. 25 (AP)—A historic week of racial unrest in the cradle of the Confederacy found bus-boycotting Negroes undismayed today despite the onset of legal reprisals. P. 20

But there was still an atmosphere of tension which led an investigating grand jury to warn of violence unless race relations in Montgomery take a more favorable course. New Orleans, La.

White and Negro leaders alike have appealed to both races to scorn the use of force and seek instead a law-abiding, peaceful settlement of their differences.

Negro ministers, 24 of their own number charged with violating the state's antiboycott law, answered the mass of grand jury indictments with prayers for "Those who hate us" and with urgent pleas for a continuing campaign of "passive resistance" without violence.

The protest brought promise of support from Negro leaders elsewhere in the United States. A group of clergymen in New York called for a nationwide one-hour work stoppage of all Negroes March 28.

Other Stoppages Hunted

A spokesman said there might be other, prolonged work stoppages and mass fasting by the nation's Negroes unless the crisis in Alabama is ended.

Rep. Adam Clayton Powell (D-NY), a Negro congressman, asked for "White House" protection for the Montgomery Negroes and denounced the grand jury prosecution as a "new low in American barbarism."

The grand jury, which called the 11-week-old protest against segregated facilities on Montgomery City Lines buses an illegal boycott, returned indictments against 100 Negroes last Tuesday.

In each indictment, the bus boycott leaders and participants were charged with violating a 35-year-old law originally enacted as a brake on labor disturbances and rarely if ever used before.

The maximum penalty for each defendant is six months in jail and a $1,000 fine. The trials will start March 19.

'Actions Not Held Illegal'

Until then, Negro leaders have vowed to carry on the bus protest as though no legal action had been taken, because, as Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy said, "Our actions have not been found to be illegal as of this day. The courts will decide that." Abernathy is one of the 24 Negro clergymen indicted.

"Nothing has changed" in the boycott, Abernathy declared meaning the Negroes will continue to find other means of transportation and motor pools will operate as they have since the protest began last Dec. 5. Some of the car pool drivers were among those indicted.

But for 24 hours Friday, to demonstrate their determination to go on foot if need be, the Negroes in uncounted numbers joined in a walk-to-work pilgrimage.

Although City Police Commissioner Cloyde Sellers said it didn't appear that many more Negroes walked than usual, Abernathy said at the close of the day that "We are very much pleased. It was quite successful."

Gratifying, Minister Says

The Baptist minister wouldn't estimate the number who traveled on foot, part of the time in a drizzling rain, but he said reports from "all the various Negro communities were gratifying."

Negroes have refused to ride the buses since one of their race, Mrs. Rosa Parks, was convicted of violating the city segregation laws by refusing to move to the Negro section of a bus. She has appealed to higher courts.

At the outset, the protesting Negroes demanded only a "first come, first served" seating arrangement on the buses, but as the boycott continued, a suit was filed in U.S. District Court challenging constitutionality of state as well as city laws requiring segregation on buses and railroads.

No hearing has been set on the complaint.

The boycott here and the recent rioting against the enrollment of a Negro coed, Autherine Lucy, at the University of Alabama, caused Gov. James E. Folsom this week to recommend creation of a biracial commission to seek settlement of segregation problems.

Editors Endorse Plan

Folsom made the suggestion to a group of newspaper editors and publishers invited by him to a race relations conference. The editors endorsed that plan.

The governor, who is expected to call another in a series of special sessions of the Legislature next week, said he might ask the lawmakers to give official status to the commission and appropriate funds for its work.

In the past, Folsom has refused to put his approval on segregation bills passed by the Legislature. The recently enacted school placement measure and the nullification resolution aimed at preventing classroom integration both went into effect without the governor's signature.

More recently, he has blamed what he called "agitators" in both races for much of the tension.

Since the bus boycott started, an estimated 75 to 95 per cent of the Negroes who normally ride buses have stopped using them. Because of the loss of business, the company won permission from the City Commission to raise bus fares to 15 cents from 10 cents.

Segregationists Backed

All three members of the City Commission have aligned themselves with the segregationist Central Alabama Citizens Council and have abandoned their previous efforts to settle the bus dispute.

A newly organized civic group, the Men of Montgomery, sought thereafter to mediate the boycott, but without success. The bus company agreed to one compromise plan, but the Negroes rejected it on the eve of the grand jury report.

Even before the boycott indictments were returned, however, one of the central figures in the protest, Negro attorney Fred D. Gray, was accused by the grand jury of unlawful practice growing out of the boycott.

Gray, who filed the antisegregation suit in federal court, was charged with acting without the consent of one of the five Negro women whose names were signed to the petition.

Deferment Taken Away

Earlier in the boycott, a local draft board in Montgomery took away the 25-year-old bachelor Gray's deferment as a minister and reclassified him 1A. He was listed as assistant pastor of a church.

The attorney appealed the board's action but was turned down by the Central Alabama Appeals Board. He hasn't said whether he will appeal higher.

Two of the boycott defendants have been the targets of violence but no one was injured. Dynamite bombs exploded at the homes of the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., and E. D. Nixon, former state president of the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People.

Several buses were fired on earlier while making their rounds in Negro sections of the city. The drivers and passengers all escaped injury.

BUS BOYCOTTING NEGROES WALK TO WORK IN RAIN

Daily Tribune

Sat. 2-25-56

Chicago, Ill.

'Thousands' Respond in Renewed Protest

P. 3

Montgomery, Ala., Feb. 24 (AP)—Thru an early morning rain, thousands of bus boycotting Negroes walke to work today in a mass demonstration of what their leaders called "passive resistance" to racial "oppression."

In groups of two and three and more, they trudged as many as two miles from their homes, some carrying umbrellas, some bareheaded.

Meanwhile, the 89 Negroes arrested thus far on mass antiboycott indictments returned by a grand jury appeared in court and pleaded innocent to the charges. Their trials were set to start March 19. All were released on bond.

Walk to Courthouse

Most if not all the defendants arraigned today walked to the Montgomery county courthouse. One of their attorneys, Fred D. Gray, said he walked two miles to his office altho he had left his raincoat downtown yesterday.

Police Commissioner Clyde Sellers questioned the effectiveness of the nonriding campaign, however. He said he saw "a good many cars with Negro drivers" and that "there doesn't seem to be many more walking than usual." Sellers is a member of the pro-white Central Alabama Citizens council.

The 24 hour walk-to-work pilgrimage came in response to appeals from Negro ministers at a hymn-signing prayer meeting last night. All "race loving Negroes" were urged to shun even their private cars to show their determination to carry on the protest against segregated facilities on Montgomery City Lines buses.

Says "Thousands Respond"

Some Negroes rode in cars, but the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., and the Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy, both Baptist ministers under indictment, said "only a few" failed to join the pilgrimage on foot.

They said "thousands" responded to the walk-to-work appeal.

As the arraignments got under way, charges were dismissed against one Negro minister, the Rev. A. W. Wilson, because he testified before the grand jury which returned the indictments.

After the 89 were arraigned before Circuit Judge Eugene Carter, another defendant, Jackson Knox, surrendered and was added to the list of those in custody, bringing the total to 90.

Attend Prayer Meeting

Circuit Clerk John Mathews said indictments are outstanding against 10 more who haven't been arrested.

All the defendants gathered later at the Rev. Mr. King's church for a mass prayer meeting.

One by one they intoned voluntary prayers after King urged them to "stand up and pray as the spirit moves you . . . pray for God's guidance."

The minister also asked them to ask divine help to "strengthen our walkers today" and to "bless those who are too weak to open their mouths."

Negroes Walk

Herald Tribune

New York

Sunday 2-26-56

It was raining in Montgomery, Ala., on Friday morning, but the sidewalks seemed more crowded than usual while buses were half empty and the private car traffic was light. Vast majority of the pedestrians were Negroes. They were making a "pilgrimage" of protest against indictment and arrest of their leaders by white authorities trying to break up their boycott of the city bus lines.

The boycott began on Dec. 5, when the Negroes organized to seek modification of the segregation rules which now apply on the buses. Under these rules, they are restricted to certain seats in the rear and are frequently forced to stand when seats reserved for white passengers are empty. What they seek is a flexible rule under which Negroes would fill seats from the rear and whites from the front, but there would be no rigid line of demarcation.

From the day it went into effect the boycott has been observed scrupulously. Many Negroes organized car pools. Others walked to work or to stores. Since Montgomery has 42,000 Negroes in a population of 107,000, city-owned bus lines felt the financial pinch immediately, and some routes were discontinued while the fare was raised on others.

When compromise efforts failed, city officials invoked a state law which makes "conspiracy, combination or agreement to interfere with or hinder business, unlawful." They presented the case to a grand jury and that jury returned indictments against 115 Negroes identified as leaders of the movement. Conviction can lead to a maximum fine of $1,000 and a jail sentence up to six months.

The Negroes refused to give in. On the same day as the "pilgrimage" to demonstrate their solidarity, ninety of those indicted appeared in court and pleaded innocent. Their trials have been set or March 19.

Since this was the largest organized mass defiance of segregation rules ever known, it was followed closely by most of the South as well as other parts of the country. There was real fear of violence, but so far the Negroes have been pursuing what their leaders call "passive resistance."

In Louisiana, Roman Catholic Archbishop Joseph Francis Rummel denounced segregation as "morally wrong and sinful." He indicated that he intends to integrate the races in the parochial schools of New Orleans. A few days later "Catholic Action of the South," official newspaper of his archdiocese, announced that any Catholic lawmakers who support legislation to enforce segregation in private schools will be subject to automatic excommunication if such laws are passed.

NOT GUILTY PLEA IN BUS BOYCOTT

Times-Picayune

Negroes Walk to Work in Segregation Protest

Sat. 2-25-56

By REX THOMAS

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Feb. 24 (AP)—Shunning rides, Negroes in uncounted numbers walked the streets of Montgomery today to demonstrate their continued protest against segregation on city buses.

New Orleans, La.

They trudged to work through a drizzling rain in response to an appeal from their leaders for a mass 24-hour pilgrimage on foot to prove their willingness to walk if necessary to carry on their 11-week-old bus boycott.

P. 4

Ninety of them walked to the courthouse for arraignment on antiboycott indictments returned by a grand jury Tuesday. They all pleaded innocent and their trials were set to start March 19.

A court officer said 10 or more warrants are outstanding, bringing the total number of defendants to 100.

Demurrers Filed

Defense attorneys at the same time filed demurrers contesting the indictments which charged violation of Alabama's law against "illegal" boycotting. Maximum penalty under the law is six months in jail and a $1,000 fine.

Circuit Judge Eugene Carter withheld a ruling on the demurrers which said, in effect, that the state has failed to make out a case even if the facts alleged in the indictments are true.

Meanwhile, at the Alabama Capitol, Gov. James E. Folsom won support from a group of newspaper editors and publishers and radio and television broadcasters for a proposed biracial commission to settle differences between the white and Negro races.

Folsom called the conference to seek a program of resolving racial disputes without violence. Approximately 75 newspapermen and radio and TV broadcasters attended the meeting.

Negroes Walk to Work

Two of the boycott leaders estimated meanwhile that "thousands" of Negroes walked to work this morning, refusing even to drive their own cars. The Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy and the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., both Baptist ministers under indictment, said "only a few" of their race rode in cars.

But Police Commissioner Clyde Sellers, a member of the pro-white Central Alabama Citizens Council, questioned the effectiveness of the pilgrimage. He said he saw "a good many cars with Negro drivers" and that "there doesn't seem to be many more walking than usual."

A Negro taxicab owner, Felix Thomas, said his business was "excellent" but that "a whole lot of Negroes" were walking, some refusing offers of rides.

"It looked like school turning out when they walked down the street," Thomas added.

89 Up for Arraignment

Eighty-nine Negroes were called up for arraignment before Judge Carter and another, Jackson Knox, appeared in the courtroom a short time later. He had just been arrested.

Arraigned separately, he pleaded innocent like all the rest.

An indictment against one Negro minister, the Rev. A. W. Wilson, was dismissed at the request of Circuit Solicitor William F. Thetford because Wilson testified before the grand jury which returned the indictments. Judge Carter said that made him immune from prosecution.

Ten other charges were dropped against Negroes who had already been arraigned on other indictments. Some defendants had two or three charges against them. Thetford reduced them to one apiece.

Pray for Guidance

From the courthouse, the defendants walked four blocks to the Rev. King's Dexter Avenue Baptist Church for another mass prayer meeting. One by one they lifted their voices in prayer as King invited them to "stand up and pray as the spirit moves you . . . pray for God's guidance."

In Birmingham, Negro Methodist ministers appealed to both races there to fast and pray for the people to be "moved more by reason than by emotion." They urged that next Tuesday be observed as a day of fasting and prayer throughout that city.

Northern control of boycotted Alabama bus line, revealed

Inclusive 13

Los Angeles Calif.

CHICAGO—National City Lines, which operates the jim crow bus lines in Montgomery, Alabama, which Negro citizens are boycotting, is a nationwide transit trust controlled by northern financial interests, the Chicago branch of the Naacp disclosed today

The trust, with headquarters at 616 S. Michigan, Chicago, is a holding company with more than 40 subsidiary transit systems in cities from coast to coast.

Representatives of the National City Lines were interviewed last week by Willoughby Abner, president of the Chicago branch Naacp, and the Rev. A. Lincoln James, pastor of Greater Bethesda Baptist church, and Charles Hayes, director of Dist. 1, United Packinghouse Workers.

Representing National City Lines at the conference were K. E. Tottem, manager and B. W. Franklin, vice-president.

Company officials promised to have a statement on the position of National City Lines within a few days.

P.M. 3-9-56

In a statement after the conference, Abner said, "Of course, the company will claim that they are only running the bus lines in Montgomery in accordance with the laws and customs of Alabama, but this by no means relieves them of responsibility for working out an honorable settlement in the Montgomery situation.

Spokesman for millions of outraged Negro citizens and liberal whites are letting the directors of National City Lines and its subsidiaries know of the nationwide solidarity with and support for, the bus boycotters."

Gerald D. Bullock, president of the Naacp, asked branches of the association in the 10 Illinois cities where National City Lines operate to send protest delegations to the local officials of the company.

The subsidiary companies of National City Lines, which are wholly owned by it, operate the bus lines in more than 40 cities serving more than four and a quarter million people and have a large interest in transit systems serving millions more.

In 1954, National City Lines paid a dividend of $1.60 per share. Gross revenue of National City in 1954 was $27,162,137.

Of the directors of National City Lines, there is Laurence M. Marks, of New York City, an investment banker who heads his own financial house and a former governor of the New York Stock Exchange. He is also a trustee of the quarter billion dollar Brooklyn Savings Bank, and a director of Shamrock Oil and Gas Co. of Amarilo, Tex. which is controlled by the Mellon family, of Pittsburgh.

Another is C. Frank Reavis, New York, who is on the board of the Baltimore and Philadelphia Transit companies, in which National City Lines has big investments. He also serves on the boards of Northwest Airlines and the Bohack grocery chain.

Still another director of National City Lines is D. H. Pratt, president of Philadelphia Transit and a director of the Baltimore Transit.

The Philadelphia company is in bad with Philadelphia citizens for its service and efforts to break the CIO Transport Union some years ago. Employees of the Baltimore company have been on strike for more than four weeks, demanding a wage increase and better pension plan.

CONTROLS L. A. TRANSIT LINES

On the west coast, where National City Lines operate the transit systems in moref than a dozen California cities, the director is E. C. Houghton, of Los Angeles, president of Los Angeles Transit Lines, in which National City Lines has a controlling interest. President of National City Lines also holds a directorship of L. A. Transit Lines.

R. Stewart Moore, another National City director, is an official of the Key Spstem Transit Lines, which operates between San Francisco and Berkeley, Oakland and other East Bay cities.

The transit union struck for weeks against this line several years ago.

Two directors of National City Lines live in St. Louis where both are directors of the St. Louis Public Service Co., whose chairman is E. Roy Fitzgerald, of Chicago, president of the National City Lines.

Director John L. Wilson is also a director of the Anheuser-Busch brewery and of the half billion dollar First National bank of St. Louis.

David R. Calhoun, president of the St. Louis Public Service Co. and National City Lines director, also has interest in Budweiser beer, and is connected with 18 companies, among them the Pullman Co.

California cities which National City Lines wholly owns or has large investments in the transit system, are: Los Angeles, Glendale, Long Beach, Pasadena Sacramento, San Jose, Stockton, Oakland, Berkeley, Alameda and other East Bay cities.

CITY BUS PROTEST TRIALS START IN MONTGOMERY

Daily World P. 1 Tues. 3-20-56 Atlanta, Ga.

Boycott Trials Starting In Montgomery Today

Constitution P. 2 Mon. 3-19-56 Atlanta, Ga.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., March 18 (AP)—The opening trials for 93 Negro leaders accused of directing Montgomery's bus boycott will start tomorrow.

Circuit Judge Eugene Carter is first expected to rule on defense demurrers which challenge constitutionality of the state's anti-boycott law under which the indictments were returned.

Carter, who directed the grand jury to investigate the 16-week-old boycott, also will decide on the guilt or innocence of the 93 defendants. They have waived the right to jury trials.

Defense attorneys declined to say if they will ask for separate trials.

SEATING PROTEST

Twenty-five ministers were among those indicted by the grand jury as leaders or active participants in the bus boycott which has continued since Dec. 5 in protest to segregated seating required by city and state law.

After the indictments were returned Feb. 21, Negro attorneys filed the demurrers to lay the groundwork for an appeal to federal courts if the defendants are convicted.

Alabama's 1921 anti-boycott law was primarily aimed at labor disputes. Its constitutionality was upheld by the State Supreme Court in 1943. The U.S. Supreme Court twice refused to review the case on grounds that no federal rights had been violated.

The law makes boycotting "without just cause or legal excuse" a misdemeanor punishable by a maximum of six months in prison and a fine of $1,000.

CHARGE RIGHTS VIOLATED

It was attacked in the defense demurrers as violating such constitutional rights as free speech, freedom of worship and peaceful assembly, and equal protection under the law.

Summoned to appear along with 74 other witnesses are Mayor W. A. Gayle and the other two members of the City Commission, Police Chief G. J. Ruppenthal and J. H. Bagley, manager of the Montgomery City Lines, Inc., the bus company whose operations have been crippled by the boycott.

The reluctant admission was drawn from the Rev. A. W. Wilson, a prosecution witness in the trial of Rev. King who is the first of 93 leaders to go on trial in connection with the Alabama capital's 16-week-old bus boycott.

To question after question Wilson replied: "I don't recollect."

Finally Assistant Prosecutor Robert Stewart, discussing a meeting of Negro leaders with city officials, asked: "Do you recall whether or not the Rev. King stated in substance that he or his organization was out to change the segregation laws?"

Wilson replied: "Yes, I guess he did."

King is president of the Montgomery Improvement Association which the state attempted to show was created solely to instigate the bus boycott which began last Dec. 5.

The first state witness, J. H. Bagley, manager of the Montgomery City Lines, testified that "five or six per cent" of the company's one-time Negro riders are still riding the buses. The testimony Bagley was to give bogged down in a rash of objections from eight defense attorneys and he was released to be called later in the trial.

One of the prosecution staff explained it had been the strategy to have Bagley give an overall picture of the bus boycott. However, repeated rulings by Circuit Judge Eugene Carter barred Bagley's replies because they were not directly connected to the defendant, Rev. King.

Rev. King and the other defendants are accused of violating the Anti-Boycott Law. The statute, under which they are accused, provides upon conviction fines ranging up to $1,000 and jail sentences up to six months.

Another state witness, Mrs. E. A. Dungee, said a $5,017 check drawn on funds contributed to support the lengthy boycott was made out to cash, endorsed by the Rev. King and deposited in an Atlanta, Ga. bank.

Mrs. Dungee, a Negro, who is financial secretary of the M.I.A., said the purpose of the $5,017 check was "transfering money from the National Bank of Alabama to another bank."

Asked if the bank was in Atlanta, the Rev. King's hometown, she replied, "Yes."

The Reverend King later told newsmen:

"That money was transferred for a definite purpose. I cannot divulge what it was for because I think the reason will be used as part of the case. I have heard a rumor about me using it to buy a Cadillac automobile, which is absurd."

Mrs. Dungee said the M.I.A. had collected approximately $30,713 in contributions for support of its work. She identified large stacks of checks after carefully thumbing through them, as payments made to service stations for gasoline or to individuals for "driving."

Daily World P. 1 Tues. 3-20-56 Atlanta, Ga.

PROTEST FIGURES SHOWN left to right are: Mrs. Rosa Parks, whose arrest set off the boycott; the Rev. M. L. King, Jr., president of Montgomery's Improvement Association; the Rev. R. D. Abernathy, key protest figure and Atty. Fred G. Gray, legal counsel.

Ninety Separate Trials Ordered For City's Negro Leaders

BY ROBERT H. DENLEY

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — (INS) — A Negro minister testified Monday that he had heard a colleague, the Rev. M. L. King, Jr., state in substance that he or his organization was out to change the segregation laws in Montgomery, Ala.

Boycott Trials Set Monday in Montgomery

Journal & Constitution Atlanta, Ga.

By REX THOMAS

MONTGOMERY, March 17 (AP). Raising the issue of free speech, 93 Negroes, including 25 clergymen, face trial here Monday for the mass refusal of their race to ride segregated city buses.

They have waived the right of jury trial, choosing instead to let Circuit Judge Eugene Carter decide their guilt or innocence. That is permissible under Alabama law in a misdemeanor.

Defense attorneys declined to disclose the reasons for that decision.

Aug. 3-18-56

The Negroes were indicted by a predominantly white grand jury Feb. 21 as leaders and active participants in the 16-week-old boycott of Montgomery City Lines buses which has continued without pause since last Dec. 5.

* * * 8-19-A

SOME OF the defendants, particularly the ministers, were charged with lending vocal encouragement and leadership to the protest which has cost the bus line 75 to 95 per cent of its normal Negro business.

Others were indicted for using their automobiles in organized car pools which has enabled thousands of workers to get to and from their jobs.

In periodic mass meetings in their churches, Negroes have heard dramatic appeals from the ministers for "passive resistance to oppression" without violence. With their financial contributions, they have kept the motor pool rolling at a cost of $200 a day.

The indictments were returned under a rarely used state law originally aimed at labor strife and never before used except in union-management disputes. The law prohibits organized boycotting "without just cause or legal excuse."

Maximum penalty for each defendant is six months in jail and a $1,000 fine.

NEGRO DEFENSE attorneys, attacking constitutionality of the statute, have raised the issue of free speech, freedom of worship and peaceful assembly, and equal protection under the law.

Contending that the indictments violate their rights guaranteed under the U.S. Constitution, they laid the groundwork for an appeal to the federal courts if convicted. The state supreme court upheld the validity of the anti-boycott law in 1943.

Judge Carter must rule on defense demurrers before the trials begin.

The demurrers, which say in effect that the boycotters have committed no unlawful act, were filed after the Negroes were arraigned on the indictments and pleaded innocent.

Since each defendant can demand a separate trial, the proceedings could stretch out for weeks, perhaps months. Or, if some are convicted and it appears likely they will appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court, the remaining trials may be postponed pending the outcome of those appeals.

* * *

NEGROES elsewhere have pledged their support to the boycotters, hinting even at similar protest demonstrations against other Southern subsidiaries of National City Lines of Chicago, parent company of the Montgomery bus line.

There have been relatively few acts of violence in the lengthening dispute, although the grand jury warned that trouble is "inevitable" unless race relations take a new course.

A dynamite explosion the night of Jan. 30 damaged the home of the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., one of the boycott spokesmen later indicted. Two nights later, a bomb went off in front of the home of E. D. Nixon, another of the defendants. No one was injured in either incident.

The economic cost of the boycott hasn't been counted, but the bus company has raised its fare from 10 to 15 cents and eliminated some routes through Negro areas.

BUS BOYCOTT TRIAL TO OPEN TOMORROW

Commercial Appeal P. 6

More Than 90 Defendants Will Face Charges

Memphis Press

DEFENSE IS STUDIED

Sun 3-18-56

By GLENN ANTHONY
United Press Staff Correspondent

MONTGOMERY, March 17.—More than 90 leaders of the local Negro community will file into Montgomery's century-old courthouse Monday as the legal curtain rises on perhaps the most dramatic act yet in this city's celebrated bus boycott.

The Negro leaders, men and women and including 24 ministers, are defendants named in 11 indictments returned by a grand jury Feb. 21.

The state charges them all with entering into a conspiracy to boycott the segregated city buses.

Penalties Are Cited

They are indicted under a little-used 1921 law aimed at a labor crisis which makes it a misdemeanor punishable by six months in jail and/or a fine of $1000 for two or more persons "who, without a just cause or legal excuse for so doing, enter into any combination, conspiracy, agreement or arrangement, or understanding for the purpose of hindering, delaying or preventing any other persons, firms, corporations from carrying on any lawful business."

A battery of five Negro lawyers will defend the Negroes against the prosecution led by Solicitor William Thetford.

Trial procedures were not to be set until court convenes. Mr. Thetford, who says the defendants "have a right at any time to demand a severance" (that is, to be tried separately), adds that he "has the right to say which case comes up when."

Negro attorney Fred Gray, heading the defense lawyers, declined to say if his clients would ask for separate trials.

The exact number of defendants who will face trial in the coming weeks has not been determined. Deputy sheriffs arrested 90 Negroes immediately after the indictments were returned, and they were arraigned and pled "not guilty."

But a few arrests are reported to have been made since then and Mr. Thetford said, "I really do not know how many defendants there are."

Boycott Continues

The trials will be played out against a background of an unprecedented race boycott that has not faltered since it began Dec. 5—not even when racial tension reached its highest peak at the time of the grand jury report.

Tension between negroes and whites has eased since then, but city buses still are practically devoid of Negro passengers and the bus company recently announced further cutbacks in service.

The boycott was touched off by the arrest of a Negro steamstress, Rosa Parks, who is also a defendant in the boycott cases. She was convicted of failing to observe the "jim crow" laws on the buses, and Negro leaders called a "one-day protest" that has stretched into 14 weeks and shows no signs of ending.

Negro leaders formed the Montgomery Improvement Association, composed primarily of ministers, that has given the boycott leadership.

The association organized car pools to get Negroes to work and school and holds two mass meetings a week at which Negroes pray and sing together and discuss their "protest."

Changes Demanded

The boycotters have steadfastly stuck to their demand for a "first come, first served" seating policy on the buses in the face of rejections by city officials and the bus lines. They said the new policy would prevent Negroes from having to stand on buses when there were empty seats in the white sections and would put an end to Negroes having to vacate their seats and stand so that whites might sit.

Efforts of the city commission and bus lines officials to negotiate a settlement ended in failure with one side maintaining that the "first come, first served" policy would not fit under city and state segregation laws and the others claiming it would.

Gray, representing four negro women, filed a federal court suit in February asking that state and city segregation laws be declared unconstitutional. The case has not been set for trial.

The bus company, badly hurt by the loss of revenue from Negro passengers who once made up 75 per cent of the busloads, has hiked fares by 50 per cent and reduced its routes, drivers and equipment.

BOYCOTT TRIALS SLATED MONDAY

Times-Picayune

93 Accused Raise Issue of Free Speech

Sun. 3-18-56

By REX THOMAS

MONTGOMERY, Ala., March 17 (AP) — Raising the issue of free speech, 93 Negroes including 25 clergymen face trial here Monday for the mass refusal of their race to ride segregated city buses.

They have waived the right of jury trial, choosing instead to let Circuit Judge Eugene Carter decide their guilt or innocence. That is permissible under Alabama law in a misdemeanor. P. 16

Defense attorneys declined to disclose the reasons for that decision. New Orleans,

The Negroes were indicted by a predominantly white grand jury Feb. 21 as leaders and active participants in the 16-week-old boycott of Montgomery City Lines buses which has continued without pause since last Dec. 5. La.

Car Pool Continues

Some of the defendants, particularly the ministers, were charged with lending vocal encouragement and leadership to the protest which has cost the bus line 75 to 95 per cent of its normal Negro business.

Others were indicted for using their automobiles in a precisely organized car pool which has enabled thousands of workers to get to and from their jobs.

In periodic mass meetings in their churches, Negroes have heard dramatic appeals from the ministers for "passive resistance to oppression" without violence. With their financial contributions, they have kept the motor pool rolling at a cost of $200 a day.

The indictments were returned under a rarely used state law originally aimed at labor strife and never before used except in union-management disputes. The law prohibits organized boycotting "without just cause or legal excuse."

Raise Free Speech Issue

Maximum penalty for each defendant is six months in jail and a $1,000 fine.

Negro defense attorneys, attacking constitutionality of the statute, have raised the issue of free speech, freedom of worship and peaceful assembly, and equal protection under the law.

Contending that the indictments violate their rights guaranteed under the U.S. Constitution, they laid the groundwork for an appeal to the federal courts if convicted. The state Supreme Court upheld validity of the antiboycott law in 1943.

Carter must rule on defense demurrers before the trials begin.

Carter is the judge who directed the grand jury to investigate the bus boycott.

The demurrers, which say in effect that the boycotters have committed no unlawful act, were filed after the Negroes were arraigned on the indictments and pleaded innocent.

Each Can Ask Separate Trial

Since each defendant can demand a separate trial, the proceedings could stretch out for weeks, perhaps months. Or, if some are convicted and it appears likely they will appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court, the remaining trials may be postponed pending the outcome of those appeals.

Fred D. Gray, one of the defense lawyers, declined to say what course he and his colleagues will pursue. Likewise, circuit solicitor William F. Thetford said he wasn't in a position to tell which defendant he will call to trial first.

The bus boycott began with the arrest and conviction of a Negro seamstress, Mrs. Rosa Parks, for refusing to move to the colored section of a bus. City and state laws require separate seating facilities.

Challenge Segregation

At the outset, Negroes demanded only a better seating arrangement, a "first come, first served" plan where Negro riders would be seated from the rear and white passengers from the front until all places were taken.

Later, as the boycott continued, the Negroes challenged the segregation pattern itself with a suit in U.S. District Court attacking the city and state laws as unconstitutional. No hearing has been scheduled on that complaint.

There have been relatively few acts of violence in the lengthening dispute although the grand jury warned that trouble is "inevitable" unless race relations take a new course.

38b 1956

ALABAMA

BUS BOYCOTT

BAGLEY STRICKEN

Confusion Clouds Bus Line Dispute

Advertiser Thurs. 4-26-56 P.1

Montgomery,

By STEVE LESHER

Conflict raged yesterday among all elements concerened in the 20-week-old Montgomery bus boycott and the sudden decision to desegregate the local buses.

All parties operated with apparent confusion as to their next move as each struggled to arrange meetings with the other. There is even confusion on exactly what the Supreme Court intended to do in its ruling. Its meaning, therefore, is clouded in doubt.

The obvious tension was unhappily dramatized through a severe heart attack suffered by J. H. Bagley, superintendent of Montgomery City Lines Inc.

Besides Bagley, other prominent figures in the Montgomery dilemma are Benjamin W. Franklin, vice president of National City Lines, parent company of the local company; Robert Thrun, attorney for the national company; the Rev. M. L. King, president of the Montgomery Improvement Assn., the group directing the boycott; Mayor W. A. Gayle and City Commissioners Clyde C. Sellers and Frank W. Parks and C. C. (Jack) Owen, president of the Alabama Public Service Commission.

A brief resume of the situation:

1. The city has promised to arrest any persons who violate segregation statutes and any bus driver who does not enforce segregation on the buses.

2. The bus coopany has issued orders to its drivers not to enforce segregation and not to enforce integration.

3. The Negroes are continuing to boycott the buses apparently because their demand for Negro drivers for predominantly Negro routes has not been met.

4. The bus company stated that due to contracts with the union, the hiring of any new drivers, white or Negro, virtually would be impossible.

5. The Alabama PSC has stated that the Supreme Court ruling applies only to South Carolina.

6. Attorneys for the bus company have stated that the ruling appears to be applicable in Alabama.

Officials of National City Lines Inc., revealed yesterday that compliance with demands for Negro bus drivers for predominantly Negro routes would be difficult at this time.

Vice President Franklin of the parent company located in Chicago and National City Lines Atty. Thrun told The Advertiser that "due to company contracts with the bus drivers' union, circumstances would virtually prevent us from hiring anyone, be he white or Negro."

Franklin explained that contracts with the union specify that no new driver may be hired until all furloughed drivers are recalled to their jobs. He said at least 36 men had been placed on furlough, apparently due to the boycott.

Another section of the contract, he said, prevents placing new men on any specified routes. Men with highest seniority, he said, get preference on routes. New men "have to take what they can get." He explained that would open the possibility of having Negro drivers on predominantly white routes. No Negro has ever applied for position of bus driver with Montgomery City Lines.

King, spokesman for the Negroes who have boycotted the city buses for the past 20 weeks, said earlier that if applications from Negroes for the position of bus driver were examined "with the same equanimity as. . .an application from a white person. . .that might satisfy our people."

INJUNCTION EYED

Meanwhile, city officials told reporters that the bus company would have to abide by city and state ordinances concerning segre- "if they are to continue their operations here."

Mayor Gayle and Commissioners Sellers and Parks indicated yesterday they might seek a court injunction against the company if "they violate local segregation statues."

City officials and representatives from National City Lines were trying to arrange a meeting late yesterday. A mass meeting of Negroes will be held tonight at the Day Street Baptist Church. King said earlier that "decisions of the Montgomery Improvement Assn. will be announced at that time. At present our position is not changed." King added the boycott would continue.

King was not available for comment concerning union contracts with the bus company.

INTERVIEW GRANTED

Franklin granted an interview to The Advertiser yesterday morning following a brief conference with television photographers. Following is the text of the interview:

Q. Was the order for desegregation on buses a "snap judgment" order following the Supreme Court decision on South Carolina?

A. No, the order was a matter of considered judgment following several months of study by our legal department. They began to investigate the matter after the lower court in South Carolina had made its ruling.

Q. Why was the company willing to renew its franchise in Montgomery?

A. We've operated here for 20 years and we've always had good relations here. In the new contract, which is for 10 years, there was no mention of segregation.

Q. From your standpoint, is there a possibility of operating separate buses for white and Negroes?

A. From an economical standpoint that would be impractical. From a standpoint of segregation, we have not yet considered that possibility.

Q. Did the order to desegregate buses in the Southern cities emanate from Chicago?

A. The order emanated from the legal branch of the company.

Q. In view of the position taken by the city and state, how do you plan to enforce a first come, first served policy of seating?

A. We are not a police body. We will not attempt to enforce segregation and we will not attempt to enforce integration.

Q. If a driver is arrested for not enforcing segregation as the city has threatened, what will your stand be?

A. If a driver is arrested for obeying our instructions, certainly we'll help the man.

It was apparent that King and other members of the Montgomery Improvement Assn. were pleased with the ruling made late last Monday night by J. H. Bagley, superintendent of the local bus line.

EQUALLY APPARENT

It was equally apparent from King's early statements that one barrier to ending the boycott was the agreement to hire Negro bus drivers

Observing the paradox of Negro demands and company-union contracts, the outcome is a matter of hign specualtion.

In another unexpected development early yesterday, Bagley was stricken with a heart attack only a short time after he had concluded a conference with Franklin, Thrun and Jack Crenshaw, attorney for the local ine.

Bagley was hospitalized here at 12:15 a.m. and was placed in an oxygen tent. He was still in the tent late afternoon. His condition was reported as "serious."

The company's decision followed a U.S. Supreme Court ruling Monday holding bus segregation unconstitutional.

President Owen of the PSC sent a telegram to President Roy Fitzgerald of National City Lines demanding withdrawal of the integration order. Franklin yesterday indicated that the order would not be withdrawn.

Negroes Vote To Continue

Advertiser Fri. 4-27-56

Bus Boycott

Montgomery,

Resolution Asks City To Withdraw Threat To Drivers

Ad. Sp.

By STEVE LESHER

More than 3,000 cheering Negroes unanimously approved a resolution to continue the five-month-old boycott of city buses until the city withdraws its threats to arrest passengers and drivers who violate existing segregation laws.

Rev. M. L. King, president of the Montgomery Improvement Assn., read the resolution proposed by the executive committee of the MIA. The resolution praised the Supreme Court and National City Lines Inc. and its local subsidiary for their stands for desegregation.

The resolution began by reviewing the Negroes' reasons for beginning the boycott and continued by reporting the Supreme Court's decision made last Monday and the orders issued by the bus company.

SEVERAL CITIES

After stating reliable sources reported white and Negro passengers ride integrated buses in "several Southern cities, including Richmond, Va.; Little Rock Ark.; Dallas, Tex., and others," King continued:

"Whereas the public officials of . . . Montgomery and . . . Alabama have indicated . . . that they intend to . use all means available, including the arrest of bus drivers and passengers who refuse to abide by and obey the segregation laws . . it is . . . agreed that the conditions heretofore existing remains the same because of the position taken by our public officials.

"Be it therefore resolved that we, the Negro citizens of Montgomery, Ala. . . . will continue to carry on our mass protest . . ."

The resolution was greeted with a thunderous ovation from the Negroes who massed in Day Street Baptist Church.

King urged that Negroes "not abuse" their "new rights and privileges." He added "a great adjustment needs to be made" among the Negroes.

PRAYERS FOR BAGLEY

He urged the throng to pray for the recovery of J. H. Bagley, superintendent of Montgomery City Lines, Inc., who suffered a heart attack early Wednesday.

He also urged prayer for the City Commission "to lift them from the darkness of injustice . . ."

Meanwhile, no solutions to the conflicts in their stands were forthcoming from a lengthy meeting yesterday afternoon between officials of National City Lines Inc. of Chicago, Montgomery City Lines Inc. and Montgomery city commissioners.

REVOKE CHARTER

In a statement issued earlier by Mayor W. A. Gayle and City Commissioner Frank W. Parks and Clyde C. Sellers it was indicated the city would seek to revoke the bus company's franchise if the company failed to uphold segregation laws.

Vice President Benjamin W. Franklin of National City Lines, parent company of the local firm, has taken a stand that the company "is not a police body. We will not enforce segregation and we will not enforce integration." Franklin said the company would "certainly help" a bus driver "if he was arrested for obeying our instructions."

Advertiser

After the two and one-half hour meeting in the offices of City Atty. Walter Knabe, Mayor Gayle issued the following brief statement:

P.2-A

"The City Commission has. . . taken the position that the . . . decision of the . . . Supreme Court did not pass on the statutes of Alabama and the . . . City of Montgomery. We are now advised that there is a question as to whether the Supreme Court passed . . . on the statutes of South Carolina.

NO CONCLUSIONS

"We have conferred with representatives of the City Lines but have reached no conclusions. Our conferences will be resumed on . . . Friday or Saturday.

"The City Commisison adheres to the position it has originally expressed that it will enforce all applicable Alabama statutes and city ordinances."

Montgomery City Lines representatives had "no comment" to reporter's questions. At the meeting besides the city commissioners, Knabe and Franklin were City Clerk Silas Cater, City Atty

Miles S. Hall, National City Lines Atty. Robert Thrun and Montgomery City Lines Atty. Jack Crenshaw.

Franklin said later that no meeting with Negro leaders had been planned.

Capital Bus Boycott Still Stalemated

Post-Herald Sat. 4-28-56 B'ham, Ala.

Bus, City Official Talk Things Over

MONTGOMERY, April 27 (AP)—Bus company and city officials tried again in vain today to break a stalemate in their talks about bus segregation.

Mayor W. A. Gayle issued a statement saying Montgomery City Lines "will be required" to obey city and state segregation laws although the company has announced it will no longer enforce segregation.

Negroes meanwhile continued their five-month-old boycott of the buses despite the integration order issued Monday night. They agreed at a mass meeting last night to refrain from riding until public officials agree to accept desegregation.

Gayle's statement following the second bus company-city commission conference in two days:

"No agreement has been reached. The City Commission has advised the company that all laws and ordinances will be enforced and that the commission will require the company to follow to the letter all laws and ordinances."

The commission earlier had threatened to seek revocation of the bus franchise unless the company rescinded its integration policy.

B. W. Franklin, vice president of National City Lines, Inc., of Chicago which owns the Montgomery company, declined to comment after today's meeting.

Police Commissioner Clyde Sellers has ordered the arrest of any passenger who mixes with the opposite race and any bus driver who permits it.

City and state laws require segregation on all public transportation and the commission here insists the statutes are still valid.

Sellers' threat and a similar promise of reprisals from President Jack Owen of the Alabama Public Service Commission prompted Negroes meanwhile to continue the bus boycott.

A suit specifically challenging constitutionality of Montgomery city and Alabama state segregation laws is on file in Federal Court and a hearing has been set for May 11 before a three-judge panel.

South's Negroes wholeheartedly for integration, Naacp says

Tribune Los Angeles, Calif. Fri. 3-16-56 p. 13

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — The Naacp has opened its annual membership drive here, seeking 5000 members in this city and 15,000 in the entire state.

Pledging support and legal assistance to the bus boycott initiated by the Montgomery Protective ass'n. here, Gloster B. Current, Naacp director of branches, spoke Sunday, praising the "non-violent passive resistence" of the campaign as "unprecedented." (Tribune note: Except for the preceding example — the most conspicuous since Christ, of one Mahatma Ghandi, of India.)

Fri. 3-16-56

Passive resistence is "in keeping with the best traditions of Christianity and democracy", Current said.

The Naacp leader was preoccupied with answering the claims of southern whites that northerners only are pushing desegregation.

Sixty-eight percent of Naacp branches are in the South, Current said. "Of the total Naacp membership of 300,000, 45 percent lives in the 17 southern states and the District of Columbia.

"The southern Negro is whole-heartedly in accord with the policy and program which seek to rid the South of segregation."

With reference to the expulsion of Autherine Lucy, Naacp-sponsored litigant in the suit to compel admission of Negroes to the University of Alabama, Current 'wondered', "now that the trustees have (expelled) Miss Lucy on the rather tenuous grounds that she made an injudicious statement against them, will they act to expel Leonard Wilson, pre-law student who is the darling of the Alabama White Citizens' Councils?" (Tribune note: Wilson was expelled Monday on same grounds.)

Wilson has challenged the authority of president O. C. Carmichael, of the University of Alabama, and publicly abused him for admitting Miss Lucy originally, Current said, adding: "His leadership points up the shallowness of the White Citizens' cause. When 'children' can sound the keynote for bigotry, to what depth have the intelligent citizens of Alabama descended?"

Rabbis pledge support to Alabama protest

Tribune Los Angeles, Calif. Sat. 3-17

Wholehearted cooperation of Jewish rabbis of the city, was pledged this week to the Alabama Rally and Protest meeting, slated for the Olympic auditorium Mar. 27, which will have the Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy, second in command of the Montgomery bus boycott and one of 24 ministers of that city indicted for inciting the boycott, as speaker.

Fri. 3-16-56

Rabbi Aaron Wise has pledged the Jewish rabbis' support, the Rev. Maurice A. Dawkins, one of the recently organized Southwest Pacific Ministers' association, which is sponsoring the rally in collaboration with civil rights organizations, reported.

Directly concerned, since the law under which the 89 Negro leaders were indicted was passed in 921 to restrict union activities of coal miners, is organized labor; and labor, too, has pledged support to the protest, the sponsors said.

Alabama petitions Supreme Court—

News Mon. 8-23-56

Clear-cut bus segregation ruling asked

B'ham, Ala. P. 1

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 23—The State of Alabama called on the U. S. Supreme Court today to "face squarely the truth and reality" that peace and order cannot be maintained in Montgomery, Ala., "if, by court decree, a Negro man is permitted to sit by a white woman" on public buses.

The demand was made in a jurisdictional statement filed by Alabama Attorney General John Patterson in appealing from the June 5 decision of a 3-judge Middle Alabama Federal District Court that Alabama's state laws and municipal ordinances requiring racial segregation on municipal transportation systems were unconstitutional.

The three-judge court permanently enjoined enforcement of the statutes and ordinances, but suspended the injunction when an appeal was filed.

In commenting on the appeal, Patterson said: "The decision in this case will affect every city in the United States which operates a privately owned municipal bus system similar to that of Montgomery."

He conceded the Supreme Court had rejected its century-old "separate but equal" doctrin as it had applied to schools, public parks, and interstate transportation. He added: "We are making a last stand."

THE JURISDICTIONAL statement declared:

"Both races have the same bus drivers, ride the same bus, see the same sights when riding, look out of identical windows, pay the same fare and sit in identical seats."

"The accomodations are identical in every respect. The right of the passenger is only that of being carried safely, and with a due regard to his personal comfort and convenience."

"This canont be done and peace and order maintained in Montgomery, Ala., and other similar places if, by court decree, a Negro man is permitted to sit by a white woman. The Supreme Court of the United States should face squarely the truth and reality of that fact."

News

Urging that the case be set down for oral argument in the 1956 Fall session of the Supreme Court, the jurisdictional statement said: "The lower courts and the people should be given a clear cut, and duly considered written opinion disposing of these questions one way or the other."

PATTERSON and Asst. Atty. Gen. Gordon Madison were in Washington to file the case with the Supreme Court, acting for the Alabama Public Service Commission. An appeal also was to be filed by the Board of Commissioners of the City of Montgomery, with Walter Kabe and Roland Nachman as attorneys.

Appeal is being made directly to the Supreme Court because the PSC, a state body, was enjoined along with the Montgomery commissioners, the Montgomery police chief, the Montgomery City Lines and two of its bus drivers, from enforcing the segregation laws.

Patterson said the PSC should not have been named as defendant in the case as it lacks authority, under the Alabama Motor Carrier Act of 1930, over motor vehicles for hire operating within city or incorporated town limits and their police jurisdictions.

38b 1956

ALABAMA

MONTGOMERY CITY BUS LINES

BUS BOYCOTT

Bus Segregation To End Today In Montgomery, Company Says

Constitution Atlanta, Ga p.1

Tues. 4-24-56

MONTGOMERY, Ala., April 23 (AP)—A notice was posted on the bulletin board at the Montgomery City Bus Lines tonight ordering an end to segregated seating on Montgomery buses at 5 a.m. tomorrow.

The notice said the desegregation order was the result of the U.S. Supreme Courts' ruling today holding segregated seating unconstitutional.

The bulletin board notice was signed by bus company manager J. H. Bagley. Bagley's family said he was not available to confirm the desegregation decree.

The letter "to all employes" on the subject of "seating on buses" said:

"We have been advised that today the Supreme Court of the United States rendered a decision the effect of which is to hold unconstitutional segregation of the races on buses.

"Under the circumstances, the company has no choice except to discontinue the practice of segregation on passengers on account of races and drivers will no longer assign seats to passengers by reason of their race."

Copies of the order were sent to K. E. Totten and B. W. Franklin, officials of the National City Lines in Chicago.

A suit attacking constitutionality of city and state segregation laws had been scheduled to be heard by a three-judge panel here on May 11. The suit already is on file in U.S. district court.

Jack Crenshaw, attorney for the Montgomery city bus lines, said "offhand it sounds like the Supreme Court said Alabama's statutes are unconstitutional."

"It indicates the court has adopted the same rule as that for schools," he said. "And if so, I would anticipate that a court order will be entered here (May 11) along the same line."

Alabama was not directly affected by the court ruling, but an order from the three-judge panel next month could apply the decision to the state.

Postal Employees Aid In Montgomery Case

Daily World Atlanta, Ga.

Tues. 3-27-56

It was revealed here this week that the Atlanta Branch of the National Alliance of Postal Employees, John M. Thomas, president, recently made a cash contribution to the Montgomery Improvement Association to help in the fight for democracy in the Alabama city. At the same time it was also noted that the national president of the postal organization, Atty. James B. Cobb of Washington, D. C., has issued an appeal to all branches to send financial aid to the Montgomery citizens.

During the recent NAACP campaign, the Atlanta Branch also made a $100 payment on a life membership in that dynamic organization as further evidence of its interest in the overall fight against discrimination.

Although the National Alliance of Postal Employees is primarily interested in the eradication of discrimination in the postal service, it is constantly aware that this evil must be met and defeated in all areas of our life. This accounts for its active interest in these two leading exponents of true American democracy.

The NAPE is an organization open to all employees of the Post Office Department, and is largely responsible for seeing that there approximately 112,000 Negroes listed among the more than a half million postal workers throughout the 'Too quiet' in Boycott City, Ala.

Afro-American Sat. 4-21-56 Baltimore, Md.

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — "Everything is quiet down here. Too quiet." p.3

So said Fred Gray, 25-year-old legal adviser to the Montgomery Improvement Association, sponsors of the widely known bus boycott now in its 22nd week.

Mr. Gray refused to confirm or deny the report that the Rev. Martin L. King, leader of the passive resistance movement, was on a trip to buy several station wagons.

* * *

IT IS REPORTED that the Rev. Mr. King, who left Montgomery two weeks ago with his wife and 18-month-old daughter, has purchased 20 station wagons to initiate a "free transportation service" in Montgomery.

"That situation is too complicated," said Mr. Gray, "I would prefer that you talk to the Rev. Mr. King."

The celebrated leader of the protest movement was slated to return to Montgomery Monday.

* * *

THE NEXT PUBLIC hearing involving the bus situation is scheduled for May 11 before a three-judge Federal Court panel.

The jurists will hear a suit filed by four residents of Montgomery attacking the constitutionality of the state and city laws requiring segregation on the buses.

Meanwhile, the 200-car pool is transporting the boycotters daily. The twice-a-week mass meetings are still filled to capacity.

"The enthusiasm remains intense and the morale of the people is high," Mr. Gray reported.

Bus Segregation Is Still The Law

Advertiser p.4-A

THE effect of Judge Jones' decision Wednesday, ordering Montgomery City Lines to abide by city and state segregation ordinances as they have always done, is to reaffirm segregation on transportation as the law in Montgomery.

Fri. 5-11-56

The U.S. Supreme Court did not, as it was first reported, outlaw bus segregation April 23, but merely refused to review the South Carolina case because the question of damages had not been settled in the lower court.

Unless and until Judge Jones' order is set aside by a higher state court, or superseded by some federal court order, segregation is still the law on Montgomery buses and the bus company must, under threat of citation for contempt, enforce it. Judge Jones' injunction order said:

Ordered, adjudged and decreed by the court that the respondent company do withdraw the order it has issued to its employes, same being contained in the bulletin No. 5-56 [which the company hastily issued on the day of the Supreme Court's misinterpreted order, apparently without bothering to ascertain whether the Supreme Court had actually invalidated bus segregation] dated April 23, 1956, with reference to seating of passengers on buses, and the said respondent, its agents, servants and employes, be, and each is hereby required to comply with and abide by all the provisions of the ordinances of the city of Montgomery and the statutes of Alabama relating to the seating of white and Negro passengers in separate portions of the conveyances of the respondent operated within the city of Montgomery and its police jurisdiction.

That means the bus company and its drivers must enforce segregated seating or risk going to jail for contempt. Nor can the bus company argue that it recognizes the higher authority of the U.S. Supreme Court, because the Supreme Court hasn't ruled, not even on South Carolina's laws, certainly not Alabama's.

Today, of course, an entirely new and separate phase of the dispute will begin in U.S. District Court with the hearing of a suit challenging the constitutionality of city and state laws requiring segregation on transportation. The court might hand down any number of decisions, but if it declares bus segregation invalid and this view is upheld on appeal, this could have the ultimate effect of dissolving Judge Jones' order.

BOYCOTT STILL HITS MONTGOMERY BUSES

Commercial Appeal p.7

It's Been Six Months Since Rosa Parks Was Arrested

Fri. 6-1-56

CAR POLL ORGANIZED

Memphis, Tenn.

By The Associated Press

MONTGOMERY, Ala., May 31.—Six months ago Friday a Negro seamstress was arrested and taken to jail for refusing to give up her seat in the white section of a Montgomery City Lines bus.

Other Montgomery Negroes resented it, and on the day Rosa Parks was fined $14 for violating a city segregation ordinance, they joined in a mass protest demonstration by refusing to ride the buses.

That was last Dec. 5, and the boycott is still in effect with unabated determination to win equal rights for the estimated 50,000 Negroes in Montgomery.

Well-Organized System

The continuing protest against segregated seating facilities on the buses has resulted in the development of a well-organized transportation system to get Negroes to and from work.

A smoothly functioning car pool which includes 14 church-operated station wagons runs on a rigid schedule without charge to the riders. Churches have played a vital part in the boycott from the outset, and funds to support the car pool have been collected twice weekly at church mass meetings.

Only privately owned cars were used at first under supervision of the transportation committee of the Montgomery Improvement Association, an organization formed to support the boycott.

In recent weeks, however, new model station wagons bearing the names of 14 churches have made their appearance at the boycott dispatch and pickup stations. Each one is registered in the Montgomery County Probate Office in the name of a Negro church.

Private automobiles are still used, too, said Rufus Lewis, chairman of the MIA's transportation committee. Drivers are paid $4 a day plus gasoline and, in some instances, garage repairs.

Costs $3,000 A Week

The MIA treasurer testified in the trial of one of the boycott leaders that transportation was costing $3,000 a week.

Negroes assemble at dispatch stations scattered throughout the city each morning and cars take them to work along fixed routes. At the end of the day, they gather at pickup stations for the return trip.

Some Negroes have continued to use bus transportation, but not many. Assistant manager R. C. Mills of City Lines says the daily Negro passenger load has dropped from 30,000 or 40,000 to only 300 or 400.

Meanwhile, as an outgrowth of the boycott, a suit is pending in Federal court challenging constitutionality of city and state laws whih reqcuire segregation of white and Negro passengers in all public transportation. A three-judge panel is expected to announce its ruling next month.

State authorities are prosecuting the boycott leaders and one defendant, Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., a Baptist minister, has been fined $500 and costs for violating Alabama's anti-boycott law.

King has appealed his conviction to higher courts and trials of the other 89 defendants under indictment have been postponed pending the outcome. Twenty-four of those indicted are Negro clergymen.

IT STARTED WITH HER—Rosa Parks, whose arrest for violating segregation laws at Montgomery, Ala., started the bus boycott, is now under indictment for taking part in the boycott. With her is her attorney, Charles D. Langford. Montgomery Negroes last night planned a mass protest over the indictments. (Story on Page One)

BAGLEY STRICKEN

Confusion Clouds Bus Line Dispute

By STEVE LESHER

Conflict raged yesterday among all elements concerned in the 20-week-old Montgomery bus boycott and the sudden decision to desegregate the local buses.

All parties operated with apparent confusion as to their next move as each struggled to arrange meetings with the other. There is even confusion on exactly what the Supreme Court intended to do in its ruling. Its meaning, therefore, is clouded in doubt.

The obvious tension was unhappily dramatized through a severe heart attack suffered by J. H. Bagley, superintendent of Montgomery City Lines Inc.

Bsides Bagley, other prominent figures in the Montgomery dilemma are Benjamin W. Franklin, vice president of National City Lines, parent company of the local company; Robert Thrun, attorney for the national company; the Rev. M. L. King, president of the Montgomery Improvement Assn., the group directing the boycott; Mayor W. A. Gayle and City Commissioners Clyde C. Sellers and Frank W. Parks and C. C. (Jack) Owen, president of the Alabama Public Service Commission.

A brief resume of the situation:

1. The city has promised to arrest any persons who violate segregation statutes and any bus driver who does not enforce segregation on the buses.

2. The bus coopany has issued orders to its drivers not to enforce segregation and not to enforce integration.

3. The Negroes are continuing to boycott the buses apparently because their demand for Negro drivers for predominantly Negro routes has not been met.

4. The bus company stated that due to contracts with the union, the hiring of any new drivers, white or Negro, virtually would be impossible.

5. The Alabama PSC has stated that the Supreme Court ruling applies only to South Carolina.

6. Attorneys for the bus company have stated that the ruling appears to be applicable in Alabama.

Officials of National City Lines Inc., revealed yesterday that compliance with demands for Negro bus drivers for predominantly Negro routes would be difficult at this time.

Vice President Franklin of the parent company located in Chicago and National City Lines Atty. Thrun told The Advertiser that "due to company contracts with the bus drivers' union, circumstances would virtually prevent us from hiring anyone, be he white or Negro."

Franklin explained that contracts with the union specify that no new driver may be hired until all furloughed drivers are recalled to their jobs. He said at least 36 men had been placed on furlough, apparently due to the boycott.

Another section of the contract, he said, prevents placing new men on any specified routes. Men with highest seniority, he said, get preference on routes. New men "have to take what they can get." He explained that would open the possibility of having Negro drivers on predominantly white routes. No Negro has ever applied for position of bus driver with Montgomery City Lines.

King, spokesman for the Negroes who have boycotted the city buses for the past 20 weeks, said earlier that if applications from Negroes for the position of bus driver were examined "with the same equanimity as. . .an application from a white person. . . that might satisfy our people."

INJUNCTION EYED

Meanwhile, city officials told reporters that the bus company would have to abide by city and state ordinances concerning segre- "if they are to continue their operations here."

Mayor Gayle and Commissioners Sellers and Parks indicated yesterday they might seek a court injunction against the company if "they violate local segregation statues."

City officials and representatives from National City Lines were trying to arrange a meeting late yesterday. A mass meeting of Negroes will be held tonight at the Day Street Baptist Church. King said earlier that "decisions of the Montgomery Improvement Assn. will be announced at that time. At present our position is not changed." King added the boycott would continue.

King was not available for comment concerning union contracts with the bus company.

INTERVIEW GRANTED

Franklin granted an interview to The Advertiser yesterday morning following a brief conference with television photographers. Following is the text of the interview:

Q. Was the order for desegregation on buses a "snap judgment" order following the Supreme Court decision on South Carolina?

A. No, the order was a matter of considered judgment following several months of study by our legal department. They began to investigate the matter after the lower court in South Carolina had made its ruling.

Q. Why was the company willing to renew its franchise in Montgomery?

A. We've operated here for 20 years and we've always had good relations here. In the new contract, which is for 10 years, there was no mention of segregation.

Q. From your standpoint, is there a possibility of operating separate buses for white and Negroes?

A. From an economical standpoint that would be impractical. From a standpoint of segregation, we have not yet considered that possibility.

Q. Did the order to desegregate buses in the Southern cities emanate from Chicago?

A. The order emanated from the legal branch of the company.

Q. In view of the position taken by the city and state, how do you plan to enforce a first come, first served policy of seating?

A. We are not a police body. We will not attempt to enforce segregation and we will not attempt to enforce integration.

Q. If a driver is arrested for not enforcing segregation as the city has threatened, what will your stand be?

A. If a driver is arrested for obeying our instructions, certainly we'll help the man.

It was apparent that King and other members of the Montgomery Improvement Assn. were pleased with the ruling made late last Monday night by J. H. Bagley, superintendent of the local bus line.

EQUALLY APPARENT

It was equally apparent from King's early statements that one barrier to ending the boycott was the agreement to hire Negro bus drivers

Observing the paradox of Negro demands and company-union contracts, the outcome is a matter of high specualtion.

In another unexpected development early yesterday, Bagley was stricken with a heart attack only a short time after he had concluded a conference with Franklin, Thrun and Jack Crenshaw, attorney for the local ine.

Bagley was hospitalized here at 12:15 a.m. and was placed in an oxygen tent. He was still in the tent late afternoon. His condition was reported as "serious."

The company's decision followed a U.S. Supreme Court ruling Monday holding bus segregation unconstitutional.

President Owen of the PSC sent a telegram to President Roy Fitzgerald of National City Lines demanding withdrawal of the integration order. Franklin yesterday indicated that the order would not be withdrawn.

WAY OPEN FOR APPEAL

Bulky Transcript Finished On Boycott Trial Of King

Advertiser June 8-3-56

Completion of a bulky transcript of court records in the trial of the Rev. M. L. King, Negro minister convicted of illegal boycotting last March, has cleared the way for an appeal of the circuit court decision.

Montgomery

King, president of the Montgomery Improvement Assn., was found guilty of fostering an illegal boycott against Montgomery City he heads has sponsored and promoted the Negro bus boycott since the beginning of the mass protest last December.

The vast record of testimony and evidence in the King trial, prepared by court reporter Hallowell Lewis, will be the largest ever presented in circuit court for a single criminal case.

560 PAGES LONG

More than 560 pages are included in the report requested by attorneys of the Negro minister for an appeal of his conviction to the State Court of Appeals.

The awesome document, prepared at a cost of between $1,400 and $1,500, reflects the intensity and vastness of the proceedings in the King trial, which has become a test case for indictment of more than 90 Montgomery Negroes for promoting or participating in the boycott.

However, by arranging for the King case to serve as a case history for all the Negroes indicted in the boycott, the Negro legal counsel saved hundreds of dollars in court and other legal costs which would have resulted had all the defendants been tried individually.

MAZE OF RECORDS

The maze of court records, which are so voluminous that a medium-size suit case is required to deliver them, includes a separate file of the testimony by King.

Copies of King's testimony were requested by State Atty. Gen. John Patterson, Circuit Solicitor W. F. Thetford and Negro attorneys who represented the Baptist minister at the trial.

Besides the thick stacks of transcript sheets covering the court testimony, the mass of exhibits introduced as evidence adds to the collection of court material to be used in the appeal.

Most of the exhibits include business records of the Montgomery Improvement Assn. Photostatic copies of bank deposit slips used by the association represent a sizable portion of the transcript material.

Mass Protest Called Over Boycott Arrests

Inquirer

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Feb. 23 (AP).—Negroes stung by the mass arrests of the leaders of their boycott of city buses gathered for a huge mass meeting of protest tonight. Fri. 2-24-56

The Rev. R. D. Abernathy, one of those indicted and the pastor of the Negro First Baptist Church where the rally was scheduled, said he expected 10,000 persons to come to the meeting "to sing and pray to Almighty God and get into the hearts of Montgomery people so that justice may be done."

ROUNDUP PRESSED P. 48

Deputies meanwhile were completing the job of taking into custody the scores of boycott leaders indicted by a grand jury under a 1921 State law making it a misdemeanor to conspire to prevent others from carrying on their business. The law was passed as a weapon against violence in coal mine strikes.

Philadelphia, Pa.

A Negro Congressman in Washington, Rep. Adam Clayton Powell, Jr., (D., N. Y.), called on President Eisenhower to take immediate steps to safeguard the persons and civil rights of those arrested. He called the inclusion of 26 ministers in the roundup "a new low in American barbarism."

In Pittsburgh, the North American Area Council of the World Presbyterian Alliance released a resolution warning that "intolerable situations have developed and are developing" in the South's fight against the U. S. Supreme Court ruling on racial segregation.

These situations, the council said, "involve the denials of basic human rights, attempts to deny the law of the land, and a direct action on the modern foundation of American democracy: the public school system."

NUMBER REDUCED

By afternoon, 88 Negroes in Montgomery had been booked and then released on $300 bond each, deputies said. Sheriff MacButler said he expected his office would not take in more than about 90 defendants.

An official source said the number of defendants was less than the 113 to 115 announced earlier because the grand jury had made some duplication of names and the whereabouts of some of the persons indicted was not known.

Arrests Hit As Red Methods

Bulletin P. 1

Birmingham, Ala.

World

CHARLESTON, S. C. — (Special to the Atlanta Daily World) — The mass arrests of 115 Negroes in Montgomery, Ala., was described here as "Soviet Communism method," during a heated declaration that Southern whites, not the NAACP are creating additional tension between Negroes and whites.

Roy Wilkins, Excutive Secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, made the charge Friday in Charleston o ly hours after Montgomery's colored citizens held a mass "Walking Day" in protest over the segregated bus situation.

PROBLEM OF SOUTH

"Probably noth ng illustrates the problem of the South so well as the Montgomery bus protest." Mr. Wilkins declared. "And Montgomery city officials, all of whom belong to the White Citizens Councils have met the situation in the customary Southern manner.

"The police state has come out in the open at Montgomery. The grand jury has ind cted 115 persons under a state anti-boycott law."

Mr. Wilkins held that "This is the Soviet communism method. Here we have the police knocking on doors and taking men away. Here we have mass arrests. Here we have a grand jury delivering a general lecture on observance of the segregation line. Prec sely like the Communists."

QUOTED REPORT

The speaker, who was addressing the Southeast Regional Convention of the NAACP, quoted the Montgomery Grand Jury's report which is based as reason for the 115 arrests.

Interpreting the statement, Mr. Wilkins declared:

"What the grand jury said is: Here in Montgomery we don't care a hoot about any law except our law; don't get any notions about the Supreme Court or the Constitution, or the United States; this is Montgomery, Alabama, and this is what we say black people must do—or else."

POWER STRUGGLE

Mr. Wilkins termed attacks on Negroes cowardly, and added "to appreciate the scope of the cowardice, one must remember that none of the victims threatens the power structure of the South. Negroes own no great industries, publ sh no daily papers, sit in no legislatures have only a fingernail hold in financial circles, are not sheriffs, sit on no court benches, and hold only a few scattered and minor polit cal offices. Their industrial employment is limited to unskiled categories.

"What threat do they pose? Are these Citizens Council members these industrial executives, bankers, educators, ministers of the gospel and other respectable white community leaders any safer or happier because some Negro family is made to face sudden disaster?

"Does it make a textile executive more secure to know that a Negro widow with four children over in Clarendon County is thrown off the land and has to beg bread and milk for the "sin" of assuming she is a human being?"

Mr. Wilkins declared the school desegregation problem can be solved if the "South will begin by recognizing Negro citizenship, unreserved citizenship."

"The time has come for freedom," Mr. Wilkins declared. "We have been patient—God knows!—but the time is here. Who can say with truth that we want to go too fast? Ninety years is a long time to wait no man who waits that long is going to fast."

Montgomery Negroes Walking to Work Today

Star P. 10-A

Fri. 2-24-56

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Feb. 24 (AP).—Pledged to a massive campaign of firm but peaceful resistance, Montgomery Negroes planned a 24-hour walk-to-work pilgrimage today in renewed protest against segregation on city buses.

The 100 or so among them who were indicted by a grand jury on anti-boycott charges were called into court to face arraignment today. A date will be fixed for their trials, perhaps starting the week of March 19. viction was upheld Wednesday by Circuit Judge Eugene Carter, who also dismissed a protest against the constitutionality of the segregation laws.

Eighty-nine defendants have been arrested and other arrests are still to come. The total number indicted was first announced as the warrants were checked out Washington,

Shouts of "Amen" greeted a minister's suggestion at a mass prayer meeting last night that "not a race-loving Negro" would use any form of transportation throughout today. D. C.

It was the Negroes' way of demonstrating that they can walk if necessary to carry on their 11 - week - old boycott against Montgomery City lines buses and the segregation required by city and State law.

Chanting hymns, the throng cheered wildly when their leaders pledged an unrelenting fight against what they called "oppression." They chorused agreement when one clergyman spoke of "compassion for those who hate us."

The Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy, pastor of the Negro First Baptist Church where the meeting was held, estimated the crowd at "around 5,000."

Rousing Reception

A rousing demonstration greeted Mr. Abernathy and other defendants in the boycott prosecutions as they pushed their way through the crowd to enter the church. Mr. Abernathy and 23 other ministers were among those indicted by the grand jury Tuesday.

Mr. Abernathy told the crowd, "We have kept the struggle Christian and non-violent. We have stressed non-violence. We do not participate and will have no part in violence."

The bus boycott began December 5 after a Negro woman, Mrs. Rosa Parks, was fined $14 for refusing to move to the colored section of a bus as required by city and State law. Her con-

Mrs. Parks was on the pulpit at the church last night.

More Arrests In Negro Boycott Of Buses Waited

Star P. 2-A

Thurs. 2-23-56

Washington, D.C.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Feb. 23 (AP).—Dozens of new arrests in Montgomery's bus boycott were expected today while preparations were made for a mass meeting tonight of 10,000 Negroes praying for "justice to prevail."

And to emphasize their determination boycott leaders proclaimed tomorrow "Prayer-Pilgrimage Day." They said every "race-loving" Negro will shun all motor vehicles and walk wherever they go on that day.

Scores of Negroes crowded outside the Montgomery County Jail yesterday and watched quietly as 73 of 115 persons indicted for boycotting were brought in.

The 73 taken into custody, all Negroes, included several political leaders and 23 ministers. All were released in $300 bond after being fingerprinted and booked.

Grand Jury Named 115

The wholesale arrests followed a report by the Montgomery County Grand Jury which named 115 persons as active participants in the boycott, now in its 12th week in protest to racial segregation.

The mass meeting tonight and the no-ride "pilgrimage" tomorrow were announced by the Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy, one of those indicted for boycotting and pastor of the First Baptist Church, where the "prayer for justice" meeting will be held.

The Negro minister, chairman of the negotiating committee of boycott leaders, said in a statement that "Negroes are not on trial here. But Montgomery is on trial."

"The eyes of the world are focused here waiting to see Southern justice in action," he said. "It is an American's right to protest against undemocratic and inhuman practices, yet, because we are Negroes, the grand jury has indicted us."

Expects 10,000 to Attend

NEGROES CALL MASS MEETING IN BUS BOYCOTT

Daily Tribune
Fri. 2-24-56
Chicago, Ill.

Montgomery, Ala., Feb. 23 [Special]—Mass meetings of Negroes and a complete boycott tomorrow of all means of motor transportation were planned by Negro leaders today as sheriff's deputies rounded up the last of about 95 persons indicted for participation in the boycott aimed at ending racial segregation on city buses here.

A prayer meeting expected to attract 10,000 Negroes was scheduled at one church. The all-out boycott was called by the Rev. R. D. Abernathy, head of a negotiating committee that met with city and bus company officials in an unsuccessful effort to end the dispute, now in its 12th week.

Abernathy and other Negro leaders proclaimed tomorrow as "prayer pilgrimage day" and called upon all "race loving" Negroes to shun all motor vehicles and walk wherever they go tomorrow.

Expect Crowd at Court

It was expected that crowds of Negroes may converge tomorrow on the Circuit courtroom of Judge Eugene Carter where the indicted boycotters will be arraigned and their cases scheduled for trial. However, it was not deemed likely there will be any serious trouble.

Of 89 indicted Negroes arrested, 24 are ministers. The total number of indictments returned Tuesday, originally announced as 115, was scaled down to about 95—the exact number apparently had not been determined—because of duplications thru listing the same persons by both their first names and their initials.

Among those arrested today was the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., one of the principal spokesmen for the boycotters. His home was the target of a small bomb the night of Jan. 30 while he was leading a boycott meeting. He surrendered voluntarily today upon his return from a speaking engagement in Tennessee.

Freed on $300 Bond

All of those charged with violating an Alabama law prohibiting conspiracy to interfere with lawful business were released in $300 bond each after being finger printed and booked. Most of the bonds were posted by Negro property owners.

Meanwhile, in Washington, Rep. Powell [D., N. Y.] asked "White House" protection for the Montgomery boycotters. In a telegram to the President, Powell, a Negro, termed the matter "another ghastly victory for communism."

He predicted that at least 10,000 Negroes will attend the meeting tonight "and pray to Almighty God to enter the hearts of Montgomery people so that justice will prevail at the arraignment trials Monday." He added:

"We are expecting these cases to be dismissed. But if they are not, we will take them to the United States Supreme Court."

Those arrested included Mrs. Rosa Parks, who was taken into custody on the boycott indictment soon after leaving Circuit Court, where she had been sentenced to 14 days in jail for refusing to pay a fine in the case which touched off the racial protest movement.

Mrs. Parks, a seamstress, appealed a $14 fine levied in City Court December 5 for refusing to move to the back of a bus. That appeal was turned down yesterday by Circuit Judge Eugene Carter and she was sentenced to 14 days in jail.

Files Appeal

She then appealed to the Alabama Supreme Court and was released in $100 bond, only to be picked up immediately on the boycotting charge and freed again in $300 bond.

Other prominent Negroes arrested included E. D. Nixon, former State president of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and president of the Montgomery Progressive Democratic Association; Mrs. Jo Ann Robinson, teacher at Alabama State College for Negroes and head of the Women's Political Council, and P. M. Blair, known as the "unofficial Negro mayor" of Montgomery.

Evening Star
Sun. 2-23-56
P. 2-A
Washington, D.C.

PRINTED—Montgomery, Ala.—Deputy Sheriff D. H. Lackey takes the fingerprints of Mrs. Rosa Parks, seamstress whose refusal to move to the back of a bus touched off the bus boycott last December. In addition to the boycott arrest, Mrs. Parks' appeal on a $14 fine for violating segregation laws was turned down yesterday.—AP Wirephoto.

Circuit Judge Cites Possible Penalty For Conviction On Anti-Boycott Laws

Advertiser 2-8-4

Montgomery Ala.

Organized boycotting of lawful businesses is against the law and punishable by heavy fines or stiff sentences, Circuit Judge Eugene B. Carter advised, following his charge to the grand jury this week.

Wed. 2-15-56

Persons convicted for unlawful boycotting are jubject to a sentence of not more than six months in the county jail and fines of not more than $1,000 or not less than $100.

MAY BE DIFFICULT

Judge Carter, observing that Montgomery County has seldom been confronted with boycotts of any kind in the past and never with a boycott of city buses, said enforcement of the law may be difficult. He pointed out that the law applies to situations where persons are forced to boycott business organizations "involuntarily" through leadership or conspiracy. Simple failure to patronize a firm, even among a group, does not constitute boycotting, he said. However, persons responsible for inciting or organizing resistance to a business operation may be prosecuted, the judge added.

Judge Carter, who directed the jury to investigate acts of boycotting—emphasizing the current bus boycott—and determine violations of the law, cited Title 14, Chapter 20 of Alabama Code of 1940 which reads in part as follows:

"Two or more persons who, without a just cause or legal excuse for doing so, enter into any combination, conspiracy, agreement, arrangement or understanding for the purpose of hindering, delaying, or preventing any other persons, firms, corporation, or association of persons from carrying on any lawful business, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor."

OTHER PROVISIONS

Other provisions of the code relative to boycotting make unlawful the following: "loitering or picketing, printing or circulating notice of boycott, using force or threats against persons engaging in lawful occupation, maintaining blacklists, attempt or threat to injure or destroy property of another, teaching, printing books or papers, or organizing persons to boycott . . ."

Penalties for violations of the boycotting statute are set forth in Title 14, Sect. 62 which reads as follows:

"Any persons, firm, corporation, or association of persons violating any of the sections, shall, on conviction, be punished by a fine of not less than one hundred dollars, nor more than one thousand dollars and may also be imprisoned in the county jail or sentenced to hard labor for the county for not more than six months for the first conviction, at the discretion of the court or judge trying the case; and on the second and every subsequent conviction, at the discretion of the court or judge trying the case; and on the second and every subsequent conviction, in addition to the fine which may be imposed, the convicted party must be sentenced to hard labor for not less than three months nor more than six months, to be fixed by the judge or court trying the case."

Supreme Court Ruling Seen on Bus Race Bars

Sunday Star Washington D.C. Sun 2-26-56

By ROBERT K. WALSH

Racial segregation on buses within States and Federal laws aimed at subversive activities or balky witnesses may figure in big decisions when the Supreme Court returns to the bench tomorrow.

P 2-4

During a recess since January 30 the court prepared opinions on some of the 35 cases already argued. It considered requests for review of scores of others. For two weeks beginning tomorrow it will hear arguments on many previously granted review. Those include a challenge to loyalty program dismissals of Federal employes from non-sensitive jobs.

An order on public transportation segregation could be especially far-reaching. The high court in 1946 invalidated a Virginia law that required racial segregation of passengers on buses crossing the State line. It has never ruled on intrastate bus segregation, as in the pending case from South Carolina.

Several matters awaiting decision, possibly tomorrow, affect the Communist Party or witnesses who refused to answer questions about Communist affiliations and acquaintances.

Reds Hit Registration

The Communist Party is attacking constitutionality of requirements for registering of organizations found by the Subversive Activities Control Board to be dominated by foreign totalitarian governments such as Russia.

Key sections of the Federal Immunity Act, at least as they relate to testimony before a Federal grand jury in Federal court, are attacked in another major case up for decision. That recently enacted law authorizes the granting of immunity to otherwise reluctant witnesses if they agree to answer questions. If they refuse, they can be punished for contempt.

The appeal of William Ludwig Ullmann dealt with his refusal to answer Federal grand jury questions in New York. A Supreme Court decision on that point conceivably could apply to witnesses who balk at answering congressional investigating committee questions.

The National Lawyers Guild has asked the Supreme Court to uphold the guild's contention that it can bypass a Justice Department administrative hearing and go directly into court in its fight against Attorney General Brownell's listing of the guild as a subversive organization.

Red Conviction Questioned

Another question awaiting a final judicial answer in this category is whether a Communist regional leader in Pennsylvania could legally be convicted under a State sedition law, or whether sedition is solely a Federal crime.

There also is the contention of a New York college instructor that State authorities violated his constitutional rights for firing him after he invoked the Fifth Amendment before a congressional committee.

Labor and industry are prominently represented in legal problems the Supreme Court may untangle in decisions tomorrow The tribunal may say whether the duPont Co.'s reported control of 75 per cent of the cellophane market amounts to unlawful monopoly.

One of the many labor relations cases deals with efforts of union organizers to distribute union literature on a company's property.

D. C. Dailies Hit Bus Indictments

Defender Sat. 3-10-56 P. 8

Chicago Ill.

On successive days last week, The Washington Evening Star and The Washington Post roundly panked Montgomery, Ala., authorities for invoking an anti-union law to set up indictments of 115 Negro leaders of the celebrated Montgomery bus boycott.

The Post refers to the indictments as "a monumental display of folly." The Star sees the strategy adopted by Montgomery city fathers as "almost beyond belief."

These editorial expressions are remarkable because Washington, the nation's capital, only a few short months ago segregated Negroes on street cars and buses and in every other conceivable way.

The editorials suggest that integration in Washington is working well. The strong language indicates that the capital's editorial writers, at least, are indignant that the rest of the nation hasn't followed Washington's road to desegregation.

THE STAR'S EDITORIAL

Here's what The Star had to say on the indictments:

"It is hard to believe that this is happening in 1956, and we suppose that the indictments, if the Negroes should be convicted, will ultimately be thrown out by the courts. Meanwhile, however, the spectacle remains — the spectacle of white people, who are staunchly opposed to integrated schools, attempting to compel Negroes to patronize segregated buses. . .

"The implication (of the grand jury) is, or seems to be, that reason and a sense of fair play are being destroyed in Montgomery by rising racial feeling. If this is correct, it is indeed time for the leaders of both races, and in this instance, especially for the leaders of the white race, to take a long and thoughtful look into the future."

THE POST SPEAKS OUT

The Washington Post:

"The municipal authorities of Montgomery, Ala, chose Washington's birthday — they might even more appropriately have chosen Lincoln's birthday — to ease their sense of frustration with a momumental display of folly. . .

"The frustrating thing about this Negro protest from the white point of view in Montgomery is that it is impeccably lawful, orderly, dignified and effective. It strikes at an important pocketbook nerve of the community. . .

"Negroes, like white persons, have an indubitable right to travel as they please — afoot or by bicycle or by car or by bus. There is really no way to force them to patronize a bus line; and there appears to be no way, at least in Montgomery, to operate a bus line profitably without their patronage. Coercion in this situation can produce only 'distrust, dislike and hatred' at home while making Montgomery look ludicrous if not worse abroad."

History Of The Boycott Law

Advertiser Montgomery, Ala.

IT IS now apparent that the present Montgomery County grand jury will consider indictment of the bus boycott leaders. If indictments are returned, presumably the defendants will be tried under the state law governing "Boycotting & Blacklisting" (Title 14, Chapter 20, Sections 54-62, Code of 1940).

This law, part of which has been held unconstitutional by the U.S. Supreme Court (the section forbidding picketing), was passed in October, 1921, to meet a labor crisis in Birmingham. Coal mine disturbances—including boycotts, dynamitings and murders—had moved Gov. Kilby to take firm measures. Troops had been on duty in Jefferson County, but, the governor said in his address to the special session of the legislature which convened Oct. 4, state criminal law was inadequate to cope with the situation.

Wed. 2-15-56

GOV. KILBY'S proposal to strengthen the boycott law, as embodied in the criminal code of 1907, was not the chief reason for his calling the special session. In fact, the boycott amendment was No. 13 in a list of 18 measures he wanted passed. Of the boycott proposal, Kilby told the legislature:

P. 4-A

> The recent coal strikes in this state developed the fact that our civil and criminal laws were inadequate to promptly and properly deal with the conditions which existed just prior to and after the strike was declared. It was then discovered that by reason of the inadequacy of the statutes of this state relating to strikes, boycotts and blacklisting, etc., that the civil authorities were unable to prevent or even check many wrongful acts which inevitably led to the calling of the strike and to the perpetration of many heinous crimes which attended and followed the strike.

★

BECAUSE local authorities were powerless to act with no laws to back them up, it was necessary to call out the militia, Kilby told the legislature. He continued:

> While martial law was not absolutely declared, nor the civil law actually suspended, the condition of affairs was so critical, so serious, that at times it appeared almost imperative that martial law should be declared in the coal mining districts of the state . . . If the statutes of the state had been adequate, and the civil authorities had been able to . . . deal with the . . . labor trouble, much if not all of the great loss of life, property and enormous expenses of the state would have been avoided.

Gov. Kilby spelled out his labor philosophy, which sounds primitive in these Taft-Hartley times. Basically, it was a recognition of the worker's "inalienable right" to work or not to work; the employer's inalienable right to hire and fire as he sees fit.

★

KILBY said the trouble in the coal mines was the work of "foreign agitators" attempting to promote socialism, "which often results in anarchy." Then he got to the point:

> A conspiracy to starve or freeze . . . or even an agreement to do acts, the natural and probable result of which is to cause great suffering or inconvenience to the public, is little less than treason against the government . . .

★

THE get-tough-with-labor amendment, substantially the same law under which bus boycott leaders may be indicted, was passed. But, recalls Kilby's house floor leader at the time, Dothan Atty. Oscar L. Thompkins, not without a fight. "I was almost lynched in the process," Thompkins said in a telephone interview yesterday.

A few legislators denounced Kilby's proposal as "part of a nationwide program to destroy organized labor." Charged Rep. Harrison of Jefferson: "The Governor used every means in his power to crush the miners' strike in Jefferson County, then when he was called on to arbitrate, decided every point in favor of the coal operators."

Rep. Partridge of Franklin spoke against the bill, declaring that its effect would be to "bring the laboring man to the chopping block and lay his head on it."

★

REP. BENNERS of Jefferson spoke for the bill. He said the bill was aimed at labor agitators, and offered this terse, if drastic, advice to labor unions: "Hang your orators."

Yesterday, former floor leader Thomkins said that he hadn't reread the law he helped pass in many years. In fact, he thought it had been declared unconstitutional. (Only parts have been.) However, he confirmed that it was intended for use against labor. Situations like the Montgomery bus boycott were not foreseen.

★

THE law, originally aimed at miners and now brought to bear against nonriders of city buses, says in part:

> Two or more persons who, without a just cause or legal excuse for so doing, enter into any combination, conspiracy, agreement, arrangement, or understanding for the purpose of hindering, delaying, or preventing any other persons, firms, corporations . . . from carrying on any lawful business shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

Violation is declared a misdemeanor, with maximum punishment fixed at 6 months in jail or $1,000 fine, or both.

REPORT ON ALABAMA

The Bus Boycott In Montgomery May Become Tactical Pattern In Fight Against Segregation

Courier-Journal Thurs. 3-8-56 P.1 Louisville, Ky.

By SAM ADKINS
Courier-Journal Staff Writer

Montgomery, Ala., March 7.—I have just spent the better part of a day riding buses and seeing Montgomery, capital of Alabama, cradle of the Confederacy, a city of some 175,000.

Right now, seeing Montgomery by bus is just about the simplest way to do it. You're not likely to be crowded.

For this is the 14th week of the boycott by the city's 45,000 to 50,000 Negroes of the Montgomery transit system's buses. The service has been cut drastically; still the buses are little more than half full most of the time, almost empty a good part of the time.

First of A Series

Here is a social phenomenon new to the South.

Apparently by accident, one group of Southern Negroes may have stumbled upon a stratagem that will become a pattern in the race's struggle against segregation.

In the past—and in nearby Tuscaloosa, at the University of Alabama, even now—the Negro has relied mainly upon court action to try to win advances toward integration.

In the bus boycott, however, the Negro seems to have taken a leaf from Gandhi's book. He is practicing a sort of passive resistance—and so far making it stick.

To Deep South Boycott Is Act of Defiance

To an outsider, the boycott may not sound like much. After all, what if a group of people does decide not to ride the buses?

There isn't any law that says they've got to ride the buses. But to the Deep South, the boycott is not a group refusal to ride public buses—it is a well-executed, brainily planned act of defiance against "the Southern way of life."

Just what does it mean?

I came to Montgomery with what I assume was an impression held generally outside this immediate region: that the Negroes were demanding an end to segregation on the buses.

This is not correct.

They are asking that segregation be altered and eased somewhat. Here is how it works:

Alabama has a State law (and Montgomery has a City ordinance like it) that requires that drivers of public buses maintain segregation of the races. The law also gives the driver considerable discretion as to how segregation is to be maintained.

Negroes Oppose Relinquishing Seats to Whites

Negroes and whites agree that the system usually is that Negroes start filling the seats from the back of the bus forward, white from the front toward the rear.

It is against the law for a Negro to sit down beside a white person, or equally so for a white person to sit down beside a Negro.

The law is not explicit on the subject, but when a white person enters a bus on which there are no more empty seats, the driver has authority (and in the past has used it) to require Negroes to vacate the seat nearest the front of the bus and give it to the white passenger or passengers.

The Negroes are asking that they continue to start seating from the rear, but that the entire bus be put on a first-come-first-served basis.

In oher words, if the bus filled up entirely with Negroes before a single white passenger entered, the white passenger would have to stand. They want the driver to be relieved of his authority and/or duty to force Negroes (seated properly from back to front) to give up seats to white people.

So, it doesn't add up to a demand for desegregation at all.

In addition, the Negroes have asked the City Administration and Montgomery City Lines, Inc., operator of the buses, to instruct bus drivers to be "more courteous" to Negroes and to hire Negro bus drivers for lines serving predominantly Negro residential sections.

The more-courtesy request was accepted. The proposal that Negro drivers be hired was turned down cold. And negotiations on the seating regulations have got nowhere at all in three months of baffling pulling and tugging. Louisville, Ky.

N.A.A.C.P. Believed Behind Boycott Plan

So, today, the situation is just about a standoff. Neither side has won. Neither side shows the slightest indication it may weaken.

And the "yellow ghosts," as some Montgomeryites call the buses, are still running lightly loaded, in reduced numbers, on fewer lines.

Earlier, I used the term "apparently by accident" in describing the way the bus boycott came about. The "apparently" should be underlined.

Just about every white person in Montgomery suspects that there was nothing accidental about it—but nobody has been able to come up with any evidence.

"Nobody" includes the staffs of The Montgomery Advertiser and The Alabama Journal, more than 250 correspondents from newspapers and magazines throughout the world, the local law-enforcement officers, the burgeoning White Citizens Councils, and me.

The widely held belief is that the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People planned the boycott. The N.A.A.C.P. says it didn't. It admits that it is helping out now with legal advice and in other ways but insists the boycott iself sarted as a purely spontaneous local affair.

Many Believe Police Made Mistake

Anyway, here is what happened, so far as the public knows:

Last December 1, Mrs. Rosa Parks, employed by a Montgomery department store, was ordered by a bus driver to vacate a seat in favor of a white passenger and refused to do so. She admitted the refusal in court later.

The State law gives the driver special powers to make arrests when violation of the segregation rule is involved. So Mrs. Parks was arrested and fined $14—a fine she appealed and lost.

Three days later circulars were scattered among Montgomery's Negro residents, asking them to stay off of city buses December 5 in protest.

Using hindsight, many Montgomery citizens today believe the protest might have been a rather ineffectual one-day affair, and by now would have been forgotten, except for one thing.

On December 5, the Montgomery police force made quite a show of having policemen at principal bus stops, avowedly to see to it that there was no disorder and that Negroes wishing to ride the buses should not be coerced into staying off them.

That, so the story goes, made the Negro leaders angry—mainly pastors of Montgomery's many Negro churches. They set out to make the protest (or boycott) continue to a showdown.

State Senator Says Arrest No Accident

The belief that, except for police action, the protest would have died after a day or so is not universally held. State Senator Sam Engelhardt, gentlemanly, mild-mannered, college-bred executive director of the mushrooming Association of Citizens Councils of Alabama, told me:

"This thing was not spontaneous. It was planned by the N.A.A.C.P. and has been executed by the N.A.A.C.P. The arrest of that Parks woman was no accident. I happen to know she made a nuisance of herself on four other buses before the driver of the fifth one had her arrested. This is just all part of the Negro strategy to force mixing of the races down our throats. And it isn't going to work."

(In the Deep South, you don't hear "integration" and "segregation" much. It's usually "mixing" or "mongrelization of the races" and "separation" or "maintaining the purity of the races."

It may be that the truth of who started the protest never will be known. It is known that part of the planning was done at the Holt Street Baptist Church (one of the city's largest) in an enormous, hymn-singing mass meeting.

Who called the meeting? The Rev. A. W. Wilson, pastor, said he will never tell "under any circumstances" who asked and was given permission to hold the meeting.

First Talks End In Complete Deadlock

By December 8, according to J. H. Bagley, manager of Montgomery City Lines, Inc., the firm's business was off about 75 per cent.

It was on December 8 that the first settlement effort was made. Negro leaders headed by the Rev. M. L. King, 27-year-old pastor of another large church here, made the three—well, Mr. King calld them requests, and the white officials called them demands—referred to above. The discussion lasted 4 hours, ending in complete deadlock.

Intricate car pools were set up to get Negroes to distant jobs. Others rode taxis. And in literally hundreds — perhaps even thousands—of cases, white employers transported their Negro servants to and from work.

Various negotiations for peace fell through.

On January 30, an explosion—a bomb or dynamite sticks—damaged Mr. King's parsonage.

On February 1, a bomb went off in the yard of E. D. Nixon, Pullman porter and former president of the N.A.A.C.P. chapter here. There was little damage, no injury.

Suit Attacks Transportation Segregation

Five Negro women filed a sweeping suit in Federal Court to have segregation on public transportation throughout Alabama declared unconstitutional.

Attorney in this action was Fred Gray, 25, Montgomery Negro lawyer who also is a minister.

Almost immediately, he was reclassified 1-A in the draft. And on February 18 he was indicted on a charge he illegally represented one of the women who filed the suit. The indictment since has been tossed out, but he still is subject to the draft.

It was during this period, too, that City police began to crack down on the Negro car pools. Scores of arrests for traffic violations, operating with faulty equipment, and the like were made.

On February 13, Circuit Judge Eugene Carter charged the County grand jury to determine whether the boycott is in violation of the law.

Ten days later more than 100 indictments were returned, and more than 90 Negro leaders (including the pastors of 20 churches) were arrested. They are all out on bond, with trials scheduled to begin before Judge Carter on March 19.

(Tomorrow: What is the bus boycott doing to Montgomery and its citizens?)

No Winner Likely In Bus Boycott

A Report On Alabama

Courier-Journal Louisville

By SAM ADKINS
Courier-Journal Staff Writer

Montgomery, Ala., March 8. —Regardless of the legal and moral issues, the Negro bus boycott here—now in its 14th week—is doing weird and ugly things to this beautiful, friendly, leisurely old city.

It is difficult to see how the end result can be good, no matter which side wins—the Negroes, who want to break the rigid mold of segregation, or the city's 125,000 white people, who have and display an iron determination to preserve it.

Second of A Series

The boycott is costing parts of the population a great deal of money, although so far it doesn't seem to have reduced Montgomery's over-all economy, since the "lost" money has been turned into other channels.

Can't Measure Loss

You can't measure what is happening here in terms of dollars and cents. Nevertheless, I set out to try to learn the monetary effect of the bus boycott.

My picture is incomplete, but here it is:

If ever a business firm was caught and ground between powerful sociological forces, it's the Montgomery City Lines, Inc., a subsidiary of National City Lines.

For almost 14 weeks, it has been losing revenue, laying off cherished employees, being called names, serving as the goat in the struggle between whites and Negroes.

Not A Southern Firm

It isn't really a Southern firm. In other cities, its buses are not segregated. It has made no such statement, but the obvious inference is that it doesn't care whether Negroes ride on the front seats or the rear seats.

The bus firm is in a delicate position — and therefore extremely reticent. Getting figures from it is difficult. On Monday of this week, I spent an hour or so in the office of Jack Crenshaw, leading Montgomery attorney and lawyer for the bus firm. Also present were K. E. Totten, vice-president of National City Lines, Chicago, and J. H. Bagley, manager of Montgomery City Lines, Inc.

Couldn't Get Quotation

I couldnt get a single direct quotation from any of them. But they did verify this information, which I had obtained from other sources:

In the three months since the boycott began, the gross income of Montgomery City Lines has decreased about $100,000.

This is a reduction at a rate of close to $500,000 a year.

It is believed, moreover, that this figure is decidedly low—that the reduction is probably larger.

On December 8, Bagley, the manager, said the company's business was down about 75 per cent.

Some Lines Dropped

Since then, the company has dropped several predominantly Negro lines entirely, has reduced the number of buses on others, and has had the fare increased from 10 cents to 15 cents—and its revenues are still off by at least $100,000 in three months.

It isn't the bus company alone that has lost. The reduction of service has caused the company to lay off 37 employees (32 drivers and five shop workers).

These men averaged about $80 a week (a 52-hour week at $1.55 an hour). If they have been idle 12 weeks (believed the average), they have lost some $35,000 already. They are losing $140,000 to $150,000 a year.

Plan To Keep Going

Will the bus company consider stopping operations altogether?

Again, none of the three officials would be quoted directly, but together they said the company will continue operations, no matter how much business it has.

What about the Negroes? Is the boycott proving costly to them? Have any of them lost their jobs because they refused to ride buses and could not get to work any other way? Has the necessity for using taxicabs eaten into their incomes?

In General Agreement

As nearly as I could learn, the answer to all these questions is a qualified "No."

I checked with the newspapers, the Chamber of Commerce, and the White Citizens Councils, as well as with numerous Negroes. They were in general agreement that:

A very few Negro servants have lost their jobs, but "have been taken care of."

Hundreds of Negroes are riding taxicabs; but their fare in most cases is being paid, surprisingly, by their solidly anti-boycott white employers.

Otherwise, there seem to be funds available for any Negro who can reach his work only by taxi.

Books Were Subpoenaed

When more than 90 Negro leaders of the boycott were indicted recently under a 35-year-old, untested law, the books of the Montgomery Improvement Association (made up of leaders of the boycott) were subpoenaed by Circuit Court.

They showed that up to that time contributions to the Negro cause (origin not disclosed) officially had totaled $18,000. White leaders insist the total, which they say is largely from the North and East through the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, is far greater.

Housewives Turn Chauffeurs

"I have no figures, but I believe business in general is up here," I was told by State Senator Sam Engelhardt, executive director of the Association of Citizens Councils of Alabama. "Outside money for the Negroes is coming in, and they are spending it."

While they bitterly oppose the boycott, literally hundreds of Montgomery housewives are driving their maids, cooks, even yard men and houseboys, to and from work.

"Why do you do it?" I asked one Southern aristocrat. "You say the boycott is caused by a 'bunch of uppity Nigras from up North, and they're ruining our darkies down here.' Aren't you helping them by transporting your servants?"

"But heavens, man, I can't do the housework," she replied.

But every morning and every afternoon, you can see scores of smart-looking Montgomery women driving handsome cars into the Negro communities—or out of them—with Negro women (sometimes boys and men) riding in the back seat. Always the back seat, of course.

Elevators Nonsegregated

Here enters another paradox that makes the Negro-white relationship the amazing thing that it is:

There is no such thing as segregation on the elevators of Montgomery, and most if not all other Southern cities.

One day this week, I rode up to the seventh floor of the First National Bank Building here in Montgomery. The elevator was old, small, and slow. On it were three Negroes and five white persons—which made it rather full.

The Negroes stood in the front of the car, and the white passengers were pressed against them. Obviously, nobody thought it in the least strange.

So, it wasn't strange—just incomprehensible to outsiders.

(Tomorrow: What next in the boycott?)

SEGREGATION ON PUBLIC CARRIERS IN MONTGOMERY WAS DECLARED UNCONSTITUTIONAL BY THE U.S. COURT- TUESDAY, JUNE 5, 1956

38b 1956 ALABAMA

PSC Will Appeal Segregation Rule On State Carriers

~~Hotel~~ Advertiser P.1

Montgomery, Ala.

City Officials Remain Silent On Court Edict

Wed. 6-6-56

By STEVE LESHER

Segregation on public carriers in Montgomery was declared unconstitutional by the U.S. Court yesterday, but the president of the Alabama Public Service Commission said that state body would "immediately appeal."

City officials, meanwhile, were reluctant to answer questions posed by newsmen. They said they would determine their course of action after formal judgment is rendered.

The Montgomery City Commission, composed of Mayor W. A. Gayle and Commissioners Clyde C. Sellers and Frank W. Parks, commented that "it would be improper to determine our course of action until formal judgment is rendered by the court."

C. C. (Jack) Owen, president of the Alabama Public Service Commission said he was "disappointed and shocked at the majority opinion. The basis of the scholarly dissent of Judge Lyne . . . should have controlled this case."

He said the PSC would "immediately appeal the majority opinion and will urge that the effect of the majority opinion be stayed pending appeal."

In a 2-1 decision, a three-judge panel of federal judges declared that "there is now no rational basis upon which the separate but equal doctrine can be validly applied to public carrier transportation" in Montgomery or in Alabama.

Advertiser

The assenting opinions were delivered in U.S. District Court here at 10 a.m. yesterday by Judge Richard T. Rives, Fifth Circuit U.S. Court of Appeals and Judge Frank M. Johnson Jr. of the middle district of Alabama.

2-A

A dissenting opinion was filed by Judge Seyburn H. Lynne, of the northern district of Alabama.

Wed. 6-6-56

VIEWS ASKED

No judgment was handed down in the case. All persons in the action heard here last May 11 were requested by the court to submit their views as to the form of judgment to be entered. A two-week deadline for these views was set by the court. No appeal can be legally entered until formal judgment is handed down.

It is believed that attorneys for the four Negro women who filed the suit against city and state officials last February will ask the court for a permanent injunction enjoining the city of Montgomery from enforcing segregation on city buses.

City and state officials are expected to appeal the decision to the Supreme Court of the U.S.

While the decision applies to the constitutionality of both state and city laws, Judge Johnson explained that an injunction, if and when it is issued, would apply only to Montgomery. To extend the decision to other Alabama cities would require a separate court order based on the decision yesterday.

The momentous opinion came precisely six months to the day after the start of the mass boycott of city buses by the city's 50,000 Negroes. The boycott began last Dec. 5.

CASE OVERRULED

In outlawing segregation on public carriers in Alabama and Montgomery, Johnson and Rives overruled the famous case of Plessy vs. Ferguson decided by the U.S. Supreme Court in 1896. In that case the court ruled that separate but equal facilities were not in conflict with the provisions of the 14th Ammendment to the Constitution.

Johnson and Rives ruled: "We cannot in good conscience perform our duty as judges by blindly following the precedent of Plessy vs. Ferguson when our study leaves us in complete agreement with the Fourth Circuit's opinion . . . that the separate but equal doctrine can no longer be safely followed as a correct statement of the law. In fact, we think that Plessy vs. Ferguson has been impliedly, though not explicitly, overruled."

Lynne, however, in his first judicial dissent, said that he "would dismiss the action (of declaring transportation segregation unconstitutional) on the authority of Plessy vs. Ferguson . . ." He added that "a comparatively new principle of pernicious implications has found its way into our jurisprudence."

LYNNE'S OPINION

Lynne held in his dissent that the Supreme Court, in its historic ruling declaring segregation in schools unconstitutional referred to the "separate but equal" doctrine as "equality of treatment . . when the races are provided substantially equal facilities, even though these facilities be separate." Lyne said it was his opinion that the Supreme Court's ruling on school segregation referred specifically to the field of public education.

Negro Atty. Fred D. Gray, who represented the four Negro women who filed suit against state and city officials, said that in view of the possibility of the court staying its formal judgment pending an appeal, "the mass protest" of city buses by Negroes "will continue at least until formal judgment is handed down by the court." Rev. M. L. King, leader of the boycott, lauded the majority decision as "a victory for justice and democracy."

Both the City Commission and the PSC were named as defendants in the May 11 suit. The state agency sought to be excused on the grounds that it exercises no jurisdiction over city buses. The three-judge panel overruled that motion.

APPEAL DISMISSED

The U.S. Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals at Richmond, Va., previously had ruled against segregation on city buses in Columbia, S.C., and the Supreme Court on April 23 dismissed an appeal from that ruling.

As no financial damages are involved in the Montgomery case, it is generally believed that yesterday's decision may bring the first clear-cut Supreme Court decision on segregation in intrastate public carriers.

In New York, the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People issued a statement through Executive Secretary Roy Wilkins that read:

"The NAACP is, of course, gratified to learn of the decision of the three-judge Federal Court in Alabama banning racial segregation on city buses. It is another indication that the judiciary and the American people as a whole recognize that segregation in public facilities and institututions is incompatible with our democratic principles. We hope that this ruling foreshadows the early end of segregation in all forms of public transportation."

High Court Overturns Bus Segregation

Boycotters Lose Legal Ground On Operation Of Car Pool

Injunction Calls Halt To Negro Transit Line

Advertiser Wed. 11-14-56 Montgomery, Ala.

By AL McCONAGHA

Negro bus boycotters were ordered to halt their car pool operations here yesterday on the same day a Supreme Court decision may have made continuance of their transportation system unnecessary.

Circuit Court Judge Eugene Carter granted a temporary injunction enjoining car pool activities after more than seven hours of exhausting legal debate between Negro and city attorneys.

Carter said later that he had advised a Negro attorney in answer to a telephoned question that the ban would take effect at midnight last night.

George Jones Jr., the court's register in chancery, said restraining orders would go out of his office first thing this morning. He said sherif's deputies would serve them to MIA, 14 Negro churches and 27 ndividuals named in the city's petition.

Speaking for a battery of four Negro lawyers, Montgomery attorney Fred Gray said the decision would be appealed. Negroes who had jammed the court room filed silently out as Carter announced his decision.

The Rev. Martin Luther King, Montgomery Improvement Assn. president, told reporters his people would abide by the ruling.

UNCERTAIN COURSE

City officials were uncertain how their newly made gains in the state court would be afected by the Supreme Court ruling declaring Montgomery bus segregation laws unconstitutional.

Saying the question of private enterprise was a "serious" one. Carter added that evidence presented by the city waranted the temporary injunction and ordered the Register in Chancery George H. Jones Jr., to isue retraining orders to the respondents.

City attorneys, led by City Atty. Drayton Hamilton said the car pool was a private enterprise operating without the necesary legal consent of the city. City attorneys also said the operation was inadequately insured and operated by morally unsuitable drivers.

BATTERY OF FIVE

Peter A. Halt of Birmingham led a battery of five Negro lawyers in saying the car pool was a non-profit organization and, if actually illegal, the city had not taken appropriate measures to halt it. In a final statement, Atty Gray said the boycotters were being forced to ride segregated buses through the city's action.

Mayor W. A. Gayle was the only witnes called to testify by the Negro attorneys. Gayle said that had the law been different 'he would have obeyed the law at that time" when the prosecutions starting the boycott were first made.

Gayle said the city sought to halt car pool operations because a desired "comprehensive traffic survey cannot be made with this artificial transportation goin on" and because the Negro transportation system had "destroyed a safe, economical bus system."

Surprise witness for the city was Stuart W. Patton of the Alabama National Bank, who testified that the MIA had deposited a cumulative total of $189,000 in his bank. There is only slightly over $1,000 in the association deposit at the present moment, Patton said.

Advertiser

The city also introduced movies taken by Police Lt. Drue Lackey showing Negro motor pool operations. Atty. Hay entered an objection to the showing as taken by an incompetent operator and a violation of federally guaranteed privacy.

City attorneys frequently made the point that MIA Treasurer E. D. Nixon was out of town and that neither he or his records could be subpoenaed.

Earlier, Carter had overruled a defense plea which challenged his jurisdiction on the grounds that the federal courts rather than the state courts have jurisdiction.

CARTER'S RULING

In holding his court had jurisdiction, Carter said the situation and persons in the two cases were different.

Wed. 11-14-56

The Negroes filed a petition in U.S. District Court Nov. 1 seeking to stop the city of Montgomery from interfering with the car pool according to the terms of a resolution passed by the City Commision last month.

First Negro witness called by the city was King. The Negro leader said he knew very litle of the financial structure of the MIA and of the details of the transportation system. Association secretary Erna Dunge also claimed general ignorance of financial and transportation matters when asked to testify by Knabe.

The Rev. B. J. Sims, Negro pastor of a Tuskegee church, said he had an "expense account" of $29.40 weekly for his services as a member of th MIA transportation committee.

Station wagon driver the Rev. Burl Mack Averhart said he couldn't remember where he got routing instructions but admitted he was given a "donation" of $24 weekly.

A petition asking for a temporary injunction to halt city action against the motor pool filed in U.S. District Court by Montgomery Negroes will be heard at 10 a.m. today.

White Spokesmen Warn Of Possible Violence

Advertiser Wed. 11-14-56 Montgomery, Ala.

By BOB INGRAM

Laws requiring racial segregation on buses in Montgomery and throughout the South were declared unconstitutional yesterday in another historic decision of the U.S. Supreme Court.

The decision brought an immediate prediction from a Negro leader here that a decision to end the 11-month bus boycott would "unquestionably" be made at a mass meeting tonight.

Calling the decision a "glorious daybreak to end a long night of enforced segregation," the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. declared emphatically that his race would use "every legal means" to see that the court's decision was complied with in Montgomery.

OMINOUS RUMBLINGS

But from white leaders of the city and state came warnings of possible violence and bloodshed if any attempt is made to carry out the decision.

C. C. (Jack) Owen, president of the Alabama Public Service Commission, declared that segregation must be maintained "To keep down violence and bloodshed."

And Luther Ingalls, local leader of the pro-segregation Montgomery Citizens' Council chapter, predicted flatly that "any attempt to enforce this decision will inevitably lead to riot and bloodshed."

BOYCOTT RESULT

The court's decision yesterday stemmed directly from Montgomery's long boycott. The tribunal, in a unanimous decision, upheld a June 19 decision of a special three-member panel of federal judges which had ruled that Montgomery's bus segregation laws were unconstitutional.

Amid all the confusion as to the effect of the decision, one fact appeared to stand clear — the court's decision had ended with abrupt finality any legal efforts the city or state might initiate in an attempt to preserve segregation on public conveyances. There is no appeal from a U.S. Supreme Court decision.

The court order was not only unanimous, it was also brief. After citing the 1954 school segregation case and also citing subsequent decisions which outlawed segregation in public parks, playgrounds and golf links, the court ruled briefly:

MOTION GRANTED

"The motion to affirm is granted and the judgment is affirmed."

This affirmation left no doubt that the Supreme Court was outlawing segregation on all bus systems. Earlier this year some question had arisen when the court simply dismissed an appeal from another decision overturning a South Carolina segregation law. That left the decision in effect but led to confusion—ended yesterday —as to the Supreme Court's intent.

Meanwhile, what action the National City Lines, Inc., will take locally became an issue of paramount importance. National City operates the local buses.

Officials of the company in Chicago declined comment due to the absence of the firm's president. Locally, no bus line official would comment on what steps might be taken in view of the decision.

Advertiser

Also declining comment were members of the City Commission as well as Gov. James E. Folsom.

Mayor W. A. Gayle, speaking for the commission, said he had not seen a copy of the decision but would make an "appropriate statement" after he has studied the court's ruling. 9-2-A

The court's decision yesterday placed into immediate effect an injuntion ordering the City Commission of Montgomery to cease enforcing its segregation laws. Wed. 11-14-56

3-JUDGE PANEL

This injunction was issued by the three-judge panel, but then held in abeyance pending the outcome of the city's appeal. It was on this appeal that the Supreme Court ruled yesterday.

There had been some question—and hope among white leaders—that the injunction might still be in abeyance, but this was ruled out by U.S. Circuit Judge Richard Rives, one of the panel members.

He said the injunction would go into effect as soon as the court order reaches U.S. District Court in Montgomery. Rives said it customarily takes two to three weeks for an order to reach the local office.

Judge Rives also pointed out that the Supreme Court's decision yesterday applied not only to Montgomery, but that it sets a precedent for all similar cases of the future.

He noted that the City Commission and the Alabama Public Service Commission have the right to petition for a rehearing within 15 days, but he said the possibility of further delay in the effective date of the order was slight.

NEGRO LEADERS LEAVE HEARING

Filing out of the county courthouse here yesterday during a recess in the city's bus boycott hearing, left to right, are Mrs. M. L. King, the Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy and the Rev. Martin Luther King. The latter two are vice president and president respectively of the Montgomery Improvement Association which has spearheaded the Negro bus boycott. Those in background are unidentified.

COURT DECISION- NOV. 13,1956
Montgomery, Ala. (Bus Boycott)

HIGH COURT VOIDS BUS RACIAL LAWS

Times Picayune New Orleans La.

Upholds Lower Decision on Segregation

Wed. 11-14-56

By KARL R. BAUMAN

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13 (AP)—The Supreme Court today wiped out state and local laws requiring segregation on buses. P. 1

It did so by affirming a decision of a special three-judge U. S. district court in Montgomery, Ala. That court ruled that enforced segregation of whites and Negroes on Montgomery buses violated the Federal Constitution's guarantees of due process and equal protection of law.

In a brief unanimous order, the Supreme Court cited its 1954 decision against segregation in public schools. It also cited subsequent decisions outlawing segregation in public parks and playgrounds and on public golf links.

As it has done in several segregation cases since its basic school decision, the high court acted without listening to any argument. Except for citing three segregation-banning decisions, all the court said was:

"The motion to affirm is granted and the judgment is affirmed."

This affirmation left no doubt that the Supreme Court was outlawing segregation on all bus systems. Earlier this year some question had arisen when the court simply dismissed an appeal from another decision overturning a South Carolina segregation law. That left the decision in effect but led to confusion—ended today—as to the Supreme Court's intent.

Long Bus Boycott

Negroes in Montgomery have conducted a long boycott of city buses as a protest against segregation. One of the things they resorted to was operation of a car pool to carry those who used to use the buses.

A state court at Montgomery is now considering the city's attempt to halt the car pool as illegal. The court continued its hearing today after being informed of the Supreme Court ruling.

In neighboring Mississippi, Gov. J. P. Coleman said his state would continue to segregate Negroes and whites on public conveyances, despite the Supreme Court order.

"Our attitude about the decision will be the same as about the school segregation cases," Coleman said. Mississippi's public schools, like many others in the South, are still segregated.

Sheppard Loses Plea

In another action today, the court refused to review the trial and conviction of Dr. Samuel H. Sheppard, Cleveland osteopath, for the bludgeon slaying of his wife.

Dr. Sheppard was convicted of slaying his pregnant wife, Marilyn, 30, in their Bay Village, Ohio, home in July 1954. He received a life sentence. This was affirmed by the Ohio Supreme Court last May. Times Picayune

Dr. Sheppard contended he was denied a fair trial because of adverse publicity. The Ohio Supreme court rejected this claim.

In the bus segregation case, Montgomery's board of commissioners and the Alabama Public Service Commission appealed from the ruling of the three-judge court voiding state and local bus segregation laws. P. 3

The lower court, dividing 2-1, said "there is now no rational basis upon which the separate but equal doctrine can be validly applied to public transportation within the city of Montgomery." And it said "the application of that doctrine cannot be justified as a proper execution of state police power." Wed. 11-14-56

The two judges in the majority said they agreed with a decision of the 4th U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Richmond that "the separate but equal doctrine can no longer be safely followed as a correct statement of the law."

The separate but equal doctrine, now dead for all practical purposes, was laid down by the Supreme Court in a transportation case in 1896 known as Plessy vs. Ferguson.

'Impliedly Overruled'

The Montgomery court said the two judges in the majority thought "that Plessy vs. Ferguson had been impliedly, though not explicitly overruled," and that, under the later decisions, there is no rational basis upon which that doctrine can be applied in public transportation.

The city commissioners of Montgomery contended the special court lacked authority to act. They said it should have dismissed the complaint filed on behalf of Negro bus riders, or should at least have stayed action pending disposition of a similar suit filed by Negroes in Alabama state courts.

Atty. Gen. John Patterson of Alabama filed the appeal of the Alabama Public Service Commission, arguing that the right of the passenger "is only that of being carried safely, and with due regard to his personal comfort and convenience." Patterson said this cannot be done and peace and order maintained in Montgomery and other places "if, by court decree, a Negro man is permitted to sit by a white woman."

In other actions today, the court:

1. Denied Gov. J. Bracken Lee of Utah permission to file suit attacking constitutionality of the U.S. foreign aid program.

Lee, a Republican, who was defeated for renomination and failed last week to win re-election as an independent candidate, proposed to file suit to enjoin Secretary of the Treasury Humphrey from using tax funds for foreign assistance.

Lee has been critical of President Eisenhower and wants this country to get out of the United Nations. He refused to pay part of his 1955 income tax which he estimated would go to foreign aid. The government tapped his bank account and got the money.

2. Agreed to rule on an appeal by John Stewart Service contesting his dismissal from the State Department.

Service, a veteran career officer, was fired in 1951 by former Secretary of State Dean Acheson.

The U.S. Court of Appeals here refused to order Service reinstated, but directed that all questions as to his loyalty be stricken from the record.

Labor Union Law

3. Agreed to review a decision upholding validity of an Alabama law prohibiting state employes from joining labor unions. The decision was handed down by a special three-judge U.S. district court in Birmingham. The CIO Government and Civic Employes Organizing Committee brought the appeal.

4. Refused to review a decision by U.S. Dist. Judge Luther W. Youngdahl here limiting Post Office Department bans on firms selling allegedly obscene matter. Youngdahl held such bans must be limited to mail specifically related to the particular items found to be obscene.

The Justice Department, in appealing from the ruling, contended Congress had authorized the postmaster general to return "all mail" sent to alleged vendors of obscenity.

5. Agreed to review a National Labor Relations Board ruling that it lacks authority to act in the case of a labor union charged with unfair labor practices against its own employes. The complaint in the case was filed with the NLRB by the Office Employes International Union, Local 11, AFL-CIO. The complaint named the International Brotherhood of Teamsters and its affiliates in Portland, Ore. The case was the first of its kind to be decided by the board.

Legal battling continues over Negro car pool

News P. 1 Wed. 11-14-56

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Nov. 14—(AP)—City authorities questioned the right of Montgomery Negroes to ask for a federal court order to continue their bus boycott car pool in face of a newly-granted injunction in state court. B'ham, Ala.

The Negroes asked U. S. District Judge Frank M. Johnson for an order to permit them to continue the motor pool operations even though the long boycott appeared near an end with city and state segregation laws knocked out by the U. S. Supreme Court.

THEY ASKED for the right to continue the car lift until the boycott is brought to an end, perhaps at mass meetings in Montgomery tonight.

City Atty. Walter Knabe asked Johnson to dismiss the Negroes' request primarily on the ground that the Supreme Court decision has removed the need for the boycott and the car pool and also that it is purely a state matter outside the jurisdiction of federal court.

Knabe pointed out that the Negroes in their petition said they would ride city lines buses again once they were desegregated.

JOHNSON WITHHELD an immediate ruling on the city's objections. And ordered the hearing to proceed with testimony from witnesses. He also refused a request from the Negroes to make Circuit Judge Eugene Carter a defendant. Carter issued an injunction yesterday against continuing operation of the car pool.

The Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., one of the boycott leaders, testified that "there is no basic need" to continue the car pool in the face of the Supreme Court ruling. But he said the boycott has not formally been abandoned.

Meanwhile, Negroes in uncounted numbers walked to work this morning because of the injunction against use of the motor pool.

A Negro leader, the Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy, said "on the whole" the Negroes "made the sacrifice and walked to work."

THERE WERE INDICATIONS that the 11-month-old protest against segregated city buses—now ordered integrated by the Supreme Court—will end dramatically tonight.

A scheduled mass meeting to announce the decision was broadened to two rallies because, Abernathy explained, no Negro church is large enough to hold the expected crowd. One meeting will start at 7 p.m. (CST) and the second an hour later. ery city lines an estimated $750,000, said no decision has been reached on ending the segregation protest. Times Picayune

He said a mass meeting of Negroes is planned Wednesday night to consider the implications of the supreme court decision. P. 3

The decision, he added, "places a basic responsibility before the Negro and white community of Montgomery. All persons must recognize the difficulty of adjustment and seek through the principles of love and understanding good will to work in harmony with the new system."

King said "all persons of good will" will accept the supreme court ruling and seek to comply with it. Wed. 11-14-56

At Tuskegee, State Sen. Sam Engelhardt of Macon county, executive secretary of the pro-segregation Alabama Association of Citizens Councils, predicted the decision would be the end of public transportation in Montgomery.

"I don't believe the white people of Montgomery are going to accept any such mandate from the supreme court," he said.

"As far as I am concerned," he added, "they can move the Montgomery City Lines Inc. (which holds the Montgomery bus franchise) lock, stock and barrel to Washington, D. C."

Engelhardt, who owns a large plantation in heavily Negro populated Macon county, said it appears that "the supreme court is determined to build a federal oligarchy that will undermine the very foundation of these United States, and spread ill will and discord throughout the nation.

"The supreme court apparently will not be satisfied until government by the people, of the people and for the best interests of the majority of all the people is replaced by a many-headed, bureaucratic monster in Washington," he said.

One of the plaintiffs in the precedent-breaking case, 78-year-old Mrs. Susie McDonald, said "It was not as if we were fighting the city or its officials.

"All we wanted was justice," she said. "We were badly treated on the busses but now they've given us justice.

"I feel that lots of people of the white race and of our race are not fit to sit with decent people, and they should go to the rear of busses," the Negro woman said. The rear portion of segregated busses has been designated for Negroes up to now.

The only other plaintiff available, 16-year-old Claudette Colvin, had no comment.

During the May 11 hearing on the suit here, the girl testified that the reason no attempt to overthrow the bus segregation laws was made before the boycott solidified the Negro community was that "some of us just didn't have the guts to stand up" earlier.

Robert Cleere, one of the bus drivers named in the federal court suit, said he would have nothing to say about the decision. Cleere is now in a federal civil service job at Maxwell Air Force Base.

The other driver, James F. Blake, was unavailable.

An Alabama Journal reporter stopped people at random in downtown Montgomery asking for their reaction to the supreme court decision and found only one out of the first 11 he approached willing to be quoted by name.

Miss Naomi Pannell, a United States department of agriculture employe, said she does not foresee that desegrated public busses will ever operate in Montgomery. "The courts can't overrule Southern traditions that easily," she said.

A salesman who declined use of his name observed, "the South has no representation anywhere now except in Congress. This would not have happened if we had planned earlier to stop this program of calculated integration."

"I'm surprised they didn't rule on it before the election," said a waitress who did not give her identity but did note that she is a Democrat.

Two Negroes in the group said they did not have anything to say for publication.

brought the suit that broke city and state bus segregation laws.

White officials across the South took a strong stand directly opposed to hers.

Charges of unlawful interference with the states, common since the 1954 Supreme Court ban on public school segregation, echoed again across Dixie.

LEADERS OF THE 11-month-old bus boycott in Montgomery indicated the decision would bring the protest to an end tonight, its purpose now removed, one of the Negro women had testified in the suit that the boycott solidified the 50,000-strong Montgomery Negro community so that the suit was possible.

Calling the decision "a glorious daybreak," the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., said "everyone was very happy" at a meeting of boycott leaders last night. The executive board of the Montgomery Improvement Assn., the boycott's coordinating group which King heads, met to discuss the decision.

KING SAID the group would meet again today to draw up recommendations to two mass meetings of boycotters tonight. He predicted the boycotters would vote to end their protest and return to city buses.

"All persons of good will" are going to accept the Supreme Court ruling and try to abide by it, King said.

A similar boycott of segregated buses has been conducted by Negroes in Tallahassee, Fla. It began several months after the Montgomery protest started last Dec. 5.

THE GOVERNORS of Mississippi and Georgia, U. S. and State senators, a state attorney general and other officials were among those sharply criticizing the decision.

The Montgomery City Commission, named in the suit, had no immediate comment. Alabama's Atty. Gen. John Patterson, who had filed an appeal to the Supreme Court of a special three-judge federal panel, was not available for comment.

Patterson's appeal was for the Alabama Public Service Commission. Its president, Jack Owen, said yesterday that "to keep down violence and bloodshed, segregation must be maintained."

With no immediate efforts reported of Negroes seeking to ride in the white-designated front parts of buses, there was no sign of violence in Montgomery.

A caravan of about 40 carloads of robed Ku Klux Klan members toured Negro residential areas of Montgomery last night, horns blowing, but police said they had no complaints or reports of violence.

THE MANAGER of the Montgomery bus company, J. H. Bagley, was reported by his family to be out of town. No other local bus official would comment on effects of the decision. Officials of the parent company, National City Lines, Inc., of Chicago, also refused comment.

The city had indicated the company lost about $750,000 in revenue because of the boycott.

Gov. J. P. Coleman of Mississippi said that his state's segregation laws "are not involved" in the decision and would still be enforced.

THE SENIOR JUDGE on the special panel, Richard T. Rives of the Fifth U. S. Circuit in New Orleans, said the Supreme Court's upholding the panel would set a precedent for other cases.

The other member of the 2-1 majority in the June 5 decision upheld yesterday, District Judge Frank M. Johnson Jr. of Montgomery, said the decision applied throughout Alabama. Separate court actions would have to be brought in other states having bus segregation laws similar to Alabama's, Johnson said.

The panel issued an injunction against the Montgomery city and Alabama state laws that was suspended during the appeal. Rives said it would go into effect when Johnson is formally notified on the Supreme Court's action.

That would probably take two or three weeks, Rives said in Fort Worth, Tex.

ALABAMA'S SENIOR SENATOR, Lister Hill, said "every lawful means to set aside the ruling" should be used.

Herman Talmadge, senator-elect of Georgia, called again for congressional limitation of the Supreme Court's power. He said the decision did not surprise him "in view of decisions made recently."

Georgia's Gov. Marvin Griffin said his state would oppose application of the decision by all legal means. His attorney general, Eugene Cook, noted that the decision does not directly affect Georgia now.

Negroes jubilant—

Officials sharply critical of decision

News Wed. 11-14-56

B'ham Ala. P. 1

BY HENRY S. BRADSHER

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Nov. 14 — (AP) — "We were badly treated on the buses but now they've given us justice."

That was the reaction of a 78-year-old Montgomery Negro woman to the U. S. Supreme Court's decision yesterday that bus segregation is unconstitutional. The woman, Susie McDonald, and three other Negro women

Negroes Vote To Abandon Montgomery Bus Boycott

Constitution Thurs. 11-15-56

Atlanta, Ga. P. 2

Will Delay Riding City Vehicles Until Court Ruling Is Effected

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Nov. 14 (AP)—A group of wildly cheering Montgomery Negroes, rejoicing over the U.S. Supreme Court ruling against bus segregation, voted overwhelmingly tonight to end their long boycott of city buses.

The group agreed to start riding city buses again as soon as the Supreme Court's decision is put into effect and the buses are desegregated.

But, one of their leaders explained, it probably will be several days before the formal decision reaches Montgomery. The Negroes shouted wild approval of the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr.'s declaration that until then "we will continue to walk or share rides with friends."

WILD OVATION

The Negroes, who gave King a thunderous ovation when he arrived at the first of two mass meetings, approved the recommendation from him and other boycott leaders that the 11-month-old protest against segregated buses be brought to an end now that the Supreme Court has outlawed separate seating for white and Negro passengers.

King cautioned the crowd, estimated by the Rev. H. H. Johnson at 5,000, that "all of us have a basic responsibility to seek to implement this noble decision."

With that went an appeal to the Negroes to "be calm and reasonable."

STRESSES "GOODWILL"

"With understanding, goodwill and Christian love, we can integrate," he said. "This is Montgomery's sublime opportunity."

The car pool, which has transported the estimated 50,000 Negroes during the boycott that began last Dec. 5, has already ended under a state court injunction.

The Negroes sought an order in federal court today to stop the City of Montgomery from interfering with motor pool operations, but U.S. District Judge Frank M. Johnson Jr. refused to issue an injunction.

DECISION IS JOLT TO MONTGOMERY

Times Picayune New Orleans, La.

Action Leaves Many of Citizens Speechless

West. 11-14-56

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Nov. 13 (AP)—Circuit Judge Eugene Carter Tuesday granted a temporary injunction to stop Montgomery Negroes from using a car pool for transportation during their boycott of city buses.

There were strong indications, however, that the injunction might have little effect in view of Tuesday's supreme court decision outlawing city bus segregation.

A Negro leader, the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., predicted the 11-month-old boycott of segregated buses will end at a Negro mass meeting Wednesday night.

By LYNNE BRANNEN and HENRY BRADSHER

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Nov. 13 (AP)—A US supreme court decision knocking the props from under city bus segregation laws fell like a bombshell on Montgomery Tuesday.

Although it had been expected the decision left many Montgomerians speechless.

The city commission declined comment as did Negro bus boycott leaders who were busy in court fighting an injunction aimed at putting their bus boycott car pool out of business.

At Biloxi, Miss., where he is attending the annual meeting of the Alabama farm bureau federation, C. C. Owen, president of the Alabama public service commission, issued this statement:

"The people of Alabama are not going to abolish segregation. I'm going to do everything in my power to maintain peace and order in our state.

"To keep down violence and bloodshed, segregation must be maintained. I will urge all public transportation companies to make every effort to keep harmony among passengers by assigning seats in such a manner that the races will be kept separate."

Since Negroes made no attempt immediately to take advantage of the supreme court ruling, there were no indications that it might touch off any violence in this city of 125,000.

During the federal court hearing, all three members of the city commission predicted that if bus segregation were ended in Montgomery it would lead to violence and bloodshed. About 50,000 Negroes live here.

"It won't be safe on the streets" if segregation is done away with, said police commissioner Clyde Sellers.

Negroes Lose Injunction Bid

Federal Judge Denies Petition For Intervention

Advertiser Montgomery, Ala. Thurs. 11-15-56

By JO ANN FLIRT

Negro bus boycott leaders lost their second court battle in tow days yesterday when U.S. District Judge Frank M. Johnson Jr. refused to intervene in their behalf to stop enforcement of a state court injunction halting car pool operations.

The state injunction was granted Tuesday by Montgomery Circuit Judge Eugene W. Carter who ruled that the car pools were an illegally operated enterprise and not a non-profit, share-the-ride arrangement as maintained by the Negro attorneys.

P. 1

In refusing to intervene, Judge Johnson ruled that the federal court had jurisdiction to grant the requested injunction but that "he not justify" it.

He cited the long established principle of comity whereby state and federal courts exercise restraint in granting relief which would enjoin state officers except stances where the danger of irreparable injury is great and imminent," Judge Johnson said.

The judge overruled a motion by City Atty. Walter J. Knabe to dismiss the petition on grounds that the federal court did not have jurisdiction. He also denied Negro attorneys an amendment which would have made Judge Carter a party to the complaint.

The ruling followed a four-hour rehash of Tuesday's circuit court hearing which involved practically the same parties and witnesses, and, as both counsels stated, "the same matters."

Appearing for Negro petitioners Attys. Arthur Shores, Peter A. Hall, Orzell Billingsley Jr., all of Birmingham, and Fred Gray and Charles Langford of Montgomery. City Atty. Knabe and his assistant Drayton Hamilton, represented the city.

Although the present status of buses in light of the Supreme Court decision banning segregation was slightly touched upon the issue did not come out in testimony during the hearing. Knabe argued at several points that the decision made the injunction issue "a moot question" since boycott leaders said they would ride buses once they were integrated.

Negro attorneys, however, hinted that the question of transportation in Montgomery had not been settled, and sought by repeated testimony to establish the legality of the car pool operations.

That legality was not ruled on by Judge Johnson in his decision not to grant the injunction.

Another question fringing the hearing was that of possible damages arising out of a three-part complaint filed by the city in circuit court. Netither Knabe nor Hall, who led the Negro counsel, brought up the issue in the hearing.

Advertiser

Principal witnesses called by Negro attorneys were the Rev. M. L. King, president of the Montgomery Improvement Assn. which has directed the car pool, and three women who testified they either rode church owned station wagons or in one case drove their private car and offered free rides.

All testified that transportation was free. Attempts by Negro attorneys to bring out testimony concerning segregation and incidents leading to the boycott last December were repeatedly overruled by Judge Johnson.

P. 4

He ruled as did Judge Carter Tuesday that the issue was that of the car pools themselves and not what led to them.

Knabe' evidence consisted wholly of a reel of black and white film taken by a city police officer of loading and unloading of station wagons and private automoviles at the Normandale parking lot.

Neither side offered a final argument in the hearing which moved swiftly throughout the morning and bogged down only during testimony to establish the police officer as an expert witness.

Thurs. 11-15-56

City Atty. Knabe was called to the stand by Negro counsel for testimony concerning the city committee resolutions directing him to file court proceedings to halt car pool operations.

Knabe testified the city took the action to determine in court whether or not the car pools were illegal as they suspected. He said he had advised the commission that, although the city had cause to arrest persons suspected of operating without required franchise or licenses, an injunction was the better solution.

Earlier in the hearing, Knabe successfully argued that only individuals and not the MIA or other incorpated bodies possessed civil rights. Judge Johnson struck from the list of petitioners all except the individuals.

"If the petitioners are in good faith they will withdraw this petition," Knabe argued, "since we now have a de-segrated bus." The petition stated Negroes would ride buses once they were integrated.

A motion for continuance of the hearing in light of Tuesday's Supreme Court decision and state court injunction, was denied Negro leaders at the beginning of the court session.

JUDGE REJECTS CAR POOL PLEA

Times-Picayune

Refuses to Stop State Court Injunction

Thurs. 11-15-56

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Nov. 14 (AP)—US District Judge Frank M. Johnson Jr. refused Wednesday to stop enforcement of a state court injunction against continued use of a car pool by Montgomery Negro bus boycotters.

P. 22

New Orleans La.

He denied a request by the Negroes for a temporary restraining order to prevent the city of Montgomery from interfering with car pool operations.

The city obtained an injunction in state court Tuesday against further use of the motor pool even though the US supreme court has outlawed bus segregation and the 11-month-old boycott in Montgomery seemed near an end.

Disagrees with City

Johnson disagreed with the contention of city authorities that the federal court has no jurisdiction to intervene but he said "the circumstances of this case do not justify the court's intervention."

The federal judge said the Negroes have not been threatened with any injury besides that incidental to the enforcement of the now outlawed city bus segregation ordinance. He said they could get no relief from his court that they cannot also get through the state courts and an appeal to the US supreme court.

J. H. Bagley, manager of the Montgomery Bus Company, said his drivers will continue to enforce segregated seating until a state injunction requiring it is dissolved.

Injunction Stands

He said the injunction issued last May by circuit Judge Walter B. Jones still stands despite Tuesday's US supreme court decision.

Bagley's statement that segregation would be enforced came a few hours before two Negro mass meetings that might decide to end the boycott.

The official spokesman of the boycotters, the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., indicated that voice votes of boycotters would probably favor ending the anti-segregation protest.

Bus Boycott Driver Fined

Post-Herald

Wed. 11-7-56

MONTGOMERY, Nov. 6 (AP)—The driver of a Negro bus boycott station wagon was fined $25 and costs in police court today on a charge of passing another car without seeing his way clear.

Birm., Ala.

The Rev. Bull Mack Averhart, pastor of Peace Baptist Church in Montgomery, pleaded innocent when State Highway Patrolman C. E. Ward testified the Negro pulled into the path of his patrol car during an emergency run.

P. 4

Ward said Averhart, meeting the patrol car, pulled around another automobile and crossed the center line, forcing the officer to swerve sharply to avoid a collision.

The Negro minister denied crossing the center line on U. S. Highway 80 at the outskirts of Montgomery.

Averhart was driving one of the church-operated station wagons which provides transportation to Montgomery Negroes who have boycotted segregated city buses for 11 months.

End Of Protest Awaits Formal Notice Of Edict

Advertiser P. 1

Montgomery, Ala.

Montgomery Negroes, rejoicing over the U.S. supreme court ruling against bus segregation, voted overwhelmingly last night to end their long boycott of city buses.

Thurs. 11-15-56

The Negroes agreed to start riding city buses again as soon as the Supreme Court's decision is put into effect and the buses are desegregated.

But, one of their leaders explained, it probably will be several days before the formal decision reaches Montgomery. The Negroes shouted wild approval of the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr.'s declaration that until then "we will continue to walk or share rides with friends.

11-15-56

The Negroes, who gave King a thunderous ovation when he arrived at two mass meetings, approved the recommendation from him and other boycott leaders that the 11-month-old protest against segregated buses be brought to an end now that the Supreme court has outlawed separate seating for white and Negro passengers.

King cautioned the crowd, at Hutchinson street Baptist Church, estimated by the Rev. H. H. Johnson at 5,000, that "all of us have a basic responsibility to seek to implement this noble decision."

With that went an appeal to the Negroes to "be calm and reasonable."

"With understanding, good will and Christian love, we can integrate the buses with no difficulties," he said. "This is Montgomery's sublime opportunity."

The car pool which has transported the estimated 50,000 Negroes during the boycott which began last Dec. 5 has already ended under a state court injunction.

The Negroes sought an order in federal court yesterday to stop the city of Montgomery from interferring with motor pool operations, but U.S. District Judge Frank M. Johnson Jr. refused to issue an injunction.

KING'S STATEMENT

Here is the statement released by the MIA executive board and read to the crowd by the Rev. King:

"After thinking on this question very seriously the executive board recommends that the 11-month-old protest against the city buses will be called off and that the Negro citizens of Montgomery, Alabama, will return to the buses on a non-segregated basis. It is further recommended that this return to buses will not take place until the mandate from the United States Supreme Court is turned over to the Federal District Court.

"It is true that this is purely a procedural matter but is a matter that might be used by reactionary elements to plunge us into needless harassment and meaningless litigation. We have the assurance from authenic sources that this mandate will come to Montgomery in a matter of just a few days. For those three or four days we will continue to walk and share rides with friends.

All of us have a bisic responsibility to seek to implement this noble decision. Let all of us be calm and reasonable with understanding, good will and Christian love. We can integrate the buses with no difficulties. This is Montgomery's sublime opportunity; we can now transform our jangling discord into meaningful symphonies of spiritual harmony.

The boycott began Dec. 5, 1955, after Rosa Parks, a Negro seamstress who refused to take a seat in the Negro section of a Montgomery City Lines bus, was fined $14 in police court.

At a mass meeting that night, Negro ministers and other Negro leaders urged the city's 42,000 Negroes not to ride the buses, in protest of the woman's conviction.

The Negroes complied at least 99 per cent, as shown later by bus company records, and they either walked or formed the now defunct car pools.

FIRST-COME BASIS

Boycott leaders at first did not demand an end to segregation but insisted that bus seating be on a starting with the back seats for Negroes and front ones for whites.

Company officials refused to drop a requirement that the 10 front seats be reserved for whites. The boycott leaders also demanded Negro drivers for Negro routes.

On Feb. 21, 115 Negroes were indicted by a Montgomery County grand jury (17 white men, one Negro) on charges of instigating the Negro mass boycott. The indictments were based on a 1921 state law, originally intended to curb violence in labor disputes, that outlawed organized boycotts that had no "just cause or legal excuse."

115 INDICTED

Of the 115 indicted, 90 Negro leaders including 24 ministers, were arrested Feb. 22-24. All were released on $300 bond each. They were arraigned Feb. 24 and all pleaded not guilty.

The Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King, 27, pastor of the Negro Dexter Avenue Baptist Church and president of the Montgomery Improvement Assn., was found guilty by Circuit Judge Eugene W. Carter on March 22 of having conspired illegally to boycott the city's segregated buses.

King was fined $500 (or 140 days in jail) and assessed $500 in costs (or 246 days in jail). Sentence was suspended pending King's appeal to the Alabama Circuit Court of Appeals. None of the other Negroes indicted have stood trial.

Judge Carter upheld the state's contention that the MIA, under King's leadership, had conceived and directed the bus boycott and that once the boycott began King found he had "started a fire he couldn't stop." Cases of the 89 other Negroes were continued pending the outcome of King's appeal.

On June 5, a three-judge federal court here ruled by 2-1 that racial segregation on Montgomery city buses was in violation of the Federal Constitution. City and state officials appealed to the U.S. Supreme Court which upheld the lower court's decision Tuesday.

BOYCOTT LEADERS DISCUSS CASE

The Rev. M. L. King and the Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy, left and right front, discuss federal court proceedings with Attys. Peter Hall, center, Fred Gray and Orzell Billingsley Jr., far right, during a morning recess of the court. At the extreme left is the Rev. Harold A. L. Clement of the Mount Zion Church which was a party in the petition.—Photo by Chief Photographer Joe Holloway

WEEK-LONG PROGRAM

Negroes Plan Seminar On Non-Violence Move

A week-long Negro "rededication to non-violence" will be conducted Dec. 3 through Dec. 9 by the Montgomery Improvement Assn., it was revealed yesterday.

Termed an "Institute on Non-Violence and Social Change," the seminar was intended by the association to fall during the week of the Montgomery bus boycott's first anniversary.

Educators of both races will attend the seminar, it was announced. The Montgomery Improvement Assn. is the organization which spearheaded the 346-day boycott of Montgomery city buses by the city's 50,000 Negroes.

The Rev. Martin Luther King, MIA president, and the Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy, chairman of the scheduled seminar, said among those persons who will attend the "rededication institute" is Miss Lillian Smith, prominent author from Clayton, Ga.

Miss Smith, co-editor of South Today from 1936 to 1945, is author of "Strange Fruit," "Killers of the Dream," "The Journey" and "Now Is The Time." In 1950 she was recipient of the Southern Author's Award and a special citation for "distinguished contribution to American letters" by the National Book Award Committee.

Other white persons attending are the Rev. Glenn Smiley, field secretary of the Fellowship of Reconciliation, New York City, and the Rev. Homer A. Jack, pastor of the Unitarian Church, Evanston, Ill.

Negro leaders from throughout the South are expected to attend the several workshops planned for the institute. Workshops will be conducted on voting registration, voting, transportation, education, the principles of non-violent action and the problems of survival "in the face of economic pressure and boycott."

White and Negro representatives of the sociological departments of America's leading universities, editors of important newspapers and magazines, leaders of the major religious bodies and delegations from trade unions have also been invited to attend the sessions.

The institute will open Monday, Dec. 3, with King as principal speaker. It will end Sunday, Dec. 9, with what was described as a "mammoth statewide religious service" to which "all religious leaders and laymen in the state, regardless of color or creed" are invited.

At the service, Dr. J. H. Jackson, president of the National Baptist Convention, the largest Negro church body in the world, will be principal speaker.

On Friday, Dec. 7, a statewide ministers' seminar is planned at which Dr. Harry V. Richardson, president of the Gammon Theological Seminary in Atlanta, and the Rev. James H. Robinson of Harlem's Church of the Master will discuss the role of the church in social change and social aspects of the Christian Gospel.

Smiley, white field secretary of Fellowship of Reconciliation, will conduct a Dec. 7 seminar on "non-violence as a technique in social change."

Featured speaker on Dec. 7 will be the Rev. Gardner Taylor, pastor of a new million - dollar Concord Baptist Church (Negro) in New York City.

Abernathy said "we are planning to involve the . . . national community by discussing . . . in interracial groups the major issue that affect Negro-white relations in our nation."

He said the institute plans "banquets, seminars, mass meetings, luncheons, youth oratorical contests, fasting, and a day of prayer to ask for the spiritual strength to remain non-violent . . . during these days of grave danger and great Christian opportunity."

Other Negro leaders who will attend the institute include Dr. Preston Valien, head of the social science department at Fisk University; the Rev. C. K. Steele, leader of the Negro bus boycott at Tallahassee, Fla., and Mahalia Jackson, Chicago gospel singer.

38b 1956

VARIED REACTION TO RULING

Advertiser 4/1

State Bus Officials Foresee No Change In Seating Riders

Montgomery, Ala.

Thurs. 11-15-56

Officials of bus lines in the major cities of Alabama expressed varied reaction yesterday as to the effect of the U.S. Supreme Court decision Tuesday declaring bus segregation laws unconstitutional. 11-15-56

Most of the local managers passed comment on the question, insisting it was "too early" for a statement. However, two bus officials in North Alabama cities optimistically predicted there would be no changes in ther operations, while the owner of the Dothan Transit Co. declared flatly he would "go out of business" before he would accept integration.

Ben May, owner of the Dothan city bus lines, said the court order had thus far had no effect on his operation.

"Thank God, no damnyankee has a finger in this company. It is all mine," Ray declared. "there will be no race mixing on my buses. I'm in a position where if I have to I can park my buses in the shade and let them sit there, and I'll do just that before I'll permit any mixing of the races."

Tom Bonald, manager of the Shoals Transit Co., which serves the tri-cities—Florence, Sheffield and Tuscumbia—said his company hasn't done anything yet regarding the decision.

"We operate on a first-come, first-served basis up here, with Negroes seating from the rear and whites from the front," Boland explained. "We hope to continue to operate in that same manner."

Boland said that if a situation arose whereby all seats were occupied by Negroes before any whites boarded a bus "I am sure the Negroes would vacate the seats in the front and move to the rear."

"It has always worked that way and I think it will continue to work," Boland said. "we just don't have any trouble up here with colored people." 11-15-56

Similar comments came from Cecil Mitchell, manager of Huntsville Transit Co. His firm has the same seating arrangement as employed in the Tri-Cities, and neither firm has signs or lines on their buses designating white and Negro sections.

"Theoretically, if Negores had filled the bus seats before any whites boarded, then the Negores would be entitled to keep their seats," Mitchell said. "But it doesn't work that way in fact. The Negroes always move to the rear. However, with business being as bad as it has been of late, we haven't had any problems about full buses."

Declining any comment on the issue were D. S. James, president of Birmingham Transit Co., and Joe Hunt, manager of Druid City Transit Co. which serves Tuscaloosa. Both indicated they felt it was "too early" to make any comment. Earlier, officials of the Mobile Transit Co. had expressed identical feelings.

PSC Official Vows State Must Keep Bus Segregation

Advertiser Montgomery, Ala. P. 1

Wed. 11-14-56

Here is what key state and city officials had to say yesterday concerning the U.S. Supreme Court's decision outlawing segregation on public conveyances:

C. C. (Jack) Owen, president, Alabama Public Service Commission, which controls all public transportation in the state:

"The people of Alabama are not going to abolish segregation. I'm going to do everything in my power to maintain peace and order in our state. To keep down violence and bloodsheed, segregation must be maintained. I will urge all public transportation companies to make every effort to keep harmony among passengers by assigning seats in such a manner that the races will be kept sfeparate."

* * *

Luther Ingalls, Montgomery attorney and leader of the pro-segregation Montgomery County White Citizens' Council:

"This decision . . . is just another example of legislating by the Supreme Court, which is supposed to be the judicial arm of our great United States . . . (it) is a further invasion by the court and the federal governmest of the sovereignty of our state and local governments . . . The final decision remains with the voters at the ballot box. For those of you who continue to vote for administrations committed to a policy of integration, I can only say that you will eventually receive your

Gayle

Englehardt

Ingalls

C. C. Owen

just desserts and that the sins of their fathers will descend upon the heads of your children. To those of you who say that this decision cannot be enforced, I need merely to refer you to the recent use of bayonets and tanks against the unarmed citizens of Clinton, Tenn. If you think for one minute that Gov. Folsom would not try to outdo Gov. Clement in this regard, you are sadly mistaken. On the other hand, attempted enforcement of this decision will inevitably lead to riot and bloodshed. Your Citizens' Council has always insisted that these matters be handled peacefully and legally and I feel sure that this constitutional provision of the Council will remain in force and effect and will be controlling of its membership."

Advertiser

State Sen. Sam Engelhardt Jr. of Macon, executive secretary of the Alabama Assn. of Citizens' Councils:

P. 2-4

"This decision is just another example of the invasion of local self government by the federal government. I don't believe the white people of Montgomery are going to accept any such mandate from the Supreme Court. As far as I am concerned they can move the Montgomery City Lines, Inc., lock, stock and barrel, to Washington, D.C. It appears that the Supreme Court is determined to build a federal oligarachy that will undermine the very foundation of these United States, and spread ill will and discord throughout the nation. The Supreme Court apparently will not be satisfied until government by the people, of the people and for the best interests of the majority of all the people is replaced by a many-headed bureaucratic monster in Washington."

Wed. 11-14-56

The Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., Montgomery Negro pastor and leader of the long boycott:

"The Supreme Court decision places a basic responsibility before the Negro and white community of Montgomery. All persons must recognize the difficulty of adjustment and seek through the principles of love and understanding, good will to work in harmony with the new system. All persons of good will will accept the Sumpreme Court ruling and seek to comply with it."

BUSINESS CONTINUES AS USUAL

Advertiser Montgomery, Ala.

Bombshell Fails To Disrupt City Life

Wed. 11-14-56

By STEVE LESHER

Montgomery continued business as usual yesterday despite a potential bombshell tossed on the Cradle of the Confederacy by the U.S. Supreme Court.

P. 1

The city bus line— Montgomery City Lines Inc. — operated on schedule and the few Negroes who ride the buses walked quietly to the rear and took their seats.

But the inner surging of conflicting emotions could not be restrained. Nearly all of more than two dozen white persons and Negroes interviewed by The Advertiser yesterday afternoon were eager to have their say.

TOWNSEND

POWELL

Asked their reactions to the Supreme Court decision to outlaw segregation on buses in Montgomery, white men and women were unanimously opposed to integration. Curiously, however, they appeared almost resigned rather than resentful. Thise powerfully opposed to bus integration avoided reference to violence unless specifically asked if they believed there might be violence.

T. Sgt. Robert J. Wall, 36, of St. Paul, Minn., said he felt that

KILBERG

WATTS

"the system they've had in the South about bus seating is one they should keep. Most of your Negro population is in the South and I feel that it would be more orderly if you have separate seats."

Rufus Lewis, one of the key leaders of the Negro car pool, said he "expected a favorable decision from the Supreme Court. I think everybody expected it. I don't feel there will be violence, not in Montgomery. The Negro population has not been unduly excited over the decision but there's been a lot of talk just as I'm doing now."

WALL

SANDERS

Advertiser

At the Montgomery Improvement Assn., the group which has spearhead the 11-month-old bus boycott, the first of what probably will be many congratulatory telegrams arrived. It was from Denver, Colo. The contents of the telegram were not released for publication.

P. 1

Miss Juanita Townsend, 18-year-old student at Massey - Draughon Business College here, said that "if buses are integrated, many people would get upset. As long as you ask, I think it might lead to violence."

Wed. 11-14-56

Mrs. J. D. Powell of Selmer, Tenn., said she didn't think the Negroes are quite ready for integration. Many don't keep themselves clean and I wouldn't like to sit next to them on buses. Up in Memphis they don't have bus integration."

Warrant Officer G. C. Watts, 36, 210B Smith St. and formerly of Maxwell Air Force Base, said he felt "like the rest of Montgomery. I guess I just don't like the thought of Negroes pushing me around."

Carrie McKenzie of 767 Day St., a Negro domestic, said, "I'm 56 years old and that too old to walk. I make $10 a week and that's not enough to pay cab fare every day. So I ride the buses. I don't use the car pool because they tell me I've got to be a member of the NAACP to do that. And I don't make enough money to belong to the NAACP. Anyway, my daddy didn't belong to the NAACP so why should I?"

James E. Sanders of 1530 Winona Ave., said, "I'll tell you how I feel about it. I never wanted to buy a car, but I'm buying one tomorrow. I'm doing that to protect my daughter-in-law — my son's overseas — and my grandchild. I don't expect my grandchild, who's five year's old . . . and I don't think he'll ever ride on a bus next to a Negro."

Jake Kilberg, 714 W. Patton Ave., said, "I'm a Northerner and up there we don't have any segregation on buses. But I believe it's up to the people of the South to decide for themselves whether or not they want segregation or integration."

All the persons interviewed by The Advertiser, with the exception of Lewis, are regular bus patrons. In earlier interviews, one of the plantiffs in the precedent-breaking Supreme Court case said "it was not as if we were fighting the city or its officials." Susie McDonald, 78, said "all we wanted was justice. We were badly treated on the buses and now they've given us justice.

"I feel that lots of people of the white race and of our race are not fit to sit with decent people and they should go to the rear of buses,' the Negro woman said.

The only other plantiff available, 16-year-old Claudett Colvin, had no comment. Robert Cleere, one of the bus drivers named in the federal court suit, said he would have nothing to say about the decision. Cleere is now in a federal civil service job at Maxwell Air Force Base.

The other driver, James F. Blake, was unavailable.

Reporters of The Advertiser throughout the city noted that all Negroes seen riding buses remained seated in the rear.

Hill Deplores Bus Decision By U.S. Court

Advertiser
Montgomery, Ala.
Wed. 11-14-56

By NELSON COLE

Sen Lister Hill said yesterday he "greatly deplored" the Supreme Court order declaring bus segregation laws illegal and repeated his earlier stand of "using every lawful means to set aside the ruling."

At his Montgomery office until Congress reconvenes in January, the senator called the decision a "continuation of the ruling which declared school segregation unconstitutional."

He added "the Southern vote in Congress, in and of itself, is not a majority which could fight" such decisions. "For this type of action, however we are seeking support from other sections."

HILL

During an interview with Hill, the State's senior senator attributed Eisenhower's recent landslide electi victory to the President's "great personal popularity and the still serious Middle East situation."

KEEP GENERAL

"Secretary of State Dulles once told us we had been on the brink of war three times. I suppose the average person thought 'Well, if we're at another brink, we'd better keep a general in the White House.' "

He said he felt this explanation held true "for all sections of the country, even here in the South where some people voted Republican for the first time in their lives.

"But to realize the true strength and influence of the Democratic Party, one only has to remember that this election was practically unprecedented," h said.

SINCE TAYLOR

"It has been more than a hundred years, in fact, since 1848 when Zachary Taylor was elected, that the party of the President did not gain control of Congress."

He added, "the new Senate, which has a Democratic plurality of two votes, will still probably continue to vote on the same basis of what is in the best interest of the country and support a bipartisian foreign policy."

Commenting on his plans until the Congress reconvenes, Hill said "most of my time will be taken up by a study now under way for our 'senior citizens.'

"In the last 10 years. man's life expectancy has increased by five and a half years.

MONTGOMERY, ALA. BUS BOYCOTT

REV. BOB GRAETZ.(REV. ROBERT S.)
LUTHERAN CHURCH

The Mechanics Of The Bus Boycott

Advertiser

It Costs $200 A Day For A Fleet Of 250 To 350 Cars; Together With The Story Of A Little Known White Pastor Who Has An All-Negro Congregation

Sun. 1-10-56

P. 4-A

Montgomery, Ala.

By Tom Johnson Of The Advertiser Staff

A YOUNG WHITE minister clad in the vestments of the Luthern Church stood in his pulpit on a Sunday last month and calmly urged his congregation to give its fullest support to the Negro boycott of Montgomery buses.

JOHNSON

He told of his plans to make his own car available to a "share the ride" pool, organized to transport Negroes unable to afford taxis, and indicated he was about to assume an active part in the conduct of the boycott. He said:

"Let's try to make this boycott as effective as possible, because it won't be any boycott if half of us ride the buses and half don't ride. So if we're going to do it, let's make a good job of it."

Then he began his prepared sermon, "The Blessings Of God's Covenant," taken from the 31st chapter of Jeremiah.

Startling as they seem, Pastor Robert S Graetz' remarks fell on no shocked ears and no one stamped from the room indignantly. On the contrary, there was enthusiastic approval from the 210 members who make up the congregation of the Trinity Lutheran Church on Cleveland Avenue. It is an all-Negro congregation. Graetz is their pastor—one of only two Lutheran ministers so situated in Alabama (the other is in Birmingham).

POOL OF 250 TO 350 AUTOS

In the days following his Dec. 4 sermon, Graetz put in as much as 16 hours a day carrying on his church duties and helping to organize what was to become a crippling boycott of buses by Negroes.

Graetz hauled passengers in his new Chevrolet from 6 a.m. to 9 a.m., pausing only to load or discharge passengers or to gas his car. As a member of a transportation committee, he helped organize a pool of 250 to 350 private cars and establish pickup and dispatch points for transporting Negroes to and from work.

He dashed off a letter to other white ministers on his much-used mimeograph machine, acquainting them with "certain facts" concerning the boycott and concluding: "Please consider this matter prayerfully and carefully, with Christian love. Our Lord said, 'Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me.'" (Some of Graetz' stationery carries the biblical quotation, "And the Angel of the Lord spake unto Phillip saying: 'Arise, go toward the South,' Acts 8:26.")

In the evenings, he attended mass meetings where boycott leaders made progress reports and passed the plate to raise money for operational expenses—mostly gasoline. (The meetings are held Tuesdays and Thursdays, rotating from church to church.)

In short, Bob Graetz did as much as any Negro minister or layman to make the boycott effective and to raise some $7,000 to support it.

'SPONTANEOUS DEMAND'

By last week, as the boycott moved into its second month, the young minister had slackened his pace somewhat. He no longer serves on the committee and he attends few meetings—in order, he says, to press his "natural advantage" as a minister. He fears his presence at mass meetings might be a stigma that would lessen his effectiveness in gaining support for the Negroes.

He was still, however, a far from inactive "first lieutenant," working with other ministers and staying in contact with "the general," who seems to be the Rev. M. L. King, pastor of Dexter Avenue Baptist Church and a policy-making leader of the boycott. (Graetz has had "little influence" on the planning, leaving that to others.)

It didn't take Graetz long to get thoroughly wrapped up in the Negro affairs after arriving in Montgomery in late June. By the time the boycott developed, he already was acquainted with most of the principals, including Rosa Parks.

He says: "She must have figured that, if the Lord wanted to make her the goat, she was willing."

Graetz, a boyish-looking 27, of medium build, first heard of the arrest "at about third hand" on Saturday, Dec. 3, a day or two after it happened. At about the same time, he began to get word of an impending protest movement. He thought at first it involved boycotting the buses for just one day and that its purpose was to protest the arrest of Rosa Parks. But he was told later that the principle grievance was over previous "abuses" of Negro bus patrons and that the protest was aimed directly at the bus company.

When the first mass meeting was held at Holt Street Baptist Church on the Monday night following the arrest, Graetz said there was a "spontaneous demand" for a boycott of indefinite duration and Negro leaders, caught unprepared, hastily drafted a resolution to that effect. It urged all citizens "regardless of race" to refrain from riding the buses and called for the cooperation of employers and car owners to help in transporting the protesting bus riders.

$200 A DAY A CAR

It was then that Graetz took the transportation committee assignment. An executive committee was organized to run the campaign. Both groups were made up almost entirely of ministers "because it's almost impossible to bring pressure" against them.

Dispatch stations were established in all predominantly Negro areas to furnish transportation between 6 a.m. and noon each day. Homeward-bound workers were given a prepared list of pickup stations where they could wait for private cars.

Ministers urged their congregations to make special offerings to buy gasoline for the car pool—a heavy expense. It costs about $200 a day to keep the cars running. On the first Sunday, about $1,800 was raised. More money rolled in from churches in other cities—New York, Philadelphia, Mobile, Tuscaloosa, Tuskegee—and from "anonymous white friends." Altogether, Graetz said nearly $7,000 had been collected "at last report" and that was a "rather sizable balance."

While most of the money was spent for gasoline, some of it was used for legal aid. Some was spent to buy advertising to give "our side" of the protest. ("Protest" is the right word, says Graetz; it isn't a boycott.)

THE HIGH SHERIFF

Graetz hauled as many as 40 or 50 passengers a day, while driving some 50 miles. When he was offered money, he carefully decline to accept it, suggesting that the passenger "multiply the number of rides by 10c" and contribute that amount at the mass meetings. It was during this period that Graetz had his brush with the law.

As he tells the story, Graetz had been driving about two and one-half hours on the morning of Dec. 19 when he parked by a meter near Dean's Drug Store on Monroe Street to pick up five Negroes going to Normandale. He was careful not to park in a nearby taxi zone.

GRAETZ

As he crossed Dexter Avenue, a siren sounded from the car behind him and he pulled to the curb. A man who Graetz said he later learned was Sheriff Mac Sim Butler walked up and said: "What are you doing—running a taxi?"

Graetz explained the Negroes were "friends" and not passengers. Butler accused him of picking up passengers in a taxi zone and ordered Graetz to follow him to the county jail.

There, Graetz was placed in a room marked "deputy sheriff" and left alone for a few minutes. "For which I was very grateful," Graetz says. "I had a little prayer session."

NO, SAID THE JUDGE

Another man who Graetz assumed was a deputy came in and lectured him on religion, politics and patriotism. "We like things the way they are here," he said. "We don't want anybody trying to change them."

Shortly, Graetz said, Butler returned from the courthouse and said he had tried to charge the minister with running a taxi and hauling Negroes in violation of segregation laws but "the judge wouldn't let him."

He was not threatened, says Graetz, but "they were very rough and gruff."

He was released after about a half hour "under the definite impression they didn't like what I was doing," he recalls wryly.

NATIVE OF WEST VIRGINIA

Graetz is a native of Charleston, W.Va., and went to high school there. He became interested, but not very active, in inter-racial activities during that period. Once, he planned to arrange a meeting of young white members of the Lutheran League with some young Negroes. But he "just never got around to inviting anybody."

It was at the Lutheran Capital University and Seminary in Dayton, Ohio, that Graetz began to work with Negroes in earnest. He organized a campus race relations club made up of white and Negro students who met regularly to hear speeches. Once, Graetz was introduced to the late Walter White, the NAACP agitator, and heard the NAACP founder say that race relations were improving because of the large number of whites involved in the movement.

"Naturally, I just beamed," Graetz says, "because that really fit me."

In debating clubs, his arguments contained a broad socialistic strain but no one was concerned. His father, an engineer for Libby-Owens-Ford Glass Co. at Charleston, told his son that "someone once said that a young college man who doesn't become a socialist at some time before he is 25 has no heart, and one who clings to that view after 25 has no brain." "I'm past that stage now," says Graetz. "In fact, I'm a capitalist with 30 shares of Libby-Owens-Ford."

CAME HERE 2 YEARS AGO

The one time that he voted was in a West Virginia Democratic primary four or five years ago, and all his candidates lost. He considers himself an Eisenhower Democrat.

Graetz came to Montgomery after two years as an "intern minister" at a predominantly Negro Church in Los Angeles. The American Lutheran Church, knowing his views on race relations, suggested him for the Cleveland Avenue congregation as a successor to a Negro minister, the Rev. Nelson Trout, who by a coincidence, went to the same Los Angeles church that Graetz had left three months earlier.

With his wife and two children, Graetz moved into an unfinished parsonage next door to the church. The six-room ranch-style home was finally completed in November. The children, Margy, 3, and Bobby, 2, play in the picket-fenced backyard. Mrs. Graetz, 26, expects another child this month.

Because of Graetz' many activities—he also preaches at Clanton and Wetumpka—he and his wife have had little time for "social life," but his defiant stand on racial matters has left him no shortage of friends. "We have many high class friends among both Negroes and whites—pastors and lawyers and just plain citizens," says Graetz. "I have made a new friend every day since the boycott began."

For relaxation, he and Mrs. Graetz play "some kind of game every night," no matter how late it is when Graetz finishes his day's work. Usually it's gin or rummy or crokinola, a game Mrs. Graetz gave him for Christmas.

A MOTHER'S CONCERN

Though not the only white person active in the boycott, Graetz is the only one who makes no secret of his activities. Graetz knows of one white who drives a carload of Negroes to work every morning, and there are "numerous reports" of white women who have told their maids not to worry if late for work because it's "understandable."

What do his parents think of Graetz' part in the boycott? His mother called Christmas and told him to be careful. She also inquired anxiously if Dr. Lechleitner knew what Graetz was doing. Dr. R. D. Lechleitner is executive secretary of the Board of American Missions of the American Lutheran Church and, as a matter of fact, he doesn't know of Graetz's activities. But he will shortly. Graetz has just mailed him a full report. (If Dr. Lechleitner happened to read the Dec. 22 edition of the national Negro magazine Jet, he does know something about it. That edition carried a picture of Graetz and a story about him.)

If his parents share Graetz' views on racial matters, it is unlikely that his great-grandfather would have approved his namesake's activities. Robert Graetz I came to America from Berlin to tend the German Lutheran flocks in parts of New York and Ohio. And it was to them alone that he ministered.

"He wouldn't even talk to Swedish Lutherans," Graetz says laughingly. He felt the Swedish ministers should look out for the Swedes and Catholics for Catholics. He wasn't much of a missionary. Besides, he had his hands full with the Germans."

SOUL AND SOLE

Graetz doesn't think the boycott will end until something "really satisfactory" is agreed upon. The Negroes, he says, have endured abuses for too long to rush back to patronizing the bus company. With the car pool working well, few of them have suffered any great inconvenience. Some even get better service now, he says—thy're picked up nearer their home and delivered closer to their work. And, besides, they're downright enjoying themselves.

Graetz says one 72-year-old man who had ridden the bus 30 or 40 years sits on his front porch and laughs heartily every time a bus drives by. A woman reported gleefully that the buses were driving by her house "as naked as can be."

Some are more serious. A Negro woman "who had walked halfway across town" was given a ride by a minister who asked if she was tired. She replied:

"Well, my body may be a bit tired, but for many years now my soul has been tired. Now my soul is resting. So I don't mind if my body is tired, because my soul is free."

Graetz thinks of himself as a radical although not as much as he once was. ("I was really radical in college.") He uses another vague word—"reactionary"—in describing the Southern viewpoint. It is doubtful, though, if Gaetz is as radical as he likes to think. His strongest expression on segregation is that the process should be speeded up some but should occur gradually. He is not given to florid, incendiary speeches of the upjlifting variety, but it is clear that he is intensely interested in the welfare of individual Negroes.

ACKNOWLEDGES IGNORANCE

It is also clear that the South is not what Graetz ignorantly envisioned it to be. "I thought Negroes were shot if they walked down the street," he says. So what is responsible for his taking a stand that makes him a marked man in a white Southern community? Perhaps that question is best answered by a few excerpts from some of his recent writings and conversations:

"The reactionary element in the South will stop at nothing to maintain their strangle-hold on the Negro population, whom they still hold in virtual economic slavery."

"I have been told that I am a kind of symbol to my people. Many of them had long ago concluded that it was scarcely possible for a white person to be a Christian. But now they know that, with some of us, Christianity is more than pious profession of the lips."

"Sometime ago I read that the first requisite of a successful missionary was that he become color blind. I figured that the same was true of my work here."

"I know that I shall be critized for my stand. I may even suffer violence. But I cannot minister to souls alone. My people also have bodies."

White Minister Of Negro Church Receives Threats

Advertiser p. 5-d Thurs. 11-1-56

Montgomery

A young white minister of an All-Negro church here reported that he received another in a series of threatening telephone calls Tuesday night.

But the Rev. Robert Graetz described it as "nothing unusual" and added that he'd "rather not talk about it."

Graetz, pastor of the Trinity Lutheran Church and at one time a volunteer driver in the boycott car pool, has been the target for numerous such calls in the past.

He reported to Det. Lt. George Owens that an anonymous caller telephoned to warn him to "get out of town or you won't be alive tomorrow."

Graetz said he hasn't received "outright threats" on his life too frequently, but confirmed that he does get more than his share of "crank" telephone calls.

A crudely fashioned bomb was exploded in the front yard of his home several weeks ago, breaking the glass out of a picture window. The Rev. Greatz and his family were out of town at the time.

Back Defender Boycott Plan

Defender Sat. 3-10-56 P.10
Chicago, Ill.

A proposal made editorially in Thursday's Daily Defender in opposition to the New York plan of a one-hour nation-wide work stoppage March 28 as a gesture of sympathy to the Montgomery byocott leaders is winning wide support.

The Daily Defender asks that sympathisers give to the NAACP the money they would earn from 2 to 3 p. m. March 28 instead of stopping work during that time.

Donation of an hour's pay, the Defender points out is more of practical value to the Montgomery crusade and allows more universal participation.

Local church leaders went along with the Defender proposal, though they endrose the hour of prayer originated by a group of New York clerics.

Here is some of the local reaction:

Archibald Carey, pastor, lawyer and former alderman, said that local ministers were exploring the idea with the objective of getting everyone here to cooperate with the plan.

He explained that he was 100 per cent in favor of the hour of prayer, but that the suggestion of one hour of work stoppage at the same time was not feasible.

The New York group has admitted an error had been made in coupling the two things together, and that the concerted work stoppage and day of prayer should be two separate things.

Queried in Miami, Fla. on the New York proposal, Reverend Joseph H. Jackson, president of the National Baptist Convention, said he would not go along with a nation-wide one-hour work stoppage.

He added that he did not see mixing prayer with an economic boycott.

The announcement of a prayer and work stoppage demonstration was made in New York after a meeting with 13 prominent clergymen, representing a cross section of the Protestant clergy of Greater New York.

They adopted the plan which was put forth by Dr. George D. Cannon, a physician, and Cornelius McDougald, an attorney.

Top Negro Won't Back Stoppage

Herald
Tues. 2-28-56
P. 1

Religious Chief Says 'We'll Pray'

Miami, Fla.

The head of the National Baptist Convention, biggest Negro faith in America, told his five million followers Monday to ignore a New York congressman's call for a nationwide strike of Negroes.

Dr. Joseph H. Jackson of Chicago, here for a brief winter visit, said "I am in favor of prayer, but I am not in favor of this one-hour work stoppage."

Last Friday Rep. A. Clayton Powell of New York asked all Negroes to stage a one-hour work stoppage at 2 p.m., March 28--the Wednesday before Easter—to protest the arrest of more than 100 Negro ministers in Montgomery, Ala.

The arrests followed a two-month boycott being staged by Negroes in Montgomery. The ministers are accused of promoting the boycott, a criminal offense in Alabama. The boycott is in protest against the arrest of a Negro woman last December because she refused to move to the back of a bus in Montgomery.

Rep. Powell, a minister in the same denomination of which Dr. Jackson is president, urged the nation's Negroes to devote the one-hour work stoppage to prayer.

Dr. Jackson said Powell had phoned him Sunday and conferred with him about the proposed hour-long prayer and work stoppage. Dr. Jackson said:

"He called me and told me he had been trying to get in touch with me. There's no issue there about the prayers, no issue at all in but one thing, and that is the work stoppage.

"I had already called for a day of national mourning, fasting and prayer on May 17, the second anniversary of the Supreme Court decision.

"He (Powell) called me to tell me what he had decided about this 28th day of March. No, we didn't discuss the matter of which day. It's perfectly all right to have a national day of prayer every month if you could.

"What I am opposed to is the work stoppage. I would be opposed to the work stoppage even if they called it on the 17th of May, which was the day the National Baptist Convention had already agreed on.

"I don't know why Powell picked the day he did. But I have no disagreement with him there. I have only one point, and that's the work stoppage.

"I'm against it for two reasons. The first is that the one-hour work stoppage has no vital relation to the act of prayer. You don't have to stop an hour to pray. People can pray while they work.

"The second reason I object to it is the difficulty that developed in Montgomery was not a labor issue. Nobody had been laid off from their jobs down there.

"And to use a work stoppage, a labor function, as retaliation against what happened in Montgomery is not logical because it is not a labor problem."

"Saturday Dr. Jackson indicated to The Miami Herald that he was in agreement with Rep. Powell's plan. But Monday Dr. Jackson said he meant he favored only the prayer part of the Powell plan.

Boycott Supporters Drop Plan for Work Stoppage

Post + Times Herald
P. 26 Wed. 2-29-56

NEW YORK, Feb. 28 (AP) Sponsors of a nation-wide prayer day March 28 in support of the Montgomery (Ala.) Negro boycott of buses today said there will be no work stoppage.

"We arei nterested in prayer only," said Rep. Adam Clayton Powell (D-N. Y.), pastor of a 15,000-member New York Negro congregation.

Washington, D.C.

After a meeting of New York Negro leader here last Friday, it was announced that they had agreed no Negroes should attend school or work between 2 and 3 p. m. on the prayer day.

Yesterdayi n Miami Dr. Joseph H. Jackson of Chicago said he wasi n favor of prayer on that day but was opposed to any work stoppoge. Dr. Jackson, president of the National Baptist Convention, is the religious leader of five million Negroes.

In a wire to Dr. Jackson today Rep. Powell said, in part:

"Work stoppage idea completely erroneous . . . We are interested in prayer only. We and 16 million colored Americans are counting on you and pledging our support."

Rep. Powell said there was no suggestion now that anyone stop work. He added that Negroes could visit church on their lunch hours or after work.

Pastor Criticizes Arrest Of 24 Alabama Preachers

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Feb. 28 (AP)—A Negro minister indicted in Montgomery's bus boycott told a cheering throng at a mass meeting last night tha "no ciy in the world can afford to make criminals out of 24 of its preachers."

This declaration by the Rev. L. R. Bennett came after church groups in other sections of the Nation expressed concern over the arrest of 24 Negro ministers here for leading the protest against segregation on city buses.

The Rev. M. Bennett, pastor of the Mount Zion African Methodist Episcopal Church, together with other indicted Negro clergymen spoke at a meeting marking the end of the boycott's 13th week.

A group of Protestant pastors at Princeton, N. J., called for a prayer meeting there Friday restricted to ministers only. The Rev. William L. Tucker, president of the 10-member Princeton Pastors Association, which includes three Negroes, said the service will conclude with an offering to be sent to Montgomery Negro ministers.

At St. Albans, W. Va., the West Virginia Council of Churches, representing 13 Protestant denominations with a membership of 350,000 persons, said a letter to Mayor W. A. Gayle of Montgomery:

"We share widespread unhappiness over the current grand jury indictment of scores of your citizens. We feel that, even under your law, these citizens have a 'just cause' to uphold. Therefore, we cannot think they are guilty of a conspiratorial crime."

Boycott Backers Bar Work Halt

Constitution P.12
Wed. 2-29-56

NEW YORK, Feb. 28 (AP)—Sponsors of a nationwide prayer day March 28 in support of the Montgomery, Ala., Negro boycott of buses said today there will be no work stoppage.

Atlanta Ga.

"We are interested in prayer only," said Rep. Adam Clayton Powell (D-NY), pastor of a 15,000-member New York Negro congregation.

After a meeting of New York Negro leaders here last Friday, it was announced that they had agreed no Negroes should attend school or work between 2 and 3 p.m. on the prayer day.

WORK-STOP PLAN FANTASTIC, SAYS D.C. NEGRO LEADER

Washington, D.C.

The head of the District branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People said yesterday he favored a national protest against the Alabama actions but he doubted the practicability of a one-hour work stoppage by al Negroes.

P. 12-A

Eugene Davidson described the call for a work stoppage by the Negroes March 28 as "slightly fantastic at this time."

He said it would take a tremendous amount of organizing over a period of months to be effective. He cited Washington where many Negroes are employed by the Government. Each of these Government employes, he said, probably would have to take a two-hour leave because the Government would not permit "strikes" against it.

Powell Not For Work Stoppage

Daily World P. 6

Saturday, under prominent headings, the white press carried a statement in which Congressman A. Clayton Powell of New York, was urging a general work stoppage on March 28, as a gesture of sympathy and protest in the Alabama transit situation.

Atlanta, Ga.

Knowing the possible danger of any unnecessary mass actions in reference to the segregation issue, which is a legal one, we wired the Congressman, expressing doubt of the wisdom or necessity of such a course. The law-maker sent a telegram yesterday, stating that he had not suggested any such action. This telegram stated that the news services, which supply the various newspapers, had admitted they, themselves, coined the "work stoppage" phrase. The N. Y. minister further stated that his program is to ask that only prayer services of protest be made as an expression of sympathy for the Negro in the mass arrest of ministers. We think the mass arrests were a mis-use of local police power and, of course, they deserve to be protested by all people who oppose the mis-use of such authority.

Thurs. 3-1-56

As we have stated before in these columns, this is a time for our people to remain calm but courageous and conduct themselves strictly within the law. By such contact, we will win more white friends and not alienate those we already have.

The segregation issue has been resolved as a legal principle by the highest court. It is now up to the various local courts to implement it when and after local administrative authorities refuse to act in compliance with the decision.

We shall not become over-excited or get any delusions about settled at the top level, therefore we could wisely direct our attention towards the influence of administrative officials. The best way to do this is to increase our voting strength. The books are now open for registration and every person who is of voting age, who has not qualified, should do so.

A court decision is one thing, but since the opposition to it has made a political issue out of it, a great deal depends upon administrative authority.

Powell Not For Work Stoppage

World P. 8 Fri. 3-2-56

Saturday, under prominent headings, the white press carried a statement in which Congressman A. Clayton Powell of New York, was urging a general work stoppage on March 28, as a gesture of sympathy and protest in the Alabama transit situation.

Birmingham, Ala.

Knowing the possible danger of any unnecessary mass actions in reference to the segregation issue, which is a legal one, we wired the Congressman, expressing doubt of the wisdom or necessity of such a course. The law-maker sent a telegram yesterday, stating that he had not suggested any such action. This telegram stated that the news services, which supply the various newspapers, had admitted they, themselves, coined the "work stoppage" phrase. The N. Y. minister further stated that his program is to ask that only prayer services of protest be made as an expression of sympathy for the Negro in the mass arrest of ministers. We think the mass arrests were a mis-use of local police power and, of course, they deserve to be protested by all people who oppose the mis-use of such authority.

As we have stated before in these columns, this is a time for our people to remain calm but courageous and conduct themselves strictly within the law. By such contact, we will win more white friends and not alienate those we already have.

The segregation issue has been resolved as a legal principle by the highest court. It is now up to the various local courts to implement it when and after local administrative authorities refuse to act in compliance with the decision.

We shall not become over-excited or get any delusions about settled at the top level, therefore we could wisely direct our attention towards the influence of administrative officials. The best way to do this is to increase our voting strength. The books are now open for registration and every person who is of voting age, who has not qualified, should do so.

A court decision is one thing, but since the opposition to it has made a political issue out of it, a great deal depends upon administrative authority.

1 Tulsan Favors Work Stoppage

Eagle Thurs. 3-22-56

P. 1 Tulsa, Okla.

NAACP Disapproves Solon's Plan; N. Tulsans to Pray

By Bill Dillard
Of the Eagle Staff

Only one North Tulsa minister has urged his congregation of 400 members to stop work and pray for one-hour on March 28, in sympathy with Montgomery, Ala. Negroes who are boycotting busses in that city because of segregated seating facilities.

However, a survey by The Oklahoma Eagle has established that Tulsa Negroes will not cease work, although most of them will silently pray for justice in Alabama. Negro leaders say that a cesation of work in Tulsa will have no direct effect on Montgomery strikers and will only inconvenience observers financially.

Urged By Powell

Congresman Adam Clayton Powell (D-N. Y.) suggested the plan which was described as a forerunner to a possibe "National Mohandas-Gandhi-type movement" to a group of New York clergymen at a meeting held February 24.

Representative Powell, himself, is pastor of the Abysinia Baptist church in New York which has a membership of 15,000 members.

The Tulsa minister in favor of the work stoppage, the Rev. B. S. Roberts, pastor of St. John's A.M.E. church said that he urged his congregation about three weeks ago to make preparation for the "World Deliverance Day."

Plans to Follow Suggestion

"We have planned to follow the suggestion through," said Rev. Roberts, "I have asked all people to stop work and pray for one hour on the set date."

St. John A.M.E. has 400 members, he said, but all of them are not expected to particapte in the movement. Rev. Roberts said he certainly is going to follow it through.

James Stewart, president of the Oklahoma chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said special prayers and collections were being made for the Montgomery Negroes in 50 churches around the state, but that he does not believe the Oklahoma City branch of the NAACP will favor the "Deliverance Day" strike.

Tulsa Chapter Says 'No'

Victor H. Hodge, president of the Tulsa chapter NAACP said the local branch is not urging a work stopage. Hodge said the Tulsa branch is advocating that Negoes observe the request by praying for one-hour while working.

"We are requesting that all ministers and laymen pray for one hour on March 28 that conditions over the na'ion will improve," said Hodge, "and that all of us will realize that God made man of one blood to dwell on earth."

Congressman Powell said he had received pledges of cooperation in the one-hour work lay-off from ministers in the south, north, east and west. He said he hoped to win the cooperation of employers and Negroes.

The Oklahoma Eagle sent a reporter on the street to talk to the working man. They, too, did not approve af a work stoppage, although the majority has pledged to pray for an hour next Wednesday between 2 and 3 p.m.

employees in halting all but vital services from 2 to 3 p.m. on Wednesday before Easter.

Eagle P. 6

All Races Asked to Support

All races and faiths in the nation are being asked to join in the deliverance day protest, with no Negro students attending schools or working between 2 and 3 p.m.

The following are a few of individuals and organizations contacted by The Oklahoma Eagle for comment: The NAACP, the Urban League, Booker T. Washington high school, Carver junior high school, Dunbar Elementary school, Charles S. Johnson elementary school, Ralph J. Bunche elementary school.

Attorney Amos T. Hall, NAACP legal council and national masonic and fraternal figure. Franklin W. Thomas, executive secretary of the Hutcherson Branch YMCA:

The Rev. Calvin K. Stalnaker, pastor of North Tulsa First Baptist Church; Father John Strmiska, pastor of St. Augustine.

Leaders Comment

Marion M. Taylor, executive secretary of the Tulsa Branch Urban League said the city chapter is not participating in the movement because the na'ional board is opposed to it.

Attorney Amos T. Hall said he was not for a work stoppage but he recommends that everyone pray for justice in the na'ional situation.

Rev. Stalnaker thinks the movement is un-christian-like and would have no effect at all. He said: "I don't believe in fighting fire with fire.

Fa'her Strmiska thinks the "deliverance day" should not be handled locally, because of different situations in each state He said it would not do any good here but in Montgomery it might be effec'ive.

Franklin W. Thomas advised that the YMCA does not deal with racial injustices but building of character. Personally, he sees no reason why work should be stoped in Tulsa as it only will mean pay out of the pocke'.

NAACP urges special 'Day of Prayer' for Alabamans 'unjustifiably arrested'

Afro-American P.16 Sat. 3-3-56

Baltimore, Md.

Ministers and their congregations throughout the state are urged to designate Sunday as a special "Day of Prayer" for Montgomery, Ala. citizens arrested "unjustifiably" for conducting a busy boycott.

The statement was issued under the joint signatures of the Rev. W. J. Hodge, pastor of Dramond Hill Baptist Church Lynchburg, and NAACP president there, and Dr. John B. Henderson, pastor of Bank Street Baptist Church, Norfolk.

They are co-chairmen of the church oordination committee of the Virginia NAACP State Conference of Branches.

In their challenge to Virginians, the Rev. Mr. Hodge and Dr. Henderson, who is also president of the Baptist General Association of Virginia, said:

"To make our sympathies tangible so that the world might know of our kindred feelings to our brothers of color, you are asked to:

* * *

1. DESIGNATE SUNDAY, March 4, as a special day of prayer.

2. Hold a special service or set aside a portion of the regular services for special meditation.

3. Take a sacrificial collection at these services to aid the Alabama bus victims.

4. Ministerial alliances and other groups or community organizations should be requested to cooperated with this worthy cause.

5. Send all contributions by check or money order payable either to Dr. John B. Henderson or the Rev. W. J. Hodge, 404½ N. Second St., Richmond 19, Va.

* * *

THE STATEMENT pointed out that these contributions, with a complete list of names of contributors, will be forwarded to the Rev. M. L. KING Jr., through the national office of the NAACP the later than March 13.

The statement conclued with the admonition: "Let us prayerfully walk together with our brothers in Alabama lest their calamities befall us."

It reminded Virginia churchmen that "the world has been shocked by the unjustifiable arrest of 115 persons who have so courageously led the colored citizens of Alabama in protesting the jim crow bus situation."

CLERICS HERE HAIL NEGROES IN SOUTH

Herald Tribune
New York

Prayers and Sermons Voice Support in Struggle on 'Human Indignity'

Mon. 2-27-56

The struggle against "human indignity" by Southern Negroes was supported in a number of New York churches yesterday. The sermons and prayers were spontaneous expressions of sympathy.

"Our support" was pledged in a sermon by the Rev. Dr. Phillips Elliott at the First Presbyterian Church, Henry and Clark Streets, Brooklyn.

Dr. Elliott, who is also president of the Protestant Council of the City of New York, offered a prayer in which he asked God to "bless those who are in fear because of race and color, grant patience and courage to those who strive to lead their people out of the bondage of prejudice into the light of equal fellowship."

A prayer for Southern Negroes who are "protesting the indignities of prejudice" was offered by the Rev. Edward O. Miller at St. George's Protestant Episcopal Church, Second Avenue and Sixteenth Street. The sermon was delivered by Bishop Kenneth Riches of Dorchester, England.

The prayer said in part: "O God, thou champion of the outcast, in whose family all men become of one blood, to Thee we offer our prayers for our brethren imprisoned in our own land. As the sigh for liberty swells from their shackles, may they have that patient strength and unfaltering courage which have always enriched our nation at its best."

It closed with the plea that "our nation, purging itself by building justice and tranquillity at home, may become again a symbol of hope throughout the world."

Bids North Act, Too

In a sermon at Christ Church Methodist, Park Avenue and Sixtieth Street, the Rev. Dr. Ralph Sockman asserted that "religion must help us to make the motives of love and service stronger than the motives of fear and hate." He added that "we of the North should show what we can do in community integration rather than merely shout to the South what it should do."

At the Broadway Congregational Church at Fifty-sixth Street, the Rev. Dr. Albert J. Penner termed the bus boycott by Negroes in Montgomery, Ala., a "massive protest against the human indignity of Jim Crow." He emphasized that the persons carrying on the boycott "are doing it without bitterness, without incitement to violence, with dignity, with prayers and hymns."

In the Bronx, sympathy for the cause of racial equality was expressed at the Fourth Presbyterian Church at 1235 Olmstead Avenue and Pilgrim Congregational Church at 1800 Grand Concourse.

At the Pilgrim Church, the Rev. Dr. John Walter Houck declared that "integration is first and foremost a major Christian problem. The real solution of racial tensions," he added, will come only when Christians and others join in a "fearless endeavor to strengthen the American way."

New Jersey Ministers To Pray For Negroes

Advertiser P.16-A

PRINCETON, N.J., Feb. 27 (AP)—A group of Protestant ministers today invited clergymen of all faiths here to join Friday in a service of prayer for the Negro ministers indicted in a Negro boycott of buses in Montgomery, Alabama.

Tues. 2-28-56

The Rev. William L. Tucker, president of the 10-member Princeton Pastors Assn. including three Negroes, said the service would be open only to the 75 clergymen in this college town.

His letter to the minister said: "The treatment of our fellow-ministers in Alabama arouses both our indignation and our brotherly solidarity.

Montgomery, Ala.

"In order to signify to them—and to all who care to know—how we feel, we shall meet in the chapel of the First Presbyterian Church Friday, March 2, at 5:30 p.m. for a 15-minute service of intercession.

"This service—by ministers and for ministers—will conclude with an offering which will be sent to the Negro ministerial association at Montgomery for the physical and-or legal relief of our brothers."

The Negro ministers were indicted last week for encouraging the boycott, after being arrested along with 66 other Negroes. The Negroes formed car pools to get to and from work so they would not have to patronize the buses which they say maintain unfair segregation.

Folsom Proposes Bi-Racial Group

Farmer P.1

Sat. 3-3-56

Religious leaders are protesting vigorously against the wholesale arrests of men and women participating in the boycott in Montgomery. A National Deliverance Day of Prayer has been set for March 28, and intercession has been asked of the Federal Government.

Congressman Adam Clayton Powell, in an emergency meeting of church leaders in New York, asked for the National Deliverance Day of Prayer on March 28, and praised the passive resistance in Alabama as an example of the best way to call nationwide emphasis to the wholesale arrests. The plan calls for a mass stoppage of work between 2 and 3 p m on that day. School children will be expected to be absent during that hour.

AME MINISTERS PROTEST

In Baltimore 300 ministers of the African Methodist Episcopal church protested the humiliation, persecution, arrest and abuse of Negroes in Montgomery. It was this group that asked the Federal Government to intercede immediately.

Sat. 3-3-56

In Columbus, Ohio, 26 ministers agreed to join in a fund rally for last Sunday.

In Washington the Council of Bishops of the African Methodist church had been summoned to meet Saturday by Bishop Sherman L Green of Atlanta, senior bishop of the AME church.

Rev O D Dempsey of the Baptist Ministers Conference of Greater New York is directing preparation and plans toward a possible mass meeting in Madison Square Garden.

The National Council of Churches wired from the headquarters in New York their sympathy and intention to do everything they could to help those going through the ordeal of mass indictments and threats.

Houston, Tex.

In the meantime, the meeting of the editors and publishers of the press of Alabama, called by Governor James E Folsom, seemed to approve the governor's idea of a bi-racial commission to study tension in Alabama, but both they and the governor condemned such a commission to narrow straits.

ADAM CLAYTON POWELL

First, the governor did not invite any Negro publishers, Emory O Jackson of the Birmingham World was there on his own, and a few Negro writers who are covering for papers out of the state came, but the governor neglected to invite any Negroes. The white representatives of papers that spoke seemed to assume that the commission should be governed by the policy, tradition and laws of strict segregation.

The governor had scorned the suggestion of an interracial commission until these tensions broke loose and put him under tremendous pressure from both the pro-segregationists and the anti-segregationists.

SETS DAY OF PRAYER. FOR NEGROES IN ALA. BOYCOTT

Butler County American Sat. 3-3-56 Hamilton, Ohio

Ministers Call For Negroes To Halt, Everywhere 2 To 3, March 28

P. 3

Unity of Montgomery, Ala. where Negroes in their boycott against that city's jim crow bus line is drawing support from Negroes and whites all over the Nation.

Negro ministers of New York have launched a campaign for Negroes to observe "Deliverance Day of Prayer," March 28 by stopping to pray for Montgomery Negroes between 2 and 3 pm.

Negro churches in Columbus, Ohio quickly raised over $2000 for Negroes in Montgomery.

Cleveland's big Antioch Bapt. Church took up $603.00 at one meeting.

Cincinnati and Dayton churches are sending funds.

Reports have come from many sources that Negro churches are calling meetings protesting and sending financial support to aid the boycott leaders who have been arrested and trial has been set for March 19.

Mich. group holds mass prayer meet

Afro-American P. 13 Sat. 3-10-56

LANSING, Mich. — A city-wide prayer meeting was held at Union Baptist Church here Thursday (March 1) night to give moral and spiritual support to Montgomery, Ala. bus boycotters.

Baltimore, Md.

Some 400 persons attended the meeting which was called by the Revs. A. Lewis Williams, Collins AME Church; E. Gladston, Friendship Baptist Church; and Joel L. King, pastor of Union.

* * *

SEVERAL five-minute prayers were held for colored citizens, of Montgomery. Also in keeping with the sympathy service, Charles Husband sang "Nobody Knows the Trouble I've Seen."

One of the features of the program was a closed wire hookup with a mass prayer meeting in Montgomery. Some 5,000 persons took part in the Montgomery services which began at 1 p.m.

The Alabama meeting was held in Hutchinson St. Baptist Church. Eight states were represented. One of the principal speakers was the Rev. M. L. King Jr. whose home was bombed recently.

* * *

THE REV. Mr. King is one of the principal leaders in the bus boycott. He is also the nephew of the Rev. Joel L. King of Union Baptist.

Colored ministers of Lansing sponsored the mass protest meeting. The call meeting announcement asked Lansing citizens to walk to church. It was not learned how many followed the request.

The group is headed by Lou LuTour of this city.

Baltimore Md.

A spokesman said that due to the crisis in Alabama, the prayers would be made continuously for "Divine guidance in achieving love and peace in Alabama" and could conclude with Congressman Adam C. Powell's National Prayer Day on March 28th.

During the month La Cheerios have planned to mail out thousands of prayers from its headquarters to all parts of the world.

"In unity," said officials "there is much needed spiritual strength which will react in favor of Montgomery bus boycotters and Miss Autherine Lucy."

5000 Cheerios begin 'Whispering prayers'

Afro-American P. 10 Sat. 3-10-56

By LARRY DOUGLAS

NEW YORK—La Cheerios, an interracial organization, with 5,000 members, 3,000 of whom are members of Zeta Phi Beta Sorority, initiated last week a "Whispering Prayer" campaign.

Navy bans prayer for freedom; workers hire bus, pray at YW

Afro-American Sat. 4-14-56 P. 6 Baltimore, Md.

BAYONNE, N.J. — A group of 250 colored employees from the Bayonne Naval Supply Depot joined in the nation-wide observance of "National Deliverance Day of Prayer" at the YWCA, 32nd St. here on March 28.

The employees arranged to have prayer services at the YWCA, when naval authorities would not permit them to use the non-denominational chapel or any facility which had been used by other religious groups.

The authorities said they felt the Deliverance Day of Prayer had political aspects.

REQUEST FOR use of the chapel was sent to the Industrial Relations Department and to the executive officer by the chairman of the shop committee, the Rev. Kelmo Porter Jr., of Montclair, a clerk at the depot.

The authorities refused to give a definite decision until they had contacted the commandant in New York and naval officials in Washington, D.C.

The employees were not given an answer until a week later when they insisted that some decision be made.

* * *

THE REV. MR. PORTER also sent an announcement to the Depot's Daily Bulletin which stated services would be held at the Bayonne YWCA for all who wished to offer a prayer of deliverance.

At first, the announcement was refused, but later it was published in this form:

"Mr. Porter requests the following announcement be made: That in cooperation with a ministers' organization, prayer services for the deliverance of colored people will be held on March 28."

* * *

SEVERAL WHITE employees at the depot said they would have attended the service if they had not thought it was for colored employees only.

Over 40 employees from the storage branch were denied the privilege to take an hour annual leave to attend the prayer services at the last minute.

The program opened with the employees singing "America," followed by prayer by Rev. W. Williams also employed at the depot. The group then sang "Faith of Our Fathers."

The Rev. Webb from Jersey City prayed followed by silent meditation so each individual could pray for deliverance for all men, and for those who persecute their fellowmen.

* * *

MUSIC WAS played by employee, Mrs. Alfreda Jackson.

The employees gave a contribution to send to the ministers in Mongomery, Ala., a donation to the YWCA, and paid for their bus expense.

The Rev. Mr. Porter has since been under pressure from the depot authorities for working with the employees in setting up the Deliverance Day of Prayer services.

Montgomery Bus Protest Discussed By E. O. Jackson

By EMORY O. JACKSON

MONTGOMERY, Ala.— (SNS) — Here are some small items observers on the scene have picked up about the 12 week old bus-riders protest. test.

Newspaper call the refuse-to-ride the busses movement a "bus boycott" and the leaders of the movement describe it as a protest.....All of the 115 persons indicted on charges of violating the Alabama "boycott" laws are members of the Negro group. Included are 26 ministers and four women.

The twice-a-week mass meetings still pack the people into the churches to hear the latest and unpublished developments. Planning and direction of the movement is wholly in local hands.

Social scientist professors from Southern colleges and student research teams have been here to make a first-hand study of the protest. One thing some leaders and professors are trying to find out the origin of the protest, its discipline and possibilities.

Two persons with press cards have been on the scene who seem to have more than an interest in reporting events. They are offering services which if accepted by the protest group could obviously damage and setback their program.

Researchers digging back into Montgomery history claim that about 1900 the Negro group here staged a boycott of the local public conveyances which lasted over 45 days. ((Check the Tuscaloosa Breeze and the Montgomery Advertiser filed in the State Archives covering that period.)

Spokesmen for the protest have been invited to a giant demonstration at New York's Madison Square Garden. However, none is likely to be in position to appear. Other invitation of that kind may not be accepted. A vigorous effort seems to be in operation to keep the movement clean and free of anything remotely embarrassing.

Some research specialists are making a study of rumors connected with race relations. Rumors reportedly have been widespread.

GRAY'S TRIAL

Trial of Atty. Fred D. Gray, accused of improper practice, is scheduled for today in Circuit Court Conviction carries with it automatic suspension from the practice of law He is charged with representing a woman without her consent who is listed as a party to a suit challenging the city and state travel segregation laws. Maximum penalty is $500.

GIFTS FROM ORLEANS

Some 39 soldiers stationed at New Orleans, La., have sent $41 to the bus protest movement. In a letter to the Montgomery Improvement Association these soldiers said: "The Fight for Freedom: We the undersigned have acknowledged our intentions to stand behind the people of Alabama, who are fighting for their freedom. This is to let you know that we here in Orleans, France have not forgotten the problems which exist at home."

The communications said further: "Members of the Membership-at Large Group of the NAACP, composed of Military and Civilian persons, located at Orleans, France, wish to present the Montgomery Chapter of the NAACP a helping hand which extends four thousands miles."

"Recently, we became aware of the situation in your town which was precipitated by ideals and beliefs contrary to those of the constitution of the United States which we stand ready to defend."

"The boycott of Montgomery bus lines by Negroes was a courageous and logical response to the discriminatory practices of this bus line To supplement the courage and logic which are the necessary tools to combat demonstrated discrimination we offer financial and moral tools."

The communication was signed by Richard L. Hampton of Noblesville, Ind., chairman ofthe Orleans (NAACP) Membership-At-Large. Other officers are David Stith, Rocky Mount, N. C., president; James A. Raplin, Cleveland, Ohio, vice-president; Leonard Brown, Detroit, Mich., secretary; T. S. Worthington, Chicago, Ill., executive secretary; William Cammage, Detroit, corresponding secretary and James Ferguson, Charlotte, N. C. treasurer.

Boycott Experts From North Plan Full Report For Public

By JOE AZBELL
Advertiser City Editor

Three Illinois churchmen who consider themselves as experts on the Montgomery bus boycott after three days here yesterday showed a hesitation when they were pressed for certain information about a racial battle that has been raging in Trumbull Park in Chicago.

The ministers of the Unitarian and Universalist churches include the Rev. Albert A. Harkins, Elgin, Ill., former president of the Universalist Ministers Assn. of America, Dr. David H. Cole, Chicago, current president of the Universalist group, and Dr. Homer A. Jack, Evanston, Ill., Unitarian minister and Gandhi writer.

The ministers claimed a complete knowledge of the bus boycott after observing it for three days. One of them, the Rev. Harkins, intends to write a full explanation of it in the Humanist Magazine, a freethinkers journal. Another, Dr. Jack, intends to make a speech on the boycott in Boston this week and address his congregation on the subject.

800-MILE TRIP

The trio made the 800-mile trip from Chicago to "evaluate the boycott" so they could better understand the Negro problem.

Asked how many Negroes were in his congregation, the Rev. Harkins replied: "None. My congregation is lily white."

Then questioned on how many Negroes were members of the Unitarian and Universalist churches, he replied: "A very few."

He was asked if it wasn't less than one per cent and he replied: "That's about right."

BOMBS TOSSED

Being interviewed about the violence in Trumbull Park, a section of Chicago, the Rev. Harkins and the Rev. Cole explained the racial campaign. It has been raging for 31 months because 28 Negro families moved into a white housing project. During these 31 months, bombs have been tossed, mobs have assembled and violence has flared in other ways.

But the ministers protested: "It is not an anti-Negro campaign like this boycott. It's an anti-integration campaign. There are whites on the side of the Negro, many whites. I suppose you could say this would be whites against Negroes and whites."

"OUTSIDERS"

A reporter asked them: "Isn't it true that the cause of the trouble is that Negroes moved into a white section and the whites wanted to protect their segregation."

After some humming and hawing, the ministers explained that it was the 'outsiders" who caused the trouble and "not the people in the housing project."

They explained that the solution seemed probable in the near future. Told that the same thing was said of the bus boycott several weeks ago, one replied: "It's working itself out."

The trio claimed the bus boycott has "overtones" of Gandhi in it. They expressed beliefs that the campaign could spread to other cities and regions in the integration movement.

MINISTERS EXPLAIN BOYCOTT

Three Illinois churchmen, Dr. Homer A. Jack (back to camera), The Rev. David Cole, (left) an Rev. Albert F. Harkins, explain their opinions on the bus boycott to Robert Ball (second fro) of the Detroit News and Robert Bird (second from right) of the New York Herald Tribune. The inisters have been in Montgomery three days.
e intends to write an article on it and another to make a speech on it.

Segregation Suit

Advertiser Fri. 5-11-56

Being Aired Here

Montgomery, Ala. P.1

By 3-Judge Panel

Four Women Wage Attack On Race Law

By STEVE LESHER

A federal court case to determine the constitutionality of Alabama and Montgomery segregation laws on its intrastate and city transportation media will open today before a three-judge panel in U.S. District Court here.

The plaintiffs are four Negro women and the defendants are the three members of the Montgomery City Commission, the chief of the Montgomery Police Department, Montgomery City Lines Inc., two of its drivers, and the president and two members of the Alabama Public Service Commission.

On the bench will be Judge Frank M. Johnson of the Central District of Alabama, Judge Richard T. Rives of the U.S. District Court of Appeals and Judge Seybourn H. Lynne of the Northern District of Alabama.

FILED FEB. 1

The suit was filed on Feb. 1 by two Negro attorneys, Fred D. Gray and Charles D. Langford, in behalf of Aurelia Browder, Susie McDonald, Claudette Colvin, Mary Louise Smith and Jeanetta Reese. The day after the suit was public the Reese woman denied any knowledge of it.

Gray was indicted by the February term grand jury which charged him with fraud for filing the suit without the Reese woman's consent. The 25-year-old attorney won a dismissal in Circuit Court on March 2 when Circuit Solicitor William F. Thetford conceded that the state lacked jurisdiction because the aleged offense took place in a federal court building.

The suit charges that Title 48, Section 301 (31a, 31b and 31c) of the 1940 Code of Alabama and Sections 10 and 11 of Chapter 6 of the Montgomery City Code of 1952 are unconstitutional. The suit avers that the laws, which require the segregation of whites and Negroes on transportation vehicles, "deny to them (Negroes) their rights, privileges and immunities as citizens of the U.S. and equal protection of the laws . . ."

It stated originally that the defendants were "conspiring among themselves and others to prevent . . . Negro citizens from refusing to use bus facilities. . . and . . . seeking to compel . . . Negro citizens to use said facilities by force, threats, violence, intimidation and harassment . . ." This, the boldest accusation in the lengthy suit, was stricken on March 8 by the Negro attorneys along with the name of Jeaneatta Reese as plaintiff.

OBTAIN INFORMATION

Remaining in the suit, however, was the charge that the defendants harassed Negroes by stopping cars containing Negroes who participated in the car pool and Negro taxi cabs "to obtain information for the purpose of bringing pressure upon employers to discharge Negro employes who are providing transportation to fellow Negro citizens and otherwise subject them to economic reprisals."

The suit stated that "Negroes desire and intend to resume the use of buses . . . as soon as they can do so on a non-segregated basis without fear of arrest."

The plaintiffs, according to the suit, "bring this action . . . for themselves and on behalf of all other Negro citizens" who "seek common relief based upon common questions of law and fact."

It was pointed out that the Colvin girl was arrested on March 2, 1955, and sentenced in Juvenile Court and placed on probation for violation of the segregation laws on a city bus. The Smith girl was fined $9 in Recorder's Court after her arrest of Oct. 21, 1955, for the same offense and Rosa Parks, Negro seamstress, was fined $14 in police court on Dec. 5, the day the Negro boycott of city buses, now in its sixth month, began.

TEMPORARY INJUNCTION

The plaintiffs are asking for a temporary injunction to restrain the defendants from enforcing the statutes concerning segregation on transportation media and a final judgment that will denounce the laws as unconstitutional.

After the suit was filed, the defendants filed their several answers. But all the answers were generally common, with the exception of Montgomery City lines Inc., which said they were merely obeying the law.

The others claimed that segregation "tends to prevent violence and possible bloodshed" and that the suit should first be argued in a state court. All filed motions to dismiss the suit, with the PSC saying they had nothing to do with the bus line operating in Montgomery.

The PSC members, C. C. (Jack) Owens, Sybil Pool and Jimmie Hitchcock, were added to the suit on March 8 when one answer pointed out that "indispensable parties" (the governor, attorney general and the PSC) "are not made parties to the suit."

While his controversy raged on toward May 11, the day of the hearing, the Supreme Court on April 23 refused to hear an appeal from a bus company in South Carolina when a lower court ruled against the company in a segregation suit.

CONFUSION AROSE

The move by the Supreme Court was interpreted immediately as outlawing segregation on transportation media. A great deal of confusion arose with announcement of the court's move—some believed it abolished all segregation on all transportation media, others believed it abolished segregation on transportation media only in South Carolina and still others believed the court made no decision on the question but merely returned the appeal to a lower court where it had apparently not been completed.

Montgomery City Lines Inc., subsidiary of National City Lines Inc., of Chicago, abolished its segregation practices on the night of April 23 when J. H. Bagley, local superintendent, posted orders to his drivers not to enforce segregation on the buses.

The city threatened arrest of passengers and bus drivers who did not comply with segregation laws. Negroes voted to continue their boycott in the face of possible arrest for desegregating themselves on buses. The city obtained an injunction from Circuit Court against the bus company to force the company to obey existing segregation laws. The company said it would comply.

Bus Boycott Probers Hurt In Auto Wreck

Post-Herald Fri. 5-25-56

MONTGOMERY, May 24 (AP)—Two city detectives who investigated Montgomery's mass Negro bus boycott were slightly injured yesterday in a wreck involving a station wagon used to haul bus boycotters.

Officers Jack Shows, 29, and K. W. Jones, 32, were treated by a private physician after their squad car and the station wagon collided on a downtown street.

The driver of the station wagon, owned by the Hutchinson Street Baptist Church, was booked as Alberta James. She was charged with cutting in, resulting in an accident, a specific charge under the city code.

Shows and Jones spent five weeks, assigned to the circuit solicitor's office, investigating the continuing bus boycott prior to mass indictments by a grand jury in February. Ninety Negroes are charged with violating the state anti-boycott law, including 24 ministers.

TRAVEL BARRIER CHALLENGED

Advertiser p. 1

5 Negroes Attack Segregation Laws In Federal Court

Montgomery, Ala.

Thurs. 2-2-56

By JOE AZBELL
Advertiser City Editor

Five Montgomery Negro women yesterday filed a suit in the U.S. District Court asking that the courts declare Alabama and Montgomery transportation segregation laws unconstitutional.

The suit, entered in the court at 12:45 p.m. by Attys. Fred Gray and Charles Langford, was filed by Aurelia S. Browder, Susie McDonald, Jeanette Reese, Claudette Colvin by Q. P. Colvin, her father, and Mary Louise Smith by Frank Smith, her father.

Named as defendants were Mayor W. A. Gayle, Commissioner Clyde Sellers, Commissioner Frank Parks, individually and as the City Commission, Police Chief G. J. Ruppenthal, the Montgomery City Lines and Bus Drivers James F. Blake and Robert Cleere.

BULKY DOCUMENT

The bulky court document specifically asks:

1. A final judgment and decree that will declare and define the legal rights of the parties in t controversy.

2. A final judgment and decree that will declare Section 301, Title 48, Code of Alabama and Sections 10 and 11 of the Montgomery City Code, (ordering bus segregation), null and void.

3. A judgment and decree declaring that the acts of the defendants in seeking to compel the plaintiffs and other Negro citizens to use bus facilities by use of threats, intimidation and harassment are in violation of the 14th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution.

4. A judgment and decree enjoining the defendants from enforcing the state and city statutes and ordinance on grounds they are unconstitutional.

5. A judgment and decree to prevent the defendants from interfering with Negroes or using force, threats or other intimidation in using private transportation facilities.

DROP BARRIERS

In the event the U.S. court ruled the city and state laws unconstitutional, it would knock out separate facilities for Negroes and whites at bus and train depots and abolish segregation lines on all buses, trains, streetcars and other vehicles.

No date has been set for a hearing on the suit which was filed as a "class action" setting forth the "points of common relief" upon "common questions of law and fact" for the five Negro women and other Negro citizens living here.

The case will be heard in a three-judge court. The judges will be appointed by Judge J. C. Hutcheson Jr., chief judge of the U.S. Fifth Judicial Court, Houston, Tex.

The three judges will include one circuit judge and two district court judges of the U.S. Court.

The bill of complaint charges that Negroes have been deprived of their rights, privileges and immunities under the 14th Amendment of the U.S. Constitution, and that the defendants also violated the 14th Amendment in seeking "to compel the plaintiffs and other Negro citizens to use the bus facilities" under threats and harassment.

It specifically accuses the defendants of a "conspiracy to interfere with the civil and constitutional rights of the Negro citizens."

Advertiser

The conspiracy was described as a series of acts including "force, threats, violence, intimidation and harassment."

p. 2A

Charging that Negroes are arrested when they fail to observe the regulations of the state and city laws" which violate their constitutional rights," the Negro women accuse Ruppenthal and others of "punishing a number of Negro citizens solely because of their insistence under the Constitution that they are entitled to use the Montgomery City Lines buses without being segregated."

The document states that Negroes in refraining from making use of the transportation facilities "have suffered and continue to suffer great losses and inconveniences as the result of the denial to them of their rights to use said facilities on an unsegregated basis without fear or intimidation."

COMMISSION HIT

Striking at the City Commission, the document declares that Gayle, Sellers and Parks "are now seeking to use" their office of government "to oppose" Negro citizens and that they "are seeking by threats and intimidation to deprive plaintiffs and other Negro citizens of their rights in the use and benefit of car pools and taxis and other privately operated transportation facilities."

The Negroes charge that these "acts" are intended to force the Negroes to resume the use of the buses on a segregated basis.

Thurs. 2-2-56

The suit adds:

The city commissioners "have publicly called upon and urged white employers of Negroes who are now providing them with transportation to and from work to cease doing so. The said defendants as a part of their plan of intimidation publicly announced their affiliation with the Central Alabama White Citizens Council or some similar name." They announced their "intentions to harass persons providing transportation to Negroes by causing them to be stopped and questioned and their vehicles checked and examined in detail to determine whether or not such persons might be arrested and prosecuted for minor violations of laws and ordinances which are not being enforced against white persons . . ." And that in numerous instances they have already caused Negro drivers of taxicabs and Negro drivers of other vehicles to be questioned on how they have been hauling passengers, where they work and where they obtain their gasoline or to be otherwise harassed in various ways."

REPRISALS CHARGED

"One purpose," the document charges, "has been to obtain information for the purpose of the aforesaid questioning by the police for the purpose of bringing pressure upon employers to discharge Negro employes and otherwise subject them to economic reprisals."

They also state the Negroes desire to resume the use of buses on a "non-segregated basis without fear of arrest."

The arrests of Mary Louise Smith on Oct. 21, 1955, Rosa Parks, Dec. 1, 1955, and Claudette Colvin, March 2, 1955, were set forth with the fines of $9 and $14 for the Smith and Parks women respectively and probation for the Smith girl. The Smith girl is 18 and the Colvin girl is 16.

Their arrests, the suit charges, was caused by a "conspiracy" which Chief Ruppenthal entered with others in the enforcement of the state and local laws.

The Negroes asked for a "speedy hearing" and that the "cause be advanced on the docket."

BOYCOTT VIOLENCE

The suit filed yesterday came almost two months after Negroes began a boycott of the Montgomery City.

High lights of the boycott have been shots fired at the buses in Negro sections, and the bombing of the home of the Rev. M. L. King, boycott leader, Monday night.

Bomb Rocks Nixon Home

A bomb late last night exploded in the front yard of E. D Nixon, former state president of the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People.

No injuries were reported.

An ambulance, however, reported to the scene shortly after the report of the bombing.

Reporters and newsmen were being kept behind police lines while officials questioned the occupants of Nixon's home at 647 Clinton Ave.

NEGROES CHALLENGE SEGREGATION LAWS

Commercial Appeal

Thurs. 2-2-56

File Suit To Prevent Buses From Separating Races

p. 3

Memphis Tenn.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Feb. 1. —(AP)—Four Negro women filed suit Wednesday asking that state and city laws requiring segregation on public transportation facilities be declared unconstitutional.

The Federal Court suit also seeks an injunction to prevent enforcement of the segregation travel laws while the suit is before the court.

It was filed by attorneys

Charles D. Langford and Fred Gray in behalf of four women, two of whom claim they have been convicted of violating Montgomery city ordinances requiring segregated travel on public vehicles.

The complaint was filed against the three members of the Montgomery City Commission both "individually and collectively." It also names Police Chief G. J. Ruppenthal and the Montgomery City Lines, the bus company which Negroes have been boycotting since Dec. 5.

The woman said she never heard the word "suit" mentioned when she was in Gray's office.

Mayor Gayle meanwhile, speaking for the City Commission, charged that filing of the suit is "proof beyond any doubt that Negroes never wanted better bus service, as they were claiming, but complete integration."

The mayor pointed out he had made the charge two weeks ago when it was announced that the City Commission was breaking off

Plaintiffs are Aurelia S. Browder, Jeaneatta Reese, Claudette Colvin, by Q. P. Colvin, next friend, Mary Louise Smith, by Frank Smith, next friend and all others similarly situated.

Attys. Charles L. Langford and Fred Gray are representing the plaintiffs.

UNAWARE OF CONTENT

Advertiser

Negro Woman Withdraws

Fri. 2-3-56 P. 1

Action On Segregation

Montgomery Ala.

A Negro woman who joined in a federal suit attacking segregated travel in Alabama said yesterday she was withdrawing from the action because she "didn't know" what she was signing.

Jeannette Reese, one of five Negro women who filed the complaint Wednesday, told Mayor W. A. Gayle she was surprised to see her name listed as one of the plaintiffs.

"You know I don't want nothing to do with that mess," she told the Mayor.

Several hours after the action was filed, the second bomb to be tossed within two days at the home of Negro leaders in the bus boycott exploded harmlessly Wednesday night in the front yard of E. D. Nixon, former state president of the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People.

The 64-year-old housemaid said her husband received an anonymous telephone call Wednesday night warning her to get out of town.

She said her employer told her when she came to work yesterday that "she was surprised" at seeing the Reese woman's name among those signing the suit.

She issued her statement in the mayor's office in the presence of a newspaper reporter.

But Negro Atty. Fred Gray, one of the lawyers filing suit in behalf of the women, said the Reese woman's statement was "far from the truth. He said she knew what she was signing.

negotiations with boycott leaders, who he said had rejected all "reasonable" plans for a compromise.

He said city attorneys will study and contest the suit in federal court, adding:

"As the city commission, we do not intend to be deprived of any phase of our southern way of life without doing all in our power in a legal way to prevent it."

4 In Ala. File Bus Bias Suit

Daily World Thurs. 2-2-56 Atlanta Ga.

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — (SNS) — A suit was filed in federal court here yesterday by four persons asking that the travel segregation laws of this city be declared unconstitutional.

P. 1

Named as defendants were Mayor W. A. Gayle, Police Commissioner Clyde Sellers, Public Improvement Commissioner Frank Parks, individually and collectively; Police Chief Goodwyn J. Ruppenthall; the Montgomery City Lines, Inc., James F. Flake and Robert Cleere.

An injunction to halt enforcement of the travel segregation laws while the suit is pending was also asked.

Why Three Judges Will Hear The Bus Case

Advertiser Fri. 2-3-56 P. 4 A

Some readers have asked why a three-member court will be empanelled to hear the suit brought by Montgomery Negroes against city and state laws governing segregated transportation.

A federal statute requires that when the constitutionality of a state statute is attacked, a three-judge court must hear the case. One of the judges must be a member of the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals; one a judge of the district court in which the cases was filed (in this case, Judge Frank Johnson); the third may be either a district or circuit judge. Montgomery Ala.

There's no way in the world of knowing how long it will take to get a final answer in the case. (A district court has already ruled, however, that Columbia, South Carolina, may not segregate passengers on city buses.)

A federal statute requires that cases involving an attack on the constitutionality of a state statute shall be heard as soon as "practicable" after filing. In other words, such cases are given a priority, but "practicable" is subject to a variety of interpretations.

In the appeal of the Negro admissions case, the University of Alabama unsuccessfully argued that the original hearing should have been held before a three-judge court. However, this motion was denied, presumably because no state statute specifically forbids the University from admitting Negroes, and thus constitutionality was not at issue.

The legal maneuvers on both sides are almost without end in a case such as the bus challenge, but we understand that it is unlikely it will drag on as long as the University of Alabama case, which dates back to 1952.

COMMISSION WILL CONTINUE TO ENFORCE PRESENT LAWS

Advertiser Montgomery Ala. Thurs. 2-2-56

Members of the city Commission said yesterday they would continue to enforce segregation laws on Montgomery City Lines buses.

Mayor W. A. Gayle said that he had "no comment" on the filing of the suit by the Negroes seeking to have city and state transportation laws declared "unconstitutional."

"I have not seen the charges nor had time to study them. Therefore it would be premature to comment on them at this time," the mayor said.

Commissioner Clyde Sellers and Commissioner Frank Parks also said they had not seen the legal document and that they would have "no comment" until they could study it.

All of the commission members said they stood firm "in our intentions of enforcing segregation laws."

Not needed, says council—

Capital Negroes are refused bus franchise

News 4-3
Birmingham Ala.
April 2-56

MONTGOMERY, Ala., April 2—(AP)—The Rev. M. L. King Jr. and several other leaders of the Negro boycott against Montgomery City Lines buses were denied city permission today to establish and operate an all-Negro bus company.

The delegation, most of whom are under indictment on charges of conspiring to boycott the segregated buses, proposed that a new company "owned and operated by Montgomery Negroes" be licensed to "provide adequate transportation for our people."

City commissioners, who met with the group for nearly 90 minutes, denied the application for a franchise on the grounds that the present bus company is offering "excellent bus service for the entire city."

Most of the earlier issues of the bus boycott, including seating arrangements and a request that Negro bus drivers be employed, were discussed.

MAYOR W. A. GAYLE, saying bus revenue from the city as a whole would not support two bus companies, suggested the Negroes request Montgomery City Lines Inc., to operate buses exclusively for them.

As to an earlier request that Negro drivers be employed on predominately Negro routes, the mayor said, "That is up to the bus company altogether. It's their (the company's) money, and they have the right to hire whom they please."

Asked after the meeting if the boycotters would confer with City Lines on this point, King said the decision would have to come from the Montgomery Improvement Assn. executive board "and the Negroes of Montgomery."

Likewise, he said any decision on ending the boycott if the bus firm agreed to the employment of Negro drivers would have to be given by Negroes at a mass meeting.

KING HAD introduced members of the group as representatives of the Improvement Assn., of which he is president. The delegation consisted of King, whose conviction and $500 fine on a boycotting charge has been appealed to the Alabama Court of Appeals; Rev. H. H. Hubbard, Rev. W. J. Powell, E. D. Nixon, J. E. Pierce, Attys. Fred D. Gray and Charles Langford, and the widow of Dr. A. W. West Sr.

In support of their proposal, King told the commission, "We are only seeking satisfactory transportation. We don't want to put the other company out of business—that never has been our goal. We are trying to make for wholesome relations and the elimination of tension among the races in Montgomery."

Stating the reasons for denying the Negro franchise, Gayle said "40 or 50 buses are now standing empty."

nue wouldn't support two lines. He suggested instead the Negroes ask Montgomery City Lines to operate buses exclusively for them.

King, only one of the indicted Negroes brought to trial thus far, told the commission, "We are only seeking satisfactory transportation. We don't want to put the other company out of business—that has never been our goal. We are trying to make for wholesome relations and the elimination of tension among the races in Montgomery.'

The Negro Baptist minister was convicted of boycotting and fined $500. He has appealed the fine and Negro attorneys said they would take the case to the U.S. Supreme Court if necessary.

Most of the original issues in the bus boycott—including better seating arrangements and the hiring of Negro drivers — were discussed again yesterday at the 90-minute conference.

Boycott's Leaders Rebuffed On All-Negro Bus Line Plea

Commercial Appeal
Tues. 4-3-56 P. 1

By The Associated Press

MONTGOMERY, Ala., April 2.—Leaders of the racial boycott against City Lines buses asked in vain Monday for permission to operate an all-Negro bus line in Montgomery.

The City Commission turned them down with the observation that the boycotted Montgomery City Lines, Inc., is offering "excellent bus service for the entire city" and that "45 or 50 buses are now standing empty."

Memphis, Tenn.

Negroes for 19 weeks have refused to ride the segregated buses and the company has discontinued some routes and shortened others. Ninety leaders of the bus protest are under indictment for violating the state's anti-boycott law.

Impractical, Mayor Says

Members of a Negro delegation, led by Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., asked the City Commission for authority to form a new bus company to "provide adequate transportation for our people." They said the company would be "owned and operated by Montgomery Negroes."

Mayor W. A. Gayle, speaking for the commission, said bus revenue wouldn't support two lines. He suggested instead the Negroes ask Montgomery City Lines to operate exclusively for them.

King, only one of the indicted Negroes brought to trial thus far, told the commission, "We are only seeking satisfactory transportation. We don't want to put the other company out of business—that has never been our goal. We are trying to make for wholesome relations and the elimination of tension among the races in Montgomery."

The Negro Baptist minister was convicted of boycotting and fined $500. He has appealed the fine and Negro attorneys said they would take the case to the United States Supreme Court if necessary.

Most of the original issues in the boycott — including better seating arrangements and the hiring of Negro drivers—were discussed again Monday at the 90-minute conference.

It's Up To Company

Mayor Gayle said the employment of drivers "is up to the bus company. It's their money and they have the right to hire whom they please."

After the meeting, King declined to say whether the Negroes would confer with bus line officials. He said that decision would have to be made by the Montgomery Improvement Association executive board and "the Negroes of Montgomery."

Whether the boycott would end if the bus company agreed to hire some Negro drivers likewise would be a matter to be determined at a Negro mass meeting, King added.

arrangements and a request that Negro bus drivers be employed, were discussed.

Mayor W. A. Gayle, saying bus revenue from the city as a whole would not support two bus companies, suggested the Negroes request Montgomery City Lines, Inc., to operate buses exclusively for them.

As to an earlier request that Negro drivers be employed on predominately Negro routes, the Mayor said, "That is up to the bus company altogether. It's their (the company's) money, and they have the right to hire whom they please."

Asked after the meeting if the boycotters would confer with City Lines on this point, King said the decision would have to come from the Montgomery Improvement Association executive board "and the Negroes of Montgomery."

TRANSPORTATION 'ADEQUATE'

Negroes Denied Permit For Bus Line

Advertiser Montgomery, Ala.
Tues. 4-3-56

Leaders of the racial boycott against Montgomery City Lines buses asked in vain yesterday for permission to operate an all-Negro bus line in Montgomery.

The City Commission turned them down with the observation that the boycotted Montgomery City Lines Inc. is offering "excellent bus service for the entire city" and that "45 or 50 buses are now standing empty."

Negroes for 19 weeks have refused to ride the segregated City Lines buses and the company has discontinued some routes and shortened others. Ninety leaders of the bus protest are under indictment for violating the state's anti-boycott law.

Members of a Negro delegation, led by the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., asked the city commission for authority to form a new bus company to "provide adequate transportation for our people." They said the company would be "owned and operated by Montgomery Negroes."

Mayor W. A. Gayle, speaking for the commission, said bus revenue wouldn't support two lines. He suggested instead the Negroes ask Montgomery City Lines to operate exclusively for them.

King, only one of the indicted Negroes brought to trial thus far, told the commission, "We are only seeking satisfactory transportation. We don't want to put the other company out of business—that has never been our goal. We are trying to make for wholesome relations and the elimination of tension among the races in Montgomery."

The Negro Baptist minister was convicted of boycotting and fined $500. He has appealed the fine and Negro attorneys said they would take the case to the U.S. Supreme Court if necessary.

Most of the original issues in the bus boycott—including better seating arrangements and the hiring of Negro drivers — were discussed again yesterday at the 90-minute conference.

Gayle said the employment of drivers "is up to the bus company. It's their money and they have the right to hire whom they please."

After the meeting, King declined to say whether the Negroes would confer with bus line officials. He said that decision would have to be made by the Montgomery Improvement Assn. executive board and "the Negroes of Montgomery."

The improvement association, of which King is president, was formed to support the boycott and improve the general status of the Negro population.

Whether the protest would end if the bus company agreed to hire some Negro drivers likewise would be a matter to be determined at a Negro mass meeting, King added.

Other members of the Negro delegation were the Rev. H. H. Hubbard, the Rev. W. J. Powell, E. D. Nixon, J. E Pierce, Attorneys Fred D Gray and Charles Langford, and the widow of a Negro physician, Dr. A. W. West.

Leaders of Boycott Denied Bus Line

Post & Times Herald P. 19
Tues. 4-3-56

MONTGOMERY, Ala., April 2 (AP)—The Rev. M. L. King Jr., and several other leaders of the Negro boycott of Montgomery City Lines buses were denied city permission today to establish and operate an all Negro bus company.

Washington, D.C.

The delegation, most of whom are under indictment on charges of conspiring to boycott the segregated buses, proposed that a new company "owned and operated by Montgomery Negroes" be licensed to "provide adequate transportation for our people."

City Commissioners, who met with the group for nearly 90 minutes, denied the application for a franchise on the ground that the present bus company is offering "excellent bus service for the entire city."

Most of the earlier issues of the boycott, including seating

Bus Boycotters Lose Plea To Run Own Line

Constitution
Tues. 4-3-56
Atlanta, Ga.

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP)—The Rev. M. L. King Jr., and several other leaders of the Negro boycott against Montgomery City Lines buses were denied city permission today to establish and operate an all-Negro bus company. P. 1

The delegation, most of whom are under indictment on charges of conspiring to boycott the segregated buses, proposed that a new company "owned and operated by Montgomery Negroes" be licensed to "provide adequate transportation for our people."

City Commissioners, who met with the group for nearly 90 minutes, denied the application for a franchise on the grounds that the present bus company is offering "excellent bus service for the entire city."

Most of the earlier issues of the boycott, including seating arrangements and a request that Negro bus drivers be employed, were discussed.

Mayor W. A. Gayle, saying bus revenue from the city as a whole would not support two bus companies, suggested the Negroes request Montgomery City Lines to operate buses exclusively for them.

5c A Ride To Preserve Bus Seating System

Advertiser Montgomery, Ala.

IS IT WORTH a nickel more a ride to preserve the status quo in bus seating here?

This is the challenge presented to white bus patrons who can back the bus company's stand in favor of the present seating system on Montgomery buses, regardless of the 50% boost in fares effective next Monday.

Editorial 3-5-56

On Monday, by order of the City Commission handed down yesterday, adult bus fares will jump from 10c to 15c.

This is to make good the loss of fares through the Negro boycott.

At the same time a 60% boost in the fare for school children, from 5c to 8c, will go into effect.

On top of the fare increases, a transfer charge of 5c will be levied, for the first time. This does not apply to school children.

★

THE BUS COMPANY, in petitioning the city commission for increases, asked for more than it got. This is not infrequent practice—a utility will ask for an increase which looms large, and the regulatory body will compromise on something in between the existing rate and what was asked. This leaves the public feeling that it has champions looking after its interests.

In the pending case, the bus company asked for an adult fare of 20c, 10c for school children, and the same 5c transfer charge that it was allowed.

One thing bus patrons should write on their cuffs is the possibility that the increased fares are here to stay. At least there is no positive assurance that they will be reduced when the emergency is over.

★

THE BUS COMPANY agreed, in principle, that the increases requested should be subject to reduction when business picks up and the company's financial condition warrants it. But, since the company got less than it asked, except on the transfer charge, it is in a position to argue that any agreement to a future reduction was on the basis of its "asking price" which has already been "reduced" by the commission's order. Besides, the company obviously has a sizable boycott deficit to be made up. The bus company is hard up.

The City Commission's order contained no reference to any reduction when the boycott is over—so far as the official document is concerned, the increases were granted without strings. Queried on this point, Mayor Gayle said that when traffic picks up the question of a reduction will be "taken under consideration." To anyone with memories of "temporary" taxes and such like, it would not be surprising if the 15c adult fare, at least, should prove permanent.

It is apparent to anyone that the bus company cannot be expected to operate at a loss, which it has been doing in a big way since the boycott began Dec. 5. Operating expenses run 40c to 44c a mile, while since the boycott income has been about 22c.

★

ASKED to give specific grounds for the transfer charge, a bus company spokesman said it obviously costs more to haul a passenger four miles than two. He was of the opinion, also, that the charge would help curb abuse of free transfers, such as getting a transfer the patron did not intend to use, and giving it to a friend downtown, for example, to evade payment. Most cities have a transfer charge, the spokesman said.

★

AS FOR THE increase in fares for school children, it was pointed out that bus driver costs are higher, proportionately, in operating special school buses than elsewhere. This is due to a contract rule, typical of such contracts in general, that when a bus driver is called out, he cannot be paid for less than two hours even though he may actually work only an hour or less.

Vandalism on school buses was another problem mentioned, though this has not been as bad of late as formerly.

Officials pointed out that Maxwell Field has recently called on City Lines to take over transportation of school children from the field to Montgomery schools. This action was taken, it was said, after an expert from Washington had made a survey of existing costs of free transportation in government-owned buses.

★

THERE IS, of course, no mortal more eloquent than a utility spokesman justifying an increase in rates. But in the pending case, there was no question that something had to be done.

Montgomery's last bus fare increase was March 21, 1954, when a flat adult fare of 10c was allowed, abolishing tokens which until then had been obtainable at six for 50c, or 8 1-3c each. The new adult fare of 15c is thus nearly double what it was less than two years ago. It is to be hoped that this will hold us for a good while to come.

AT VIRTUAL END

Bus Company Wins Approval For Big Sunday Service Cut

Advertiser P.1 Fri. 3-9-56 Montgomery, Ala.

A virtual end to Sunday bus service in Montgomery was approved yesterday by the City Commission.

In the face of money-losing Sunday schedules, the commission allowed Montgomery City Lines to discontinue service on all but the Maxwell and Gunter AFB routes.

Mayor W. A. Gayle, announcing the cutback in service, said Sunday revenue has not been sufficient even to pay the drivers, not considering the other expenses.

Revenue from the Gunter and Maxwell routes has been "considerably higher," said Gayle. Service will remain the same on these two routes.

Of the remaining 12 routes, only eight are affected since Sunday service was not offered on four regular runs.

Mayor Gayle said week-day schedules will remain the same on all routes.

Montgomery City Lines' recently-negotiated renewal of its franchise went into effect yesterday for a 10-year period.

Though beset by a Negro boycott that has caused a third reduction in service and an increase of 50 per cent in fares, the bus company is not in a perilous condition, Gayle said.

He pledged that "City Lines is going to operate, giving us the necessary service."

Bus company officials have said that the adjustments made necessary by the boycott put the company in a relatively sound position.

These adjustments have included a reduction in service and company personnel and an increase in fares—enough, say the officials, to offest the loss of Negro patronage.

Meanwhile, as the boycott neared the end of its 13th week, Mayor Gayle said contributions totaling $56 have arrived at his office for the bus company.

$5 Fine Assessed To Negro Pastor In Traffic Case

Advertiser Montgomery, Ala. Fri. 3-9-56

A false fire alarm at the church of Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. last week resulted in a $5 traffic violation fine for the pastor of another Negro church in Recorder's Court yesterday.

Patrolman C. T. Rowland said a 1956 Mercury belonging to Rev. Ralph David Abernathy, 29-year-old pastor of the First Baptist Church for Negroes, had rolled unattended into a parked truck causing slight damage.

Rev. Abernathy was charged with failing to set his hand brake. One of the Negro spokesmen in the current bus boycott, Abernathy testified he heard that the Dexter Avenue Baptist Church was on fire, rushed to the scene and parked. When he came back he said he discovered that his car was gone.

Judge John B. Scott fined the minister $1 plus $4 court costs.

GROUP APPROVES NEGRO ARRESTS

Times-Picayune New Orleans, La.

Gov. Folsom Called Incompetent by Pro-Whites

Fri. 3-2-56

MONTGOMERY, Ala., March 1 (AP)—A pro-white organization Wednesday night approved the indictment of Negro leaders of a bus boycott here and charged that Gov. James E. Folsom "has not proven competent during these grave and grievous times."

The criticism against Folsom was included in a resolution which put the Central Alabama Citizens Council on record as opposed to a biracial commission which might try to solve racial disputes outside the framework of Alabama's segregation laws.

Newsmen were barred from the meeting in the Montgomery City Hall, but police estimated 3000 persons attended. The council says it has 12,000 members in this area.

Another resolution commended the Montgomery county grand jury which last week indicted 100 Negroes, including 24 ministers, for violating Alabama's anti-boycott law in their protest against racial segregation.

The council also called on state officials to continue enforcement of segregation laws and changed its name from the Central Alabama Citizens Council to the Montgomery County Citizens Council.

State Sen. Sam Engelhardt, chairman of the organization, said the resolution naming Gov. Folsom did not mean the council would not support an "independent" biracial commission that would try to mediate racial disputes.

But he said it was feared a biracial commission carrying authority given by the Legislature might possibly try to erase existing segregation laws.

In commending the grand jury which returned the boycott indictments, the council said "sinister" influences are at work in Alabama. The 12-week-old bus boycott, the resolution said, "is a notorious and flagrant violation of all customs and traditions of our city and state."

Bus Firm Puts Official Okay On Franchise

Advertiser Thurs. 2-16-56 Montgomery, Ala.

A new 10-year franchise for Montgomery City Lines has been officially accepted by the bus firm, the City Commission was notified yesterday.

A letter informed the commission that the franchise, which becomes effective March 8, was satisfactory to the national firm which operates the local bus company.

The expiring franchise was granted for 20 years in 1936.

A public hearing on a rezoning petition from the Normandale Development Corp. was set for March 8. If approved, the rezoning will allow the shopping center to expand to the south.

COMMISSION OKAY

Already approved by the City Planning Commission, the Change now must be okayed by the City Commission.

Developers of the project have promised nearby homeowners that no drive-in restaurant, night club, bowling alley or other noisy establishments will be included in the addition.

A new system of lighting and buffer-type landscaping have also been promised.

In other business, the commission agreed to amendment of the city's agreement with the Housing Authority of the City of Montgomery, providing for a profit-sharing arrangement when two projects are completed.

When construction bonds on Victor Tulane Courts and Jackson Heights are retired in 40 years, receipts will be divided between the authority and the city "in proportion to the aggregate contribution" each has made to the projects.

Charles Rogers, director of the authority, estimated the proportion would be about five to one.

Bus Officials Win Approval On Fare Boost

Advertiser Montgomery, Ala. 1-5-56

A 50 per cent rate increase and a charge of five cents for transfers were granted Montgomery City Lines yesterday by the City Commission. The increases become effective Monday.

Pending settlement of the Negro boycott—a month old today—the commission authorized the bus company to raise adult fares from 10 cents to 15 cents and school fares from five to eight cents.

Transfers, which have been free to bus passengers, will cost five cents.

LOSS CLAIMED

Mayor W. A. Gayle said the increase will be "subject to reconsideration" when the boycott is ended.

Company officials had asked for approval to double fares, because of losses said to be 22 cents for each mile the company operates.

Since Dec. 5—after Rosa Parks was fined $14 for violating the city's segregation law—the Negro boycott against the company has been virtually 100 per cent effective.

Several conferences between Negro leaders and city and civic officials have produced nothing near an agreement.

Mayor Gayle said yesterday the citizens committee he appointed to iron out the differences "stands ready when called." However, he said he knew of no meetings planned.

NEGRO GROUP

A similar statement came from the Rev. M. L. King, spokeman for the Montgomery Improvement Association, a Negro organization which claims to represent "50,000 citizens."

King said his group would meet with city officials or any group "sincerely interested" in settling the controversy.

King, in reply to a question, said he knew of no circumstances under which the Negroes might relent from the three demands they have made as the price for ending the boycott. But he added he has been out of town "for a few days" and hasn't checked with the association recently.

The Negroes have asked for elimination of reserved sections on buses for white and Negro, suggesting instead a first come, first served seating arrangement. Once properly seated, no passenger would be subject to reassignment. Negroes would fill the buses from the rear and whites from the front.

Other demands include hiring Negro drivers and "More courteous" treatment at the hands of white drivers.

Telephone Survey Supports Fare Hike

Advertiser 1-5-56

A cross section poll of Montgomerians on their general feeling toward the rise in bus fares indicated a strong majority overwhelmingly in favor of the fare hike and fully behind the bus company.

The poll, conducted yesterday by The Advertiser, consisted of telephoning 50 Montgomerians, 38 whites and 12 Negroes.

In all, 34 persons voted in favor of the rise, five voted against it and 11 were non-committal. Only 16 persons of the 50 contacted were non-bus riders.

Three white persons were against the rise and two offered no opinion. Two Negroes said the rise was "steep" and voted it down while the remaining nine Negroes offered no comment. The two Negroes voting "no" were the only Negroes who said they were bus riders.

One person said, "If this (the rise) helps the bus company to keep segregation on the buses until this boycott is broken, then I'm all for it."

Said another, "I'm in favor of the rise . . . I hope it means better service . . ."

Most persons voting in favor of the rise said they believed every concern should try to operate at a profit.

One person suggested, "I'm not only in favor of raising the fares, but I think they should set up contribution boxes to help the company during this boycott."

AT VIRTUAL END

Bus Company Wins Approval For Big Sunday Service Cut

Advertiser Montgomery, Ala. Fri. 3-9-56

A virtual end to Sunday bus service in Montgomery was approved yesterday by the City Commission.

In the face of money-losing Sunday schedules, the commission allowed Montgomery City Lines to discontinue service on all but the Maxwell and Gunter AFB routes.

Mayor W. A. Gayle, announcing the cutback in service, said Sunday revenue has not been sufficient even to pay the drivers, not considering the other expenses.

Revenue from the Gunter and Maxwell routes has been "considerably higher," said Gayle. Service will remain the same on these two routes.

Of the remaining 12 routes, only eight are affected since Sunday service was not offered on four regular runs.

Mayor Gayle said week-day schedules will remain the same on all routes.

Montgomery City Lines' recently-negotiated renewal of its franchise went into effect yesterday for a 10-year period.

Though beset by a Negro boycott that has caused a third reduction in service and an increase of 50 per cent in fares, the bus company is not in a perilous condition, Gayle said.

He pledged that "City Lines is going to operate, giving us the necessary service."

Bus company officials have said that the adjustments made necessary by the boycott put the company in a relatively sound position.

These adjustments have included a reduction in service and company personnel and an increase in fares—enough, say the officials, to offest the loss of Negro patronage.

Meanwhile, as the boycott neared the end of its 13th week, Mayor Gayle said contributions totaling $56 have arrived at his office for the bus company.

New station wagons aid boycotters

Afro-American Sat. 4-28-56

Baltimore Md.

By AL SWEENEY

(AFRO Staff Writer)

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — The walking participants in the passive resistance movement against the Montgomery City Bus Lines are getting a lift.

Beginning last week, the churches of this town began receiving deliveries of station wagons which are being used to transport citizens in the movement.

"Four churches received their station wagons last week, "the Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy, one of the leaders of the Montgomery Improvement Association, told the AFRO Saturday.

* * *

"EIGHT OTHER churches are waiting delivery of additional station wagons," he said.

The Rev. Mr. Abernathy explained that the station wagons will be "great assistance to the car pool."

He said that many of the automobiles used in the pool were in need of repair.

* * *

"THE VARIOUS churches have volunteered to purchase station wagons to transport its members and friends to and from their jobs," he stated.

Asked if it meant that the churches were maintaining a cooperative free - transportation system, the Rev. Mr. Abernathy stated:

"I wouldn't say that."

Several weeks ago the Rev. Martin L. King, president of the Improvement Association, told the AFRO that a plan of establishing a free-transportation system was being discussed by the demonstrators.

The protest is in its 23rd week.

* * *

THE NEXT significant move will be taken on May 11, when a suit filed on behalf of four Montgomery women challenging the constitutionality of the state's bus segregation laws will be heard by a three-judge Federal Court.

Meanwhile, the boycott of the buses remains effective. The boycotters continue to hold their mass meetings twice a week with standing-room - only space available.

On Monday, for the first time since the movement began, a meeting was held at the Dexter Avenue Baptist Church of which the Rev. Mr. King is pastor.

* * *

"WE HAVEN'T held meetings there before," the Rev. Mr. Abernathy said, "because of its limited seating capacity. It seats only about 400 persons."

On April 16, the Rev. Mr. Abernathy reported, "one of the most enthusiastic meetings we have ever had was held at the First Baptist Church."

At that meeting, the Rev. Mr. Abernathy urged the demonstrators:

"Let's keep alive the spiritual side of our movement.

"If we concentrate on the political side we are lost because our opponents have the mayor, the commissioners, the governor, the senators and the entire legislative process.

"If we emphasize the economic side we are at a disadvantage because they control the banks, have better vocational opportunities and have most of the money.

Sat. 4-28-56

"BUT, THE long arm of the Lord extends to everyone. We have as much access to Him as the

Baltimore, Md.

We must keep the movement spiritual. We should reaffirm our faith in the weapon of love and non violence," the Rev. Mr. Abernathy concluded.

* * *

ON THE LEGAL front, attorneys for three members of the Alabama Public Service Commission, named as defendants in a suit to abolish segregation on buses in Montgomery and Alabama, answered the charges.

They contend that the separation of the races "promotes the general welfare of both races and tends to protect each from violence and possible bloodshed;

"There are no sociological and psychological factors present in this case which would tend to require integration on buses;

"But to the contrary, the general welfare of both races and any sociological and psychological factors present require and demand the separation of the races on buses."

* * *

THE ANSWER continued that separate but equal facilities on buses are necessary so that "both races may live in peace, free from fear, turmoil and possible violence which retard the process, prosperity and well being of both races."

It was also charged that the three-judge court, which will hear the case on May 11, is without jurisdiction "to hear and determine this cause as members of the PSC are state officers and have issued no orders relating to the operation of the Montgomery City Lines."

* * *

REP. WILLIAM L. Dawson (Dem., Ill.) commented in Washington, Friday, that the demonstration in Montgomery was "a remarkable display.

"I congratulate the leaders of the movement for carrying on the protest with dignity and in a spiritual manner that can't fail to be successful."

* * *

SPEAKING IN COLUMBUS, Ohio, the Rev. Dr. King, answered Mississippi novelist William Faulkner, who has been urging colored leaders to slow down their fight for equality.

"Tell Mr. Faulkner, who encourages the use of gradualism, that segregation is a cancer to the American way of life and that one does not treat cancer by rubbing vaseline on it." He said.

Dr. King addressed an audience of 400 persons attending a $10-a-plate dinner sponsored by the NAACP.

"Boycotters Walk For Freedom"

Courier p. 7

Houston, Tex.

Sat. 4-21-56

By JULIA SCOTT

Rev Ralph D Abernathy, here from Montgomery, Alabama, the first person arrested in the Boycott movement, told Dallas citizens, Friday night, the true story of "their brothers and sisters" plight in Alabama, and told of their latest move in demand for justice. He related his story of this historical event at the Salem Baptist Church, of which the Rev L B Nelson, is pastor.

Rev Abernathy was kick-off speaker for the membership campaign of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. He arrived Friday afternoon via Braniff Airlines.

Introduced by one of the vice presidents of the NAACP, Mr Hardesty, Rev Abernathy extended greetings on behalf of freedom and democracy, and began to unfold the story of the Alabama Boycott. Amid thunderous cheers, audible laughs and silent tears, approximately 400 persons listened as the 29-year-old minister told of the 20 dark years in Alabama, when Negroes were mistreated on public buses, arrested and dragged off to jail. Then he retorted, "last December fifth, our cups ran over and 50,000 Negroes decided to do something about it".

He told his audience of their latest actions in their fight for justice. A committee appeared in the Commissioner's chambers and requested a franchise to operate their own bus. This request was denied. Declaring their adamantive stand, Rev Abernathy said, "they can't stop us, we have filed a suit in federal court ATTACKING SEGREGATION ITSELF."

NOT TIRED OF WALKING

Rev Abernathy told his Dallas audience, 50,000 Negroes are walking the streets in Alabama. "We're walking for freedom, even though we've been walking a long time (124 days) we haven't gotten tired yet".

He said he asked his mass meeting audience, Thursday night, "My children, I want to know, are you tired of walking?" The reply according to the spokesman, from 3,000 in attendance and echos from adjacent parks and lawns surrounding the church, resounded, "no, we are not tired of walking".

Rev Abernathy declared, "we are walking in protest because we've been mistreated across the years, Last December 5th, our cups ran over, we got tired of being kicked around, and we decided to hit the white man where it hurts, in the pocketbook.

A NEW NEGRO ON THE SCENE

Rev Abernathy declared, while speaking here, "a new Negro is on the scene, one who knows his stuff". He said they would not violate the laws of Alabama, but "the population is rising up. We've gotten a taste of freedom, we are tired of being pushed around".

The cry from the Southland, according to the Alabama Ambassador is FREEDOM and DEMOCRACY. "We are going to enjoy freedom in the cradle of confederacy, in Montgomery, Alabama," he declared.

He told his listeners, "We are not pitiful, we are not afraid, our heads are not bowed, but we are now demanding our rights, we are prepared to suffer in this movement, we know we shall win, because we know we are right and God is with us."

He said the Boycott movement did not begin with the arrest of Mrs Rosa Parks, but that it was a culmination of two decades of mistreatment, and the people waited for a chance to demonstrate passive resistance.

GUS COURTS TELLS OF MISSISSIPPI SHOOTING

Another feature for the evening were expressions from Gus Courts, a shotgun victim of Belzora, Mississippi. He introduced his wife as a woman who won't run when bullets are falling.

Mr Courts, who was shot down in his grocery store, November 25th, because he wanted to vote, said after Rev George Lee was killed, he was notified that he would be next, unless he did as "they" wanted him to do. He said, "I'll die a hero, and took the front until the guns fired on that ill-fated night.

He told of how the NAACP officials came to his rescue during his days of confinement, and admonished everyone to join the NAACP, because "that orgaisation is interested in you and your friends in Mississippi—Let's go to courts," he advised, "let's don't fight back".

Mrs Pearl C Anderson, Zeta's Woman of the year, and a life member of the NAACP, was presented a basket of flowers, by Mrs G M Battle, Executive-Secretary of the local Branch, NAACP. Mrs Anderson, accepted with humility and gratitude.

Rev L B Nelson, Chairman of the Membership Campaign, presided over the meeting. Dr B E Howell, gave the appeal and the Branch President, Rev B R Riley presented Rev Abernathy a check cott movement.

Finally, reports were made from various Division leaders on memberships secured.

38b 1956 ALABAMA

ALA.ATTY. GEN. JOHN PATTERSON FIIED A MOTION TO DISMISS FEDERAL SUIT

(Alabama-Boycott)

SEGREGATION CASE

Advertiser p. 1

Patterson Motion Asks Court To Dismiss Suit

Montgomery, Ala

Wed. 3-28-56

Alabama Atty. Gen. John Patterson filed a motion yesterday to dismiss a federal suit to declare Montgomery and Alabama transportation segregations laws unconstitutional.

The suit filed by four Negro women, originally named as defendants the City Commission members, Police Chief G. J. Ruppenthal, Montgomery City Lines Inc., and two bus drivers.

In a March 8 ammendment Negro Attys. Fred D. Gray and Charles Langford added the names of three members of the State Public Service Commission to the list of defendants. (Five Negro women were originally listed as plaintiffs, but the name of Jeanetta Reese was withdrawn by Gray after the woman claimed she "didn't know what I was signing.")

In Patterson's motion to dismiss the suit, he contends the federal suit concerning the issue of city and state segregation laws pertaining to public transportation should be heard in state courts first.

The state added that no facts introduced by the plaintiffs show that the PSC had jurisdiction over buses operated in the city of Montgomery. Patterson added in the motion the application for an immediate injunction to halt enforcement of city and state travel segregation laws does not seek restraint from enforcement of state statues by state officers and thereby does not require convening a three-judge court.

Fred Gray was not available for comment yesterday. His office said he was "out of town" and refused to reveal his whereabouts.

Church Groups Protest Negro Ministers' Arrest

Evening Star P. 6-A
Tues. 2-28-56

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Feb. 28 (AP).—A Negro minister indicted in Montgomery's bus boycott told a cheering throng at a mass meeting last night: "No city in the world can afford to make criminals out of 24 of its preachers."

Washington, D.C.

This declaration by the Rev. L. R. Bennett came after church groups in other sections of the Nation expressed concern over the arrest of 24 Negro ministers here for leading the protest against segregation on city buses.

Mr. Bennett, pastor of the Mount Zion African Methodist Episcopal Church, and other indicted Negro clergymen spoke at a meeting marking the end of the boycott's 12th week. Cheering Negroes responded enthusiastically when their leaders promised to continue the protest movement.

Prayer Session Called

A group of Protestant pastors at Princeton, N. J., called for a prayer meeting there Friday restricted to ministers only. The Rev. William L. Tucker, president of the 10-member Princeton Pastors' Association, which includes three Negroes, said the service will conclude with an offering to be sent to Montgomery Negro ministers.

"The treatment of our fellow ministers in Alabama arouses both our indignation and our brotherly solidarity," Mr. Tucker said.

At St. Albans, W. Va., the West Virginia Council of Churches expressed "unhappiness" over the indictments here.

The council, representing 13 Protestant denominations with a membership of 350,000 persons, said in a letter to Mayor W. A. Gayle of Montgomery:

"We share widespread unhappiness over the current grand jury indictment of scores of your citizens. We feel that, even under your law, these citizens have a 'just cause' to uphold. Therefore, we cannot think they are guilty of a conspiratorial crime."

(At Miami, Fla., the religious leadera of 5 million Negro Baptists said in an interview that he was opposed to mixing prayer with the bus boycott at Montgomery.

(Dr. Joseph H. Jackson of Chicago, president of the National Baptist Convention, said: "I don't quite see mixing prayer with an economic boycott. . . . I do not believe religion should be used as an economic boycott. Calling a halt to work is not in the Christian tradition. . . . There is no issue regarding a day of prayer.")

Warns Against Violence

While Negro leaders in Montgomery reaffirmed their intentions of continuing the boycott, they called for members of their race to continue to shun violence.

The Rev. Martin Luther King, jr., warned: "Anything that looks like violence will defeat our purpose."

He cautioned his listeners last night against any attempt at intimidation. He asked particularly that no "threatening calls" be made to Mrs. Jeanetta Reese, a Negro who withdrew from an anti-segregation suit after it was filed in U. S. District Court.

Fred D. Gray, Montgomery Negro attorney, who filed the suit attacking bus segregation laws, was indicted by the grand jury for unlawful practice three days before 100 other Negroes were charged with violating Alabama's anti-boycott law.

Mr. Gray's trial is set for Friday in Circuit Court. Mrs. Reese, one of five Negro women whose names appeared on the suit, later said the action was taken without her consent. Mr. Gray denied that.

Church Council Backs Negroes In Bus Protest

New York, Feb. 27 — The National Council of churches pledged its support today to the Negroes of Montgomery, Ala., in their fight against segregated public transportation.

A telegram from council president, the Rev. Dr. Eugene Carson Blake of Philadelphia, to Rev. Solomon Seay, one of the leaders of the Montgomery boycott, restated the council's position that segregation "is unnecessary and undesirable and a violation of the gospel of love and human brotherhood."

The telegram assured the Montgomery Negroes of their fellow chiristians' sympathy and prayers and of our resolution to assist them in ways that may be helpful."

Church Council Backs Negroes In Bus Protest

Daily World
Sun. 2-26-56 P. 1

NEW YORK—(I N S)—The National Council of churches pledged its support today to the Negroes of Montgomery, Ala., in their fight against segregated public transportation.

Atlanta, Ga.

A telegram from council president, the Rev. Dr. Eugene Carson Blake of Philadelphia, to Rev. Solomon Seay, one of the leaders of the Montgomery boycott, restated the council's position that segregation "is unnecessary and undesirable and a violation of the gospel of love and human brotherhood."

The telegram assured the Montgomery Negroes of their fellow christians' "sympathy and prayers and of our resolution to assist them in ways that may be helpful."

Negro Opens Fast In Boycott Support

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., March 11.—(UP)—A Negro pastor who once was a sparring partner of former heavyweight champion Jersey Joe Walcott, started a fast in his pulpit Sunday in sympathy with the bus boycott at Montgomery, Ala.

Rev. Russell Roberts, 38, pastor of the Shiloh Baptist Church, said he would "live and pray and fast" in the church pulpit, taking only vegetable juices to sustain himself, "for as long as God gives me strength."

During the fast, Rev. Roberts said, he church will remain open day and night, and members of the congregation will carry Bibles with them at all times.

Boycott Pastors Base Sermons On Race Issue

Evening Star
Mon. 2-27-56
Washington, D.C.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Feb. 27 (AP).—Several of the 24 ministers arrested for leading the Negro boycott of segregated buses based their Sunday sermons on racial and religious issues touching on the protest. P. 3A

One minister said the protest to racial segregation "has become a spiritual movement."

The Rev. Martin Luther King, jr., preaching to a capacity crowd at the Dexter Avenue Baptist Church, said, "Segregation can't survive because God is against it."

Talks With Students Cited

Mr. King said he talked to several white students at Vanderbuilt University last week while in Nashville, Tenn., and 90 per cent of them favored racial integration.

The Rev. R. W. Hilson, another minister indicted for boycotting, told his congregation at St. John's African Methodist Episcopal Church that the bus boycott "has become a spiritual movement with us."

He noted that bishops of his church had aligned themselves with the Montgomery boycotters and had issued protests in Washington Saturday to the arrects of the 89 Negro leaders here last week.

The Rev. J. W. Bonner, pastor of the First Christian Methodist Episcopal Church, called on his congregation to "ask God's guidance" in the racial controversy.

Clerics Pledge Aid

He read telegrams and letters from bishops of the church promising moral support and financial aid, including one containing a $200 donation from Bishop B. Julian Smith of Chicago, head of the Oklahoma-Arkansas district of the Christian Methodist Episcopal Church.

Mr. King, one of the most outspoken boycott leaders, asked for a special collection of $1 yesterday at his church to finance the boycott. He said he is going to insist that the boycott not be exploited and that money contributed be "properly handled."

Most of the ministers warned their followers that non-violence must continue.

Negroes here have refused to ride city buses since December 5, when a woman was fined for refusing to obey State and city laws requiring segregated seating for whites and Negroes on buses.

AMEZ's Aid Bus Boycott In Alabama

Defender P. 10
Sat. 3-10-56
Chicago, Ill.

NEW YORK — A special offering was forwarded to the Montgomery Improvement Association of Montgomery, Ala., on Washington's Birthday, to aid its fight to get decent treatment for Negro passengers on a bus line operated in Montgomery.

The money was raised at the 10th annual Christian Youth Conference and Institute for Ministers and Christian Education Workers of the Hudson and Long Island Districts of the AME Zion church.

Three of the men indicted for their participation in the boycott against the bus company are ministers of the AME Zion church: Rev. L. R. Bennett, Rev. W. J. Powell, pastor of Old Ship AME Zion church and Dr. Solomon S. Seay, former executive secretary of the Home Missions and Relief Departments.

Some 400 young people attended the conference at First AME Zion church at 460 McDonough st. with Dr. W. O. Carrington, host pastor; Rev. J. H. Tucker, presiding elder of the Long Island District; and Rev. C. C. Williams, presiding elder of the Hudson River District.

Presiding bishop was senior bishop, the Rt. Rev. William J. Walls of Chicago.

Bishop Walls spoke prior to the conference time devoted to meetings of 17 discussion groups con-

Where to send your donation!

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.
3-17-56

If you as an individual or your church, club or other organization want to help in the defense of the valiant Montgomery passive resisters, send checks or money orders (don't send cash money) to the following address:

The Rev. M. L. King Jr.,
Montgomery Improvement Association
120 Mildred Street, P. 1
Montgomery, Alabama

Everyone walks on Sunday as bus lines discontinue service

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — N civilian rides the bus in this cit on Sunday, regardless of race creed, or color.

This is necessitated by the fac that on last Thursday, the cit commissioners granted a reque of the Montgomery City Lines t discontinue bus service on a lines with the exception of tha to and from the Maxwell an Gunter Air Force Bases.

Mayor W. A. Gayles said tha the action was taken because th Sunday operation was a "com plete loss" to the bus compan cerned with various aspects of the conference theme: "Christian Light Shining In World Darkness."

Keynote speech was presented by Dr. James W. Eichelberger, general secretary, department of Christian Education of the AME Zion church.

He emphasized the important part played by the church schools, study classes and educational conferences in the expanding work of the denomination and in preparing future church leaders.

BOWED IN PRAYER—Members of the Council of Bishops, African Methodist Church, pray for end of segregation in Alabama. They plan appeal to President Eisenhower for an end to the "tragic persecution" of Montgomery, Ala., Negro bus boycott leaders. From left: F. D. Jordan, Los Angeles; Howard T. Primm, New Orleans; William R. Wilkes, Little Rock; Isaiah H. Bonner, Birmingham; A. J. Allen, Cleveland; Frank M. Reid, Columbia, S. C.; D. Ward Nichols, New York; S. L. Greene, Atlanta; R. R. Wright, Philadelphia; G. W. Baber, Detroit; Carey A. Gibbs, Jacksonville; E. C. Hatcher, Nashville, and Joseph Gomez, Waco, Tex.—AP Photo.

Attorneys ready for hard fight

Afro-American Baltimore, Md. Sat. 3-17-56

By AL SWEENEY
AFRO Staff Writer

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — "We're just hoping and praying."

So said Fred D. Gray, young legal adviser for the 89 "passive resistance movement" leaders under indictment.

Monday, March 19, is the trial date.

* * *

"EVERYTHING IS calm, too calm down here," Mr. Gray said Saturday.

"I have no idea of what the prosecution is planning.

"Our attorneys will get together on Wednesday and work last minute details for the defense," he added.

* * *

THE ATTORNEYS for the indicted group that includes 64 of Montgomery's leading ministers, are Arthur Shores, Orzell Billingsley, and Peter Hall of Birmingham and Charles Langford of Montgomery, in addition to Mr. Gray.

The first case on the docket is No. 7399, which will be called by Judge Eugene Carter of the Montgomery Circuit Court at 9:30 a.m., March 19.

Among the defendants in the first case will be the Rev. Martin L. King, pastor of the Dexter Avenue Baptist Church and president of the Montgomery Improvement Association, the organization staging the protest.

Other defendants are the Rev. Elroy Bennett, vice president; E. D. Nixon, treasurer and veteran civic leader; the Rev. E. M. French, secretary; and the Rev. U. S. Fields, assistant secretary.

The 84 others are grouped in 10 other cases.

* * *

ALL ARE charged with conspiring to violate Alabama's ancient but seldom-used boycott law.

It was passed in 1921 and was aimed at breaking industrial strikes. According to Mr. Gray, it has been invoked only two or three times in history.

The constitutionality of it, he said, has never been challenged. National organizations such as the Civil Liberties Union contend that the law is unconstitutional because it violates the guarantee of "the right to protest."

Afro-American

SIGNIFICANTLY, THE trial will be held in a weatherbeaten court building located in the 100 block of Dexter Ave., a street that ends four blocks away at the State Capitol, described as "the cradle of the Confederacy."

The Rev. Mr. King and his 88 "associates" are members of a "passive resistance movement" that is said to be the boldest resistance to racial segregation in the South by citizens of the South in history.

The movement began on Dec. 5, the day after Mrs. Rosa Parks, a 43-year-old alteration tailor, was fined $14 in city court for refusing to give her seat to a white man.

Since that day about 98 per cent of the colored citizens of Montgomery have refused to set foot on a city bus until racial policies of the buses are changed.

In the 14 weeks that the "passive resistance movement" has been in existence, the "love thine neighbor" theme of its followers has gained world wide attention and support.

* * *

TWICE WEEKLY followers of the movement meet. The meeting places move to all areas of the city.

The meeting nights are Mondays and Thursdays. The churches are packed long before the services begin at 7 p.m.

In order to get a seat, some persons arrive at the meeting place as early as 3 p.m. By 5 p.m. the auditorium is packed.

The crowd keeps from becoming restless by an endless singing of hymns interpersed with prayers from the congregation.

Promptly at 7 p.m. leaders of the movement arrive. Their appearance, especially that of the Rev. Mr. King, the Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy and Mrs. Parks, are met with a tremendous ovation.

The singing of the group's victory song to the tune of "Old Time Religion," opens the program.

Prayers for God's assistance to give them "understanding and love for those who oppose them;" the reading of the Scripture; a message from one of the leaders; a pep message; a financial report; and the final prayer complete it.

The meetings usually last only two hours.

* * *

THE MOVEMENT owes its success to the determination of the masses, all bus riders, who have "gripes" against the bus drivers.

"The attitude of the bus drivers towards our people created the sorest spot in the race relations of the city," Gray explains.

"There isn't a single person who has been a regular rider without a grievance. The bus drivers had the police power to enforce segregation on the buses and at one time carried guns.

"Their abuse of authority is the real cause for this united effort," he opines.

The Rev. Mr. King, the architect of the non-hatred idea, explains passive resistance in the following scholarly fashion:

"What we are preaching is best described by the Greek word, 'agapa.'

"The Greeks made distictions between several kinds of love. For example, there is the kind of love described by the word 'eros,' a romantic type of love such as a fellow would have for his girl friend.

"Then there is the kind of love designated by the word 'philia,' a kind of friendship.

"And there is 'agapa.' That's the highest type of love; not sentimental but meaning understanding, good will, a redemptive sort of love.

* * *

"THAT IS what we are trying to get our people to feel.

"Since the white man will not come to the realization of his own integrity without understanding, to defeat him in his hatred only makes matters worse.

"The fight here is between light and darkness. The job of us leaders is to make that clear to our people.

"We can't afford to hate the white man because if we won in that spirit, a residue of hatred would remain between us.

"That is why we constantly preach against hatred.

"I don't know that they fully understand it yet, but they are making progress."

The effect of the teachings of the ministers is best described by a woman, whom this reporter encountered at the corner of Jackson and Hull Sts. in South Montgomery.

She was carrying a heavy bundle of clothing, which she had washed. She had been walking a distance of eight blocks.

"Are you tired? How do you feel about this boycott?" this writer asked.

"Mister, my feet are tired, but my soul feels good. If I have to walk forever, I'll never get on another bus and have one of them drivers talk to me like I was a dog."

DEC. 1—Mrs. Rosa Parks, 42, an alteration tailor in a downtown Montgomery department store, riding on a Cleveland Ave. bus was arrested after she refused to give her seat to a white man.

DEC. 4—Mrs. Parks was fined $14 in city court for violating the state's segregation laws.

DEC. 5—The colored citizens of Montgomery outraged begin a protest demonstration against the bus line policy.

DEC. 8 — During a meeting with officials of the bus company and the city commissioners, the Rev. M. L. King expresses the attitude of the citizens:

"We are tired of being humiliated by bus drivers."

He listed the three demands of the colored citizens: (1) Courteous treatment of passengers by drivers; (2) Seating on a first-come-first served basis; (3) Employment of colored drivers.

Jack Crenshaw, attorney representing the buslines, rejects the three demands.

He explodes: "We have no intention of hiring colored bus drivers."

DEC. 12 — The demonstration ends first week.

DEC. 17—Mayor W. A. Gayle appoints a citizens committee to investigate the boycott.

* * *

DEC. 25 - 26 — The buses cease operations on Christmas Day and the day following. It is estimated that the lines are losing about $3,000 a day.

JAN. 2 — The citizens committee meets. Group includes Luther Ingalls, president of the White Citizens Council. No progress is made.

The demonstration is 98 percent effective, says the Rev. M. L. King. He announces that $3,000 was collected at a mass meeting to finance the operation of a 200-car pool.

* * *

JAN. 9 — The bus lines are granted a fare increase. Regular fares upped from 10 to 15 cents; children's school fare from 5 to 8 cents. Whites disturbed at fare increase join boycotters.

* * *

JAN. 27 — Mayor Gayles announces a "get-tough" policy after first stating that he didn't care if colored persons ever rode the buses again.

JAN. 30 — The Rev. Mr. King's home is bombed.

* * *

FEB. 1 — The home of E. D. Nixon, former state NAACP president and boycott leader, is bombed.

* * *

FEB. 2—An "umbrella suit" is field in Federal Court attacking the legality of the state's segregation laws. Plaintiffs are listed as Aurelia S. Browder, Susie McDonald, Jeannetta Reese, Claudette Colvin, and Mary L. Smith.

The defendants are the bus line and city officials. Fred D. Gray and Charles Langford are attorneys for the plaintiffs.

* * *

FEB. 4 — Mr. Gray, 25, assistant pastor at the Holt Street Church of Christ, is reclassified in the draft to a 1-A status.

FEB. 10 — Judge Eugene B. Carter of Montgomery Circuit Court orders the grand jury to investigate the legality of the protest movement.

* * *

FEB. 18 — Mr. Gray attorney, is arrested following a grand jury indictment which charged that he represented Mrs. Jeannette Reese in the bus suit without authorization.

* * *

FEB. 22-23 — Eighty-nine persons are arrested following a grand jury indictment charging that they were engaged in an illegal boycott that violated a state statute adopted in 1921. Twenty four are ministers.

* * *

FEB. 24 — About 42,000 persons respond to a "Pilgrim - Prayer" call issued by the Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy, pastor of the First Baptist Church. Car owners are urged to leave their cars at home to join the "everyone walk and pray" demonstration.

The indicted persons arraigned. Trial set Mar 19.

* * *

FEB. 29 — Mr. Gray is freed of the grand jury indictment after City Solicitor William Thettford tells Judge Carter that the state had no jurisdicion in the 'unauthorized representation" charge filed by Mrs. Reese.

Thettford pointed out that the case was filed in a Federal Court hence the prosecution was the responsibility of Federal authorities, if warranted.

"No Room for Gradualism"

Courier p. 14

AME Bishops OK Bus Boycott at Session in Ark.

Pittsburgh, Pa.
Sat. 3-3-56

By B. H. LOGAN

HOT SPRINGS, Ark.—Bishop Joseph Gomez of the Tenth Episcopal AME District delivered the sermon which opened the winter session of the Bishops' and Connectional Council here. Bishop Sherman L. Greene presided over the service which also administered Holy Communion.

The Bishops took action on several important civic matters during their three days of rugged sessions.

They passed resolutions on the bus boycott situation at Montgomery, Ala., and although the Bishops favored the use of economic boycott in their resolution, they strongly condemn any kind of violence to obtain civil rights.

* * *

THEY COMMENDED the action of Negroes in Montgomery, Ala., who boycotted the bus system after a member of the race was forced to move back to a segregated area on the bus to accommodate whites.

The resolution stated that there is no room for "gradualism" which in effect means a systematic device to disobey the Supreme Court decision as long as it can be gotten away with.

The resolution also called for an integrated church in an integrated society. It is the declared policy of virtually every major denomination in the United States, that the Supreme Court decision on integration of schools is a milestone in the achievement of human rights.

Likewise, the Roman Catholic Church has condemned racial discrimination as "unjust and un-Christian."

* * *

IN THIS struggle for universal acceptance of an integrated society, the Negro church plays an increasingly vital role.

It was in fact an humble AME minister, the Rev. Joseph A. Delaine, who led the parents of Clarendon County, S. C., to the point where their demands for equality in educational facilities were first heard.

The Bishops ruled that all Bishops of the church will attend the World Council of Methodism at Junalaska, N. C., in July.

The Bishops also heard a resume of work of the Church World Service from the Rev. Joseph W. Merchant, executive director of Urban Churches, National Council of Churches, and also a report from John Abbott, promotion director of Church World Services, in which the council endorsed the program of sharing surpluses with needy people in other lands.

* * *

THE FOLLOWING department heads reported to the Bishops: Dr. A. Chester Clark, secretary of missions, which includes relief work done in the Caribbean area, including 3,600 pounds of clothing, 500 New Testaments and $1,000 in cash.

Mrs. Anne E. Heath of the Women's Missionary branch and Mrs. Alma A. Polk of the Young People's Department made their reports.

Dr. Shermon L. Greene Jr., secretary of the Department of Education and Dr. Robert W. Mance of the finance department made reports of the work of their departments.

Dr. S. S. Morris and Dr. C. W. Abington reported for the Department of Christian Education. Dr. J. E. Beard reported for the Pensions Department, of which he is secretary-treasurer.

THE COUNCIL voted $5,000 for the National Council of Churches, and $3,680 for the World Council of Churches and $1,000 for the National Fraternal Council and $2,000 for the World Council of Methodism.

A MESSAGE of brotherhood is being sent to the people of Soviet Russia by members of the AME Church, through Bishop D. Ward Nichols of New York City.

According to Bishop S. L. Greene, who made the announcement, the message will be sent in the form of a plaque and will be hung in an appropriate place of worship. Bishop Nichols is one of a delegation of nine members which will leave for Russia March 9 under auspices of the National Council of Churches.

A special meeting of the Bishop's Council will be held in Washington, D. C., Feb. 25, to complete whatever unfinished business that remains leading up to the General Conference which will meet in Miami, Fla., in May.

The council voted endorsement of the Baptist World Day of Prayer for May 17.

Bostonians protest arrests in Alabama

Afro-American p. 8
Baltimore, Md.

BOSTON, Mass. — "I want to tell you that I am heartily behind your cause," Lt. Gov. Sumner Whittier told a group of Bostonians gathered at the Columbus AME Zion Church recently to protest the arrest of 89 persons in the Alabama bus boycott.

Sat. 3-17-56

"We are working on the side of right and truth," he said," and it is essential to win the fight — not for you alone but for all Americans and for the free world."

* * *

THE REV. Walter C. Davis, president of the Interdenominational Ministers Alliance and pastor of Charles St. AME Church, presided.

Local ministers pledged their support for "National Deliverance Day of Prayer," to be observed nationally on March 28.

One thousand dollars was raised and forwarded to the Improvement Association of Montgomery.

OTHER SPEAKERS addressing the audience were: Dr. Myron W. Fowell, Massachusetts Council of Churches; Col. Larkland Hewitt and Edward Cooper, the local NAACP;

The Rev. Samuel Laviscount, Sr. Marks Congregational Church; Kivie Kaplan, NAACP life memberships chairman; the Rev. Nathaniel Wright, St. Cyprians Episcopal Church;

Dr. Clayton B. Hale, Boston Council of Churches, and Rabbi Zev K. Nelson, president of the Greater Boston Rabbinical Association.

* * *

THE REV. MR. DAVIC, Boston "D-Day" chairman, said:

"The bells of Boston's famed Old North Church, from whence rode Paul Revere, will ring for one solid hour in protest."

Mr. Kaplan told the audience: "We (the NAACP) have set our national goal for five million members this year and Boston's figure 10,000.

"Money is needed to win these fights and to say that 'money talks' is an understatement for it virtually screams!".

The Rev. Mr. Laviscount announced that a combined faith broadcast will be heard over radio station WHDH on "Religion and Human Equality."

400 PASTORS BACK NEGRO BUS FIGHT

Times p. 23-C

200 Offer to Supply Pulpits if Ministers Are Jailed—Trial Opens Today

Mon. 3-19-56
New York, N. Y.

The twenty-five Negro ministers of Montgomery, Ala., who go on trial today for their part in organizing a boycott of the city's segregated buses have received the support of more than 400 white and Negro clergymen from all over the nation.

The announcement was made yesterday by the Fellowship of Reconciliation, a non-denominational organization of clergymen and laymen. It also was reported that more than 200 of the ministers had expressed their willingness personally to supply the pulpits of the defendants in the event any were convicted and jailed.

The Rev. John M. Swomley Jr., national secretary of the organization, said the statement, acclaiming "the leadership our brother pastors * * * are giving to the nonviolent campaign for racial brotherhood," had been sent only to 1,600 clergymen.

"Our impression is that something like 90 per cent of them will have signed it by the end of this week, and half of them will be prepared to go to Montgomery," Mr. Swomley said. "They obviously share our conviction that the nonviolent campaign represents the most hopeful and significant development that has come out of this struggle so far."

Eisenhower Action Urged

The statement also called on the Christian Church in both the North and South to "repent of its own sinful practice of segregation."

It further urged President Eisenhower to "speak out against segregation in every form" and to "consider personally going to Alabama and Mississippi" on a mission of peace and goodwill.

Among those who signed the statement were:

John Haynes Holmes, minister emeritus, Community Church, New York; Right Rev. F. Boynton, Bishop, Episcopal Church, New York; Edwin T. Dahlberg, former president, American Baptist Convention, St. Louis; Halford Luccock, professor emeritus, Yale Divinity School, New Haven; Harold Jonson, pastor, First Baptist Church, Boulder, Colo.; Wm. Lindsay Young, former moderator, Presbyterian Church, U. S. A.; E. Fay Campbell, director student work, Presbyterian Church, U. S. A.; Donald Harrington, pastor, Community Church, New York.

Also Charles Iglehart, formerly Professor of Missions, Southern Methodist Church and Union Theological Seminary, New York; Allan A. Hunter, pastor, Mount Hollywood Congregational Church, Hollywood, Calif.; James Myers, secretary, National Child Labor Committee; Allen O. Miller, professor, Eden Theological Seminary, St. Louis; F. A. Spong, chairman race relations committee, Missions Council of Churches; John Oliver Nelson, professor, Yale Divinity School, and L. B. Moseley, Baptist Church, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Des Moines Ministers Continue Protest Against Oppression in Alabama

Bystander p. 1 Thurs. 3-8-56
Des Moines, Iowa

Des Moines ministers are making protests in sermons against racial injustices and oppression meted out upon the Negro leaders of Montgomery, Ala., since the recent arrests of 115 of them in the bus boycott and the mob violences demonstrated when the Negro coed, Miss Autherine Lucy attempted to seek an education at the University of Alabama. Their sermons reval:

REV. G. H. PARRISH

"In these hectic days, these trouble times, it would seem that we here in America would have learned how to treat one another," preached the Rev. G. H. Parrish last Sunday morning to his membership at the Maple Street Baptist Church, East Sixteenth and Maple streets.

"Our people are called upon to fight wars to help make America safe. We spend our blood, sweat and tears—yes, we even give our lives like any other good American for the thing we love and want. Then, after planting our boys on foreign soil, in untended graves, we come home to America and ask for the things our boys have fought and died for and we are denied those things.

'Good Enough to Fight'

"We are good enough to fight that other men might enjoy the blessings of God in this country; then, we, ourselves are denied these same things; . . . . we send our sons and daughters away to fight for democracy abroad. We die for it on the barren fields of France, Germany and the Islands of the Seas—but, we are denied democracy at home—because our skins are dark.

"I am not bitter, but hurt that this country, so blessed by God . . . this country with so many churches, this country with so many fine ministers of the gospel of Jesus Christ the Son of God, her millions of church goers, her many religions, could be so unreligious as to deny a man or woman the right to go to school because her face is black.

"I think it is about time for America to stop fooling herself. She is only fooling herself and not the world. I think it is time for the Saints of God all over these United States to unite themselves in prayer to God—to save America from her sins."

In Montgomery—

Negroes assert drive for integration spiritual

News
Mon. 2-27-56 P. 30
Birmingham, Ala.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Feb. 27—(AP)—Sermons yesterday by Negro ministers indicted in the bus boycott lent support to the claim that the protest to racial segregation "has become a spiritual movement."

Several of the 24 ministers arrested last week for leading the bus boycott based their Sunday sermons on racial and religious issues touching on the boycott.

The Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., preaching to a capacity crowd at the Dexter-av Baptist Church, said "segregation can't survive because God is against it."

King said he talked to several white students at Vanderbilt University last week while in Nashville, Tenn., and 90 per cent of them favored racial integration.

The Rev. R. W. Hilson, another minister indicted for boycotting, told his congregetion at St. John's African Methodist Episcopal Church that the bus boycott "has become a spiritual movement with us."

HE NOTED THAT bishops of his church had aligned hemselves with the Montgomery boycotters and had issued protests in Washington Saturday to the arrests of the 89 Negro leaders here last week.

The Rev. J. W. Bonner, pastor of the First Christian Methodist Episcopal Church, called on his congregation to "ask God's guidance" in the racial controversy.

He read telegrams and letters from bishops of the church promising moral support and financial aid, including one containing a $200 donation from Bishop B. Julian Smith of Chicago, head of the Oklahoma-Arkansas district of the Christian Methodist Episcopal Church.

King, one of the most outspoken boycott leaders, asked for a special collection of $1 yesterday at his church to finance the boycott.

THE BAPTIST MINISTER said he is going to insist that the boycott not be exploded and that money contributed be "properly handled."

Most of the ministers especially warned their followers that non-violence must continue.

Negroes here have refused to ride city buses since Dec. 5, when a woman was fined for refusing to obey state and city laws requiring segregated seating for whites and Negroes on buses.

MEANWHILE, AT Greensboro, N. C., yesterday, another Montgomery minister indicted in the boycott outlined the aims of the protest movement to some 500 Negroes at a church.

Dr. Soloman S. Seay, pastor of an African Methodist Episcopal Church here, said he is on a speaking tour to raise funds for the Montgomery Improvement Assn., an organization of Negro leaders which has promoted the boycott.

38b 1956

ALABAMA

NEGRO BUS LINE REJECTED (BUS BOYCOTT)

Negro Bus Line Plan Is Rejected

Herald P.11-A
Tues. 4-3-56
Miami, Fla.

MONTGOMERY, Ala.—(AP)—The Rev. M. L. King Jr., and several other leaders of the Negro boycott against Montgomery City Lines buses were denied city permission Monday to establish and operate an all-Negro bus company.

The delegation, most of whom are under indictment on charges of conspiring to boycott the segregated buses, proposed that a new company "owned and operated by Montgomery Negroes" be licensed to "provide adequate transportation for our people."

City commissioners, who met with the group for nearly 90 minutes, denied the application for a franchise on the grounds that the present bus company is offering "excellent bus service for the entire city."

Most of the earlier issues of the boycott, including seating arrangements and a request that Negro bus drivers be employed, were discussed.

Mayor W. A. Gayle, saying bus revenue from the city as a whole would not support two bus companies, suggested the Negroes request Montgomery City Lines Inc. to operate buses exclusively for them.

Montgomery Bars Negro Bus Line

Herald Tribune
Tues. April 3

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Apr. 2 (AP).—The Rev. M. L. King jr. and several other leaders of the Negro boycott against Montgomery City Lines buses were denied permission today to establish and operate an all-Negro bus company.

The delegation, most of whom are under indictment on charges of conspiring to boycott the segregated buses, proposed that a new company "owned and operated by Montgomery Negroes" be licensed to "provide adequate transportation for our people."

Times 4-3-56

City commissioners, who met with the group for ninety minutes, denied the application for a franchise on th ground that the present bus company is offering "excellent bus service for the entire city."

Mayor W. A. Gayle, saying bus revenue from the city as a whole would not support two bus companies, suggested that Negroes request Montgomery City Lines Inc., to operate buses exclusively for them.

Tribune
Fri. 4-6-56
P. 1
Los Angeles, Calif

THE WOMAN — who caused it all, Mrs. Rosa Parks, Montgomery, Ala. seamstress, whose arrest touched off the famous bus boycott, is welcomed at the airport with Los Angeles' official flower, the Bird of Paradise, by local Naacp figures, Mrs. Marnesba Tackett, right, and Mrs. Ruth Johnson, center.

Mrs. Parks said she left home immediately after the conviction of boycott leader, the Rev. M. L. King, Jr., and there was no indication then of the boycotters' three demands — courtesy, first come-first served seating, and employment, being met by the bus lines, nor of a weakening of purpose by the boycotters. She will speak at an Naacp member rally Sunday at 3:30 at Second Baptist church.

Bus Integration End Is Ordered

Post & Times Herald P. 3

MONTGOMERY, Ala., May 9 (AP)—Circuit Judge Walter B. Jones today ordered Montgomery City Lines to rescind its recent policy of racial integration on city buses.

Granting an injunction requested by the city of Montgomery, Jones directed the bus company and its employes "to comply with and abide by all the provisions of the ordinances of the city of Montgomery and the statutes of Alabama relating to the seating of white and Negro passengers."

Wednesday
May 9, 1956

City and state laws require segregation in all public transportation.

Montgomery City Lines on April 23 instructed its drivers to refrain from enforcing city and state segregation laws, but no actual integration has been reported since then.

Most Negroes are still boycotting the bus line and those who still patronize the buses have continued to take seats in the rear where they customarily sat.

Jones, in a written order, said: "There is no straight-out decision of the Supreme Court of the United States holding that a city or state may not require the separation of the races on buses where carriage of passengers is solely intrastate."

City To Air Appeal Plan On Bus Writ

Advertiser
Thurs. 6-21-56

Commission, Lawyer May Meet During Day On High Court Test

By AL McCONAGHA

Montgomery Adv.

City Atty. Walter Knabe said yesterday he will probably meet with the city commission this morning to decide whether a Federal court injunction against segregation of city buses will be appealed to the U.S. Supreme Court.

382

Commissioner Frank W. Parks said yesterday he thinks the city commission will appeal the injunction issued Tuesday as the "only possible alternative." He said he anticipates a city effort to keep the case in the courts "as long as we can."

STATEMENT QUALIFIED

Parks qualified his statement to say he was not speaking officially for the commission. Mayor W. A. Gayle was reported out of town yesterday afternoon.

A Federal three-judge panel issued a permanent injunction Tuesday ordering the city to abolish segregation laws on Montgomery transportation vehicles. The order was suspended 10 days to allow appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court.

The injunction was decided by the same 2-1 vote by which the panel declared the Montgomery and Alabama laws unconstitutional. If there is no appeal, city and state officials are ordered to see enforcement of the segregation law stopped June 29.

"The court's ruling has put things in a muddle now that a state court (Montgomery Circuit Court) has already enjoined the bus company from desegregation," C. C. Owen, president of the Alabama Public Service Commission said.

Advertiser

Owen said when the decision was handed down June 5 that it would be appealed.

P. 2-A

Alabama Atty. Gen. John Patterson indicated the state will study the legal position before deciding whether to appeal.

Negro attorneys who won the legal battle which came during Montgomery's seven-month-old bus boycott said they were temporarily uncertain of their next move.

Negro Atty. Charles Langford said he could not tell immediately what the next step will be.

The Federal judges said a notice of appeal during the 10-day period would keep the injunction's suspension in effect until a new suspension order can be written to last until the appeal is decided.

Undertakers Give $1,000 To Ala. Group

World P. 1
Tues. 4-11-56
Birmingham, Ala.

CHICAGO —(ANP)— Robert H. Miller, general secretary of the National Negro Funeral Directors Association announced last week that the National Board at its 18th annual meeting in Dallas, Texas, recently contributed $1,000 toward the defense of the ministers and civic leaders who are under indictment for conspiracy to boycott the Montgomery Bus Lines, one of whom is C. W. Lee, resident of Montgomery, and chairman of the board of the association.

World 4-12-56

Lee who is also chairman and treasurer of the Montgomery Improvement Association was unable to attend the board meeting because of the trial, in a message to the association said in part:

"We are determined to fight this ugly thing to the finish, to secure to ourselves what the constitution of our country guarantees as the rights of every citizen."

The more than 150 funeral directors who were guests of the Independent Funeral Directors Association of Texas, also unanimously approved Cleveland, Ohio, as the site for the 19th annual convention to be held in August.

Later in the week, Mr. E. W. Shortridge, chairman of the Executive Committee of the National Negro Funeral Directors Association, made the presentation of the $1,000 to Lee in an open mass meeting in Montgomery, who in turn presented the gift on behalf of the funeral directors, to Dr. M. L. King, president of the Montgomery Improvement Association.

Said Dr. King: "It is the interest from people and organizations like this one which encourages us to continue the struggle for first class citizenship in this democracy."

NEGRO PASTOR AIDED

Asbury Park Press P. 1
Mar. 26, 1956

Bus Boycott Leader Gets New Jersey Funds

ASBURY PARK, N. J., March 25.—(UP)—Clergymen in the North Jersey shore area Sunday supported a fund drive to aid a minister convicted of leading a Negro boycott of buses in Montgomery, Ala.

Approval of the drive also was expressed by Anti-Discrimination Group leaders in the area and by leaders of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and the Civil Liberties Union in New York.

The wife of Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., sent word from Montgomery she would welcome any support readers of the Asbury Park Press might give her husband.

Several hundred dollars was reportedly collected by the churches.

38b 1956

ALABAMA

DONATIONS
MONTGOMERY, ALA. BUS BOYCOTT

CHECK DONATION — Drs. Richard Hackney (L) and J. T. Gill (R) officers for the Atlanta Medical Association, present a $1,000 check to Rev. M. L. King, Sr. to be sent to the Montgomery Improvement Association to help meet any health emergencies arising among Negroes in their bus protest. Rev. King is the father of M. L. King, Jr. one of the leaders on the 87 day old protest against Montgomery buses. — (Perry's Photo)

GRAND JURY ACTION
MONTGOMERY, ALA. BUS BOYCOTT

ALABAMA

38b 1956

TENSE ATMOSPHERE

Advertiser

Grand Jury Action Looming For Others In Bus Boycott

Mon. 2-20-56 P. 1

Montgomery, Ala.

In a tense atmosphere, a grand jury which has already indicted one spokesman for Montgomery's Negro bus boycott may bring charges early this week against other participants.

The 18-man jury, with one Negro among its members is expected to make its final report late today or Tuesday after questioning scores of witnesses in the week-long investigation.

Meanwhile, Mayor W. A. Gayle, proclaiming Brotherhood Week in the Cradle of the confederacy, said "certain events have caused a tension which should not exist."

Gayle, a member of the pro-segregation central Alabama Citizens Council, urged the people to "do everything possible to relieve said tension and live up to the obligations implicit in the brotherhood of man under the fatherhood of God."

EARLY SOLUTION SOUGHT

The mayor and the other two city commissioners, also members of the Citizens Council, sought to settle the anti-segregation boycott in its early stages, but abandoned their efforts last month with a statement that they were "tired of pussyfooting around."

They said they didn't care if the Negroes never ride the buses again.

The boycott began Dec. 5 after a Negro woman, Rosa Parks, was arrested and fined $14 for refusing to move to the colored section of a Montgomery City Lines bus. City and state laws require segregated facilities on all public transportation.

An estimated 75 per cent or more of the Negroes who formerly rode the buses have found other means of tansportation since then. A car pool organized almost with military precision has given rides daily to many of the protesting boycotters.

SUIT FILED

Although the boycott leaders offered at the outset to accept a "first come, first served" segregation arrangement on the bus line, a suit was filed later in U.S. District Court attacking all segregated transportation in Alabama as unconstitutional. No hearing has been set.

Fred D. Gray, 25-year-old Negro attorney who filed the court action in the name of five Negro women, was indicted by the grand jury last Friday on a charge of unlawfully representing one of the women. Arrested Saturday and released on $300 bond, he declined to comment on the charge.

The indictment was based on a statement by Mrs. Jeanetta Reese, one of the five women who signed the petition filed in court. Mrs. Reese told Mayor Gayle in the presence of two newspapermen that she didn't know what she was signing.

Advertiser

ACTION DENOUNCED

Gray insisted at that time that she did know.

P. 2-A

Another leader in the lengthening boycott, Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., denounced the grand jury's action against Gray as "a subtle and insidious attempt" to have the attorney disbarred and thus hinder the cause of racial integration.

Rev. King, pastor of the Dexter Avenue Baptist Church in Montgomery, issued a statement Saturday in Atlanta where he had gone for a speaking engagement.

The clergyman said "50,000 Negroes of Montgomery . . . as well as numerous white Montgomerians of good will" are behind Gray. He expressed confidence the attorney will speedily be acquitted "when this issue comes before fair-minded men in the courts."

If convicted on the indictment, the attorney could be fined $500 and suspended from law practice.

The grand jury, charged by Circuit Judge Eugene Carter to investigate the bus boycott and find out if it violates the law, can return further indictments this week under an old state statute originally aimed at labor disputes.

The anti-boycott law enacted in 1921 and rarely if ever used except in labor strife, makes it unlawful for two or more persons to organize a boycott "without a just cause or legal excuse."

It prohibits any such "combination, conspiracy, agreement, arrangement or understanding" which is aimed at "hindering, delaying or preventing" anyone from conducting a "lawful business."

Maximum penalty is $1,000 fine and six months in jail.

The 12-week-old mass protest against bus segregation has produced several outbursts of violence, but no one has been injured. Rev. King's home was damaged by a dynamite bomb the night of Jan. 30, and 48 hours later another explosion was set off at the home of E. D. Nixon, a former state president of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Earlier in the boycott, some buses were fired on while making their rounds through Negro sections of Montgomery.

PSC Defends Segregation In Boycott Suit Answer

Post-Herald Fri. 4-20-56
Birmingham, Ala.

MONTGOMERY, April 19 (U.P.) —The Public Service Commission today filed answers in Federal District Court to a suit brought by five Negro women charging that state and city segregation laws were unconstitutional.

P. 35

The three-member commission was named defendants in the suit along with the City Commission, Police Chief G. J. Ruppenthal and the Montgomery City Bus Lines.

The PSC, through the attorney general's office, said today in its answers to the suit that:

1. Separate but equal facilities are provided for the white and Negro races on all buses operated wholly in the city of Montgomery.

2. Separation of the races promotes the general welfare of both races and tends to protect each from violence and possible bloodshed.

3. There are no sociological and psychological factors present in this case which would tend to require integration on buses.

4. The general welfare of both races and any sociological and psychological factors present require and demand the separation of the races on buses.

The suit was filed Feb. 1 on behalf of five Negro women by Negro Atty. Fred Gray, who later was indicted on a charge of representing one of the women without her consent.

The City Commission declared the bus company will have to abide by City and State segregation laws if it continues to do business here.

There was still no report of racial mingling on the buses despite the company's integration order. Most Negroes were still boycotting the bus line as they have been for five months, and those who did ride took seats in the rear.

'Can Be Canceled'

Hinting at a court suit to break the recently renewed 10-year bus franchise, Mayor W. A. Gayle said the contract could be canceled "if one party breaks the law." But it would take court action, the Mayor said.

Said Police Commissioner Clyde Sellers, "If the bus company operates in Montgomery, it will have to operate under Montgomery and Alabama laws."

The Commission contends City and State segregation statutes are still valid despite Monday's Supreme Court decision.

A spokesman for National City Lines said his concern does not plan to change its orders for desegregation in Montgomery and other Southern cities where its buses operate.

Attorneys Not Agreed

Government attorneys in Washington are divided in their opinion on what the Supreme Court actually ruled Monday. They said the court may have ruled all bus segregation invalid, the first interpretation given to the decision, or may have merely dismissed an appeal on the grounds that the case had not been finally determined in the lower courts.

(The Supreme Court tersely refused to interfere with a ruling against segregation in a South Carolina case. Some attorneys said the court's action left considerable room for legal maneuvering.

(Knoxville's bus system began operating Wednesday on a desegregated basis.)

Desegregating Bus Company Faces Suit

Courier-Journal
Thurs. 4-26-56
Louisville, Ky.

Montgomery Threatens To Revoke Franchise

P. 7

Montgomery, Ala., April 25 (AP)—Montgomery City Lines today faced the threat of court action to revoke its franchise unless it backs away from its newly announced policy of racial integration.

38b 1956 ALABAMA HOUR OF PRAYER (BOYCOTT

Chicago 'Hour of Prayer' and mass rally set for April 11

Afro-American P.17 Sat. 4-7-56

Baltimore, Md

CHICAGO — Thousands of persons are expected to assemble at the Coliseum, 15th and Wabash, for the Chicago "Hour of Prayer" (next Wednesday) April 11.

In addition, there will be a mass report, meeting at the rally being sponsored by the Chicago Branch of the NAACP.

The rally scheduled is being supported by churches of all denominations, and labor, business, professional, civic, community and fraternal organizations and women's clubs.

* * *

CHICAGO ministers will conduct the "Hour of Prayer" which begins at 7 p.m. The Revs. A. Lincoln James and Archibald J. Carey Jr. are cochairman of the "Hour of Prayer."

Willoughby Abner, president of the Chicago NAACP, will head the mass report meeting which follows the prayer session.

The Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy, one of the indicted Montgomery passive resistance movement leaders, will keynote the rally with a report on how the boycott began and how it expanded.

* * *

ROY WILKINS, wxecutive secretary of the NAACP, will also be present to give a report on the civil rights picture in the nation and present developments in the South.

It was also reported that all citizens have been asked to contribute at least an hour's pay at the meeting. Business establishments were requested to give an hour's profits.

* * *

ALL CONTRIBUTIONS will be divided equally between the Montgomery Improvement Association and the NAACP's national Aid for the South Fund.

The latter organization assists victims of economic repraisals and the former supports the defense for the Montgomery boycott.

National Protest Planned

Courier Sat. 3-3-56 P. 5

NEW YORK—A group of prominent clergymen, led by the Rev. Adam Clayton Powell, has called upon every Negro man, woman, and child to join in a "National Deliverance Day of Prayer" and stop all vocational activity for one hour on March 28 in support of the Montgomery, Ala. bus boycott.

WASHINGTON — The White House says a request by Rep. Adam Clayton Powell concerning the arrests of Negroes in the Montgomery, Ala., bus boycott has been turned over to the Justice Department.

Pittsburgh, Pa.

The "Day of Prayer," as outlined by the Rev. Mr. Powell, calls for one hour of prayer "for deliverance from persecution and for salvation of all humans afflicted with racial prejudice."

A temporary committee has been formed to organize the protest on a nation-wide basis. The committee, composed entirely of ministers, will arrange the details for the gigantic protest. The Rev. Mr. Powell is chairing the group.

Mr. Powell

* * *

MR. POWELL pointed out that a national "Ghandi - type" passive resistance campaign is unnecessary "now" but might be instigated. He added that Negroes should emphasize "Prayer Day" as "a spiritual answer to those people behind the dark curtain in Alabama who have completely tossed aside the laws of our country and the moral laws of God.

"This will demonstrate the spiritual solidarity of Negroes."

Under current plans, mass rallies will be held every Sunday evening in different churches. The first of such rallies was held last Sunday at the Abyssinian Baptist Church. The committee is seeking to enlist all denominations, races, and creeds in support of the plan. Labor unions will be requested to use their influence getting Negroes released for work that day.

All American Negroes are being urged to stop whatever they are doing for one hour between 2 and 3 P. M. on March 28. Mr. Powell said that no Negro man, woman or child should work or attend school between 2 and 3 P. M. on that date.

Mr. Powell noted that although present plans do not call for the use of any passive resistance campaign, but that such a movement, plus an even wider boycott could be used in the days ahead.

* * *

WORKING WITH Mr. Powell are the Rev. O. D. Dempsey, who has been released from his duties at Abyssinian Baptist Church for a five-week period. Other members of the sponsoring committee, at present, are the Rev. Walter P. Offut, chairman of the Baptist Ministers' Conference of Greater New York; the Rev. Sandy F. Ray, president of the Empire Baptist Convention, and the Rev. Irving Golder of the Community Church in downtown New York.

Bishops of the AME Church in Washington, D. C., have been solicited for support.

A tentative budget of $1,500 has been set up with $550 having been set aside for immediate work.

THOSE PRESENT at the founding meeting for the "Day of Prayer" included Atty. Cornelius McDougald, Dr. George Cannon, the Rev. Harry Grant Jones, president of the Greater New York Baptist Ministers Conference; the Rev. M. W. Findley, director of the AMEZ Church public relations bureau; Bishop W. J. Walls, secretary of the Board of Bishops, AMEZ Church; the Rev. A. S. Callender of the Interdenominational Ministers' Conference; Dr. Arthur C. Logan, the Rev. David Licorish of the Abyssinian Baptist Church, the Rev. Asapansa Johnson of the Interdenominational Ministers' Conference, the Rev. Joshua Licorish of the Baptist Ministers' Conference of Greater New York, and the Rev. Shelton Doles, associate secretary of the Department of Evangelism of the National Baptist Convention.

N. O. Ministers Go All Out For Montgomery Cause

Sat. 3-17-56 New Orleans, La.

Orleanians are expected to tax the seating capacity at Union Bethel AME Church, 2321 Thalia, to attend a mass demonstration sponsored by the New Orleans Interdenominational Ministerial Alliance Sunday in observance of a "Day of Prayer" and financial offering and reporting for the bus boycotting citizens of Montgomery, Ala.

Bishop Howard T. Primm is to be the principal speaker. Remarks will also be made by the Rev. A. L. Davis, Alliance president, and several other distinguished civic and religious leaders, according to the Rev. Morris Burrell, chairman of the program.

The third Sunday date had been set during the passage of a resolution by the organization during a recent meeting. An estimated 2,000 or more sympathetic citizens are expected to witness the ceremony and observance which gets underway at 3 p.m.

The Rev. Mr. Burrell said that many churches will observe the action taken by the organization during the 11 a.m. services. And will make all reports through their ministers and interested members during the afternoon session.

Music will be furnished by the host church, pastored by the Rev. G. N. Collins. Rev. Burrell said that because of the shortness of time, other church choirs were not called to participate.

The backing of the "Day of Prayer" and financial offering has gained momentum throughout the city during the past week. Various organizations and individuals have launched special drives for additional funds to aid in the Montgomery miscarriage of justice.

Insuranceman Lawrence Doublet, Jr., stated this week that he has had tremendous success in soliciting serviceable shoes and clothing earmarked for Montgomery.

In a recent release, Congressman Charles C. Diggs, Jr., (D.-Mich.) urged that in connection with taking time off for prayer, during the specified period, "Negroes who are eligible should go to their respective city halls, in those communities where they are permitted, and register to vote. In those communities where they are not permitted to vote, they should be urged to take the time to fill out an application for membership with the NAACP. or if they are already members, they should contribute at least a dollar to a special fund to help finance the fight against these latest uprisings. Of course, this latter idea could apply also to those who are registering to vote, assuring Negroes of "a stronger voice in the councils of both parties in support of pending civil rights legislation."

Congressman Adam C. Powell, Jr., (D.-N. Y.), and many other national leaders have called upon Negroes to join in an hour of prayer as a means of giving moral support to Negroes in Montgomery who have been waging since last December a successful boycott against local segregation policies applying to bus companies, and, as well, to Negro leaders in the boycott who have been subjected to wholesale arrests recently by Montgomery officials in an effort to break it.

In announcing support of the "Day of Prayer," the executive committee of the board of trustees of the National Urban League said "that it should not be limited to members of any one racial group. We urge our colleagues in the Urban League movement everywhere, and all other Americans of good will, Negro and white, to join in this spontaneous expression of support on behalf of this cause of simple justice. It is our fervent hope that such a universal rally on the part of sympathetic Americans lifting their hearts and minds in a united appeal to our Creator, will hasten the day when justice and good will prevail in all parts of this country."

The NAACP will continue its support and legal assistance in "all phases" of the current effort to end racial discrimination on Montgomery city buses, an official of the NAACP asserted last Sunday at Montgomery.

Addressing an NAACP meeting in Bethel Baptist Church, Gloster B. Current praised the leaders of the bus protest movement and their "unprecedented" method of non-violent passive resistance.

He called passive resistance "in keeping with the best traditions of Christianity and democracy."

Mr. Current, NAACP director of branches, predicted that "you will win your fight to ride unsegregated because the law is on your side and God walks beside you."

Chicago Sets Hour Of Prayer

Daily world

Sat. 4-7-56 P4

CHICAGO—(ANP)—The Chicago NAACP is expecting "thousands of persons" to attend a mass meeting and "hour of prayer" in connection with the Montgomery bus boycott on April 11.

Atlanta, Ga.

Willoughby Abner, president of the Chicago NAACP, has called upon all Chicago citizens to attend the meeting.

Harlem Praying in Sympathy for Alabama Bus Boycott

World Telegram 3-28-56 P.8

Services were held in some of Harlem's Protestant churches today as part of a "National Deliverance Day of Prayer" being observed in sympathy for the Montgomery, Ala., bus boycott.

But the big turnouts are expected tonight in Harlem's numerous churches, large and small, and at the big rally at Manhattan Center. Similar prayer meetings were scheduled at churches in cities throughout the North. The Manhattan Center gathering is expected to draw 12,000.

The Protestant Council of the City of New York has indorsed the day of prayer but did not direct individual churches to plan to organize special services.

Twenty-five Negro ministers, matching the number arrested in Montgomery, passed out 30,000 lapel cards at main subway entrances in Manhattan, Brooklyn and the Bronx.

The National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People in Los Angeles said several hundred churches will stay open during the day. The Los Angeles City Council, California's governor and various labor organizations have indorsed the movement.

In Washington, Chairman W. H. Jernagin said 18 pastors "of different races and denominations will participate by praying for the deliverance of colored people from the stigma of second-class citizens." Bishop George W. Baber of the Fourth Episcopal District of the African Methodist Church in Detroit said 3400 to 4000 will attend services Good Friday night at the Ebenezer AME Church.

In the South, however, clergymen indicated there would be few special services in observance of the day.

NEGROES PROTEST MASS BUS ARREST

Times P.11-C

'National Deliverance Day of Prayer' Is Urged Here—

Ministers Ask U. S. Action

Sat. 2-25-56

Negro religious leaders took the first steps yesterday to organize dramatic protests against the wholesale arrests of the men and women who led the bus boycott in Montgomery, Ala.

Among the developments in that direction were:

¶In New York, an emergency meeting of Negro church leaders agreed on a "national deliverance day of prayer" with a one-hour work stoppage for March 28. The passive resistance protest was called for by Representative Ada mClayton Powell Jr., Democrat of Manhattan and pastor of the Abyssinian Methodist Church.

¶In Baltimore, Md., 300 ministers of the African Methodist Episcopal Church protested the "humiliation, arrest and persecution" of Negroes and called for Federal intercession.

¶In Columbus, Ohio, twenty-six ministers will join a fund-raising rally tomorrow.

¶In Washington, the Council of Bishops of the African Methodist Episcopal Church will meet in special session today to consider the plight of Negro ministers in the South.

Work Stoppage Planned

The plan for the day of prayer called for a mass work stoppage of Negroes between 2 and 3 P. M. School children would be expected to absent themselves from classes during that hour, but firemen, policemen and hospital attendants would be permitted to remain on their pobs.

Representative Powell, pastor of the Abyssinian Methodist Church, said the protest against what was happening behind "the dark curtain of Alabama" might become nation-wide. In addition to prayer and work stoppage, the Negroes, he said, might enter on periods of fasting to dramatize their protest.

The "national deliverance day of prayer" scheduled for Wednesday, March 28, in this city are to be preceded by daily one-hour prayer sessions and mass meetings in key Negro churches starting next week.

The Rev. O. D. Dempsey, of the Baptist Ministers' Conference of Greater New York, is directing preparation of events that may conclude with a Madison Square Garden mass meeting.

"We are ashamed as Americans that at a time when our Government is striving to gain friends abroad, such conditions exist at home," a resolution adopted by 300 ministers of the African Methodist Episcopal meeting in Baltimore, declared.

Government Gets Plea

The clergy, represinting 150 Negro churches in Maryland and the District of Columbia, asked the Federal Government to "exhaust every effort to give relief to these citizens whose civil rights have been violated."

Bishop Sherman L. Greene of Atlanta, Ga., senior Bishop of the African Methodist Episcopal Church, announced that the Council of Bishops would meet in closed session in the nation's capital today to act on the issues raised b ythe boycott. Bishop D. Ward Nichols, secretary of the council, is scheduled to leave on March 9 for the Soviet Union with eight other Protestant leaders. The Baltimore meeting had appealed to the Council of Bishops for action.

All churches in Columbus were asked to offer special prayers and take up special collections tomorrow in connection with the rally and prayer meeting in support of the Alabama Negroes under arrest.

Twenty-six ministers will parade before the rally to honor the twenty-six ministers arrested in Montgomery.

Pray, lose jobs

P.1 Afro-American 3-14-56

CHINO, Calif. — Nine persons, who took an hour out to join in the observance of "National Day of Prayer" were fired Thursday by the Pacific Automotive Corporation, which rebuilds military planes.

Baltimore, Md.

The men have appealed their discharge to their International Machinists union and the NAACP. Sixteen other colored workers remained on their jobs. The prayer was in support of the Montgomery bus boycotters.

Interracial Rally Marks Bus Boycott Prayer Day

Herald Tribune P.14 New York

Church and public meetings throughout the country yesterday observed the "National Deliverance Day of Prayer" organized last month as a protest against the arrest of Negro church leaders for their part in the Montgomery, Ala., bus boycott.

Courier 3-29-56

More than 5,000 persons gathered at Manhattan Center and in the Grand Ballroom of the Hotel New Yorker at 8 o'clock last night for an interracial, interdenominational meeting sponsored by Rep. Adam Clayton Powell jr., D., N. Y., who is pastor of the 15,000-member Abyssinian Baptist Church.

Central features in the schedule for the two-hour meeting were seven separate Minutes of Meditation and Prayer led by seven clergymen of different faiths and denominations, and a report on the situation in Montgomery by E. D. Nixon, treasurer of the Montgomery Improvement Association which directed the boycott.

In Chicago, an estimated 28,000 persons attended prayer meetings during the day, primarily in the city's 300 Negro Baptist churches. A rally in the Chicago Coliseum is scheduled for April 11. Members of the United Packinghouse Workers Union in that city paused from their jobs for five minutes yesterday to pray in protest against segregation.

Official notice was taken of the movement in California, where Gov. Goodwin J. Knight proclaimed yesterday as a day of prayer, and in Massachusetts where the Legislature voted to halt work at noon to pray.

However, in Birmingham, Ala., Boyd Campbell, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, declared that pro-integration movements have brought progress in Southern race relations to a "jarring halt." He predicted that Southern labor would remain loyal to the traditions of segregation.

The bus boycott began Dec. 5 in an attempt to provide seating arrangements for Negro passengers equivalent to those available to white passengers. Subsequently, ninety leaders of the movement were arrested for violating a 1921 Alabama law against boycott. One of them has been convicted so far and the other trials are awaiting the result of his appeal.

Labor Unions Seem Passive About Negroes 'Prayer Day'

Post Herald P.4 Birmingham, Ala. Jan. 2-28-56

Labor unions in Jefferson County are making few if any plans to block or aid Negro members who may observe the March 28 national 'prayer day."

New York Congressman Adam Clayton Powell called for the hour of prayer at 2 p.m. to aid Negroes in their various attempts to overcome racial reg regation.

Union spokesmen generally said the matter wasn't one with which they would have to deal.

J. B. Higdon, grievance committee member of Local 2122, U. S. Steel Workers, said the union doesn't condone work stoppages.

He pointed out that the union has a work contract with the company.

However, he said, wildcat—or unauthorized—strikes occasionally develop without union sanction.

So far, Higdon said, the union has taken no position on the prayer day matter but Higdon said the union probably would not aprove.

The state AFL had no comment.

James W. Batles, state CIO secretary-treasurer, said his group has made no plans.

Another union spokesman said if Negro members observe the prayer day, they wil do it as individuals.

The union, he explained, has no authority either to prevent their participation or to encourage them.

'The matter wil not be handled by us," he declared.

Files Protest On Prayer Day Dismissal

World P.7 Fri. 4-13-56 B'ham, Ala.

CHINO, Calif.—(ANP)—Nine Negro aircraft workers here have filed a complaint with their union protesting their dismissal last Wednesday after they walked off their jobs for an hour in connection with a national prayer movement.

Percy Strickland, spokesman for the group, said the firings will be taken to the International Association of Machinists and also will be reported to the NAACP.

Sympathizers of Bus Boycotters Have Day of Prayer

State Times Little Rock, Ark. P.8 Fri. 4-6-56

The last Sunday in March, opportunity was given to Montgomery sympathizers to make special contribution to the prosecuted boycotters of Montgomery. The occasion was a project of the Interdenominational Alliance of which Reverend Roland Smith, pastor of First Baptist church, is president.

Wednesday, March 28, was designated as a day of prayer for invoking the blessings of God upon our leaders and friends who are fighting in our behalf.

The Little Rock branch of the NAACP made a special offering to the Montgomery boycotters.

Associated Press Wirephoto

MASS ARRAIGNMENT IN ALABAMA: Crowd outside Montgomery County Courthouse yesterday. Many of these persons were among eighty-nine Negroes arraigned on eleven indictments returned Tuesday by grand jury in bus boycott.

Photo by Palumbo.

Mrs. Gladys Valentine (left) of 477 W. 147th St., and Mary E. Finger praying in St. Philip's Episcopal Church, 214 W. 134th St.

Leaders Pray For Deliverance From The Evils Of Injustice

World, B'ham, Ala.
Fri. 4-6-56 p.4

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — (ANP) — Thousands of Negro and white sympathizers in cities from Boston to Atlanta and Los Angeles, to Honolulu paused for quiet prayer last Wednesday on behalf of Montgomery bus boycotters.

The prayer meetings were part of a "National Deliverance Day of Prayer" proclaimed by Negro leaders for "deliverance from the evils of racial prejudice."

Protestants, Roman Catholics and Jews participated.

The Massachusetts Legislature suspended activity for an hour at noon as an 'expression of sympathy' for the Montgomery bus boycotters, and a gubernatorial proclamation in California designated Wednesday as a day of prayer.

The demonstration originally was conceived as a brief nation-wide work-stoppage accompanied by prayer. However, the work-stoppage idea was discarded. There was no estimate of the total number taking part across the country.

Here in Montgomery, Negro churches kept their doors open all day so that anyone could offer prayers at his convenience. There were no special prayer meetings scheduled. Many of the Negro ministers who were indicted by a grand jury for violating Alabama's anti-boycott law were out of the city in connection with prayer services elsewhere.

The largest single meeting was held in New York, where more than 5,000 persons overflowed Manhattan Center. The grand ballroom of the Hotel New Yorker accommodated the overflow.

The Rev. Adam Clayton Powell Jr., New York clergyman and congressman, addressed the meeting. He had initiated the "National Deliverance Day of Prayer."

An estimated 50,000 persons attended prayer services in more than 300 Chicago churches. And 17,000 members of the United Packinghouse Workers of America, AFL-CIO, paused on their jobs for five minutes to join in prayer in "protest against segregation."

In Boston, noon services had the support of Protestant, Catholic and Jewish leaders. Episcopal Bishop Norman B. Nash told 800 worshippers that "discrimination exists right here in Boston."

Expect Thousands At Mass Rally And Prayer Hour

World, B'ham, Ala.
Fri. 4-6-56 p.8

CHICAGO — Chicago citizens by the thousands, from all walks of life all races, colors and nationalities will pack the Chicago Coliseum, 15th St. and Wabash Ave., at 7 P. M. on Wednesday April 11 for the giant city wide "Hour of Prayer" and mass rally in support of the heroic struggle of 50,000 Negroes in Montgomery, Alabama against the Jim Crow bus line and the embattled Negroes of all sections of the South in their fight for justice, first-class citizenship and freedom.

The meeting under the auspices of the Chicago Branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, supported by numerous church, labor, business, professional, civic, community, fraternal and other organizations will start with an "Hour of Prayer" service conducted by the ministry of Chicago. Representatives all denomination and religious groups in the city will participate. Rev. A. Lincoln James and Rev. Archibald J. Carey, Jr., will co-chair the "Hour of Prayer."

Musical offerings will be by the robed choirs of Chicago churches under the direction of J. Wesley Jones.

Star attraction at the mass report meeting following the "Hour of Prfayer" will be Rev. Ralph D. Abehnathy, one of the two foremost leaders of the boycott and vice-president of the Montgomery Improvement Association which has conducted the mass protest movement against segregation and discrimination on the buses.

It was the 29-year-old Rev. Abernathy, who originated the bus boycotters slogan as they walk many miles rather than continue the humiliation of Jim Crow and Brayality on the buses, "We'll walk with God."

Abernathy Addresses Huge Rally

Courier

$8,000 Raised in L. A. For Montgomery Boycott

Sat. 4-7-56 Pittsburgh, Pa.

P. 3

LOS ANGELES—A rousing "prayer-protest" rally here, featuring the Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy of Montgomery as speaker, raised a gross of $8,000 for Montgomery Negroes in their boycott of city buses.

While 8,000 listened, the Montgomery pastor declared that the boycott against the city bus company was the climax of twenty years of abuse and mistreatment at the hands of bus drivers.

He also pledged that the Montgomery Improvement Association, of which he is chairman of the negotiating committee, has no intention of stopping the boycott until justice is secured.

The successful meeting was co-sponsored by the Southwest Ministers Pacific Conference and the local NAACP.

* * *

THE REV. MR. Abernathy said his "brothers in Alabama" were not walking for their health, but for freedom, and added "We are not tired yet." He said their long walk will continue until the victory is won.

The militant speaker said: "We are tired of seeing our wives, mothers and daughters forced to give up seats — even the rear seats of buses—to white men. We are tired of being dragged from the buses and thrown into jail.

"The Southern way of life is crumbling," he said. "The Southern white man is sick. And we are going to receive our rights or die fighting for them," he promised.

"Before we will be slaves," the Rev. Mr. Abernathy said, "we will be buried in our graves."

* * *

HE SAID his followers in Alabama knew that they were not walking alone but that our people in cities like Detroit and Los Angeles were walking with them.

"They may destroy our leaders," he said, "but they cannot stop the movement. All we want is to be given justice. We are not leaving Alabama. Freedom must ring from shore to shore," Abernathy concluded.

Another feature was a speech by President T. M. Chambers of the conference, who called the NAACP "the most American organization in America for law enforcement and upholding the Constitution."

Paper Will Pay Fine For Pastor

Daily Worker Atlanta, Ga.

Sun. 3-25-56

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — A new Jersey newspaper has launched a fund drive to pay the fine and court costs of Rev. Martin Luther King, one of the leaders in the mass boycott of segregated buses, it was disclosed here Saturday.

The Asbury Park Press started its campaign with a front page story and editorial by Editor Wayne D. McMurray.

Rev. King, pastor of Dexter Avenue Baptist Church and president of the Montgomery Improvement Association, was fined $500 Thursday after a 4 -day trial on charges of conspiring to boycott city buses

Editor McMurray sent this telegram to Rev. King:

"We of the Asbury Park Press, outraged at the conviction of a fellow American for asserting a right our Consititution guarantees to all want to help you in your fight for justice. We are starting a fund drive among our readers for money to pay your fine and court costs.

"The Press itself is contributing $50. Checks will be drawn in your name and forwarded to you, or to your attorneys if yu prefer."

The New Jersey editor said the goal of the Press drive is $1,000, and any money collected above that will go to the pastor to help him pay his legal costs.

Mr. McMurray also explained that if eventually the clergyman should be acquitted and the fine and costs revoked, Rev. King would have the use of the money to pay his legal fees.

The editorial in the Asbury Press said segregation was "un-American and undemocratic," and declared that Negroes in Montgomery argued "Justifiable that they should be allowed to sit where they choose on city buses...."

N. J. Starts drive to pay boycott leader's fine, costs

News P. 23-A Sun. 3-25-56

MONTGOMERY, Ala., March 24—(AP)—As Negroes continued a mass boycott of segregated buses, a New Jersey newspaper launched a fund drive to pay the fine and court costs of a Negro clergyman convicted of leading the boycott.

The Asbury Park Press started its campaign with a Page 1 story and editorial by Editor Wayne D. McMurray.

The Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., was fined $500 Thursday after a four-day trial on charge of conspiring to boycott city buses.

A spokesman for Montgomery City Lines, Inc., said Friday that "There might have been a few more" Negroes patronizing the busline than there have been in the days preceding King's trial.

The Asbury Park editor said the goal of The Press drive is $1000. . . ."

'Walk Together Children'

Weekly Sun. 3-3

NEW Orleans citizens last week gave a clear cut demonstration that they have matured, have come of age concerning the fight for first-class citizenship with all of its ingredients which include justice, fair play, equality and opportunity. That was the impression displayed here last Sunday when more than 2,500 persons swarmed into and outside Union Bethel Church in a solemn afternoon of prayer to lift an offering (over $3,500) to assist the bus boycotting citizens of Montgomery, Alabama. If there was any doubt of what was uppermost in the minds of those present, it certainly came to light before the afternoon was over.

New Orleans, La.

The huge gathering was treated to one of the most far-reaching morale building and soul-stirring appeals witnessed in years, according to observers. The Rev. Abraham Lincoln Davis, Jr., the principal speaker and president of the sponsoring Interdenominational Ministerial Alliance, rose mightily to the occasion. He, too, like Negro ministers throughout the Southern States, warned against using violence in the fight to lift the shackles of "Jimcrowism" from the weary shoulders of the Negro. Citing the importance of the effective bus boycott and what it means to other Negro citizens, he declared that "we are going to fight on our knees and with the dollar bill" to secure the only things that the Negro wants — opportunity, justice, education, and the dignity that goes hand in hand with our professsed democratic concepts.

Sun. 3-31-56

Last Sunday was noteworthy and significant in that it proved that Negro Orleanians are ready to unify and as the old spiritual says "Walk together children". Now is the time to "stand up and be counted" in this trip across the "burning sands" to the day when we can lift the "parental, oppressive" yoke holding us back with the saying, "The Time Ain't Ripe". The sooner that we realize the strength there is in "WALKING TOGETHER" for the ballot and first-class citizenship, the quicker the positive action can begin.

With a great deal of pride we salute this new type of Negro citizen being born in New Orleans today. It is now that we, young and old, must re-dedicate ourselves, join hands and stroll down this lane together toward full realization of equal opportunity for ALL—which has been denied us too long by cheap, race-baiting and brainwashing politicians who have gained control through mass exploitation of ALL races.

Bus Boycott Fund Now Totals $1143

Call P. 4 Fri. 4-27-56 Kansas City, Mo.

The local brach of the NAACP eports the following additional contributions to the Montgomery bus boycott fund: Jones Rental Service, $5; Edward Kennedy, $1; employes of Grant Renne and Sons, $7; St. John AME church, $5; Morning Star Baptist church, $21; Ward Chapel AME church, Paola, Kas., $13; Phyllis Wheatley Art and Charity club, $5.

The branch also announced this week that any further contributions made will be sent to New York without further public announcement or acknowledgment.

To date Kansas City churches and individuals have contributed $1,143.05, all of which has been sent to the New York office for the NAACP for use in connection with the Montgomery bus case.

CONTRIBUTIONS
MONTGOMERY, ALA. BUS BOYCOTT

Reactions Mixed Over 'Day of Prayer'

Flood of Dollars Rolling In to Aid Bus Boycotters

Courier Sat. 3-10-56 Pittsburgh, Pa.

P.4

(Special to The Courier)

MONTGOMERY, Ala.—Inspired by the magnificent stand of Montgomery's Negro population in support of the bus boycott leadership, American citizens are responding to the crusade with a flood of dollars which will add needed financial strength.

The Rev. M. L. King of this city's First Baptist Church told The Courier that over $25,000 has been donated to the boycott by its sympathizers.

The Rev. Mr. King asserted, "We are more determined than ever to carry on this campaign in an orderly, non-violent manner. We will continue on our way in the same Christian manner that we have in the past."

The Rev. Mr. King stated that the boycott is still just as effective as it has been.

* * *

OVER 100 of Montgomery's leading Negro citizens are scheduled to go on trial on March 19 on charges accruing from their activities in the boycott.

A capacity audience jammed and packed the First Baptist Church last week during another mass meeting.

The Montgomery Improvement Association is hiring an office staff and an office secretary. The car pools are currently operating on a budget of $3,000 per week.

Over the rest of the nation, reaction has been mixed towards Representative Adam Clayton Powell's proposal for a nation-wide work stoppage and hour of prayer on March 28.

* * *

THE INTERNATIONAL Denominational Alliance of Amarillo, Tex., endorsed the National Day of Praper proposal by a vote of six to one. The lone dissenter, the Rev. John A. Wills, said, "My church is open to anyone who wants to come pray on the day of pray. I'm going fishing, and I'll be fishing then. I don't want any part of it." He called for a "common sense" approach. The Rev. Mr. Wills pastors the Wyatt Memorial Presbyterian Church.

The Rev. R. H. Hines, retired Baptist minister, asserted, "I don't know whether our people can afford to stop work for an hour or not. But even if we have to go along holding onto the plow while we pray, I think we should endorse the plan for prayer."

The group did not vote on the work-stoppage proposal.

* * *

IN JERSEY CITY, N. J., the Board of Education is weighing a proposal which came from a civic association calling for school children to be dismissed early on March 28 to join in a protest prayer against the Montgomery arrest of boycott leaders.

In Miami, Fla., the National Baptist Convention's president, Dr. Joseph Jackson, asserted that the one-hour work stoppage would amount to a nation-wide economic boycott and for that reason his organization was against the proposal. However, Dr. Jackson said that he agreed with the prayer idea.

He said, "Calling a halt to work is not the Christian traditions."

The CME's meeting in Washington, issued a statement commending "the Negro citizens of Montgomery, Ala., for their united stand and in the matter of resentment to the effort to deject them and to expect them to accept less than what is their constitutional right in the use of public carriers."

Thirteen other Negro Bishops called upon President Eisenhower to intervene in the boycott dispute urging that his power be used against the "tragic persecution of innocent Americans" in Montgomery.

Boycott-hit bus line gets contributions

News p. 2 Birmingham, Ala.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., March 9 — (AP) — Mayor W. A. Gayle said yesterday any contributions would be welcomed to help city buses out of a financial problem brought on by a Negro boycott over segregated seating.

He made the statement after announcing that Sunday service will be discontinued March 11 on 12 of the 14 city bus routes because the passenger load on Sunday hasn't warranted continued operations.

Bus service on weekdays won't be affected by the Sunday curtailment. Only the bus routes to Maxwell AFB and Gunter AFB will continue to operate Sunday.

Fri. 3-9-56

GAYLE SAID he received a $55 money order from an anonymous group of 53 persons in Atlanta to be used in the "valiant struggle to maintain segregation in city buses."

An unsigned letter accompanying it said the Atlanta group is working to promote additional support "of your cause" in the belief "the struggle in Montgomery . . . will act as a predecessor of future segregation issues in the South."

The mayor said he also received a $1 check from Atlanta, adding that such contributions would be "welcomed" but should be mailed direct to the bus company.

Since the boycott began last Dec. 5, the company has discontinued service along most predominantly Negro routes and has hiked fares from 10 cents to 15 cents.

UNOFFICIAL SOURCES estimate the prolonged-protest movement has cut the bus company's revenue as much as 50 per cent. Spokesmen for the Montgomery City Lines won't give any figure.

In another development yesterday, an amendment was filed in U. S. District Court to an anti-segregation suit, adding three additional defendants and removing the name of one Negro woman originally listed as a party to the action.

Negro Atty. Fred D. Gray, a legal spokesman for Negro bus boycotters here, changed the suit to add the three members of the Alabama Public Service Commission to the list of defendants that already included Mayor W. A. Gayle and the other two members of the City Commission .

The name of Mrs. Jeanetta Reese, who has denied giving Gray permission to file the suit, was stricken from the lists of plaintiffs.

GRAY WAS INDICTED for unlawful practice on the basis of Mrs. Reese's statement. But the case was dismissed in Circuit Court last Friday when the state admitted it did not have jurisdiction.

The suit attacks constitutionality of the state and city laws requiring segregation on buses.

Seek $25,000 to aid Alabama bus boycott

Baltimore, Md. Sat. 3-2-56

Los Angeles, Calif.

Miss Autherine Lucy, courageous, embattled University of Alabama coed, who had been both ordered readmitted by the court, and expelled by the university, all in 24 hours this week, has been invited to Los Angeles to address a protest rally Mar. 27 at Olympic auditorium, which will try to raise $25,000 for the Montgomery, Ala. bus boycott.

The rally will be held under auspices of the Southwest Pacific Ministers Emergency Committee to Aid Montgomery, and it has been endorsed by the local branch Naacp, whose president, Thomas G. Neusom, and board chairman, the Rev. Maurice A. Dawkins, are arranging the meeting, along with the Rev. T. M. Chambers, president of the Interdenominational Ministerial Alliance.

The money will be sent directly to the Montgomery Improvement ass'n., which is conducting the bus boycott, a joint statement by the three men said this week. The boycott, in progress since Dec. 5, has cost $20,000 to date, principally for a car pool to drive Negroes to work.

L.A. Calif.

The local Naacp said further that it is collecting money for Montgomery relief, and asked that funds sent to its office for that purpose, be clearly identified as such.

The rally will take the place of the nationwide "work stoppage" which was proposed last Saturday by Congressman Adam Clayton Powell, to protest the mass arrests of 90 Alabama leaders, including 24 ministers.

Instead, the local leaders urged that a "half day's pay" be donated at the rally to the cause, asserting that "prayers and financial aid will help more than work stoppage."

The leaders said this met with the approval of Rep. Powell, who said that he was misquoted anyway by the national wire services and had not really proposed a work stoppage, but hourly prayer for the Montgomery martyrs.

Sponsors of the rally have devised a slogan for use in connection with the rally, "Half day's pay to pave the way for the walking crusade to equality."

Trial of the Alabama leaders, who were indicted by a Montgomery grand jury for "creating racial tension" will begin Mar. 28. Although 113 indictments were voted, some of them were duplications and only 90 leaders were arrested.

Included was Mrs. Rosa Parks, Montgomery seamstress, whose arrest for refusing to move to the rear of a bus and give a white man her seat, touched off the boycott, also, P. M. Blair, 'Mayor' of the city's Negro community, and James Parks, principal of the Negro high school.

Montgomery Boycott Aid Asked by Ministers

Chi. Defender 3-2-56 P.16

The International Ministerial Alliance, a Negro ministers' group, has appealed for "moral and financial support" for their clergymen in Montgomery, Ala.

One hundred ministers unanimously indorsed a move to help the pastors who are taking a leading part in the Montgomery bus boycott.

Washington

The proposal was made by the Rev. Dr. William H. Jernagin, pastor of Mount Carmel Baptist Church.

D.C.

Dr. Jernagin will head a committee composed of representatives from three Negro ministerial groups.

The committee was instructed to promote a March 28 Nationwide Day of Prayer.

Howard U Group Aids Alabamans

Washington Post Washington, D.C.

A mass meeting of some 400 students and faculty members at Howard University formed an organization, Wheels for Montgomery, and raised about $100 yesterday to send to the Montgomery (Ala.) Improvement Association in its legal fight for persons arrested there in a bus boycott.

Post 3-26-56

Dr. Marie D. Gadsden, spokesman for the group, said it will continue to raise funds for the Montgomery organization.

Named chairman of the local group was Dr. John Lovell, English professor, with two students, Harold Bell and Samuel Banks, named cochairmen.

38b 1956 ALABAMA

BUS BOYCOTT. MONTGOMERY, ALA.
POLICIES ON CAR POOL DRIVERS INSURED
LLOYDS INSURANCE FIRM- LONDON, ENGLAND

Lloyds Insures Boycotters

Afro-American

By RUFUS WELLS

PETERSBURG, Va.---Lloyds of London, one of the world's largest insurance firms, has issued policies on car pool drivers in the Montgomery, Ala., bus boycott, Dr. Martin Luther King declared today.

The Montgomery Improvement Association, sponsors of the boycott, arranged the coverage with the London firm after local insurance firms cancelled policies on some vehicles used in the car pool.

The cancellations were believed to be another effort to break the back of the 10-month-old boycott.

Baltimore, Md.

INTERVIEWED at Mt. Olivet Baptist Church where he was kick-off speaker at the NAACP State Convention, Dr. King said:

Sat. 10-13-56

"Our drivers are now covered by Lloyds of London. We don't expect any more insurance problems."

The insurance cancellations were revealed last month by the Rev. Robert Graetz, pastor of Trinity Luthern Church, who has been associated with the boycott sponsors.

The Rev. Mr. Graetz, white, said the practice had been going on since January and owners constantly were seeking new insurance from other sources.

* * *

"IT HAS BEEN a cat-and-mouse game from the start but it has not cut into the operation of the pool to an extent which threatens its immediate closing," he said.

"It has been a matter of keeping cars in reserve and when one is put out of commission by loss of insurance, putting into service another which is insured," Rev. Graetz declared.

However, the car pool is now operating at full strength under protection of policies issued by the world's largest underwriters who provide insurance of almost every kind.

UNDER Alabama law car drivers must be insured for $11,000 to cover any injuries or damage resulting from accidents, or provide an equivalent cash responsibility.

Daily World
Atlanta, Ga.
Thurs. 5-17-56
p. 1

BEAUTICIANS DONATE CHECK TO MONTGOMERY SITUATION AT STATE CONVENTION - Shown above is Mrs. M. L. King, Sr., Mother of Rev. M. L. King, Jr., receiving a check from Mrs. Ella R. Martin, State President. Witnessing the presentation above is Mr. N. H. Bronner, State Public Relation Director, and Miss M. M. Shanks, State Treasurer. At the recently held State Convention in Brunswick, beauticians of the Georgia State Beauty Culturist League, Inc. unanimously voted for contributing the $100.00 to be presented to Rev. M. L. King, Jr. to be used for the great cause being fought for in Montgomery, Alabama under the leadership of Dr. King regarding the bus situation. — (Perry's Photo)

Afro-American P. 1
Sat. 4-14-56

Baltimore, Md.

$1,000 TO BOYCOTT FUND—Frank L. Stanley, center, president of Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity presents the Rev. M. L. King Jr., right, a check for $1,000. Others are James E. Huger, secretary; Lewis O. Swingler, southern vice president; Arthur D. Shores, Robert Carter and Jerry Hall who, along with Fred D. Hall, Edmund Rogan, Odell Billingsly, Charles Langford and C. Eubank Tucker attorneys defended the Rev. Mr. King.

Fund for Boycott Chief Tops Goal

Atlanta Telegram
3-28-56
p. 1

By the United Press

ASBURY PARK, March 28.—The Asbury Park Evening Press fund drive to pay the fine of the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. went over the top today as contributions poured in from coast to coast.

Wayne McMurray, editor and publisher of the Press, said the drive would continue "until it peters out." He said the contributions received up to this morning totaled $1038.

He said money had been received from California, New York, Florida, Arizona and Massachusetts as well as from throughout New Jersey.

An original goal of $1000 had been set to pay the fine of $500, costs and other expenses incurred by Mr. King, 27, in his conviction of conspiring to boycott segregated buses in Montgomery.

Funeral Directors Aid Montgomery Civil Rights Fighters

Pittsburgh Courier
4-28-56
p. 1

CHICAGO, ILL.— Robert H. Miller, general sectrtary of the National Negro Funeral Directors Association announced today that the National Board at their 18th annual meeting recently held in Dallas, Texas, contributed $1,000 toward the defense of the eighty nine ministers and civic leaders who are under indictment for conspiracy to boycott the Montgomery Bus Lines, one of whom is C. W. Lee, resident of Montgomery, Alabama and chairman of the board of the association.

Lee who is also chairman and treasurer of the Montgomery Improvement Ass'n. was unable to attend the Board meeting because of the trial in a message to the association said in part, "We are determined to fight this ugly thing to finish, to securt to ourselves what the constitution of our country guarantees as the rights of every citizen."

The more than 150 funeral directors who were guests of the Independent Funeral Directors Association of Texas, also unaniously approved Cleveland, Ohio as the cite for the 19th annual convention to be held in August.

Later in the week, W. E. Shortridge, chairman of the Executive committee of the National Negro Funeral Directors Association made the presentation of the $1,000 to Mr. Lee in an open mass meeting in Montgomery whoin turn presented the gift on behalf of the funeral directors, to Dr. M. L. King, Jr. president of the Montgomery Improvement Association. The thunderous applause from the throng of people present evidenced the joy of acceptance.

Said Dr. King, "It is the interest om people and organizations like this one which encourages us to continue the struggle for first class citizenship in this democracy."

More Gifts To Alabama Bus Fund

Kansas City, Mo.
p. 4
3-23-56

A total of $1,002.88 has been received so far by the Kansas City branch of the NAACP from churches and individuals for the Montgomery, Ala., bus protest fund.

Churches reporting this week included:

Olive Street Church of God in Christ, $11; Highland Avenue Baptist church, $12; Fellowship Baptist church, $12.50; St. Paul's Presbyterian church, $23.91; Bethel AME church, $120.42 and Emanuel Baptist church, $17.

Undertakers Give $1,000 To Ala. Group

Daily world
Sun. 4-8-56
Atlanta, Ga.

CHICAGO —(ANP)— Robert H. Miller, general secretary of the National Negro Funeral Directors Association announced last week that the National Board at its 18th annual meeting in Dallas, Texas, recently contributed $1,000 toward the defense of the ministers and civic leaders who are under indictment for conspiracy to boycott the Montgomery Bus Lines, one of whom is C. W. Lee, resident of Montgomery, and chairman of the board of the association.

Lee who is also chairman and treasurer of the Montgomery Improvement Association was unable to attend the board meeting because of the trial, in a message to the association said in part:

"We are determined to fight this ugly thing to the finish, to secure to ourselves what the constitution of our country guarantees as the rights of every citizen."

Daily world

The more than 150 funeral directors who were guests of the Independent Funeral Directors Association of Texas, also unanimously approved Cleveland, Ohio, as the site for the 19th annual convention to be held in August.

Later in the week, Mr. E. W. Shortridge, chairman of the Executive Committee of the National Negro Funeral Directors Association, made the presentation of the $1,000 to Lee in an open mass meeting in Montgomery, who in turn presented the gift on behalf of the funeral directors, to Dr. M. L. King, president of the Montgomery Improvement Association.

Said Dr. King: "It is the interest from people and organizations like this one which encourages us to continue the struggle for first class citizenship in this democracy."

MAYOR SEES 'PUBLICITY STUNT'

Advertiser Sun. 8-26-56

Graetz Denies Bomb Hoax

Montgomery, Ala.

The white minister of a Negro church whose home was damaged by a dynamite blast early yesterday charged Mayor W. A. Gayle with "foolishness" in calling the bombing a "publicity stunt".

P. 1

The Rev. Robert Graetz, 27, arrived in the city during the afternoon to find windows and a door shattered at his home, 1110 Cleveland Ave., by the predawn blast. Windows in two nearby homes also were shattered, but nobody was hurt.

Mayor W. A. Gayle laid the latest bombing to a "publicity stunt," and promised an all-out investigation to "get to the bottom of this thing by arresting and convicting the party or parties if it is at all possible."

Det. Capt. E. P. Brown, leading an investigation into the incident, said the blast on the Graetz lawn apparently came from "two or three sticks of dynamite."

NOT CLOSE TO HOUSE

Set off about 20 feet from the house, at about 3 a.m., the blast shattered a picture window, broke others throughout the house, and forced open the front door, ripping out the lock and door facing.

A window was shattered at the home of B. T. Knox, Negro, 1116 Cleveland Ave., and at another house across the street.

Gayle declared that "this latest bombing follows the usual pattern. It's a strange coincidence that when interest appears lagging in the bus boycott, something like this happens:

STUNT FOR FUNDS

"We are inclined to wonder if out-of-state contributions to the boycott have been dropping off. Perhaps this is just a publicity stunt to build up interest of the Negroes in their campaign."

Rev. Graetz called the mayor's statement "foolishness." He said he has been often threatened in the past, and that "this is just the sort of thing they did to Dr. Martin Luther King and E. D. Nixon."

Advertiser

An estimated half-stick of dynamite was tossed on the porch of King's home Jan. 30, doing some damage, and another blast was set off at Nixon's home two nights later.

P. 2-A

There was no damage at the Nixon home.

Last January Graetz' car was damaged when someone put sugar in the gasoline tank and slashed two of the tires.

The minister said he surmised that the latest violence was brought about by the "same group" responsible for the earlier bombings "or by like-minded persons since it all follows a similar pattern."

Yesterday's blast left a hole 21 inches in diameter and 15 inches deep on the Graetz lawn. Capt. Brown said he was convinced the blast went off on top of the ground, since there was a strong odor of cordite.

HEARD MILES AWAY

He estimated the size of the home-made bomb as at least two sticks of dynamite, and probably three. The blast was heard over an area estimated at five miles in radius.

Graetz, his wife and three children were just ending a one-week combined vacation and workshop at Highlander Folk School in Tennessee. He said he heard of the blast from a newsman before leaving there.

His wife and three small children were with him.

"I'm certainly glad we weren't at home," he said. "We had a nice night's sleep where we were, and I don't think we'd have slept so well here."

BOYCOTT SUPPORTER

The young minister, pastor of Trinity Lutheran Church, has actively supported the bus boycott since it got under way nearly 10 months ago. For a time he was a driver in the boycott car pool.

Graetz is a native of Clarksburg, W. Va. He attended Capital University and Seminary in Columbus, Ohio, where he became interested in work with Negro young people.

Before accepting his pastorate here he was intern minister at a predominantly Negro church in Los Angeles.

Only this week Graetz had invited Montgomery's white ministers to attend a meeting of the bi-racial Montgomery Council on Human Relations, to hear a Negro pastor, the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., tell "his side of the story" on the bus boycott.

The white ministers declined the invitation.

King, who was convicted of violating Alabama's anti-boycott law last spring, was unavailable for comment on the bombing.

Mayor Gayle commented that for the most part white people of Montgomery have been dispassionate about the bus boycott and have shown very little interest in it.

LITTLE INTEREST

"They don't care particularly how the Negroes solve their transportation problem," he said, "and don't care if the boycott lasts 100 years.

"We deplore this latest incident which tends to fan the flames of racial unrest. Our police department is going to do everything possible to apprehend and convict the guilty party or parties."

Blast Linked To Alabama's Bus Boycott

News Observer Sun. 8-26-56 Raleigh, N.C.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Aug. 25 (AP)—A predawn dynamite blast outside the home of a young white minister might have been a publicity stunt to build up interest in the bus boycott, Mayor W. A. Gayle said today.

P. 1

The mayor promised that the police department will do everything possible to solve the mystery of the bombing which slightly damaged the home of the Rev. Robert Graetz 27-year-old pastor of a Negro church.

No One Injured.

Graetz and his family were out of town and no one was injured.

"We mean to get to the bottom of this thing by arresting and convicting the guilty party or parties if it is at all possible," Gayle said.

The minister, pastor of Trinity Lutheran church, has actively supported the bus boycott since it got under way nearly 10 months ago. For a time he was a driver in the boycott car pool.

A native of Clarksburg, W.Va., he attended Capital University and Seminary in Columbus, Ohio where he became interested in work with Negro young people.

Before accepting his Montgomery pastorate he was intern minister at a predominantly Negro church in Los Angeles.

Only this week Graetz had invited Montgomery's white ministers to attend a meeting of the biracial Montgomery Council on Human Relations, to hear a Negro pastor, the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., tell "his side of the story" on the bus boycott.

Declined Invitation.

The white ministers declined the invitation.

King, convicted of violating Alabama's anti - boycott law last spring, was unavailable for comment on the bombing.

The mayor commented that for the most part white people of Montgomery have been dispassionate about the bus boycott and have shown very little interest in it.

"They don't care particularly how the Negroes solve their transportation problem," he said, "and don't care if the boycott lasts 100 years.

The explosion, which came about 3 a.m., blew open the front door and dug a hole in the front yard about big enough to fit a two-gallon bucket.

It was caused by "two or three sticks of dynamite," said State Toxicologist Van V. Pruitt.

Today's explosion was the third which has occurred since the boycott began. One damaged the King home last Jan. 30, and another the home of Negro leader E. D. Nixon, two nights later. No one was injured in any of the blasts.

White pastor's home bombed; aided boycott

News P. 2 Sat. 8-25-56 Birm., Ala.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Aug. 25—(AP)—An explosion early Saturday damaged the home of a young white minister who has been active in Montgomery's eight-month-old Negro bus boycott. Police said it resulted from a dynamite bomb.

No one was injured, however, because the Rev. Robert Graetz and his family were away from home.

Police Chief G. J. Ruppenthal said neighbors told him the family has been out of town since Sunday.

Graetz, 27, is white pastor of the all-Negro Trinity Lutheran church. His home adjoins the church in a Negro residential section.

THE YOUNG clergyman has actively supported Negro bus boycotters who have refused to ride segregated city buses since last Dec. 5. He is a member of the Montgomery Improvement Assn., an organization composed mostly of Negroes supporting the boycott, and has used his personal car to give rides to Negroes to and from work.

Ruppenthal said he could give no explanation immediately for the violence.

The dynamiting came just over a day after a meeting of the Montgomery Council on Human Relations of which Graetz is a member.

RUPPENTHAL SAID the explosion knocked out several windows in Graetz' home and blew the lock off the front door. He said it left a hole in the front yard "about big enough to put a two-gallon bucket in."

Graetz, a native of Charleston, W. Va., came to Montgomery about five months before the bus boycott got under way Dec. 5, 1955, after two years as "intern minister" at a predominantly Negro church in Los Angeles.

Mayor Gayle says bombing may be publicity stunt

News P. 1 Birm., Ala. Sun. 8-26-56

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Aug. 25—(AP)—A pre-dawn dynamite blast outside the home of a young white minister might have been a publicity stunt to build up interest in the bus boycott, Mayor W. A. Gayle said Saturday.

The mayor promised that the Police Department will do everything possible to get to the bottom of the bombing which slightly damaged the home of the Rev. Robert Graetz, 27-year-old pastor of a Negro church here.

Graetz and his family were out of town and no one was injured.

"We mean to get to the bottom of this thing by arresting and convicting the guilty party or parties if it is at all possible," Gayle said.

The young minister, pastor of Trinity Lutheran Church, has actively supported the bus boycott since it got under way nearly 10 months ago.

Advertiser
Sun. 8-26-56
Montgomery
P. 1

WHERE DYNAMITE BOMB LEFT DAMAGE

A part of the crowd of curious which swarmed the home of the Rev. Robert Graetz, 1110 Cleveland Ave., following a bombing early yesterday, inspects damages to windows and door. At extreme left is the home of B. T. Knox, Negro neighbor of Graetz, where windows also were broken by the blast. The bomb exploded on the lawn, in foreground.

Advertiser
Sun. 8-26-56
Montgomery Ala.
P. 1

MINISTER MEASURES HOLE

The Rev. Robert Graetz, with son Robert III and daughter Margaret, measure a 15-inch hole left by a dynamite bomb thrown the lawn early yesterday.

The Rev. Graetz Is Wrong

Advertiser 9-4-A

THE Rev. Robert Graetz, the white Lutheran pastor who is active in the Montgomery bus boycott, is undoubtedly a man of considerable courage, however misguided some of his efforts may be.

Montgomery, Ala.

But courage cannot always be equated with wisdom. In his latest charge of a conspiracy to boycott the boycott by denying liability insurance, Graetz is guilty of gross misstatements of the facts.

Tues. 9-18-56

In the first place, the insurance business in Montgomery, as elsewhere, is highly competitive. Whatever the racial convictions of an insurance agent, we doubt that there are more than one or two in this city who could afford to refuse legitimate business because of a difference of opinion with the applicant.

The cars operating in the car pool are losing their insurance coverage for simple actuarial reasons: as insurers discover the purpose for which the car is being used, they are cancelling policies because of the nigh risk nature of taxis.

Now, of course, the boycott brass does not admit—cannot admit—these cars are taxis. While it is probably true that no direct fares are paid, revenue is derived via a thinly disguised church contribution system designed to protect the car pool driver from prosecution for license violation.

An insurer, however, is concerned only with the use of the car and the risk involved. The cars are operated under conditions more risky than most taxis, the drivers are less competent, and the mileage is at least as great as that of the average Montgomery taxi. So, for the insurer, automobiles used in the boycott are taxis, camouflage be hanged.

Why then do not the boycotters apply for taxi insurance? In the first place, taxi insurance runs almost eight times the cost of private automobile insurance.

In the second, the boycott drivers could not apply for taxi insurance without admitting what they have all along denied, an admission that would be a confession of illegal operation.

Then, too, we could find no local insurer who will write taxi insurance even when the nature of the business is admitted and the high rate tendered. The risk is too great.

Finally, taxi's would have to be insured as a fleet and not as individual automobiles. Assuming that the boycotters could find an insurer who would write such a policy, they couldn't do it without confessing their illegal operations. (For an explanation of Alabama's "Assigned Risk Plan," see Mr. Starke's letter today.)

In many instances, the boycott automobiles—including those shiny new station wagons masquerading as church cars—have been guilty of notoriously bad driving, resulting in a number of accidents. Insurers know this, even though police in recent months have bent over backwards to avoid arrests for any but the most outrageous examples of carelessness or violation of the laws.

Mr. Graetz says that some of the boycott automobiles have insurance. In the opinion of an experienced Montgomery insurance man (who says, incidentally, he will write all the Negro auto insurance he can get if the drivers are reliable and sober) is invalid because the applicant for an automobile to be used privately was fraudulent.

Mr. Graetz would be less than human if by now, in his loneliness as the only white minister in the boycott, he hadn't developed something of a persecution complex. But in this case, he seems to have been misled by his boycott associates.

Circuit Judge Cites Possible Penalty For Conviction On Anti-Boycott Laws

Advertiser Wed. 2-15-56 P. 8-A

Montgomery, Ala.

Organized boycotting of lawful businesses is against the law and punishable by heavy fines or stiff sentences, Circuit Judge Eugene B. Carter advised, following his charge to the grand jury this week.

Persons convicted for unlawful boycotting are jubject to a sentence of not more than six months in the county jail and fines of not more than $1,000 or not less than $100.

MAY BE DIFFICULT

Judge Carter, observing that Montgomery County has seldom been confronted with boycotts of any kind in the past and never with a boycott of city buses, said enforcement of the law may be difficult. He pointed out that the law applies to situations where persons are forced to boycott business organizations "involuntarily" through leadership or conspiracy. Simple failure to patronize a firm, even among a group, does not constitute boycotting, he said. However, persons responsible for inciting or organizing resistance to a business operation may be prosecuted, the judge added.

Judge Carter, who directed the jury to investigate acts of boycotting—emphasizing the current bus boycott—and determine violations of the law, cited Title 14, Chapter 20 of Alabama Code of 1940 which reads in part as follows:

"Two or more persons who, without a just cause or legal excuse for doing so, enter into any combination, conspiracy, agreement, arrangement or understanding for the purpose of hindering, delaying, or preventing any other persons, firms, corporation, or association of persons from carrying on any lawful business, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor."

OTHER PROVISIONS

Other provisions of the code relative to boycotting make unlawful the following: "loitering or picketing, printing or circulating notice of boycott, using force or threats against persons engaging in lawful occupation, maintaining blacklists, attempt or threat to injure or destroy property of another, teaching, printing books or papers, or organizing persons to boycott . . ."

Penalties for violations of the boycotting statute are set forth in Title 14, Sect. 62 which reads as follows:

"Any persons, firm, corporation, or association of persons violating any of the sections, shall, on conviction, be punished by a fine of not less than one hundred dollars, nor more than one thousand dollars and may also be imprisoned in the county jail or sentenced to hard labor for the county for not more than six months for the first conviction, at the discretion of the court or judge trying the case; and on the second and every subsequent conviction, at the discretion of the court or judge trying the case; and on the second and every subsequent conviction, in addition to the fine which may be imposed, the convicted party must be sentenced to hard labor for not less than three months nor more than six months, to be fixed by the judge or court trying the case."

Local Boycott Being Studied By Grand Jury

Advertiser Montgomery, Ala. Tues. 2-14-56

By FRANK McARDLE

The Montgomery County Grand Jury yesterday was directed to determine whether Negroes who are boycotting Montgomery City Lines buses are violating the law.

The jury includes one Negro, E. T. Sinclair, a waiter, among the 18 members of the jury who began their work after Judge Carter concluded his instructions.

Judge Carter told the jury:

1. "No court whether it be federal court, state court or city court can interfere with your investigations. You are the supreme inquisitorial body.

2. "The right to conduct one's business without wrongful interference of others is a valuable property right which will be protected, if necessary, by injunctive process.

3. "If the boycott is illegal, it must be brought to an end."

LIVE AS NEIGHBORS

Judge Carter also told the group:

"Montgomery has been a city that both races have had the pleasure of living in. I say to both black and white, let's continue to live as neighbors.

"The doctrine of hate has no place here and particularly has no place in our churches."

In his six-page charge, he mentioned he had researched the term "boycott" and added that authorities had established the proposition that "such unlawful community of purposes entered into as a conspiracy need not be proved by positive testimony. It must be determined by the triers of facts from the conduct of parties and all the relative testimony."

"It is recognized under the constitutions, state and federal, that a person's business is property and if lawfully conducted is entitled to protection from unlawful interference," he added.

"The essential idea of boycotting . . . is a confederation, generally secret, of many persons whose intent is to injure another by preventing any and all persons from doing business with him, through fear of incurring the displeasure, persecution and vengeance of the conspirators," the judge said in defining the word "boycott."

ISSUES WEAPONS WARNING

Judge Carter also issued a warning about carrying concealed weapons, which carries a $500 fine in Montgomery County.

"Particularly at this time I think that the law against carrying concealed weapons should be rigidly enforced," he said.

He also told the grand jury to regulate the use of automobiles, investigating cases of driving while intoxicated, reckless driving and other infractions.

He praised the grand jury system and told the jurors of the evolution of the jury, which he said is "democracy in action."

The jury, of which Alvin H. Wells is forman, includes one Negro, Sinclair, and these white members: Zeb Collier, J. H. Cook, William F. Crenshaw, Cecil Frizzle, Jesse A. Gorrie, V. Van Metcalfe, Jack O. Milligan, Felder A. Miller, George E. Parker, Paschal R. Perdue, Z. O. Riddle, James D. Rushing, Thomas W. Sewell, James C. Shepard, Evan D. Shine Jr., and Ben M. Wilbanks.

Two other Negroes were chosen on the venire panel of 50, one of whom was excused from service, and the other not used.

Circuit Solicitor W. F. Thetford said anyone taking part in a conspiracy to boycott the bus lines could be indicted under a state law which makes boycotting punishable by six months in jail and a $500 fine.

Even if the grand jury finds the boycott illegal, however, solicitor Thetford said, the city or state can do nothing to compel Negores to ride buses again. But he said the jury could indict boycott leaders if there is evidence of unlawful acts.

History Of The Boycott Law

Advertiser Wed. 2-15-56 P. 8-A

IT IS now apparent that the present Montgomery County grand jury will consider indictment of the bus boycott leaders. If indictments are returned, presumably the defendants will be tried under the state law governing "Boycotting & Blacklisting" (Title 14, Chapter 20, Sections 54-62, Code of 1940).

This law, part of which has been held unconstitutional by the U.S. Supreme Court (the section forbidding picketing), was passed in October, 1921, to meet a labor crisis in Birmingham. Coal mine disturbances—including boycotts, dynamitings and murders—had moved Gov. Kilby to take firm measures. Troops had been on duty in Jefferson County, but, the governor said in his address to the special session of the legislature which convened Oct. 4, state criminal law was inadequate to cope with the situation.

Advertiser Montgomery, Ala.

★

GOV. KILBY'S proposal to strengthen the boycott law, as embodied in the criminal code of 1907, was not the chief reason for his calling the special session. In fact, the boycott amendment was No. 13 in a list of 18 measures he wanted passed. Of the boycott proposal, Kilby told the legislature:

> The recent coal strikes in this state developed the fact that our civil and criminal laws were inadequate to promptly and properly deal with the conditions which existed just prior to and after the strike was declared. It was then discovered that by reason of the inadequacy of the statutes of this state relating to strikes, boycotts and blacklisting, etc., that the civil authorities were unable to prevent or even check many wrongful acts which inevitably led to the calling of the strike and to the perpetration of many heinous crimes which attended and followed the strike.

★

BECAUSE local authorities were powerless to act with no laws to back them up, it was necessary to call out the militia, Kilby told the legislature. He continued:

> While martial law was not absolutely declared, nor the civil law actually suspended, the condition of affairs was so critical, so serious, that at times it appeared almost imperative that martial law should be declared in the coal mining districts of the state . . . If the statutes of the state had been adequate, and the civil authorities had been able to . . . deal with the . . . labor trouble, much if not all of the great loss of life, property and enormous expenses of the state would have been avoided.

Gov. Kilby spelled out his labor philosophy, which sounds primitive in these Taft-Hartley times. Basically, it was a recognition of the worker's "inalienable right" to work or not to work; the employer's inalienable right to hire and fire as he sees fit.

★

KILBY said the trouble in the coal mines was the work of "foreign agitators" attempting to promote socialism, which often results in anarchy." Then he got to the point:

> A conspiracy to starve or freeze . . . or even an agreement to do acts, the natural and probable result of which is to cause great suffering or inconvenience to the public, is little less than treason against the government . . .

★

THE get-tough-with-labor amendment, substantially the same law under which bus boycott leaders may be indicted, was passed. But, recalls Kilby's house floor leader at the time, Dothan Atty. Oscar L. Thompkins, not without a fight. "I was almost lynched in the process," Thompkins said in a telephone interview yesterday.

A few legislators denounced Kilby's proposal as "part of a nationwide program to destroy organized labor." Charged Rep. Harrison of Jefferson: "The Governor used every means in his power to crush the miners' strike in Jefferson County, then when he was called on to arbitrate, decided every point in favor of the coal operators."

Rep. Partridge of Franklin spoke against the bill, declaring that its effect would be to "bring the laboring man to the chopping block and lay his head on it."

★

REP. BENNERS of Jefferson spoke for the bill. He said the bill was aimed at labor agitators, and offered this terse, if drastic, advice to labor unions: "Hang your orators."

Yesterday, former floor leader Thomkins said that he hadn't reread the law he helped pass in many years. In fact, he thought it had been declared unconstitutional. (Only parts have been.) However, he confirmed that it was intended for use against labor. Situations like the Montgomery bus boycott were not foreseen.

★

THE law, originally aimed at miners and now brought to bear against non-riders of city buses, says in part:

> Two or more persons who, without a just cause or legal excuse for so doing, enter into any combination, conspiracy, agreement, arrangement, or understanding for the purpose of hindering, delaying, or preventing any other persons, firms, corporations . . . from carrying on any lawful business shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

Violation is declared a misdemeanor, with maximum punishment fixed at 6 months in jail or $1,000 fine, or both.

All suffer when evil is rampant

Afro-American Baltimore Md.

Sat. 10-27-56

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — "When the forces of evil become rampant in a community," the Rev. Martin Luther King pointed out, "all the decent people suffer."

This was illustrated here last week when white housewives who went and got their domestic helpers and drove them home after work became the target of threats and abuse by bigots angered by the success of the bus boycott movement launched here last winter.

According to a story in the Montgomery Advertiser, most of the telephone threats were made after midnight by persons who remained anonymous, saying:

"Isn't it about time you went and got your n----r maid?"

* * *

LETTERS HAVE been received by some white citizens in various sections of the city saying:

"Dear Friend: Listed below are a few of the white people who are still hauling their colored maids. This must be stopped. These people would appreciate a call from you, day or night. Let's let them know how we feel about them hauling colored domestics."

The list included a number of prominent Montgomery residents, the Advertiser said.

Afro-American

"SINCE THE callers and the hate-letter writers remain anonymous," said the Rev. Fred D. Gray, attorney for the Montgomery Improvement Association, which is spearheading the bus protest movement, "we cannot take steps against them, although we have a pretty good idea where the source of this evil emanates."

He pointed out that the maneuver was only another attempt to harass colored citizens because they "walk proudly" and refuse to ride in "segregation and degredation."

Almost 100 persons, including over a score of ministers, were arrested, fingerprinted and arraigned last March on charges of "disturbing the peace" by their advocacy of the bus protest movement.

Sat. 10-27-56

THE REV. MR. KING, MIA's president and the first of the group to be tried, was found guilty in an Alabama court of leading what the prosecution termed an illegal boycott against the Montgomery City Bus Lines.

He has appealed a sentence of a $500 fine and payment of $500 court costs. The Rev. Mr. Gray said the appeal would probably be heard during this court session, but the exact date has not been set.

* * *

OTHER EXAMPLES of harassment against colored citizens are overzealousness of traffic policemen in ticketing drivers, the imposition of extreme fines for petty violations, and the refusal of local auto insurance firms to reinsure vehicles of car pool drivers when their insurance lapses.

The Rev. Mr. King made his dissertation upon the "forces of evil" during a speech before the New York State Universalist Ministers Association in Cortland, N.Y., Tuesday night.

He pointed out that the protest against segregated buses is aimed at the "forces of evil," not at individuals.

* * *

THE TENSION in the Montgomery community is not between white and colored people, but "between justice and injustice," he said.

The 29-year-old minister said a "crisis" in race relations was precipitated by the Supreme Court decision outlawing segregation in public schools and by "a radical change in the colored citizen's evaluation of his nature and destiny."

The Rev. Mr. King said that violent resistance created social problems. It did not solve them. Non-violent resistance, he went on, seeks to win friendship and understanding, not to defeat and humiliate opponents.

MONTGOMERY PLANS BUS BOYCOTT AGAIN

Commercial Appeal 10-27

City To Seek Injunction To Bar Negro Protest

Sat. 10-27-56

CITIZEN MOVE SPURNED

Minneapolis Star

By The United Press

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Oct. 26. —The City Commission Friday rejected a citizen's proposal aimed at ending the 10-month-old bus boycott. The board stated, however, it will bring action of its own "for an injunction to stop" the Negro protest movement.

A legal spokesman for the editor of a labor union newspaper here cited a section of the state code to a commission meeting Friday. He said the law gave "sufficient legal right to break up" car pools hauling Negroes now boycotting city buses.

Attorney Cites Move

Attorney John Kohn also said his client, Jack Brock, editor of The Alabama Labor News, was prepared to swear out warrants "as a private citizen" against car pool operators if the city failed to act or requested him to do so.

In its prepared statement, several hours after the meeting, the commission said:

"We are glad for indivduals to take such action as they see fit in their own best interest. However, we believe the action planned by the city will be more effective than the action suggested by these citizens."

It said, "Regardless of whether such action is taken or not, the city will follow its plans of bringing action for an injunction to stop all activities which the city considers illegal at this time."

Mr. Kohn, retained by both Mr. Brock and Publisher Homer Welch, cited a section of the state constitution which forbids any "firm, association or corporation" from using the streets of any city "for the construction or operation of any public utility without first obtaining the consent of the City Commission."

Tells of Authority

He said it had ample authority to "stop this subterfuge that is sabotaging the franchises of the bus company and legally operated taxicab companies."

Some 25 station wagons, sponsored by Negro church groups, have hauled Negroes engaged in the boycott. Earlier this year, the city turned down the Negroes request for a charter to operate their own bus lines.

Mr. Brock, who sat in the meeting, said he was prepared "to sign warrants Friday" for the arrest of the car pool operators. He said, "Although we'll give the city time to see what it wants to do with our suggestion, we feel the warrants should be issued this afternoon."

He could not be reached for comment after it was learned the commission turned down his proposal.

The fleet of new station wagons has the backing of the Montgomery Improvement Association, a Negro organization formed soon after the racial protest began last December. Each station wagon bears the name of the church sponsoring it.

38b 1956 ALABAMA

FIVE NEGRO LAWYERS READY DEFENSE OF BOYCOTTERS (MONTGOMERY, ALA.

Five Lawyers Ready Defense Of Boycotters

Advertiser Montgomery Ala. Jan 3-18-56

By STEVE LESHER

Five Negro attorneys will defend 93 Negroes who stand trial here at 10 a.m. tomorrow on charges of advocating an illegal boycott of Montgomery City Lines buses by 40,000 Montgomery Negroes.

Among the 93 are 25 Negro ministers. At their arraignment here recently, 89 Negroes pleaded not guilty. Four others have been arrested since the grand jury returned 11 indictments naming 113 Negroes who allegedly have instigated the illegal boycott.

BEFORE JUDGE

Defending the Negroes will be Arthur Shores, Orzell Billingsly Jr. and Peter Hall, all of Birmingham, and Fred D. Gray and Charles Langford of Montgomery. Shores gained notoriety as the attorney for Autherine J. Lucy, 26-year-old Negro woman who twice was ordered admitted to the University of Alabama by a federal court, only to be expelled for unfounded charges she made against the university. Gray recently was cleared of charges of conducting an unethical practice.

The Negroes will appear before Judge Eugene W. Carter in Circuit Court. The attorneys for the defense have waived trial by jury and will allow the judge to rule in each case. Reasons for this move were not revealed yesterday by the defense

FREEDOMS VIOLATED

Carter, who had directed the grand jury to investigate the bus boycott, must rule on defense demurrers before the trials begin. The demurrers claim, in effect, that the freedoms of speech, wor- mitted no unlawful act, that the boycott law is unconstitutional and thatt he freedoms of speech, worship and peaceful assembly have been violated.

Advertiser

The law, which has been used only in labor disputes in the state, was upheld in 1942 by the Alabama State Supreme Court. The defense apparently plans to appeal to federal courts in the event of convictions by calling the law a violation of the U.S. Constitution.

P 2-A

Circuit Solicitors William F. Thetford, Robert Stewart and Maury Smith plan to meet today to discuss their strategy. Yesterday, they gave no indication as to which of the 93 they would call for prosecution first. Similarly, the defense would not reveal if the Negroes would call for separate trials, which would stretch the proceedings out over a period of several weeks, or if they would stand trial together. All defendants are charged with exactly the same misdemeanor, which carries a penalty of not more than $1,000 and not less than $100 in fines plus not more than six months in the county jail.

Circuit Clerk John Mathews said yesterday that subpoenas have been issued for 77 witnesses — 45 for the defense and 32 for the state. Included among those subpoenaed are City Commissioners W. A. Gayle, Clyde Sellers and Frank Parks; Police Chief G. J. Ruppenthal, the Rev. Robert Graetz, white pastor of an all-Negro church, and Montgomery City Lines Manager J. H. Bagley. Nine bus drivers also have been subpoenaed.

The boycott began last Dec. 5 after Rosa Parks, a Negro seamstress, was fined $14 for refusal to move to a Negro section when white passengers entered a city bus. At mass meetings in local Negro churches, Negro ministers and other leaders urged the city's 40,000 Negroes not to ride the buses.

They complied virtually 100 per cent and either walked, rode taxicabs or formed car pools. Boycott leaders at first did not demand an end to segregation but insisted that bus seating be on a "first - come, first-served" basis, starting with the back seats for Negroes and front seats for whites.

Company officials refused to drop a requirement that the 10 front seats be reserved for whites. Negro leaders also demanded Negro drivers for predominantly Negro routes.

Later, however, Atty. Fred Gray filed a petition in Federal District Court to declare bus segregation illegal. Gray was then accused of filing the suit without the consent of one of the five Negro women listed as plaintiffs. He was cleared by Judge Carter.

The boycotters here won support from Rep. Adam Clayton Powell Jr. (D-NY), pastor of the (Negro) Abyssinian Baptist Church in New York and leader of a civil rights bloc in the U.S. House. He urged federal protection for Montgomery Negroes involved in the boycott.

Powell proposed that Negroes throughout the U.S. support Montgomery Negroes by joining March 28 in a "National Deliverance Day of Prayer." He said no Negroes should work or attend school between 2 p.m. and 3 p.m. on that day.

Powell reniged when a spiritual leader of 5,000,000 Negroes said he would "not go along with a national economic boycott. Powell replied immediately that he had not intended a work stoppage but that he was "interested in prayer only."

So the boycott has raged for 16 weeks without noticeable violence on either side. Montgomery has become the center of political battles on local, state and national levels. It has been the congregating place for more than 50 newsmen from all over the globe.

The 16-week-old battle will reach its first climax in court tomorrow.

Negro Freed After Charge In Car Pool

Advertiser Sat. 2-18-56 Montgomery, Ala. P.1

A Negro service station operator who admitted selling gasoline for use in a car pool during the bus boycott here was excused of a contempt charge yesterday by Circuit Judge Eugene B. Carter as a tired grand jury made a partial report, then recessed until Monday.

The Negro, Clarence H. Adams, was summoned before the grand jury to testify yesterday but said he couldn't remember the names of persons conducting the car pool to whom he had sold gasoline. The station is located at 1031 W. Jeff Davis Ave.

GETS WARNING

Judge Carter, informing the witness he could be sent to jail for contempt or to prison for perjury for lying under oath, dropped the charge against Adams when the witness' memory suddenly "became refreshed."

Advertiser

Adams said that while he was before the jury testifying his "mind became a blank" and he couldn't remember the names of the customers. Judge Carter instructed the Negro to return to the grand jury Monday with records showing the names of persons in question. Adams said he would present the names. P.5A

Meanwhile, another Negro was sentenced to county jail for five days for refusing to testify before the grand jury in another case.

The grand jury, in its busiest session in the county's history, returned 114 true bills and six no bills yesterday, before recessing until 2 p.m. Monday. The past week the panel examined 232 witnesses, a record high number for Montgomery County.

Al Wells, foreman, read the jury report before Judge Carter, Circuit Solicitor W. F. Thetford, and Asst. Circuit Solicitor Robert Stewart.

The report states that the grand jury "cannot complete its duties and make a final report until sometime next week."

Montgomery Car Pool Showdown Delayed

Post Herald Sat. 11-3-56 Birmingham, Ala. P.1

MONTGOMERY, Nov. 2 (AP)—The refusal of state and federal courts to take immediate action delayed a showdown today on the city's attempt to halt a car pool used for 11 months by bus boycotting Montgomery Negroes.

City authorities went into state court with their promised request for an injunction to stop the car pool operations. Circuit Judge Eugene Carter, declining to rule immediately, set a hearing for Nov. 13.

A short time later, Judge Frank M. Johnson Jr., in U. S. District Court denied a previously filed motion for an emergency restraining order to prevent the city from interfering with the Negroes' transportation service.

Johnson ordered a hearing for Nov. 14, however, on a companion request for a temporary injunction against the city commission. A temporary restraining order, Johnson explained, could be issued in federal Court without hearing; an injunction cannot.

Explaining his decision, Johnson said the Negroes failed to show that refusal to grant the immediate restraining order would "subject the plaintiffs to immediate and irreparable injury, loss and damage."

City Atty. Walter Knabe asked Carter to outlaw the motor pool as a "public nuisance" and a "private enterprise" being operated without a license and without approval of the city.

The petition said the motor pool, which includes church-owned station wagons as well as private cars, is operated over regular and irregular routes; that the Negroes have purchased and hired vehicles, and that drivers and dispatchers are paid for their services.

Negro Attys. Fred Gray and Charles Langford, in their motion in federal court, said the car pool is a voluntary share-the-ride service provided without charge to the riders.

Any effort to break up the pool, they protested, would violate "the civil and constitutional rights" of the Negroes and is calculated to compel them to ride the segregated busses they are boycotting.

Defendants in the city's suit are the Montgomery improvement Assn., an organization formed to support the bus boycott when it started last Dec. 5; 14 Negro churches and 27 individuals.

Officers of the MIA have testified in state court last Spring that the organization financed the car pool and that drivers received $4 a day and car expenses. They estimated it cost $3,000 a week to provide the transportation service and that the money came from contributions.

In the first official indication of the economic impact of the long boycott, the city said in its petition today that it had lost $15,000 in revenue as a direct result of the mass refusal of negroes to ride the busses.

Although the bus company, Montgomery City Lines Inc., is a privately owned corporation and a subsidinary of National City Lines of Chicago, the city receives 2 per cent of the company's gross receipts in Montgomery.

Negroes halt car pool in Montgomery

News P.12 Birmingham, Ala. Sat. 10-27-56

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Oct. 27 —(AP)—Negro leaders suspended their bus boycott car pool Saturday after city officials announced they planned to seek an injunction to stop the car pool operations.

There was no immediate word from Negro spokesmen as to what further steps would be taken to provide transportation for members of their race.

Rev. Martin Luther King, pastor of the Dexter Avenue Baptist Church and a spokesman for the Montgomery Improvement Assn. which has worked closely with the 10-month-old bus boycott, was not available for comment.

STATION WAGONS sponsored by various Negro churches were noticeably absent from city streets Saturday. Many of the Negroes walked to work.

A Negro bystander at the car pool pickup station said he understood the transit setup would not function Saturday. He said he didn't know whether it was temporary or permanent.

The Rev. Robert Graetz, white minister of a Negro church who has supported the boycotters, said "It's news to me," when asked about the stoppage.

MONTGOMERY'S police commissioner, Clyde Sellers, said no new orders were given to the police force concerning the Negro car pool operations.

The city plan to seek a court order to stop the car pool was announced Friday after a labor union publication requested that legal steps be taken to that end.

City Attorneys Told To Seek Car Pool Halt

Advertiser P.1 Wed. 10-31-56 Montgomery, Ala.

By AL McCONAGHA

The City Commission yesterday instructed city attorneys to take legal action to stop Negro bus boycotters' car pool operations.

At the same time, a boycott leader announced the decision of Negroes to continue their transportation system as a part of the 11-month protest of segregation city buses.

Official sources pledged action in the next "two or three days." Informed observers predicted a petition seeking an injunction against car pool operations would be filed in Circuit Court tomorrow.

RESOLUTION PASSED

The commission unanimously passed a resolution instructing the city's legal department "to file" proper proceedings "to stop the operation of car pools or transportation systems growing out of the bus boycott."

A Negro spokesman, the Rev. Martin Luther King, said his people would continue their current car pool transportation system and that "only a distorted legal interpretation" would construe the car pool as a "jitney service or car-for-hire system."

King, president of the Montgomery Improvement Assn., added:

"We are simply offering free rides to the Negro citizenry of Montgomery through the services of our church."

King refused to the use of some 25 church-owned station wagons in the Negroes' motor pool.

The commission resolution also placed direct supervision of legal proceedings against the car pool under the control of Mayor W. A. Gayle and Commissioner of Public Affairs Clyde C. Sellers.

The move was explained as the fixing of administrative responsibility on the mayor as City Commission president and Sellers as head of the police department which has been gathering evidence against the motor pool activities. Advertiser P.2-A

In his prepared statement, King said:

"As far as we are concerned, the car pool will continue to exist. We feel that the cause for which we are struggling is just and the methods we are using are constructive, deeply rooted in the long tradition of our Christian faith.

'In the face of a threatened injunction, the Negro community is determined to struggle and sacrifice until the wall of injustice are finally crushed by the battering rams of surging justice."

38b 1956

Segregation Order Appealed By State

Post-Herald P. 1 Fri. 6-29-56

City Of Montgomery Plans Similar Step; Injunction Off Pending High Court Ruling

Birm. Ala.

MONTGOMERY, June 28 (AP)—With a formal notice of appeal, state officials took the first legal step today toward resisting a Federal Court order outlawing segregation on city buses in Montgomery.

Although the decision and subsequent injunction handed down by a panel in U. S. District Court applied only to Montgomery, it held that state as well as city bus segregation laws violate the U. S. constitution.

The notice of appeal to the Supreme Court was filed in the name of the Alabama Public Service Commission which administers state laws requiring separate seating of white and Negro passengers in all public transportation.

Montgomery city attorneys said they will hand the court a similar notice tomorrow.

That leaves the next move up to Negro attorneys who challenged constitutionality of the city and state laws.

The injunction against continued enforcement of the statutes has been suspended pending the Supreme Court appeal, but the Negroes can ask the high court to set the suspension aside and put the injunction into effect immediately.

Charles Langford of Montgomery, one of the lawyers who filed the anti-segregation suit, said "we haven't decided" what the next step will be.

Similar comment came from Robert Carter, an attorney for the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People, who also took part in the court fight.

Meanwhile, an order was issued in U. S. District Court formally suspending the injunction until the Supreme Court rules on the segregation appeal. The original suspension was for 10 days with the understanding it would be extended if an appeal were filed.

State's attorneys in their notice of appeal questioned the court's right to issue an injunction against the Public Service Commission which exercises no jurisdiction over city buses in Montgomery. The city has its own segregation ordinances.

The same argument was used at a hearing before the judges May 11, but the panel rejected it and extended the injunction to cover the state agency as well as city authorities.

PSC lawyers headed by Atty. Gen. John Patterson also challenged the federal court's right to act while another injunction from a state court still was in effect ordering the segregation laws enforced.

The Federal Court suit already was pending when Circuit Judge Walter B. Jones ordered the bus company, Montgomery City Lines, to continue the policy of separate seating for the two races.

White Cleric's Home Bombed in Alabama

Wired

By the Associated Press.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Aug. 25.—An explosion early today damaged the home of a young white minister who has been active in Montgomery's 8-month-old Negro bus boycott. Police said it resulted from a dynamited bomb.

Bal. Sun 8-25-56

No one was injured, however, because the Rev. Robert Graetz and his family were away from home.

Newark N.J.

Mr. Graetz, 27, is pastor of the all-Negro Trinity Lutheran Church. His home adjoins the church in a Negro residential section.

The clergyman is a member of the Montgomery Improvement Assn., an organization composed mostly of Negroes supporting the bus boycott, and has used his car to give rides to Negroes.

ALABAMA

BUS BOYCOTT

Ala. board gets cold feet in Montgomery bus boycott

Afro-American Sat. 9-8-56 P. 12

Balti. Md.

WASHINGTON

Alabama Public Service commissioners say they never ordered or upheld segregation in the Montgomery bus boycott.

That announcement comes out of the brief filed in appealing this case to the Supreme Court on the part of Alabama officials.

District Federal judges outlawed bus segregation in the state in a 2 to 1 decision on June 5. The injunction against bus jim crow was suspended pending the appeal, which arrived last week in a brief to the clerk's office of the Supreme Court.

IN THESE papers, it is said, "The members of the Alabama Public Service Commission object to their joinder as parties defendant and move to dismiss the action against them."

Commissioners "never attempted or threatened to enforce the statutes and ordinances relating to the segregation of races on buses, operated by Montgomery City Lines, Inc.," they said.

Alabama Attorney General John Patterson and his assistants deny that Commissioners Jimmy Hitchcock and Sibyl Pool were aware of action by C. C. (Jack) Owen, president of the board.

MR. OWEN sent a telegram to the National City Lines of Chicago, of which the Montgomery lines is a subsidiary, on April 24:

"As president of the Alabama Public Service Commission, elected by the people of Alabama, sworn to uphold the segregation laws of this state, which include all forms of public transportation, I hereby defy ruling handed down by the U.S. Supreme Court . . .

"Alabama state law requiring segregation of the races on buses still stands. All public carriers in Alabama are hereby directed to strictly adhere to all present existing segregation laws in our state or suffer the consequences."

The lawyers said, "That telegram was sent without the knowledge or concurrence of the other two commissioners."

* * *

THE CASE is set for oral argument on the Supreme Court calendar for October. Alabama lawyers for the colored citizens are Charles D. Langford and Fred Gray, both of Montgomery.

Mr. Gray is scheduled to report for induction in the Army on Sept. 17. If drafted before October, he may not participate in the case which he helped to focus into headlines around the world.

In addition to state commissioners, other defendants named in the suit are City Commissioners Frank Parks and Clyde Sellers.

Also Goodwyn J. Ruppenthal, chief of police, and bus drivers James F. Blake and Robert Cleere.

Alabama holds that it has the right to exercise police power to maintain segregation for the sake of "peace and order."

Bus Protest Not To End, Minister Says

Daily Worker Atlanta, Ga.

Sun. 9-2-56

NEW YORK — (ANP) — "We will walk until there is not a single segregated bus left in Montgomery, Ala.," the Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy, vice president of the Improvement Association of that city, told 500 persons here last Monday. He was speaking at the testimonial Banquet for veteran church leader Allen Jordan in the Grand Ball Room of the St. George Hotel, Brooklyn.

Comparing the honoree with "the new Negro" who refuses to be an "Uncle Tom" and surrender his birthright for a pat on the back and special consideration but stands united for first class citizenship, he opinioned that Negroes throughout the United States were winning the fight for full citizenship.

Rev. Abernathy sighted the failure of desperate tactics of segregationists to end the eight month old boycott of jim crow buses. He stated that the Association is hopeful of a favorable decision by the United States Supreme Court in its injunction suit against the bus segregation by 1956. This would outlaw the practice throughout Alabama and also end the practice throughout every state in the union, he surmised.

The World War II veteran and pastor of First Baptist Church, cited the need for continued support of the boycotters. He stated that it requires $5,000 a week to operate the car pool.

He said the association now has nineteen brand new station wagons valued at $50,000 and 200 passengers cars in the pool. Five secretaries are employed in the operation of the pool.

ship, he opinioned that colored people throughout the United States were winning the fight for full citizenship.

* * *

THE REV. MR. ABERNATHY sighted the failure of desperate tactics of segregationists to end the eight-month-old boycott of jim crow buses.

He stated that the association NEW CITIZENS' group M-8 is hopeful of a favorable decision by the United State Supreme Court in its injunction suit against the bus segregation by 1956.

This would outlaw the practice throughout Alabama and also end the practice throughout every state in the union, he surmised.

* * *

THE WORLD WAR 2 veteran and pastor of First Baptist Church cited the need for continued support of the boycotters. He stated that it requires $5,000 a week to operate the car pool.

He said the association now has 19 brand new station wagons valued at $50,000 and 200 passenger cars in the pool. Five secretaries are employed in the operation of the pool.

Montgomery bus boycott to continue until victory

Afro-American P. 5 Sat. 9-8-56

NEW YORK — (ANP)—"We will walk until there is not a single segregated bus left in Montgomery, Ala.," the Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy, vice president of the Improvement Association, told 500 persons here last Monday.

He was speaking at the testimonial banquet for veteran church leader Allen Jordan in the Grand Ball Room of the St. George Hotel, Brooklyn.

Comparing the honoree with "the new colored man" who refuses to be an "Uncle Tom" for a pat on the back and special consideration but stands united for first-class citizen

Highest Court Asked To Upset Alabama Bus Segregation

Constitution Thur. 8-24-56 P. 2

Atlanta Ga.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23 (UP)—The Supreme Court was asked today to overturn a decision that outlawed racial segregation on the city buses of Montgomery, Ala.

A boycott of the bus system by Montgomery Negroes has been in effect for many months. They won a decision in a special three-judge federal court last June 5 that state and city laws requiring separate seating of the races are unconstitutional.

The lower court ordered both the Montgomery Board of Commissioners and the Alabama Public Service Commission to stop enforcing the laws.

Today's appeals were filed by Walter J. Knabe, Montgomery attorney on behalf of the board and by State Attorney General John Patterson for the commission.

Patterson argued that the state commission has never sought to enforce segregation on Montgomery city lines because the state motor carrier law does not apply to vehicles operating wholly within city limits.

He said the lower court itself recognized this fact but said involvement of the state commission in the case "would be harmless . . . even if erroneous."

"We most emphatically disagree," Patterson said.

He contended that the commission has a right to be free of such court orders and the costs of appealing them.

Knabe argued that the federal court had no jurisdiction in the situation.

38b 1956

ALABAMA

SEGREGATION LAW
BUS BOYCOTT

KEY TO CLEAR-CUT DECISION

Advertiser Tues. 5-8-56

3-Judge Panel To Hear Segregation Challenge Here

Montgomery, Ala.

By REX THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

The lengthening Negro boycott of city buses in Montgomery may produce the first clear-cut decision from the Supreme Court on bus segregation. P. 1

A suit challenging constitutionality of Montgomery city and Alabama state segregation laws will be heard by three-judge panel in federal court her Friday.

The complaint, bearing the names of six Negroes and filed as an outgrowth of the mass boycott now in its sixth month, seeks a declaratory judgement holding the anti-race mixing laws invalid, and an injunction to stop the city and state from enforcing them.

Montgomery City Lines Inc., a privaely owned carrier which operates the city's only bus service, has already abandoned segregation for its part. Its drivers have been ordered to refrain from separating white and Negro passengers.

But there have been no reports of actual integration because most Negroes are still boycotting the bus line in protest against hreas city commissioners. Negroes who have continued to patronize the buses have kept to the rear seats where they always sat.

The City of Montgomery has asked Circuit Judge Walter B. Jones in circuit court for an injunction to compel the bus company to rescind the integration order. Jones may announce his ruling this week.

City attorneys contended at a hearing last Thursday that the continued exisence of the non-segregation policy has created serious Commissioner Clyde Sellers testified that in his opinion a breakdown in segregation would invite rioting and would make it "dangerous for people to walk the streets."

If the three-judge federal panel sitting here Friday takes juridciction and rules on the legality of the segregation laws as requested, the outcome either way is certain to be appealed direct to the Supreme Cour.

City and state attorneys have questioned the panel's jurisdiction, arguing that the Aorney General's office, alhough made a defendant, doesn't exercise jurisdiction over city buses in Montgomery. Advertiser

A three-judge panel is chosen to test constitutionality of state laws when stae officials enforce hem.

The Negroes contend the panel does have jurisdicion and are asking for an injunction to prevent either the city or state from enforcing bus segregation laws in Montgomery. P. 2-A

If the panel's decision goes direct to the Supreme Court, it probably will get there ahead of the case from South Carolina on which the high court acted April 23, since that case must be tried again on a question of damages.

The ruling two weeks ago was first interpreted as a decision outlawing bus segregation. But some attorneys have contended since then that the Supreme Court dismissed an appeal only because the case was still pending in the lower court.

It began as a calim for damages by a Negro woman forced to give up her seat on a bus in Columbia, S.C. A judge in U.S. District Court dismissed it; the fourth U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals reversed him, holding the segregation laws invalid, and sent the case back for trial.

The South arolina Electric & Gas Co. appealed otthe Supreme Court and the appeal was dismissed.

Lawyers are divided over the effect of the Supreme Court's order. Attorneys for Montgomery City Lines argued last Thursday that the decision merely sent the South Carolina case back for trial and wasn't a ruling on segregation itself.

There is no issue of damages in the case pending here. If the panel rules Alabama city and state segregation laws unconstitutional, for example, the next step would be an appeal to the Supreme Cour for the decision here to be upheld or reversed.

The South Carolina case hasn't been set for trial in distric court, so the issue here may reach the Supreme Court first.

In bus boycott test—

News P. 1

Segregation law faces U. S. panel

Fri. 5-11-56 B'ham, Ala.

BY HUGH SPARROW, News staff writer

MONTGOMERY, Ala., May 11—A three-judge Federal Court tribunal indicated today that it may be several days before a decision is handed down in the case in which several Montgomery Negroes are attacking the constitutionality of state and local bus laws.

Although Atty. Gen. John Patterson was ready at the outset to argue on a motion to dismiss the Alabama Public Service Commission as a joint defendant. The court made it clear that no action will be taken on any motions until the final decision is announced.

Judge Richard T. Reives, of the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals, declared off the bench during the lunch hour that the decision would not be handed down immediately.

Judge Reives said that it was expected that the taking of testimony and arguments on motions would be completed by late afternoon. But he said that it may be a few days before final action is taken.

During the morning session Atty. Gen. Patterson laid a predicate for the motion asking that the Public Service Commission be dismissed as a joint defendant.

He placed Alabama Public Service Commission President Jack Owen on the stand to testify concerning state laws relating to the commission's jurisdiction in certain cases.

MR. OWEN TESTIFIED that the Public Service Commission does not have authority to regulate the Montgomery city buslines because the commission has no authority to intervene where bus companies operate within the city limits.

The commission, he said, does have authority over the Birmingham transportation system, which is granted by a special act of the Legislature, because several communities are served.

Because of the commission's asserted lack of jurisdiction in the Montgomery case, Patterson is expected to argue this afternoon that the commission be relieved as a defendant.

Such a decision, it was believed, would greatly simplify the case, and would presumably be to the advantage of those who favor retaining segregation laws.

Among the witnesses presented today were four Negro plaintiffs They were Aurelia S. Browder Susie McDonald, Claudette Corvin and Mary Louise Smith.

The latter two women are under the legal age and were represented by their next of kin.

BOTH WOMEN testified with what appeared to be a studied attempt to smear at the state and local segregation laws. One of them testified, with a shrug of the shoulders, that she had only contempt for the segregation laws, because she had been reared in an atmosphere where integration is an accepted practice.

At one time during the testimony of Mary Louise Smith, Presiding Judge Reives directed her to give direct answers to questions and to stop "trying to make speeches."

All four Negroes said they are opposed to segregation and that they would ride the buses again if they were allowed to choose their seats. They said they had refused to patronize the bus company since the boycott began last Dec. 5.

THE 16-YEAR-OLD Colvin girl told the court she was "drug off" a bus by two city policemen and taken handcuffed to city jail on March 2, 1955, after she refused three times to give up her seat to white passengers.

As she told of being locked in a cell and held until released on bond, an unidentified Negro woman in the courtroom screamed and broke into sobs. She left the courtroom a short while later although U. S. marshals didn't compel her to leave after she became quiet.

CITY ATTY. WALTER Knabe did most of the cross examination for the defendants and sought to show that the demand for an end of segregation arose after the bus boycott began. He asked the Negro witnesses why they waited until after Dec. 5 to take court action against segregation laws.

The Colvin girl had this explanation:

"Some of us just didn't have the guts to stand up."

The courtroom was filled mostly with Negro spectators at the outset of the hearing this morning. One of those in the

In June, 1954, a Negro sat in the white section of a bus in Columbia, S. C. News

The driver ordered her out. She said he struck her. She went into federal court, asking $25,000 damages from the company. She argued her case belonged in federal court because bus segregation is unconstitutional. P. 4

But Federal District Judge George Bell Timmerman Sr. ruled her suit did not belong in his court because the bus segregation law of South Carolina was not unconstitutional.

He said the Supreme Court ruling banning public school segregation didn't apply to buses within a state. So he did not let a jury consider her claim for damages.

SHE APPEALED to the U. S. Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals which reversed Judge Timmerman. It said the Supreme Court opinion on schools applied to buses, too, and ordered Timmerman to let the woman's damage suit go to trial.

This meant he would have to tell the jury—and, thereby, the State of South Carolina—that bus segregation was wrong.

The bus company appealed to the Supreme Court. That court simply dismissed the appeal. It cited a previous Supreme Court ruling that it would not consider an appeal from a case where there had been no final judgment.

SOME LAWYERS — and Southern officials—took this to mean the court hadn't ruled against bus segregation but was only throwing the case back to Judge Timmerman for trial of the damage suit.

Others argued the court had, in effect, upheld the Circuit Court in outlawing segregation since it let the appellate court's ruling stand. It's possible—but it's hard to see how it can happen—that in a later, fuller decision the Supreme Court may overrule the appellate court and hold bus segregation legal.

That was the beginning of the confusion. Southern bus companies—including the one in Montgomery—decided the Supreme Court had banned bus segregation and, despite state laws to the contrary, desegregated their buses.

THEN SOUTHERN state authorities stepped in. The South Carolina Public Service Commission ordered the Columbia buses to continue segregation. A state judge gave the same ruling in Montgomery.

Their argument: The Supreme Court hasn't specifically banned bus segregation. But now the four Montgomery Negroes, by their appeal to the three-judge federal court there to order an end to bus segregation, are starting the machinery for an eventual ruling by the Supreme Court.

Ala. Bus Boycotters Tell of Smooth-Running Car Pool for Protestors of Jimcrow Travel

Bystander Thurs. 3-22-56 P. 1

Des Moines, Iowa

Montgomery Ala.—The mass trial of the 93 Negro citizens, including 23 clergymen, who were indicted as leaders of the 16-week-old boycott of Montgomery city line buses, began here Monday.

The Rev. Martin Luther King, Jr., one of the 93 arrested, Tuesday told how a smooth-running motor pool provides transportation for Negroes who boycott buses to protest racial segregation.

Other witnesses testified that a newly-organized Montgomery Improvement Association, which came into being the day the boycott started last Dec. 5, arranged for the car pool and has paid for gasoline and other expenses of the driver.

The Rev. Mr. King is president of the Association. The state is endeavoring to link to a "conspiracy" to hinder the operation of Montgomery City Lines, Inc., a privately operated bus company.

Motorists Volunteer

Rufus Lewis, chairman of the Improvement Association's transportation committee, told the court how the committee inauguarated the car pool soon after the Negroes stopped riding city buses in protest against segregated seating facilities.

Lewis said the committee arranged to pay volunteer drivers $4 a day for the use of their cars and bought gasoline for some. He said approximately some 200 Negro motorists volunteered for the assignments of getting other Negroes to and from work.

He said the committee worked out a detailed list of "dispatch" stations to get Negroes to work in the morning and "pick-up stations" to get them home at the close of the day.

Lewis said mimeographed lists of the stations have been distributed in Negro communities and read at mass meetings held twice weekly in Negro churches since the boycott started. One such list was introduced by the state as evidence.

High court may end need of bus boycott

Afro-American P. 1

Sat. 4-7-56

By AL SWEENEY
AFRO Special Writer

WASHINGTON, D.C.—On the agenda of the U. S. Supreme Court is a case that might ultimately bring an end to the bus boycott in Montgomery, Ala.

The case is listed merely as: Sarah Mae Flemming vs. South Carolina Electric and Gas Company.

Baltimore, Md.

THE CASE involves Mrs. Sarah Flemming of Columbia, S.C., who like Mrs. Rosa Parks of Montgomery, Ala., was forced by a bus driver to change her seat.

Columbia, S.C., like Montgomery, Ala., grants police power to the drivers to apply the so-called segregation laws as they see fit.

On July 14, 1955, the Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals, ruled the principle of the School Segregation Cases applied to Mrs. Flemming's complaint against the bus company.

The appeals court sent the case back to the District Court to be heard. The District Court had dismissed the case on the ground that the state statute under the doctrine of "separate but equal" was valid.

* * *

THE APPEALS court wrote in its July 14, 1955 ruling that the Supreme Court in its rulings on the school cases that the "separate but equal doctrine . . " can no longer "be regarded as a correct statement of the law."

The case has been appealed to the Supreme Court.

Since January, it has been listed on the agenda.

Baltimore, Md.

THE AGENDA contains a list of cases that members of the bench are expected to discuss at the Saturday conferences for the court.

It doesn't necessarily mean that all of the cases listed will be discussed at any particular conference, but the listing indicates that the case ranks high among those to be examined.

Court observers have a number of theories why there has been no decision in the Flemming case.

* * *

ONE IS that the Court might be waiting for the proper time to make its decision.

Secondly, there might be a dispute among its members on the ruling.

Thirdly, the calendar is too jammed with other cases that can be taken and settled easier than those involving the "red hot racial question."

* * *

AT ANY RATE, if the Supreme Court backs the Appeals Court ruling then segregation on a local level is doomed

Hence, the case in Montgomery, which may be heard in April before a three-judge court, might be settled before the parties set foot in court.

City To Ask Rehearing On Integration Decision

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

ORDER EXPECTED AFTER DEC. 10

Advertiser Wed. 11-21-56

Judge Says Court Ruling Affects Only Montgomery

Montgomery, Ala. P. 1

By JO ANN FLIRT

The Supreme Court decision declaring Alabama laws requiring segregation on buses unconstitutional will directly affect only te city of Montgomery, U.S. Circuit Judge Richard T. Rives said yesterday when questioned by The Advertiser.

The week-old decision has been the basis of much discussion and argument concerning its effect. It has been suggested by some that since the Alabama Public Service Commission was a party to the suit, the decision would affect the whole state.

This is not true, according to Judge Rives, one of the three-judge panel which rendered the original decision affirmed last week by the Supreme Court.

Judge Rives declined to comment on the constitutionality of a voluntary bus company rule requiring segregation if the rule was un-enforced by either city or state officers.

The terms or conditions of the Supreme Court decision need be no mystery, Judge Rives said, and explained that it can be "neither more nor less" than the judgment rendered here in the federal case last June.

That ruling declared Alabama ordinances requiring bus segregation in Montgomery unconstitutional and restrained the city commission and others from enforcing those laws.

UNLESS DELAYED

The mandate or judgment from the Supreme Court will be mailed to the Clerk of the U.S. District Court here probably sometime after Dec. 10, unless delayed by special ruling of the court or by petitions for rehhearings, Judge Rives said.

That judgment resulting from the decision will go to no other court and will directly affect no other city, he said.

Upon receipt of the official Supreme Court judgment, the district court will, without further order, issue writs of injunction against the defendants in the case ordering them to restrain from enforcing segregation laws on transportation facilities.

The judgment and written opinion of the district court setting out the reasoning behind the decision will then become, as do all court opinions, a precedent. The Supreme Court did not write an opinion, Judge Rives said.

AFFIRMED DECISION

The Supreme Court decision did nothing but affirm the June decision of the three-panel federal court here, Judge Rives stressed.

The panel was composed of Judge Rives and District Judges Seybourne Lynne and Frank M. Johnson Jr.

The case in uestion was a class action brought by Aurealia S. Browder and three other Montgomery Negro women in behalf of all Negroes "similarly situated." They asked the court for an injunction restraining officials from enfo segregation laws on buses.

Defendants were members of the Board of Commissioners, the city chief of police, members of the Alab Public Service Commission, The Montgomery City Lines, Inc. and two of its employed drivers, James Blake and Robert N. Cleere.

Advertiser P. 2-A.

The defendants maintained they were only upholding Alabama statutes and city ordinances while the Negroes claimed those laws violated the "eual protections" and "due process" clauses of the 14th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution.

The three-member court, reuired in all cases which seek to declare state statutes unconstitutional, ruled 2-1 that segregation laws were unconstitutional. Judge Lynne dissented.

LYNN DISSENTED

The decision declared the "ultimate uestion" in the case to be whether or not the segregation laws involved were constitutional. It then stated:

"In their private affairs, in the nesses, it is clear that the people themselves have the liberty to select their own associates and the persons with whom they will do budiness. Indeed, we think that such liberty is guaranteed by the due process clause of that (fourteenth) Amendment.

"There is, however, a difference, a constitutional difference, between voluntary adherence to custom and the perpetuation and enforcement of that custom by law."

In making the decision the court declared the separate but eual doctrine expressed by the Supreme Court in Plessy vs. Ferguson (a 1896 intra-state transportation case) could "no longer be safely followed as a correct statement of the law."

Two weeks later, on June 19, the three-judge panel handed down the judgment which the Supreme Court decision of last week affirmed.

After ruling segregation laws unconstitutional the judgment then declared:

"It is further ordered, adjudged and decreed that the defendants, their successors in office, assign, agent, nervants, employes and persons acting on their behalf, be and they are hereby permanently enjoined and restrained from enforcing the aforesaid statutes and ordinances or any other statutes or ordinances which may reuire plaintiffs or any other Negroes similarly situated to submit to segregation in the use of the bus transportational facilities in the City of Montgomery and from doing any acts or taking any action to reuire the Montgomery Bus Lines, Inc. or its drivers, or any other public transportation facility or its drivers, to enforce such statutes or ordinances reuiring the segregation of white and Negro passengers in the operation of public motor bus transportation facilities in the City of Montgomery."

An accompanying injunction was then granted and suspended pending the appeal to the Supreme Court. It will be this district court injunction which will go into effect upon formal notice of the Supreme Court's affirmance of the decision.

State And Bus Ruling

News P. 10

On two occasions in the past I wrote you concerning the appeal made by the state of Alabama for the Alabama Public Service Commission to the U. S. Supreme Court regarding the bus segregation case in Montgomery. These letters were dated 21 June and 24 August, 1956.

Among other things I stated the following:

Mon. 11-19-56

"It will be really interesting to wait and see what the next step will be by the defendants, if and when the Supreme Court declares in favor of (as it most certainly will, if past action is any judge of future action) and upholds decision of the three-judge lower court ruling."

Patterson

"I would like to ask Mr. Patterson just what the state and he will do if and when the decision is rendered against the appeal, i.e., against segregation on the buses. Will he abide by the ruling or will he again ignore the 'law of the land'? And he is asking specifically for a ruling which '. . . . will affect every city in the United States' which operates a bus system similar to the one in Montgomery."

I will be very curious to know the answer when it comes—and it should not be long in coming now.

JAMES H. M. HENDERSON,
Tuskegee Institute, Ala., Nov. 14, 1956.

BUS BOYCOTT PLEA TO U.S. COURT FAILS

Times P. 38-C

Thurs. 11-15-56

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Nov. 14 (AP) — United States District Judge Frank M. Johnson Jr. refused today to stop the enforcement of a state injunction against a car pool by Montgomery Negroes boycotting city buses.

New York

The city obtained the injunction yesterday against further use of the pool. The United States Supreme Court outlawed bus segregation yesterday in a case stemming from the eleven-month-old boycott.

J. H. Bagley, manager of the Montgomery Bus Company, said his drivers would continue to enforce segregated seating until a state injunction requiring it was dissolved.

He said an injunction issued in May stands despite yesterday's Supreme Court decision.

A spokesman of the boycotters, the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., indicated that boycotters probably would end the anti-segregation protest .

Application Of The Bus Ruling

News

The comment of U. S. Circuit Judge Richard T. Rives as to the application of the Supreme Court's recent ruling against bus segregation should, we think, have careful attention. It seems to us to be usefully clarifying. Judge Rives was a member of the three-judge panel which in a two-to-one division handed down the ruling which the Supreme Court upheld. He said the ruling applies specifically to Montgomery and is not automatically

Birm. Ala.

Pub. 11-25-56

effective in the rest of Alabama and the South generally.

The decision of the court was that Montgomery and state bus segregation laws are unconstitutional. That, Judge Rives said, would set a precedent for similar cases in other places. But its direct result will be an injunction against the enforcement of the laws only in Montgomery, he said.

In Washington soon after the ruling a court attendant said that the transmission of the Supreme Court's decision to Montgomery should come about Dec. 12. Justice Black this week rejected an application to speed up delivery of the decision.

Meantime, the Montgomery City Commission announced Tuesday it would seek a rehearing on the Supreme Court decision.

While the principle involved in the ruling is broad and does, as Judge Rives said, set a legal precedent, it is desirable that there be clear understanding of the steps and the immediate scope involved in its application.

RACES

Time p. 20

Back with Humility

To the 50,000 Negroes of Montgomery, Ala., the week dawned (as one of them put it) "darker than a thousand midnights." For more than eleven months, in a mass movement combining Christian fervor with Gandhi-like passive resistance, they had mounted and sustained in the "Cradle of the Confederacy" an almost total boycott of the city's segregated buses (TIME, April 2). Led by a handful of well-educated and young Negro leaders—notably by the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., 27, pastor of a local Baptist church—they had efficiently put together and operated a car pool of some 200 vehicles to ferry themselves to and from work. Now the leaders and lawyers sat glumly in the Montgomery County courthouse waiting for the state circuit court to outlaw the Negro car pool on the charge—made by the city commission—that it was actually a business enterprise operating without a franchise.

Chicago, Ill.

In the middle of the proceedings they saw an A.P. reporter hand a piece of paper to their white opponents, who promptly hustled outside. Minutes later the news was out: the Supreme Court, ruling on the Montgomery case, had unanimously upheld a district court's ruling that the "separate but equal" doctrine was now as legally dead for segregated public transportation as it had already been declared dead for public schools and public recreational facilities. The effect of the decision: to invalidate Alabama's intrastate Jim Crow bus laws and to set the grounds for invalidating similar laws in eleven other Southern states.

Mon. 11-26-56

"Joyous Daybreak." The next night 10,000 Negroes jammed two of Montgomery's largest churches and adjacent streets to savor their triumph. Appearing before each group in turn was the spiritual architect of that triumph, the Rev. Dr. King. He was too wise to be triumphant; he read to each congregation a statement that should loom large in the Negro's long, patient fight for equality:

"All along, we have sought to carry out the protest on high moral standards . . . rooted in the deep soils of the Christian faith. We have carefully avoided bitterness. [The] months have not at all been easy . . . Our feet have often been tired and our automobiles worn, but we have kept going with the faith that in our struggle we had cosmic companionship, and that, at bottom, the universe is on the side of justice. [The Supreme Court's decision was] a revelation of the eternal validity of this faith, [and] came to all of us as a joyous daybreak to end the long

Joe Holloway Jr.

MONTGOMERY'S REVEREND KING
Too wise to crow.

night of enforced segregation in public transportation."

"Just Sit Down." When the court order comes through, Dr. King urged his followers, act sensibly but without pride. On the one hand, "we have been going to the back of the bus for so long there is danger that we instinctively will go straight back there again and perpetuate segregation. Just sit down where a seat is convenient." On the other hand, "I would be terribly disappointed if any of you go back the buses bragging, 'We, the Negroes, won a victory over the white people' . . . I hope nobody will go back with undue arrogance. If you do, our struggle will be lost all over the South. Go back with humility and meekness."

* His successor as Red Cross president: NATO's retiring Supreme Allied Commander in Europe, General Alfred M. Gruenther.

Negroes Ask One-Hour National Work Stoppage

Evening Star P. 1-B Oct. 2-23-56

'Passive Resistance' Policy Urged As Protest on Alabama Arrests

Washington, D. C.

By the Associated Press

A Nation-wide passive resistance movement featuring work stoppages and mass fastings by the Nation's Negroes today appeared a possibility if the lengthy Alabama racial crisis is not resolved soon.

The first step toward development of such a program was taken yesterday when Representative Adam Clayton Powell, Democrat of New York, announced a call for a one-hour mass work stoppage by every Negro in the Nation on March 28 in support of the bus boycott at Montgomery, Ala.

Mr. Powell said Negro leaders meeting at the New York church where he is pastor agreed on the day of prayer March 28 which will be climaxed by a brief work stoppage. Members of all races and faiths were urged to join with the Negro demonstrators.

"Gandhi-Type" Program

The Negro pastor said it would be designated "National Deliverance Day of Prayer," with no Negro of any age attending school or working between 2 and 3 p.m.

A spokesman said this might be a forerunner to a possible "national Mahatma Gandhi-type movement." The late Indian leader made famous a passive resistance program of fasting and nonviolent opposition to British rule.

While plans for the work stoppage were being made in New York, Negroes walked the streets of Montgomery in a mass 24-hour pilgrimage to prove their willingness to walk if necessary to carry on their 11-week-old boycott in protest against segregation on city buses.

100 Defendants Listed

Ninety of them walked to the courthouse in Montgomery for arraignment on antiboycott indictments returned by a grand jury Tuesday. All pleaded not guilty and their trials were set to start March 19. A court officer said 10 more warrants were outstanding. This brings the number of defendants to 100.

Defense attorneys filed demurrers contesting the indictments which charged violation of Alabama's law against "illegal" boycotting. Maximum penalty under the law is six months in jail and a $1,000 fine.

Circuit Judge Eugene Carter withheld a ruling on the demurrers which said, in effect, that the State has failed to make out a case even if the facts alleged in the indictments are true.

Folsom Gets Support

At the State capitol, Gov. James E. Folsom of Alabama won support from about 75 newspaper editors and publishers and radio and television broadcasters for a proposed bi-racial commission to settle differences between the white and Negro races.

Afterwards the Governor said: "Anybody with any sense knows that Negro children and white children are not going to school together in Alabama any time in the near future . . . in fact, not in a long time."

At Charleston, S. C., Roy Wilkins, executive secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, termed the indictment of 100 Montgomery Negro leaders "the Soviet communism method."

"Here we have the police knocking on doors and taking men away," he told the Southeast Regional Convention of the NAACP. "Here we have mass arrests. Here we have a grand jury delivering a general lecture on observance of the segregation line precisely like the Communists.

Mr. Wilkins added: "Montgomery whites claim not to be able to understand 'their' Negroes. Well, I'll be glad to explain. 'Their' Negroes are sick and tired of segregation, of the insults and mistreatment and daily humiliation. It is that simple. Their cups have run over."

Star P. 10-A

Other Developments

Other developments on the segregation scene included:

BALTIMORE—About 300 ministers attending the Baltimore and Washington conference of the African Methodist Episcopal Church protested what they termed the "humiliation, arrest and persecution" of Negroes in Montgomery. They adopted a resolution calling on the Federal Government to "exhaust every effort to give relief to these citizens whose civil rights have been violated."

NEW ORLEANS — Catholic Action of the South, official newspaper of the archdiocese, declared in a front-page editorial that Catholic members of the Louisiana Legislature who prepare bills to force segregation in private schools are subject to automatic excommunication if the laws are put into effect.

TAMPA, FLA.—An unidentified Negro who refused to move to the rear of a segregated bus assaulted the bus driver and then fled from the crowded vehicle. The white bus driver, Perry Coker, 50, received facial lacerations.

CLAYTON, ALA.—Nearly 300 residents of Barbour County organized a white citizens' council pledged to preserve racial segregation in the county, where Negroes outnumber white residents.

OXFORD, MISS.—Allen English, a Southern disc jockey for an Oxford radio station, said he planned to hire a plane and fly over Chicago Monday dropping 25,000 Confederate battle flags. Mr. English, 27, said he conceived the idea after Mississippi-born Disc Jockey Al Benson, a 48-year-old Negro, showered copies of the United States Constitution on Jackson, Miss., Wednesday.

Red Chinese Praise Montgomery Negroes

TOKYO, Feb. 25 (AP).—A Communist Chinese newspaper today praised "the heroic struggle of . . . Negroes in Montgomery, Ala.," in their dispute over seating on public buses.

The Tientsin Ta Kung Pao said the treatment received by the Negroes "is an insult to the United States Constitution and the memory of Abraham Lincoln."

Peiping radio, quoting the article, said:

"This struggle . . . has won the warm support of the American people, both white and Negro, as well as peoples throughout the world.

"The Montgomery incident is only one example of racial discrimination occurring daily in the United States. This outrage against basic human rights . . . has aroused indignation of all just people."

Work Stoppage Called

Nation-wide Leadership Approves

MONTGOMERY, Ala.—(ANP) — Negro leaders across the nation echoed their support last weekend for an hour-long nationwide work stoppage March 28 in sympathy with the 90 Montgomery Negroes indicted for their part in the 12-week-old bus boycott.

The plan, described as a forerunner to a possible "national Mohandas Gandhi-type movement," was suggested to a group of New York clergymen at a meeting called last Friday by Rep. Adam Clayton Powell (D., N. Y.), pastor of the 15-000 member Abyssinia Baptist church in New York.

Members of all races and faiths in the nation will be urged to join with Negroes in a "national deliverance day of prayer," with no Negro attending school or working between 2 and 3 p. m. Black Press

The demonstration suggested by Rep. Powell gathered momentum across the country.

Powell said he had received pledges of cooperation in the one-hour work lay-off from ministers in the South, North, East and West. He said he hoped to win the cooperation of employers and employees in halting all but vital services from 2 to 3 p. m. on Wednesday before Easter. Pitts. 3-8-56

Powell said unsolicited contributions of money have been pouring in to help the Montgomery boycotters in their legal defense.

In Boston, the Rev. Walter O. Davis, president of the city's interdenominational ministerial association, said 22,000 Negroes there would join in the work stoppage. Pittsburgh Courier

In Chicago, NAACP officials said they planned to go along with the "Deliverance Day" program.

And in New York, the National Council of Churches pledged its support to the Negroes of Montgomery in their fight against segregated public transportation.

A telegram from the Rev. Dr. Eugene Carson Blake of Philadelphia, president of the council, to the Rev. Solomon Seay, one of the 24 Negro ministers indicted in the boycott, restated the council's position that segregation is unnecessary and undesirable and a violation of the gospel of love and human brotherhood. Black Press

Two Negro leaders, both NAACP officials, said they favored a national protest against the Montgomery indictments but doubted the practicality of a one-hour work stoppage. Pitts. 3-8-56

James Stewart, president of the Oklahoma chapter of the NAACP, said special prayers and collections were being made for the Montgomery Negroes in 50 churches around the state, but that he does not believe the Oklahoma City branch of the NAACP will favor the "Deliverance Day" strike.

Negro Work Stoppage March 28 Ruled Out

Courier-Journal Wed. 2-29-56

New York, Feb. 28 (AP)—Sponsors of a nationwide prayer day March 28 in support of the Montgomery, Ala., Negro boycott of buses said today there will be no work stoppage. P. 16

"We are interested in prayer only," said Representative Powell (D., N. Y.), pastor of a 15,000-member New York Negro congregation.

Louisville, Ky.

After a meeting of New York Negro leaders Friday, it was announced that they had agreed no Negroes should attend school or work between 2 and 3 p.m. on the prayer day.

AMEZ bishops back 'Prayer Day' in civil rights statement

Afro-American Baltimore, Md.
Sat. 3-24-56

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — The Board of Bishops of the AME Zion Church issued a strong human rights statement from its headquarters here. P. 20

It urged the denomination to observe "Prayer Day" March 28 and another day of prayer to be set by the National Council of Churches.

The board is composed of Bish- W. J. Walls, secretary; W. C. Brown, R. L. Jones, H. T. Medford, H. B. Shaw, S. G. Spottswood, W. A. Stewart and D. C. Pope.

The statement reads:

"It has dawned upon us that the race of colored men has not been fully freed by the issue of the Civil War, neither has union Federal Government been fully saved in the United States. The race is still half free and half slave.

"Both North and South, politically, have consented to this partial and unsolved status of 16 millions of the population. Now the prosegregationists boast that they are, at last, winning the Civil War.

* * *

BY RESISTING the Supreme Court Decision, a new test of a national law, and by unlawful local and state enactments . . . and state practices of holding the colored citizen out of the privileges and prerogatives of citizenship, it is meant to destroy his full freedom status.

"The new factors against the advocates of these disruptionists of the American social order, are:

* * *

"1. THE WORLD CLIMATE of freedom combatting communism with its atheism and slavery;

"2. The colored man's claim of full citizenship and unbridled loyalty in the service of our country; and

"3. The changing South. This, indeed, presupposes that traditionalists and backward lookers in that section are still in the majority, but the star of hope shines all the same.

* * *

"THE LIFE of democracy itself has been attacked by these so-called free acting agents of democracy. Democracy is liberty, and as Pope says, Liberty like nature must be restrained by the same laws which first herself ordained.

"The Jeffersonians or states-rights who claim liberty on a local level forget that on a national level, there can be total liberty of freedom for the nation only by restraining some of the assumed liberty which the local group creates for itself.

"For liberty is not for the individual only, for one man's rights end when the other man's rights begin. This is the essense of democracy. Cooperation and adjustment are hence imperative for self-governing men:

"THIS IS the liberalism which holds democracy together, and we can term that Christianized Democracy. There never was enough freedom in democracy for segregation.

"Where segregation dominates, freedom is out. It enslaves both those who dominate and those they dominate. This was not discovered in the South until the world looked on and pointed it out after our global wars.

"Those who refuse to see it are standing in the way to block democracy and peace, not in America only, but in the whole world.

* * *

"WE DO NOT believe there will be any major civil strife or wide spread violence in working out the issues of freedom, for experience and Christian judgment will save us from such extremes.

"We counsel our people to beware of all wild talk of physical force or violence. There has been too much bloodshed and our religion tells us, freedom true and permanent, does not come through hatred and fight.

"Ours is the way of prayer, faith, and bloodless resistance. Our weapons are love and peace, patience and firm determination in the right, even to the point of suffering any consequence that love will lead us to in pursuit of freedom.

* * *

"THIS IS OUR theme and way to win. We offer all men this approach as salvation's way for our nation. We just must prove in America that Jesus' way will cause people to live and let live in the same geographic bounds.

"We regret that civil rights claims, in the Montgomery Bus Boycott, the Autherine Lucy contest to enter Alabama University as a student, the denial of the vote in Mississippi and other states South, have been met with violence and threatening, arresting of leaders, including ministers of the gospel who teach that the freedom of the gospel makes men free indeed, in the society of earth and heaven.

"The challenge to the religion of love and goodwill with firmness in the right, has come into its day in American life, brought by these messengers of God.

* * *

"THEY HAVE met in churches, prayed and resolved, and come forth to suffer together with Jesus Christ leading them on the divine way.

"They teach patience and persistence, and that no hand be lifted to fight, but held firm and relentless until relief they seek through walking, pooling means, and living out the hardship to a victorious end.

* * *

"THE MANIFESTO of southern members of the Congress presents the country again as being divided. This time not only by sectional strife but by government departments in meeting the provisions of the Constitution.

"Two departments (executive and legislative) have always been depended upon to curb the action of one going off in the extremity. We shall now see if the executive department will side with law and order.

"The denunciation of the Supreme Court by the southern legislators threatens to be a vote against the Constitution authority by a department of government,

* * *

"WE HAVE EVERY reason to believe that the President will break the tie for the government and thus fulfill his belief and campaign assurance that there shall be "No Second Class Citizens in This Country.

"Our prayers, our means and belief in the waking justice of our dear country, go with our brothers and sisters in Montgomery, and with those in the fight for integration in economics, industry, education and politics and human rights.

* * *

"WE THEREFORE, rally our church to pray on those prayer days, March 28th, anniversary of the passage of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution, and on another day about to be set by the National Council of Churches for all Churches, white and black, to pray for freedom to triumph through goodwill of Christians and guidance of the followers of the Lord.

"We pray: God speed our brave sons and daughters who face the brunt in the acute areas where the enemy rages strongest. This is accomplished by the issues now in contest.

"We counsel that we shall know no rest from this faith with wroks, nor cease to pray until our rights every where are attained and we send material support where our prayers go. We are watching the scene for a guide to our voting in coming elections."

Prayers offered in segregation demonstration

News P. 6
By Atom, Ala.
Wed. 3-28-56

By The Associated Press

Today is "national deliverance day of prayer"—a demonstration stemming from the bus boycott by Montgomery Negroes.

Sponsors of the movement have urged whites as well as Negroes to offer up prayers.

The leader, Rep. Adam Clayton Powell Jr., New York Negro clergyman as well as Democratic congressman, said the prayers would be "for the deliverance of all who suffer from persecution and . . . for the salvation of all who are afflicted with racial prejudice."

AMONG CITIES LISTED by Powell for major observances were New York, Chicago, Los Angeles, Washington, Columbus, Ohio; Cleveland, Philadelphia and Galveston, Tex.

"It is impossible to estimate how many will take part," Powell said. "This is a movement, not an organization," he explained.

A New York City rally was set for today in Manhattan Center, with Protestant, Roman Catholic and Jewish participation.

Powell said some cities had been forced to postpone central rallies because meeting places were not available.

A rally in the Chicago Coliseum is set for April 11. The United Packinghouse Workers said its members in Chicago would pause from their jobs for five minutes today to join in prayer in "protest against segregation."

AMONG PHASES of the demonstration listed by Powell were:

A vote by the Massachusetts Legislature to halt work at noon to pray, and a gubernatorial proclamation in California designating today as a day of prayer.

Powell said backers of the day of prayer represent 10 million Negro churchgoers, and the meetings were interracial, interfaith and interdenominational.

Sponsors arranged to have a Negro from Montgomery attend meetings in the major cities.

Chicago Sets Hour Of Prayer

Daily World
Sun. 4-1-56

CHICAGO—(ANP)—The Chicago NAACP is expecting "thousands of persons" to attend a mass meeting and "hour of prayer" in connection with the Montgomery bus boycott on April 11. P. 1

Willoughby Abner, president of the Chicago NAACP, has called upon all Chicago citizens to attend the meeting.

WHITE HOUSEWIVES GET THREATS TO STOP 'HAULING' MAIDS (MONTGOMERY, ALABAMA)

PHONE CALLS, LETTERS

Advertiser p. 1

Housewives Get Threats To Stop 'Hauling' Maids

Wed. 10-17-56

Montgomery, Ala.

By BOB INGRAM

A sudden outbreak of anonymous telephone calls and letters have been reported in Montgomery in connection with the long boycott of buses by Negroes.

A large number of white housewives have received calls and letters urging that they cease their practice of driving Negro maids to and from work.

In several instances the callers have threatened physical violence and used profanity in talking with the housewives.

The letters, which contain no threats, merely suggest that persons identified in the letter as having continued the practice of workers be called "day or night" and urged to cease the practice.

As a result, the housewives identified in the letters have received calls at all hours of the night. In most cases the caller has uttered but one sentence, then hung up:

"Isn't it about time you went to get your Nigger maid?"

The letters, which were received in several sections of south Montgomery last weekend, said in full:

"Dear Friend: Listed below are a few of the white people who are still hauling their Negro maids. This must be stopped. These people would appreciate a call from you, day or night. Let's let them know how we feel about them hauling Negroes."

The most recent letter received listed the names and telephone numbers of 11 Montgomerians who were identified as hauling Negro maids. Included in this group were a number of prominent persons including a widely known eye, ear and nose specialist, the sales manager of one of the city's biggest firms, a South Montgomery school teacher and a well known engineer.

Advertiser

All 11 have since received a number of calls, most of them after midnight.

P. 2-a

One of the housewives listed in this letter, who protested when aroused by a midnight call, was told "You ain't heard nothing yet unless you stop hauling your Negro maid."

Meanwhile, there have been reports of housewives being called and threatened with violence if they did not cease transporting their maids. In one instance the caller identified himself as "Joe X," and in several other instances the name of Johnny Rebel" has been used.

All the persons called are in agreement that the callers have been white men.

Police Chief G. J. Ruppenthl confirmed yesterday he had received one report of such a call but that the report had come from a person who lived outside the city limits and thus out of his jurisdiction.

The same housewife who called Ruppenthal also indicated yesterday she intended to confer with local postal authorities to determine if the letter mailed out did not violate federal regulations.

Postmaster Charles Moore said yesterday he had received no reports of any threatening letters but promised that if such letters were being mailed he would see that a thorough investigation was made.

HOUSEWIVES GET THREATS TO STOP
HAULING 'NEGRO MAIDS'
Montgomery, Ala.

PHONE CALLS, LETTERS

Advertiser p.1

Housewives Get Threats To Stop 'Hauling' Maids

Wed. 10-17-56

Montgomery

By BOB INGRAM

A sudden outbreak of anonymous telephone calls and letters have been reported in Montgomery in connection with the long boycott of buses by Negroes.

A large number of white housewives have received calls and letters urging that they cease their practice of driving Negro maids to and from work.

In several instances the callers have threatened physical violence and used profanity in talking with the housewives.

The letters, which contain no threats, merely suggest that persons identified in the letter as having continued the practice of workers be called "day or night" and urged to cease the practice.

As a result, the housewives identified in the letters have received calls at all hours of the night. In most cases the caller has uttered but one sentence, then hung up:

"Isn't it about time you went to get your Nigger maid?"

The letters, which were received in several sections of south Montgomery last weekend, said in full:

"Dear Friend: Listed below are a few of the white people who are still hauling their Negro maids. This must be stopped. These people would appreciate a call from you, day or night. Let's let them know how we feel about them hauling Negroes."

The most recent letter received listed the names and telephone numbers of 11 Montgomerians who were identified as hauling Negro maids. Included in this group were a number of prominent persons including a widely known eye, ear and nose specialist, the sales manager of one of the city's biggest firms, a South Montgomery school teacher and a well known engineer.

Advertiser

All 11 have since received a number of calls, most of them after midnight.

P. 2-A

One of the housewives listed in this letter, who protested when aroused by a midnight call, was told "You ain't heard nothing yet unless you stop hauling your Negro maid."

Meanwhile, there have been reports of housewives being called and threatened with violence if they did not cease transporting their maids. In one instance the caller identified himself as "Joe X," and in several other instances the name of Johnny Rebel" has been used.

All the persons called are in agreement that the callers have been white men.

Police Chief G. J. Ruppenthl confirmed yesterday he had received one report of such a call but that the report had come from a person who lived outside the city limits and thus out of his jurisdiction.

The same housewife who called Ruppenthal also indicated yesterday she intended to confer with local postal authorities to determine if the letter mailed out did not violate federal regulations.

Postmaster Charles Moore said yesterday he had received no reports of any threatening letters but promised that if such letters were being mailed he would see that a thorough investigation was made.

Anonymous Callers Harrassing Houeswives For Rides to Negro Maids in Montgomery

Constitution Wed. 10-17-56 Atlanta Ga.

P. 2

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Oct. 16 (AP)—A campaign of harassment by anonymous phone calls and letters is being conducted against white housewives who drive their Negro maids to and from work, The Montgomery Advertiser said tonight.

Negroes in Montgomery have been refusing to ride segregated city buses since December. Bus boycott leaders operate a car pool that provides transportation for many Negroes.

The Advertiser said male callers have threatened physical violence and used profanity in talking with housewives.

Most of the calls, received after midnight, were reported to have consisted of the single sentence:

"Isn't it about time you went to get your nigger maid?"

Letters reported received in several sections of south Montgomery last weekend, about the time the calls began, said in full:

"Dear Friend: Listed below are a few of the white people who are still hauling their Negro maids. This must be stopped. These people would appreciate a call from you, day or night. Let's let them know how we feel about them hauling Negroes."

A number of prominent Montgomery residents were listed in some of the letters.

The bus boycott began last December in protest to the arrest of a Negro woman for violating a segregated seating law.

38b 1956

What Des Moines Ministers Are Saying About Injustices In Montgomery, Ala.

REV. R. L. RYLES

REV. JESSE J. HAWKINS

The Rev. R. L. Ryles, pastor of the Philadelphia Seventh Day Adventist Church here delivered the following prayer in behalf of the citizens of Alabama at the massed prayer service held recently:

Bystander P. 1

"Oh, Thou Almightly God, Maker and Ruler of heaven and earth. Thou who has made us and koweth all about us, we come to Thee humbly beseeching that Thou would hear our cry and our supplications as they ascend to Thy throne today.

Thurs. 3-29-56

"Father in heaven, we are weak but Thou are mighty. We are not worthy to take Thy holy name upon our sinful lips. We thank Thee for Thy divine love, for the plan of Salvation, for Thou Son, Jesus Christ, who died that we might live. We thank Thee for the Holy Spirit and for Thy guarding angels. We thank Thee for the privilege of prayer.

Des Moines

"Father in heaven, Thou are acquainted with the affairs of nations.

"Frederick Douglass once said that he prayed for 40 years with his lips; but, that his prayers were most effective the morning he prayed with his feet, that was when he stole away from the south," spoke the Rev. J. J. Hawkins, a Christian Church minister here, in a meditation and massed prayers service for the citizens of Alabama.

Bystander P. 1

"For weeks in Montgomery, Ala., thousands of loyal Americans have left their homes happily 'Facing the rising sun of a new day begun;' singing, 'Let us march on till victory is won.' They realize that one day all of us will sing a new

Thurs. 3-29-56

Stony the road we trod
Bitter the chastning rod,
Felt in the days when hope had died;
Yet with a steady beat,
Have not our weary feet
Come to the place for which our fathers signed!

Des Moines, Iowa

"What place was it for which our fathers signed? The place of freedom,, liberty, justice and the pursuit of happiness.

"We are true Americans; we are loyal Americans; we are tired Americans—tired of waiting, just waiting. We are tired—tired of being used as clown on the stage; tired of being slaves to those who do not wish us well; tired of being footballs in the field of anthropology to be kicked around.

"There is an unrest in Montgomery, Ala., and the rest of the South today because the decent citizens of that section of America have discovered as one writer observed that the guarantees of the Constitution mean only what the local sheriff, newspaper, selfish businessman, or the plantation owners want them to mean.

Bystander P. 2

Deprive Citizens

"Their interpretations of the Bill of Rights are their own selfish interpretations which are enforced with a pistol, shotgun, the blackjack, and lately through the statewide Citizens Councils, with economic actions that deprive citizens of employment, credit and homes.

ALABAMA

"Any organization which advocates peace and Constitutional rights is immediately branded as 'subversive.' And yet, when other groups arise to subvert and to block our Constitutional and the principles on which this America stands, it appears that our Department of Justice sits on its hands and looks the other way.

"The above actions and attitudes have put at least 60,000 Americans in one community on the march for peace happiness and justice. And they will win through God's Spirit."

* * *

REV. R. L. RYLES

Thou knoweth the nature of men and how prone we are to be selfish and to forget Thee. We are so unlike Thee. We greatly need more of thy virtues. We want to rightly represent Thee in all our dealings one with another.

'God of Love'

"We know that Thou are a God of love, a God of peace and long-suffering and patience. Will Thou please help us to be patient with men as Thou are patient with us? We greatly need that kind of patience that will enable us to work and pray and then by faith patiently wait for Thee to do for us that which we cannot do for ourselves. We beg that Thou will give to us courage, fortiture, determination and patience of job. We pray that Thou wouldst direct in the affairs of the government. Grant that the men who rule might be led by Thy Spirit.

"Break down prejudice, bigotry, narrowness which are so unlike Thee. May men realize that 'Thou hast made of one blood all nations of men who live on earth' (Acts 17:26). May we dwell together in peace.

'Grant that we may live so patiently and kind together here upon this earth that Thou shalt be pleased to take us home with Thee when Thou shalt come; and, finally save us with Thee throughout the ceaseless ages of Eternity, we beg for Christ's sake."

PRAYERS

MONTGOMERY, ALABAMA BUS BOYCOTT

All Across Nation—

Post Herald Birmingham, Ala. Thurs. 3-29-56

Prayer Services Support Boycott

NEW YORK, March 28 (U.P.)—Special services were held in churches in various cities across the nation today in support of the 17-week-old Montgomery, Ala., Negro bus boycott.

Largest participation in the observance, called "The National Deliverance Day of Prayer" by its leaders, came in Chicago, where an estimated 28,000 persons attended services. The meetings were held primarily in 300 Negro Baptist churches, making up 60 per cent of the city's Negro houses of worship.

The largest single meeting was scheduled later in New York, center of the prayer day movement, where 3500 persons were expected to gather to offer prayer.

The day of prayer was called last Feb. 25 by New York Negro clergy leaders after the arrest of 90 leaders of the Montgomery boycott. Originally the prayer plans called for an hour-long work stoppage but those plans were dropped.

Most of the services held today occurred between noon and 1 p.m. to avoid conflicts with work schedules.

The Rev. Adam Clayton Powell Jr., Negro congressman and chairman of the minister's committee which called the day of prayer, said here the movement was organized to "pray for the deliverance of all who suffer from persecution; we will pray for the salvation of all who are, themselves, afflicted with racial prejudice."

In Washington, D. C., 600 Negroes attended a special service where one of the indicted boycott leaders, the Rev. E. N. French of Montgomery, said his city's 50,000 Negroes "decided almost simultaneously that we're tired, we can't take it tany more."

In Boston about 75 Massachusetts legislators left committee meetings in a demonstration of sympathy with the boycott leaders. The legislators were led by House Speaker Michael F. Skerry and Senate President Richard I. Furbush. Skerry said 'i't is entirely fitting and proper that we in Massachusetts . . . once again . . . strike the blow . . . for the oppressed people of the South."

Gov. Goodwin Knight of Californial and the Los Angeles City Council endorsed the day of prayer. Several churches in Hollywood and Los Angeles held special services.

In the South the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., who was convicted last week for his part in leading the bus boycott, said the doors of his Montgomery church would be open for all who wanted t pray, but no special services would be held.

In Atlanta, King's father, the Rev. M. L. King Sr., scheduled a special service in his Ebenezer Baptist Church. In Winston-Salem, N. C., some 2000 Negroes were expected to attend services of the Interdenominational Ministerial Alliance. The olliance's 59 North Carolina churches planned daylong informal prayers.

Other services were held in Baton Rouge, La.

MANY CITIES PRAY TO END PREJUDICE

New York Times Thurs. 3-29-56

Services Held Across Nation to Emphasize Negro Bus Boycott in Montgomery

By STANLEY ROWLAND Jr.

Prayers for "deliverance from the evils of race prejudice" were offered in a number of communities across the country yesterday.

Protestants, Roman Catholics and Jews participated. In New York, a rally a was held at the Manhattan Center, Eighth Avenue and Thirty-fourth Street. The speakers included the Rev. Adam Clayton Powell Jr., who is minister of the Abyssinian Baptist Church and a United States Representative from Manhattan. He had initiated the "National Deliverance Day of Prayer."

Reform Jews gathered in prayer at the House of Living

Judaism, Fifth Avenue and Sixty-fifth Street. Rabbi Maurice N. Eisendrath, President of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, asserted at the prayer meeting that "segregation is wrong, not only because it is illegal, but because Christianity and Judaism declare it to be immoral."

The meetings emphasized the Negro boycott of segregated buses in Montgomery, Ala. Many praised the "Christian spirit" in which the boycott was being conducted.

Friendship House, a Roman Catholic lay organization, called on its 40,000 members and friends to abstain from all solid foods yesterday in a fast to protest the treatment of leaders of the Montgomery boycott.

"Let us fast and pray for racial justice to be achieved in our time in every area of our country, in every sphere of life," the appeal said in part. Persons were urged to send the money for the day's food to Montgomery.

No special prayer meetings were held in Montgomery, though Negro churches there kept their doors open for meditation and prayer.

The ministers of fifty Negro Baptist churches in Queens and Long Island are holding special services at noon and 8 P. M. each day this week. Prayers are offered for reconciliation between the races. The money taken in collections is being sent to assist the protest in Montgomery.

Catholics, Protestant and Jewish groups held prayer meetings in Hartford. Archbishop Henry J. O'Brien of Hartford urged people to examine themselves in the light of Christian teachings, for "it must be remembered that the causes of racial tensions and conflicts are to be found within all men, and no one group of people or section of the country is solely guilty or guiltless."

The day of prayer was not organized by a nation-wide group. Rather, it was initiated by Mr. Powell and by clergymen in local areas scattered across the country.

In Chicago, 28,000 attended services. Most were held in 300 Negro Baptist churches. Services were generally held between noon and 1 P. M. so as not to conflict with work schedules.

In Washington, 600 Negroes and half a dozen white persons attended a special service. Five white clergymen joined seventeen Negro ministers in conducting the service. About seventy-five Massachusetts legislators in Boston walked out of committee meetings in a gesture of sympathy for the Negro cause.

Other major cities in which special services were held included Columbus, Ohio; Cleveland, Los Angeles, Baton Rouge, La.; Galvaston, Tex., and Atlanta.

The day of prayer was part of a growing response by religious groups to racial tensions in Montgomery and elsewhere. Various Roman Catholic, Protestant and Jewish groups are sponsoring special Holy Week or Passover prayers for reconciliation between the races.

600 Say Prayers Here For Alabama Boycotters

Star Thurs. 3-29-56
Washington, D.C. P.35-A

More than 600 Washington worshippers joined an unestimated number in other cities yesterday in a "National Deliverance Day of Prayer" in behalf of bus boycotters in Montgomery, Ala.

Speaking at services at the Vermont Avenue Baptist and the Metropolitan Baptist Churches was the Rev. E. N. French, one of 90 Montgomery citizens arrested on charges of leading a boycott of buses by Negroes of that city.

"We are relying solely on spiritual and moral forces and we believe that somehow God will give us victory," said Mr. French. "Whatever the price may be we are perfectly willing to pay it."

In Washington the services were sponsored by some 150 white and Negro ministers. Most of those attending the services were colored.

Harlem Hears Powell

The day of prayer was conceived as a brief work stoppage, but this idea was dropped in favor of the prayer meeting.

Representative Powell, Democrat of New oYrk, organizer of the movement, suggested to a crowd of 5,000 at his Harlem church that clergymen call their own conference on racial issues if President Eisenhower does not.

Churchmen of all sects joined in the meetings. In Hartford, Conn., Roman Catholic Archbishop Henry J. O'Brien said:

"It must be remembered that the causes of racial tensions and conflicts are to be found within all men, and no one group of people or section of the country is solely guilty or guiltless."

Struggle for Freedom

Episcopal Bishop Norman B. Nash told 800 Boston worshippers: "The guilty are not only 'they' but also 'we.'"

He said Boston must acknowledge responsibility in matters of housing, education, employment and church membership. In the same city, Rabbi Joseph S. Shubow said "the shame of segregation in the South . . . is proof that the struggle for freedom is never completely won."

The Massachusetts State Legislature suspended activity for an hour at noon in "sympathy." Prayers for those arrested in Montgomery were offered in historic Old North Church in Boston.

Prayers in Montgomery

No special meetings were held in Montgomery itself, but doors of churches were open for prayer. Among other cities observing prayer were Columbus and Cleveland in Ohio, Philadelphia, Galveston, Tex.; New Haven, Conn.; Newark, N. J.; Providence, R. I.; Chicago and Los Angeles.

In Chicago 10,000 packing house union members stopped work five minutes for prayer. About 10,000 persons attended the Los Angeles meeting.

At Chino, Calif., nine Negro workers at the Pacific Airmotive Corp., an aircraft repair plant, were fired for stopping work for an hour of prayer. A plant spokesman said they were fired for insubordination.

Journal & Guide P.5 Sat. 4-7-56

DELIVERANCE DAY RALLY The Rev. Adam Clayton Powell, right, chairman of the National Deliverance Day of Prayer Movement, had his arm around the shoulder of Ed Nixon, treasurer of the Montgomery, Ala. Improvement Association, during a rally at Manhattan Center, Thursday night. Norfolk Va

The Deliverance Day rally was held in sympathy for the Montgomery bus boycott. Rev. Mr. Powell also is a Democratic member of the United States House of Representatives. (Photo by Sam Schulman) Norfolk V.

Call for Prayers Branded Politics

Herald Miami, Fla.
Sat. 3-17-56

NEW YORK —(AP)— A group of Negro pastors of more than 50 Long Island Baptist churches has charged Rep. Adam Clayton Powell, New York Democrat, was politically motivated in promoting a "national deliverance day of prayer."

Powell, a Negro, also is pastor of the Abyssinian Baptist Church in Harlem. He has called for a day of prayer March 28 in connection with race tensions and violence in the South.

The Baptist Ministers Fellowship, composed of ministers of churches in Negro communities in Queens, Nassau and Suffolk counties, reported Friday that the charge against Powell was made at a meeting of the fellowship Tuesday.

The Rev. James R. Moore, executive secretary of the group, said it was the general feeling among fellowship members that Powell was promoting the day of prayer "as an opportunist, for his own political prestige."

An Abyssinian Baptist Church spokesman denied the charge.

The Long Island ministers, who said their churches have congregations totaling 25,000 members, said the fellowship set March 26-30 for "fasting and praying for freedom from oppression of all minority groups throughout the world."

On each of these days, eight churches in central locations in the three counties will hold prayer services at noon and at 8 p.m. Collections will be taken up to further the efforts of clergymen in Montgomery, Ala., who are leading a bus boycott in protest against segregation policies.

Montgomery Bus Boycott Aftermath

Post + Times Herald P. 1

D. C. and Other Cities Hold Prayers For Victims of Racial Prejudice

Thurs. 3-29-56 Washington, D.C.

(Picture on Page 22)

By Liz Hillenbrand
Staff Reporter

Services were held here yesterday and in communities across the Nation in observance of "National Deliverance Day of Prayer" for all victims of racial prejudice and segregation.

The Day of Prayer stemmed from the bus boycott by Montgomery, Ala. Negroes. It began Dec. 5, when Rosa Parks was fined $14 for refusing to move to the colored section of a Montgomery bus.

New York Negro clergy leaders called the observance Feb. 24 after 90 leaders of the Montgomery boycott were arrested on charges of violating a 1921 law. Original plans called for an hour-long work stoppage, but this was dropped in favor of continuation of a policy of "passive resistance."

Most services were held at noon to avoid conflict with work schedules.

Rep. Adam Clayton Powell Jr. (D-N. Y.), chairman of the ministers' committee calling the Day of Prayer, said its purpose was to "Pray for the Deliverance of all who suffer from persecution . . . the salvation of all who are, themselves, afflicted with racial prejudice."

Local services were held at noon in Vermont Avenue Baptist Church and last night in Metropolitan Baptist Church. The Rev. E. N. French, one of the Montgomery ministers arrested for participating in the boycott, spoke at both services. He told those present, "We thank God for giving us this important role in world history. We are determined to keep on walking. Whatever the price may be, we are perfectly willing to pay it."

Highlights of observances elsewhere:

Post + Times

Chicago—An estimated 28,000 persons attended services, primarily in 300 Negro Baptist churches. Herald

New York—An interdenominational, iterracial observance was held last night in Manhattan Center. E. B. Nixon, scheduled to attend the meeting and one of those accused of violating the Montgomery boycott ordinance, told an INS reporter before the meeting, "Nobody knows how long the bus protest will last." He said the objectives of the boycott include improvement of "the whole of Montgomery."

Some 30,000 lapel cards calling for an end to "prejudice, injustice and segregation" were distributed at subway entrances. (These cards also were distributed in Washington.)

Montgomery—The Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., convicted last week as a leader in the bus boycott, said doors of his church would be open for prayer, although no special services were scheduled. Many of those arrested in connection with the boycott were elsewhere in the Nation speaking at Day of Prayer observances.

Boston—The legislature, in an official "expression of sympathy" suspended legislative activity for an hour at noon. This did not, however, conflict with any scheduled meetings. Senate President Richard I. Furbush and House Speaker Michael F. Skerry led about 75 legislators in a "march" down the steps of the State House. Skerry stated, "It is entirely fitting and proper that we in Massachusetts . . . strike the blow . . . for the oppressed people of the South." Special services were held in historic old North Church in Boston, and other Protestant churches. Catholic Archbishop Richard J. Cushing declared, "Whenever racial intolerance shows itself in any part of our nation . . . then Christ is crucified again."

California—Gov. Goodwin Knight designated the Day of Prayer by gubernatorial proclamation. Churches in Hollywood and Los Angeles, where the city council indorsed the observance, held special services.

Among other cities holding observances were Atlanta and Detroit. Powell said that Philadelphia, Cleveland, Columbus, Pittsburgh, Galveston and Honolulu also scheduled observances.

At the local service yesterday noon, attended by over 1000 persons, five white ministers joined 17 Negroes in conducting prayers. The meeting was organized by Methodist, Baptist and interdenominational groups.

The Rev. French told the congregation, "we are going to win this battle by love. We are determined not to relinquish our stand until heaven comes to our rescue. If they put us in jail. We are not afraid."

A spokesman said here that over $3500 had been collected for the Montgomery Improvement Association, organization backing the bus boycott.

Prayer Services on Boycott Spotty; None in Montgomery

Constitution Atlanta Ga. Thurs. 3-29-56 P. 6

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Negroes and white sympathizers in scattered cities paused for quiet prayer Wednesday on behalf of Montgomery, Ala., bus boycotters.

The national demonstration apparently was spotty in nature. There was no estimate of the total number taking part.

In Boston, Episcopal Bishop Norman B. Nash told 800 worshipers—about a third of them Negroes—that discrimination exists "right here in Boston."

"The guilty are not only 'they' but also 'we,'" he said. "Right here in Boston, in matters of housing, education, employment and church membership, and in many other ways, there is a responsibility for each of us to acknowledge.

In Atlanta no special services were reported, but many Negroes visited their churches during the day for prayer.

"Ignorance cannot be pleaded. There is no excuse for that ignorance. The facts are undeniable. The facts begin at home, and not in Alabama or South Africa."

The "National Deliverance Day of Prayer" originally was conceived as a brief nationwide work stoppage accompanied by prayer. However, the work stoppage idea was discarded.

Rep. Powell (D-NY), Negro clergyman, was the leader of the passive demonstration. He said its backers represented 10 million Negro churchmen.

Some of the demonstrations were scheduled for Wednesday night, including those in New York and New Haven.

Protestant, Catholic and Jewish religious leaders backed the Massachusetts demonstration.

The Massachusetts Legislature suspended activity for an hour at noon in an official "expression of sympathy."

In Boston's historic Old North Church — where lanterns were shown for Paul Revere in 1775—prayers were offered for 24 Negro ministers and 47 laymen arrested in the Montgomery boycott.

Rabbi Joseph S. Shubow told Jewish worshipers at Temple B'nai Moshe that "the shame of segregation in the South . . . is proof that the struggle for freedom is never completely won."

More than 600 persons, mostly Negroes, took part in Washington's observance. The Rev. E. N. French, one of the indicted Montgomery clergymen, told this audience:

"We are relying solely on spiritual and moral forces."

19,000 STOP WORK

A Chicago Packinghouse union estimated that 10,000 of its members stopped work for five minutes of prayer at different periods during the day.

A prayer-protest rally Tuesday night in Los Angeles drew another 10,000 persons. The Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy, one of the leaders of the Montgomery boycott, told the meeting that within five years there would be a tangible improvement in the dispensation of justice in the South.

Thousands Participate In National Prayer Day

Call Fri. 4-6-56 P. 3 Kansas City, Mo.

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — (ANP) — Thousands of Negro and white sympathizers in cities from Boston to Atlanta and Los Angeles to Honolulu paused for quiet prayer last Wednesday on behalf of Montgomery bus boycotters.

The prayer meetings were part of a "National Deliverance Day Of Prayer" proclaimed by Negro leaders for "deliverance from the evils of racial prejudice."

Protestants, Roman Catholics and Jews participated.

The Massachusetts legislature suspended activity for an hour at noon as an "expression of sympathy' for the Montgomery bus boycotters, and a gubernatorial proclamation in California designated Wednesday as a day of prayer.

The demonstration originally was conceived as a brief nation-wide work-stoppage accompanied by prayer. However, the work-stoppage idea was discarded. There was no estimate of the total number taking part across the country.

Open All Day

Here in Montgomery, Negro churches kept their doors open all day so that anyone could offer prayers at his convenience. There were no special prayer meetings scheduled. Many of the Negro ministers who were indicted by a grand jury for violating Alabama's anti-boycott law were out of the city in connection with prayer services elsewhere.

The largest single meeting was held in New York, where more than 5,000 persons overflowed Manhattan Center. The grand ballroom of the Hotel New Yorker accommodated the overflow.

The Rev. Adam Clayton Powell Jr., New York clergyman and congressman, addressed the meeting. He had initiated the "National Deliverance Day Of Prayer."

An estimated 50,000 persons attended prayer services in more than 300 Chicago churches. And 17,000 members of the United Packinghouse Workers of America, AFL-CIO, paused on their jobs for five minutes to join in prayer in "protest against segregation."

In Boston, noon services had the support of Protestant, Catholic and Jewish leaders. Episcopal Bishop Norman B. Nash told 800 worshippers that "discrimination exists right here in Boston."

Deny Depot Chapel

At the Bayonne, N. J., Navy Supply Depot, civilian employes held prayer services at a nearby YMCA after Navy officials had denied use of the depot's chapel because of "political implications."

Fifty Negro churches in Newark, N. J., kept their doors open throughout the day. In New Brunswick, N. J., Negro and white ministers conducted a joint service at First Methodist church.

Episcopal chorches in the southern two-thirds of Indiana offered prayers of sympathy for the Montgomery boycotters.

In Washington, an estimated 800 to 1,000 persons participated in a meeting sponsored by 150 white and Negro ministers.

All the services in Louisville, Ky., drew a devotional reading from the ninth chapter of Daniel, in which the prophet confesses the sins of his people and asks for the restoration of Jerusalem.

"O my God," prayed Daniel, "incline Thine ear and hear; open Thine eyes and behold our desolations, and the city which is called by Thy name, for we do not present our supplications before Thee for our righteousness, but for Thy great mercies."

The interracial, interfaith and interdenominational meetings were punctuated with speeches calling for an end to segregation and racial prejudice.

Self-Examination Urged

Archbishop Henry J. O'Brien of Hartford, Conn., urged people to examine themselves in the light of Christian teachings, for "it must be remembered that the causes of racial tensions and conflicts are to be found within all men, and no one group of people or section of the country is so guilty or guiltless."

Friendhouse House, a Roman Catholic lay organization, called on its 40,000 members and friends to abstain from all solid foods Wednesday in a fast to protest the treatment of Negro leaders of the Montgomery bus boycott.

"Let us fast and pray for racial justice to be achieved in our time in every area of our country, in every sphere of life," the appeal said. Persons were urged to send the money for the day's food to Montgomery.

In Boston's historic old North Church—where lanters were shown for Paul Revere in 1775—a special service was held to ask "Divine interposition" in the racial upheaval in Alabama.

Other major cities in which special services were held included Detroit, Minneapolis, Cleveland, St. Louis, San Francisco, New Orleans, Dallas, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Indianapolis, Cincinnati, Houston, Milwaukee, Memphis, Baltimore and Denver.

Order Taborians Calls Nationwide Prayer On Mar. 28

Advocate Pg
Sat. 3-17-56
Jackson, Miss.

A nationwide deliverance prayer has been set for March 28th by the International Order of Twelve Knights and Daughters of Tabor, one of the most ancient and respected of fraternal orders.

Word issued simultaneously from the two highest officers of the Order, Sir P. M. Smith, International Chief Grand Mentor, Mound Bayou, Mississippi, and Dtr. Mabel V. Gray, International Grand High Preceptress, Los Angeles, California, asks for prayer for brotherhood and against bigotry.

"May every Taborian speak to his or her spiritual advisor about setting aside March 28th as a Day of Prayer, and may every friend of our Order participate," states the call. It continues:

"Let the doors of our halls and of all places of worship stand open for group or individual worship and prayer on that day. Let there be group prayer from 2 to 3 p. m. if possible, but at another time if local circumstances indicate.

"We pray for our dear sisters and brothers of our own and other fraternal ,religious and civic organizations who bravely face the forces of darkness and evil; and we pray that our Heavenly Father will have mercy on the ones who commit the many offences of bigotry knowing that he who loveth is the conqueror.

Chain Calls Requested

"At daybreak, at noon and at sunset let each of us individually seek the Divine Presence. And let each member and friend call two individuals to participate in the Day of Prayer, asking them to call two individuals to do likewise, not breaking the chain. Thus we will weave the girdle of friendship, union, peace, harmony and love against which no backward force can prevail."

The Taborian Order, founded by Rev. Moses Dickson, was established first as the "Knights of Liberty," August 12, 1846. In 1856 its membership was 47,240. It became a fraternal body with its present name in 1872.

In some southern towns half of the adult citizens are Taborians.

The use of the chain technique is expected to develop tremendous support for the March 28th Day of Prayer.

The call closes with the first verse of the 46th Psalm: "God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble."

Bus Boycott U.S. Prayer Day Is On

Constitution
Wed. 3-28-56
Atlanta Ga.

NEW YORK, March 27 (AP)—The "National Deliverance Day of Prayer," stemming from the bus boycott by Montgomery, Ala., Negroes, is tomorrow. Its promoters, headed by Negro Rep. Powell (D-NY), say thousands of whites and Negroes will join in prayer.

P. 7

"We will pray," Powell, himself a Negro minister, said today, "for the deliverance of all who suffer from persecution and . . . for the salvation of all who are afflicted with racial prejudice."

He said the meetings are to be interracial, interfaith and interdenominational. The Rev. Dan Potter, executive director of the New York Protestant Council, is to be chairman of the New York observance in Manhattan Center. A Catholic priest and a Jewish rabbi will participate.

Montgomery Negroes will attend meetings in the major cities, Powell said. E. D. Nixon, one of 93 charged with violation of the Alabama antiboycott statute, is in New York.

Nixon told a news conference today the boycott's objective has been expanded to improve the whole of Montgomery—that is the position of the Negro and the white."

Powell said major observances also will be held in Chicago, Los Angeles, Washington, Columbus, Ohio; Cleveland, Ohio; Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and Galveston, Texas.

Note Prayer Day at U. of Boston

Afro-American
Sat. 3-31-56
Baltimore, Md.

BOSTON — Boston University last Wednesday, observed a "Day of Prayer and Protest" in sympathy with the citizens of Montgomery, Ala., and their peaceful boycott of the city's buses.

P. 3

A quiet service of prayer and meditation held from 2 to 3 p.m. in the university's Daniel L. Marsh Chapel was sponsored and led by students from the Boston University School of Theology student council (Mount Vernon Student Association).

THE NATION-WIDE observance of a "Day of Prayer and Protest" to be held this Wednesday was proposed by New York Congessman Adam Clayton Powell several weeks ago.

The offering from the service was donated to the Montgomery Improvement Association to raise funds to provide legal aid and economic assistance to those who are in need during the boycott.

POWELL ACCUSED BY BAPTIST GROUP

Times
New York

L. I. Ministers Charge 'Day of Prayer' Promotion Is Politically Motivated

T. M. 3-16-56

A group of Baptist clergymen on Long Island has charged that the Rev. Adam Clayton Powell is politically motivated in promoting a "national deliverance day of prayer."

Mr. Powell is minister of the Abyssinian Baptist Church in Harlem and a Democratic Representative in Congress. The day of prayer, set for March 28, is being promoted by Mr. Powell in connection with race tensions and violence in the South.

The charge against Mr. Powell reportedly was made at a meeting on Tuesday of the Baptist Ministers Fellowship, composed of ministers of fifty churches in Negro communities in Queens, Nassau and Suffolk counties.

The Rev. James R. Moore, executive secretary of the group, said yesterday that it was the general feeling among members that Mr. Powell was promoting the day of prayer "as an opportunist, for his own political prestige."

A spokesman at the Abyssinian Baptist Church denied the charges.

The Long Island ministers at the Tuesday meeting planned a "week of fasting and praying for freedom from oppression of all minority groups throughout the world." The week is set for March 26-30, inclusive.

On each of the days, eight churches in central locations in the three counties will hold prayer services at noon and 8 P. M. Special collections will be taken, the mony going to further the efforts of clergymen in Montgomery, Ala., who are leading a boycott of the bus system there in protest against the city's segregation policies.

9 Who Stopped To Pray Are Rehired

Journal + Guide
Sat. 4-21-56

CHINO Calif.—(ANP)—The Pacific Airmotive Corp., which fired nine Negro workers who left their jobs to join in a national "day of prayer" on March 28, has hired them back.

P. 7

Norfolk, Va.

The union to which the men belong said they had been rehired with full seniority, vacation and sick leave.

They are members of the International Association of Machinists.

STEMMING FROM BUS BOYCOTT

Advertiser 4/1 Montgomery Ala.

'Day Of Prayer' Being Marked Today

Wed. 3-28-56

NEW YORK, March 27 (AP)—The "National Deliverance Day of Prayer," stemming from the bus boycott by Montgomery, Ala., Negroes, is tomorrow. Its promoters, headed by Rep. Adam Clayton Powell (D-NY), say thousands of whites and Negroes in cities from Boston to Atlanta and Honolulu will join in prayer.

"We will pray," Powell, himself a Negro minister, said today, "for the deliverance of all who suffer from persecution and . . . for the salvation of all who are afflicted with racial prejudice."

He said the meetings are to be interracial, interfaith and interdenominational. The Rev. Dan Potter, executive director of the New York Protestant Council, is to be chairman of the New York observance in Manhatton Center. A Catholic priest and a Jewish rabbi also will participate.

A Motgomery Negro will attend meetings in the major cities, Powell said. E. D. Nixon, one of the 93 Negroes charged with ordinance violation in Montgomery because of the boycott, is in New York.

Nixon told a news conference today the boycott's objective has been expanded to improve the whole of Montgomery—that is the position of the Negro and the white."

Nixon is president of the Montgomery Chapter of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters and is treasurer of the Montgomery Improvement Assn.

He said it is costing the association more than $3,000 a week to maintain an auto pool for Negro workers who shun the bus lines in protest against segregation.

It is being suggested in New York that contributions of an hour's pay be given to the association.

Powell said major observances also will be held in Chicago, Los Angeles, Washington, Columbus, Cleveland, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and Galveston.

"It is impossible to estimate how many will take part," he said, "because this is a movement, not an organization."

Some cities, he said, have had to postpone central rallies because meeting places were not available for tomorrow. Chicago's, in the Coliseum, will be held April 11.

Powell listed these high lights for the movement:

Wed. 3-28-56

A vote by the Massachusetts Legislature to stop work at noon to pray.

A gubernatorial proclamation in California designating tomorrow a day of prayer.

Angeles, as well as a prayer meeting tomorrow.

Powell said backers of the deliverance day represent 10 million Negro churchgoers.

The facts begin at home, and not in Alabama or South Africa."

The "National Deliverance Day of Prayer" originally was conceived as a brief nationwide work stoppage accompanied by prayer. However, the work stoppage idea was discarded.

Rep. Adam Clayton Powell (D-NY), New York Negro clergyman, was the leader of the passive demonstration. He said its backers repsented 10 million Negro churchmen.

Some of the demonstrations were scheduled for Wednesday night, including those in New York and New Haven.

Protestant, Catholic and Jewish relgious leaders backed the Massachusetts demonstration.

The Massachusetts Legislature suspended activity for an hour at noon in an official "expression of sympathy."

In Boston's historic old North Church — where lanterns were shown for Paul Revere in 1775—prayers were offered for 24 Negro ministers and 47 laymen arrested in the Montgomery boycott.

Rabbi Joseph S. Shubow told Jewish worshipers at Temple B'nai Moshe that "the shame of segregation in the South ... is proof that the struggle for freedom is never completely won."

Catholic Archbishop Richard J. Cushing in a Holy Week message said that "Whenever racial intolerance shows itself in any part of our nation . . . then is Christ crucified again.''

More than 600 persons, mostly Negroes, took part in Washington's observance. The Rev. E. N. French, one of the indicted Montgomery clergymen, told this audience:

"We are relying solely on spiritual and moral forces, and we believe that somehow God will give us victory. Whatever the price may be we are perfectly willing to pay it."

P. 2-A

Some 150 white and Negro ministers sponsored the Washington observance.

Thurs. 3-29-56

Episcopal churches in the southern two-thirds of Indiana offered sympathy prayers at Masses. Illness prevented Episcopal Bishop Richard A. Kirchhoffer from carrying out his intention to pray in the diocese's only all - Negro church.

38b

In Montgomery, itself, there were no special prayer meetings. However, Negro churches kept their doors open throughout the day for anyone wishing to offer prayers.

Many of the Montgomery Negro ministers indicted on charges of violating a state antiboycott law were appearing at observances in other cities.

A Chicago Packinghouse union estimated that 10,000 of its members stopped work for five minutes of prayer at different periods during the day.

A prayer-protest rally Tuesday night in Los Angeles drew another 10,000 persons. The Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy, one of the leaders of the Montgomery boycott, told the meeting that within five years there would be a tangible improvement in the dispensation of justice in the South.

Fifty Negro churches in Newark, N. J., kept their doors open all day. In New Brunswick, N. J., Negro and white pastors joined in a service at First Methodist church.

At the Bayonne, N. J., Naval Supply Depot, civilian employes held a prayer meeting at a YWCA nearby after an employe spokesman said Navy officials had denied use of the depot's chapel because of "political implications."

FOR BOYCOTTERS HERE

Advertiser 4/1

Scattered U.S. Points Observe 'Day Of Prayer'

Montgomery Ala.

Thurs. 3-29-56

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Negroes and white sympathizers in scattered cities paused for quiet prayer Wednesday on behalf of Montgomery, Ala., bus boycotters.

The national demonstration apparently was spotty in nature. There was no estimate of the total number taking part.

38b

In Boston, Episcopal Bishop Norman B. Nash told 800 worshipers—about a third of them Negroes—that discrimination exists "right here in Boston."

"The guilty are not only 'they' but also 'we,'" he said. "Right here in Boston, in matters of housing, education, employment and church membership, and in many othe ways, there is a responsibility for each of us to acknowledge.

"Ignorance cannot be pleaded. There is no excuse for that ignorance. The facts are undeniable.

Negro Ministers Assert Segregation On Way Out

Montgomery, Ala.
Mon. 2-27-56

Negro ministers indicted last week in the bus boycott predicted from their pulpits yesterday that the protest against racial segregation would continue.

The Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., pastor of Dexter Avenue Baptist Church, told his congregation that "segregation can't survive because God is against it."

King said he recently visited Nashville, Tenn., and 90 per cent of the white students with whom he talked at Vanderbilt University said they were for integration.

He added: "We are in a great struggle and the consequences will be world-shaking."

Another indicted minister, the Rev. R. W. Hilson, declared from the pulpit that the bus boycott "has become a spiritual movement for us."

CITES PROTEST

He cited the protests made in Washington Saturday by bishops of his church and by other Negro church officials.

Hilson said his congregation at St. John's AME Church indicated the members strongly favor continuing the 12-week-old boycott.

King, preaching to a capacity crowd, urged Negroes to "just keep loving" the "enemies and don't lose faith in man."

"Our Christian faith says you can be changed," he said, declaring that "exploiting" and "prejudiced" men can be "lifted up to justice and fair play" by those who practice brotherly love.

NEW DUTY SENSE

During a visit to Vanderbilt University in Nashville last week, King said, 90 per cent of the students with whom he came in contact said they were "willing to accept integration."

He said some of the white students at Vanderbilt told him they were glad to see desegregation even though their communities and their parents are against it.

"Thank God there are people who can rise above their communities," King said.

The young Negro minister said Negroes through their boycott of city buses, have already won a victory that has given Negroes "a new sense of duty."

The boycott began last Dec. 5 after Rosa Parks, a Negro seamstress, was fined $14 for refusing to move to the segregated section in the back of a bus. State and city laws require segregated seating facilities for whites and Negroes.

A two-car collision Sunday six miles east of Tuskegee claimed the life of Rosie Dukes, 53, of Grantsville, Ga.

Ohio Negroes Collect Funds For Boycotters

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Feb. 26 (AP)—More than 1,000 Columbus Negroes gathered today to raise funds for the defense of Negroes arrested in the Montgomery, Ala., bus boycott.

A spokesman for the local chapter of the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People, which sponsored the rally, said $2,128.38 was collected.

The money came from persons attending the indoor rally and also from Sunday Service church congregations in Columbus, said Barbee William Durham, executive secretary of the chapter.

GRAETZ SPEAKER

Principal speaker at the rally was the Rev. Robert S. Graetz, 27-year-old white pastor of Montgomery's Trinity Lutheran Church. He said he was "pleasantly surprised" at the number of Southern white people who have come to the support of Montgomery's Negroes in protesting segregation on city buses.

Rev. Graetz, who graduated last June from Capital University seminary here, is the leader of an all-Negro congregation.

He said since the start of the boycott Dec. 5, there were 99 Negroes indicted. He has received nearly 100 letters, he said, "most of them from white people," commending him for his stand on the matter of racial segregation.

Some letters, he added, contained money totaling more than $200—some of it given in behalf of the boycott but mostly as donations to his church.

State Racial Trouble Laid To 'Reds, Devil'

MOBILE, Ala., Feb. 26 (AP)—Rep. Frank Boykin (D-Ala) said today that "Communists and the devil" are responsible for Alabama's current racial troubles, and that he will reveal the names of 56 Communists back of racial disturbances in the state.

The Mobile congressman spoke to an audience of 500 or more at the dedication of a church sanctuary in suburban Prichard, Ala.

He referred to the recent troubles at Tuscaloosa, where rioting broke out when a Negro student was enrolled at the University of Alabama, and the bus boycott by Negroes at Montgomery.

Boykin said he plans to turn over the names of the alleged Communists to the Mobile Press Register on Monday. He said he hopes the papers will publish them.

(Alabama law places the responsibility for proof of such charges on newspapers which publish such names at their own initiative.)

The congressman, who is seeking reelection mentioned no specific organization or group in connection with the troubles or the list of alleged Communists. He declared that "We believe in colored persons who believe in God," but added, "The devil is behind the things going on in Montgomery and Tuscaloosa."

His Home Was Bombed

Herald 8.10-A
Miami, Fla.
Fri. 2-24-56

24th Negro Pastor Seized in Boycott

MONTGOMERY, Ala. —(AP)— The Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., a Negro minister whose home was bombed while he was actively leading the Negro bus boycott in Montgomery, was arrested Thursday for boycotting.

The 27-year-old pastor of the Dexter Ave. Baptist Church in downtown Montgomery, was among those indicted by a grand jury Tuesday on charges of violating Alabama's anti-boycott law.

King's indictment was kept secret under Alabama law until he was arrested.

He returned Thursday from a series of speaking engagements in Tennessee and Sheriff Mac Butler said the minister surrendered voluntarily. He was released on $300 bond after being booked and fingerprinted.

He was the 24th Negro minister taken into custody as sheriff's officers rounded up the defendants named in the wholesale indictments. More than 50 other Negroes also have been arrested.

The total number of defendants named in the grand jury indictments was first announced as 115, but the sheriff's office said Thursday it would be about 90.

Some of the defendants were listed by initials on one writ and by their full names on another, making it appear at first that they were different persons.

King's home was damaged by a dynamite explosion the night of Jan. 30. He was away from the house but his wife, their 7-week-old daughter and a neighbor were there at the time. None was injured.

Those arrested included Mrs. Rosa Parks, a seamstress, who appealed a $14 fine levied in City Court Dec. 5 for refusing to move to the back of a bus. That appeal was turned down Wednesday by Circuit Judge Eugene Carter and she was sentenced to 14 days in jail. It was her case that touched off the racial protest movement.

MINISTERS HELD IN BOYCOTT CASE

Times-Picayune
Fri. 2-24-56

Negro Religious, Political Leaders Rounded Up

New Orleans, La.

By REX THOMAS

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Feb. 22 (AP)—Negro religious and political leaders, including 10 ministers, were arrested on boycotting charges today in a wholesale round-up of defendants indicted by a grand jury for their mass protest against bus segregation.

The grand jury returned indictments late yesterday against 115 defendants accused of taking an active part in the 11-week-old racial boycott against Montgomery City Lines buses.

Dates for their trials will be taken up Friday at their arraignment.

Thousands of Negroes have refused to ride the buses since Dec. 5, the day a member of their race, Mrs. Rosa Parks, was fined $14 for refusing to move to the colored section of a bus. City and state laws require segregation.

Sentenced to Jail

Mrs. Parks was sentenced to 14 days in jail in lieu of the fine today after Circuit Judge Eugene Carter, the jurist who ordered the grand jury investigation, turned down her appeal from the previous conviction in City Court.

She appealed Judge Carter's decision to the Alabama Supreme Court, and immediately afterward was arrested on a boycotting indictment.

Judge Carter upheld city and state segregation laws when the issue was raised in Mrs. Parks' defense. He imposed the jail sentence after she refused to pay the fine and announced she planned to appeal the conviction. All of the defendants brought to the county jail and fingerprinted were released as soon as they put up bond of $200 each. They were charged with violating a state law against organized, illegal boycotting. Maximum sentence for violation is six months in jail and $1,000 fine.

Other Developments

As the roundup of boycott defendants continued, there were these other developments:

Gov. James E. Folsom invited newspaper editors and publishers to a conference in his office here Friday to discuss racial problems.

Fred D. Gray, 25-year-old unmarried Negro attorney under indictment on a charge of unlawful practice growing out of the bus boycott, lost an appeal from a draft board order reclassifying him 1-A. He had been deferred from military service as assistant pastor of a Negro church.

City attorneys filed an answer in U. S. District Court along with a motion to dismiss a pending suit seeking to outlaw city and state laws which require bus and railroad segregation.

It was that lawsuit that brought Gray's indictment by the grand jury here last week. He was charged with filing the complaint without the consent of one of the five Negro women whose names were signed to the antisegregation petition.

Local Board Upheld

Whether Gray planned to appeal his draft classification to higher authorities wasn't known. The appeals board of the Middle Alabama District announced late yesterday it had upheld the local board decision to put the attorney in 1-A.

Two of Montgomery's most active Negro political leaders were among those arrested on boycotting warrants today. They were E. D. Nixon, former state president of the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People, and Mrs. Jo Ann Robinson, a teacher at Alabama State College for Negroes in Montgomery.

Nixon, a Pullman porter, is president now of the Montgomery Progressive Democratic Assn., a politically active organization, and Mrs. Robinson heads the Women's Political Council.

A small dynamite bomb exploded in the front yard at Nixon's home the night of Feb. 1 but no one was injured.

Arrested Ministers

The Negro ministers arrested were:

Dr. S. S. Seay, a leading figure in the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church and former executive secretary of its Home Missions Board.

The Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy, pastor of the Negro First Baptist Church and head of a negotiating committee which has conferred with city officials and bus company spokesmen in unsuccessful attempts to settle the boycott.

The Rev. Joshua William Hayes, presiding elder of the West Montgomery district of the AME Zion Church.

The Rev. A. W. Wilson, pastor of the Holt Street Baptist Church where the first Negro mass meeting was held at the outset of the bus protest.

The Rev. Joseph H. Cherry (no church specified).

The Rev. R. James Glasco, director of the Alabama Negro Baptist Center in Montgomery.

The Rev. Aaron Hoffman, pastor of the Shiloh Baptist Church.

The Rev. H. H. Hubbard pastor of the Oak Street Baptist Church.

The Rev. L. R. Bennett, pastor of the Mount Zion AME Church.

The Rev. W. J. Powell, pastor of the Old Ship Methodist Church.

Although they weren't identified in each indictment, Sheriff Mac Butler said many of the defendants were drivers who used their automobiles in a huge car pool which has furnished transportation to Negroes during the bus protest.

—WIREPHOTO by The Associated Press

A CENTRAL FIGURE in the Montgomery, Ala., bus boycott, Mrs. Rosa Parks, Negro seamstress, is fingerprinted after her arrest Wednesday on an indictment charging her with taking part in the boycott. She was arrested immediately after leaving circuit court where she had been sentenced to 14 days in jail for violating the city's bus segregation ordinance in the incident that touched off the boycott.

PLACES HIS FAITH IN THE BIBLE
. . . Rev. L. R. Burnett after boycott arrest

Enter Grand Jury
Times P.2-E

The anger of the Negroes mounted. Then, two weeks ago, the whites moved to break up the boycott. A grand jury was instructed to determine whether it was legal.

Last week events moved quickly. On Monday the embittered Negroes rejected the whites' compromise offer on bus seating.

On Tuesday the grand jury began indicting 100 Negro leaders, including twenty-four clergymen. They were charged with violating a 1921 Alabama law that bars organized boycotts without a "just cause or legal excuse." Trials will begin March 19.

Wednesday, Mr. Gray lost an appeal from the draft board order that had reclassified him 1-A. Mrs. Parks lost her appeal from her conviction for violating the bus segregation law and, on leaving the courthouse, she was arrested on the boycotting charge.

Thursday at a mass meeting Montgomery Negroes pledged to continue "passive resistance." A Negro minister told the meeting that the boycott was not directed against a single incident but against things that "go deep down into the archives of history."

Friday Gov. James E. Folsom held a conference on racial tensions with the state's publishers and editors and decided to establish a biracial commission to try to resolve Negro-white differences.

Yesterday in New York and other Northern cities, Negro leaders issued a call for a nation-wide one-hour work stoppage March 25 to protest the wholesale arrests in Montgomery.

93 Persons To Be Tried Separately

Kansas City, Mo.

Rev. M. L. King First; State Case Hits Snag

Fri. 3-23-56

DENY CAR POOL

By ROBERT H. DENLEY

MONTGOMERY, Ala. —(INS) —A Montgomery leader denied Tuesday that an organized car pool was operated for the purpose of preventing anyone from riding the city's buses.

Rufus Lewis, chairman of the transportation committee of the Montgomery Improvement association, testified for the state and described details of the pool established soon after a bus boycott began last Dec. 5.

Asked directly if the pool was not set-up to keep Negroes from using buses, Lewis said:

"It is not to keep them from riding buses—it is to give transportation to those who don't wish to ride the buses."

The state was attempting to connect operation of the pool to an alleged conspiracy of Negro leaders to boycott Montgomery city lines' buses.

The Rev. M. L. King Jr., is on trial, the first of 90 to be tried on a charge of violating an old state anti-boycott law.

Lewis said his committee arranged to borrow cars, pay drivers $4 per day, and set up dispatch stations and pick-up stations.

Earlier, the state's case ran into a snag when its key witness turned "hostile" during direct questioning.

The witness, the Rev. U. J. Fields, conceded that he was recording secretary of the Montgomery Improvement association, but remembered practically no pertinent details about the organization.

The state contends that the organization was created solely to

Cleric's Boycott Trial to Resume

Evening Star
Washington, D.C.

Negro Financial Aide Due to Be Recalled

Sun. 3-20-56

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Mar. 20 (AP).—The State planned to present new testimony today in an effort to show that a 27-year-old Negro minister conspired to clamp a crippling boycott on city buses here.

On trial in Circuit Court is the Rev. Martin Luther King, jr., the first of 90 Negro leaders called to answer indictments resulting from the 16-week-old protest against racial segregation.

Mrs. Erna Dungee, the last witness to testify at the opening of the trials yesterday, is expected to be called to the stand today.

Mrs. Dungee is financial secretary of the Montgomery Improvement Association, a newly-formed Negro organization which the State says is headed by Mr. King. Prosecuting attorneys are trying to establish the organization's role in the bus boycott.

The trial of Mr. King may well run through tomorrow. It may be weeks or even months before the trials of all 90 defendants can be completed.

$5,000 Paid for Gasoline

The Negroes have all exercised their right to demand separate trials. All have waived the right to trial by jury, leaving it up to Circuit Judge Eugene Carter to decide on their guilt or innocence.

Mrs. Dungee yesterday identified bank deposits totaling about $30,000 made out in the name of the improvement association. She also identified photostats of checks totaling almost $5,000 signed by herself and Mr. King in payment for gasoline.

When the prosecution sought to bring out whether the gasoline money was used to provide rides for Negro bus boycotters, Judge Carter ruled out the question at the request of defense attorneys.

The Negro woman said drivers of the automobiles used in a car pool to transport Negroes received a standard wage of $24 a week.

A previous Negro witness, the Rev. A. W. Wilson, a member of the improvement association's executive committee, testified that as far as he knew the organization had done nothing except to seek "better treatment" for Negroes on buses.

Negro Riders Cut 90 Per Cent

J. H. Bagley, manager of Montgomery City Bus Lines, Inc., and the first witness called yesterday, identified Mr. King as one of the Negro leaders who told him they thought the boycott would end if certain demands were met.

Among the 89 defendants scheduled for trial after Mr. King is Mrs. Rosa Parks, the seamstress whose conviction for refusing to move to the rear of a bus brought on the boycott.

Negroes generally have stayed off the buses since Mrs. Parks was fined $14 on December 5 for violating State and city segregation laws.

Evening Star

Mr. Bagley testified that 90 to 95 per cent of the Negroes who formerly used buses have stopped riding them.

Mr. King is pastor of the Dexter Avenue Baptist Church. His parsonage home was slightly damaged by a dynamite explosion in January. No one was injured in the blast.

Sun. 3-20-56

3 Indictments Dropped

The number of defendants was reduced to 90 yesterday when Circuit Solicitor William P. Thetford dismissed three indictments because he said further investigation has thrown "considerable doubt on their guilt."

He dropped charges against Alfred Ellis, Booker T. Holmes and the Rev. M. C. Cleveland, a Baptist an done of 25 clergymen included among the Negroes indicted.

The indictments against Mr. King and the others were returned under a State law which provides a maximum penalty of $1,000 fine and six months in jail for unlawful boycotting "without just cause or legal excuse."

93 NEGROES FACE TRIAL IN DIXIE BUS BOYCOTT

Tribune P.21

Montgomery, Ala., March 17 (AP)—Raising the issue of free speech, 93 Negroes, including 25 clergymen, face trial here Monday for the mass refusal of their race to ride segregated city buses.

Sun. 3-18-56

They have waived the right of jury trial, choosing instead to let Circuit Judge Eugene Carter decide their guilt or innocence. Maximum penalty is six months in jail and a $1,000 fine.

Chicago, Ill.

The Negroes were indicted by a predominantly white grand jury Feb. 21 as leaders and active participants in the 16 week old boycott of Montgomery City lines buses which has continued without pause since Dec. 5. Some of the defendants, particularly the ministers, were charged with lending encouragement and leadership to the protest. Others were indicted for using their automobiles in a precisely organized car pool which has enabled thousands of workers to get to and from their jobs.

90 Separate Trials Set in Bus Boycott

World-Telegram + Sun P.5

Mon. 3-19-56

By the United Press.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., March 19.—Circuit Judge Eugene Carter today overruled defense demurrers in the bus boycott trials and directed that individual trials of the 90 defendants get under way at once.

Defense attorneys had asked that the conspiracy charges be thrown out of court without trial on grounds that the 1921 ani-boycott law under which they were brought was unconstitutional.

New York, N.Y.

Lack of Evidence.

As the court session opened, charges against three of the Negro defendants were dismissed for lack of evidence, reducing the defendants to 90. The Negroes are accused of conspiring to boycott the Montgomery Bus Co. because they objected to its segregation regulations. They have waived jury trial but will be tried individually before the judge.

The coourtroom was crowded as the trials began. Judge Carter warner the spectators, all Negroes except for some newsmen, that no talking would be permitted.

"If you came here to be entertained, you came to the wrong place," he said. A moment later he gave a second warning, saying "the jail across the street has plenty of room."

The three whose cases were dismissed were Alfrad Ellis, Booker T. Holmes and M. C. Cleveland.

Leader Called.

Solicitor William Thetford called as the first defendant the Rev. M. L. King, recognized leader of the boycott and one of 25 ministers listed among the defendants.

Judge Carter indicated the trials might take a long time. He said he might finish one trial a dav.

TRIAL IS OPENED IN BOYCOTT CASE

Times-Picayune

Montgomery Case Upheld as Constitutional

Sun. 3-20-56

By REX THOMAS

MONTGOMERY, Ala., March 19 (AP) — Grand jury indictments against 90 bus-boycotting Negroes withstood their first court test today, and a young minister went on trial shortly afterward as the first defendant.

New Orleans, La.

Circuit Judge Eugene Carter overruled a defense petition which sought to invalidate the indictments as unconstitutional. Then state's attorneys called the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., before the court to begin what could become a prolonged series of trials.

Each of the 90 defendants, exercizing his right, asked for a separate hearing.

P. 12

King, 27, whose home was bombed in the early weeks of the mass Negro protest against segsingled out by Circuit Solicitor William F. Thetford as one of the boycott leaders.

'Conspiracy' Charged

But Thetford ran into difficulty at the outset of the trial in trying to link the pastor of the Dexter Ave. Baptist Church to a "conspiracy" to hinder operations of Montgomery City Lines buses.

Carter allowed the first witness, bus company Manager J. H. Bagley, to identify King as one of several Negroes he conferred with at the onset of the boycott last December, but he sustained defense objections to some other questions.

He refused to permit Thetford to introduce two documents as state's exhibits although he permitted Bagley to identify them as papers he had received shortly before and immediately after the bus protest began Dec. 5.

One document was described only as a "resolution;" the other was not identified to any degree except that it was a paper the bus line manager said he received two days before the boycott started.

Objections Upheld

Carter upheld defense objections when Thetford asked Bagley what caused a "falling off" of his company's business since Dec. 5. The bus line official said 90 to 95 per cent of the Negroes who formerly rode city buses have stopped using them.

Bagley was allowed to testify that King and another defendant, Mrs. Jo Ann Robinson, told him they thought the Negroes would resume riding the buses if certain demands were met. Mrs. Robinson, awaiting trial with the other defendants, is a teacher at Alabama State College for Negroes at Montgomery and president of the Women's Political Council, a Negro group.

Eight Negro attorneys represented the defendants, including Robert Carter of the legal staff of the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People in New York.

93 On Trial

Montgomery Boycotters Are Being Tried

Dispatch Thurs 3-22-56 P.1

MONTGOMERY. — (ANP) — The State of Alabama Monday began the trials of 93 Negro leaders, including 25 clergymen, accused of being leaders in a boycott of segregated city buses.

Defense attorneys laid the groundwork for possible appeal as far as the U. S. Supreme Court, by asking Circuit Judge Eugene Carter to dismiss the charges on the grounds that the boycott law is unconstitutional.

Judge Carter refused to dismiss the complaints and the hearings proceeded. The cases are being heard without a jury since all the defendants waived their right to a jury trial.

Dispatch P.2

Late Monday, testimony had been heard in only one case, that of the Rev. M. L. King, unofficial leader of the boycott. Seventeen other cases had been nol prossed

Each of the defendants will be for lack of evidence.

Thurs. 3-22-56

One witness had been heard before the court recessed so that Judge Carter could attend a funeral.

tried separately, and the defense has gathered some 46 witnesses while the state plans to call 34 witnesses.

Observers here are predicting that the trials might last weeks.

The Montgomery bus row began last Dec. 5 when Mrs. Rosa Parks, a Negro, was arrested and fined for refusing to move to the rear of a segregated bus.

In protest, Negro riders vowed to boycott the buses for one day. But the movement mushroomed and the protest has lasted over three months.

It has been a quiet protest for the most part. Feelings reached a boiling point when Rev. King's home was dynamited, but calm action by the minister averted a possible racial clash.

Negro Ministers' Trial Starts in Bus Boycott

Star Mon. 3-19-56 P.1

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Mar. 19 (AP).—Twenty-five Negro ministers and 68 others of hteir race were called into court today to answer for the prolonged mass Negro boycott of segregated city buses.

Washington, D.C.

The cases were docketed for 10 a.m.

But before the trials could proceed, Circuit Judge Eugene Carter had to rule on a defense petition attacking validity of the anti-boycotting indictments returned by a grand jury February 21.

Say Rights Are Violated

Negro attorneys filed pretrial demurrers protesting that the prosecution under a seldom used State law violates the defendant's rights of free speech, freedom of worship and peaceful assembly, and equal protection under the law as guaranteed by the Constitution.

A demurrer is a legal device which argues simply that no unlawful offense has been committed.

By raising the question of constitutional rights, the defense lawyers built the framework for a possible appeal to the United States Supreme Court if the boycotting Negroes are convicted. But they declined to comment on their plans before the trials opened.

The anti-boycotting law, enacted in 1921 as a weapon against labor strife, prohibits any conspiracy or agreement to hinder the operation of a lawful business "without just cause or legal excuse." The grand jury said the bus boycott is illegal.

Maximum penalty for violating the law is six months in jail and a $1,000 fine.

The indicted Negroes have waived the right of jury trial, electing instead to let the trial judge decide their guilt or innocence.

The Rev. Robert S. Graetz, white pastor of an all-Negro church who has attended some of the boycott rallies, is one of 77 witnesses subpoenaed for the trials. Mr. Graetz also testified before the investigating grand jury.

City Heads Testify

Other witnesses include Mayor W. A. Gayle and Police Commissioner Clyde Sellers, two of Montgomery's three city commissioners who have publicly affiliated with the pro-segregation Montgomery County Citizens' Council since the boycott began.

Although the bus dispute started as a demand for better seating arrangements even if still segregated, it spread ultimately to an outright attack on city and State travel segregation laws. A suit challenging their constitutionality is on file in United States District Court.

The mass protest began last December 5 after a Negro seamstress, Mrs. Rosa Parks, was arrested and fined $14 for refusing to obey a driver's order to move to the colored section of his bus. Bus operators have authority under a city ordinance to enforce segregation.

The bus-boycott trial found its way smoothly into the sermons of every Negro minister with special emphasis placed on the justness of the cause for which their leaders face prosecution, and the slogan "Forward March" wove its way through the intense theology.

Not At Any Price

And from the severely plain pulpit of historic Dexter Avenue Baptist church, Dexter Avenue and Decatur Sts., Montgomery's diminutive little "Moses," the Rev. Martin Luther King, served notice that the Negroes of Montgomery have no intention of buying "peace at any price."

To a jam-packed congregation, including 100 "visitors," among them reporters from as far away as India and France, Rev. King preached on "When Peace Becomes Obnoxious."

"We are faced with a conflict between the deadening old order and the dawning of a new order" Rev. King declared as he carefully drew a picture of the Southland's latest ordeal.

"Peace," he continued, "is not necessarily the absence of war, Peace can be the presence of some positive force; the presence of justice, the presence of respect, and of love, and of goodwill. Unless the Negroes of Montgomery can win such a peace, there can never be any peace.

"Many of our white friends deplore the conflict and tensions that have developed during recent months. They point out that Montgomery has always been such a peaceful town, and that it enjoyed such good race relations until "outsiders" began coming in and tearing it down.

Call P.4

'Should Stay in Places'

What they really mean is that Montgomery can again be "peaceful" if Negroes stay in their places, accept domination, and continue to accept exploitation, to accept the status quo, and accept segregation.

"Such a peace would be an obnoxious peace. It is a type of peace that stinks in the nostrils of Almighty God. I hate that type of peace. It is obnoxious.

Real Christians do not strive for this kind of peace. Jesus told his Disciples, "I have come not to bring peace, but I come to bring a sword."

Not the sword of violence, he cautioned his listeners — not a physical sword, but a renewed spiritual crusade against "a negative peace; not escapism, but an active fight against evil."

"Christianity is for the strong men and women. It is no soothing lemonade of escapism. We shall not engage in violence in any form, but as Christians we must be fighting pacifists."

Instructions on Behavior

Earlier the congregation had received precise instructions regarding the Monday trial which unquestionably will overtax the capacity of the court. Here are some of them:

Be courteous. Open your homes to visitors, many of them coming to give us encouragement and support. Be as hospitable to our white friends as you are to our colored friends.

Those who must bear witness or stand trial will tell the truth at every point. Don't twist anything. We think we are right and that God is with us in our cause.

And, as a final telling gesture Rev. King proudly acknowledged his connection with the "untouchable" NAACP by announcing that the Board of Trustees of his church had voted to take out a life ($500) membership in the national association and that he and the Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy of First Baptist church are serving as co-chairmen of the annual membership drive of the Montgomery Branch which has set its goal at 10,000 members.

At 3 p.m. in the same auditorium, with Rev. J. W. Hayes, presiding elder, AME Zion church, delivering a stirring challenge that Montgomery Negroes continue their "Forward March," the quest for 10,000 members began.

On Sunday night, capacity crowds overflowed into the streets in front of Bethel Baptist and Hutchinson Street Baptist churches for prayer services.

Montgomery Negroes then placed the outcome into the hands of God and a battery of five lawyers: Arthur Shores, Orzell Billingsly, Jr. and Peter Hall, all from Birmingham; and Fred D. Gray and Charles Langford of Montgomery.

They seemed quite ready to face Circuit Court Judge Eugene W. Carter, and the vagueries of Dixie justice.

Sunday Services Prepare Montgomerians for Trial

Call P.1 Kansas City Mo. Tim. 3-23-56

By CHARLES H. LOEB
NNPA Correspondent

MONTGOMERY, Ala.—Negroes of Montgomery spent Sunday in quiet, well organized preparation for the trial of their leaders now going on in the Montgomery circuit court.

It was a two-phased preparation, spiritual and legal.

Little children in the Sunday school classes of every Negro church, among other things, learned that they were expected to be especially well behaved during the

More witnesses called—

Many indictments expected in boycott

Birmingham, Ala. Herald 2-20-56

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Feb. 20—(AP)—A Grand Jury report expected late today or tomorrow may bring scores of indictments growing out of Montgomery's prolonged bus boycott by Negroes.

Dozens of witnesses have been called for testimony since Circuit Judge Eugene Carter charged the Grand Jury last week to investigate the boycott and determine if it violates the law.

A NEGRO ATTORNEY, Fred D. Gray, 25, was indicted by the Grand Jury last Friday for unlawfully representing one of the five Negro women who have challenged constitutionality of state laws requiring segregation on public transportation facilities.

The Grand Jury report is expected at the outset of Brotherhood Week in the cradle of the Confederacy, which Mayor W. A. Gayle noted is marred by "tension which should not exist."

THE MAYOR AND the other two members of the city commission joined the pro-white Central Alabama Citizens Council several weeks ago after announcing disgust at the repeated rejection by boycott leaders of "all reasonable offers" for a compromise.

The 12-week-old protest movement by Negroes began Dec. 5 when Mrs. Rosa Parks, a seamstress, was fined $14 for refusing to move to the segregated section of a city bus. Since then thousands of Negroes have refused to ride buses, cutting the bus company's business an estimated 50 per cent.

The state statute under which indictments would be returned against boycotters makes it unlawful for two or more persons to organize a boycott "without a just cause or legal excuse."

The Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., Negro Baptist minister and one of the most outspoken boycott leaders, called Gray's indictment" a subtle and insidious attempt" to have the attorney disbarred and hinder racial integration. If convicted, Gray could be fined $500 and suspended from practice.

Thurgood Marshall, chief council for the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People, said in Atlanta yesterday that the NAACP will defend Gray.

Mayor Blocks Future Talks About Boycott

Advertiser P. 2 Montgomery, Ala. Wed. 2-22-56

Mayor W. A. Gayle said yesterday all negotiations with boycotting Negro bus patrons have ceased and no more are planned.

Commenting on the Negroes' rebuff Monday of a compromise seating plan, Mayor Gayle said:

"We had 10 meetings with the Negroes. We offered them equal spaces on buses, an arrangement just as fair to them as to the whites, and they turned it down.

"No further negotiations by the City Commission or any other committee we know of is anticipated."

OTHERS ENDORSED

Mayor Gayle's remarks were endorsed by the other two commissioners.

Said Sellers: "As far as I'm personally concerned I'm through with it (the boycott)".

Said Parks: "Amen."

A compromise plan calling for reservation of the front 10 seats of each bus for white passengers, the rear 10 for Negroes, and the middle section to be seated on a "first come, first served" basis, was resoundingly turned down by Negroes Monday night.

A Negro clergyman, the Rev. R. D. Abernathy, pastor of the First Baptist Church, said the vote was "3,998 to 2" in favor of continuing the boycott.

The city officials made their remarks during a regular meeting of the City Commission.

TAXI PERMIT

A request by Williford Montgomery for a permit to operate a Negro taxi with the Dependable Taxi Cab Co., was taken under consideration.

Commissioner Sellers suggested that relative figures on white and Negro taxis be made available to the commission before any action was taken on the application.

"We don't want to become overburdened with them," he said.

In other business yesterday, the commission:

Authorized the Board of Education to purchase for $10,000 a house and store from Edith Green, adjacent to the Booker Washington School playground.

Approved the education board's request to close an alley running from Union street 250 feet on school property.

DESPITE PROTEST

Granted, despite a protest from members of Capitol Heights Baptist Church, a retail license for off-premises sale of beer to G. A. Canterbury, operator of IGA Store at Capitol Heights.

Approved other retail beer licenses for J. T. Weldon, 706 Mobile St.; Southside Pharmacy, 701 S. McDonough St. and denied the application of George Giles, 2128 Stephens St.

The commission okayed a liquor license application from the Acme Red Fez "D" Society, located on the roof garden of the Ben Moore Hotel.

Montgomery Iron and Metal Co. was granted permission to vacate part of Orange street between blocks 28 and 32 in Irmadale.

Without opposition, the commission approved rezoning of lots 50, 51 and 52 of Ashley Plat between Foshee road and Flack road from Residential "B" to "heavy industrial."

Robert C. Newman was leased the city-owned land near the gavel pit for $150 a year.

Sewer assessments on the Wildwood Allendale project, up for final hearing, drew no opposition.

MASS INDICTMENT
MONTGOMERY, ALA. BUS BOYCOTT

Advertiser P. 2 Montgomery, Ala. Wed. 2-22-56

NEGRO BOYCOTT JUROR

E. T. Sinclair, left, the only Negro on the 18-man grand jury panel, walks from the courtroom with an unidentified fellow juror yesterday after the investigating group named 115 persons on indictments growing out of the 11-week-old racial bus boycott. Sinclair is head waiter at the Montgomery Country Club.—Photo by AP

Alabama Indicts 115 Negroes Over Boycott of Buses

Herald Tribune P. 1

Wed. 2-22-56 New York, N.Y.

White Offer Of Accord Is Rejected

1921 Law Used In Montgomery

By Robert S. Bird

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Feb. 21.—The Montgomery County grand jury returned eleven true bills here late today, indicting on misdemeanor charges 115 Negroes, including most of the leaders, in the twelve-week-old Negro mass boycott against the city buses.

Coming on top of a breakdown last night of efforts by city officials and other white leaders to effect a compromise settlement of the boycott, the result is this capital city of Alabama tonight has tightened the racial lines on both sides to a near breaking point.

The boycott resulted from Negroes' complaints about an increased fare, bus employment practices and the method of segregation of passengers.

Watched by South

Since this biggest organized mass defiance yet undertaken by Negroes on a segregation issue any place in the South, the crisis is being watched with interest elsewhere. This is true in Mississippi, Georgia and South Carolina, the other three states of the Deep South which are most similarly situated in their determination to prevent desegregation.

Last night it became apparent here in this birthplace of the Confederacy that the boycott to modify the segregation rules on bus riding had reached a deadlock beyond any immediate hope of solution. Both sides now expect economic reprisals to begin.

Compromise Rejected

A Negro mass meeting held in a Baptist Church last night attended by 4,000 persons considered the compromise offer made by the white leaders and with only two dissenting votes turned the offer down.

Their position is that the compromise would give them no advantages and they will continue the boycott as long as necessary to win their original demands.

The settlement effort appeared to have no chance from the start because while negotiations were going forward the grand jury was hearing testimony looking to the indictments. The Negroes regarded this as coercive, and the actual handing up of the indictments now makes a settlement unlikely in the foreseeable future.

The boycott began Dec. 5 and has been carried on by nearly all of the city's 42,000 Negro population, with the aid of a highly organized car-pool arrangement and a great deal of walking.

Herald Tribune P. 13

The grand jury wrote a report which said in part:

"The grand jury finds that there is a growing tension between the races in this community; the bus boycott is but one manifestation of this feeling. Distrust, dislike and hatred are being taught in a community which for more than a generation has enjoyed exemplary race relations. Small incidents have been magnified out of their true importance and ugly rumors are being spread among both races. produces distrust and hate breeds hate.

"It is the feeling of this grand jury that if we continue on our present course of race relations, violence is inevitable. The leaders of both races are urged to take a long and thoughtful look into the future.

N. A. A. C. P. Blamed

"Segregation laws and the N. A. A. C. P. attack on segregation are the primary cause of the unrest and increasing tension between whites and Negroes in Montgomery. In this state we are committed to segregation by custom and by law; we intend to maintain it.

"The settlement of differences over school attendance, public transportation and other public facilities must be made within those laws which reflect our way of life. During the past 100 years no racial group has progressed so rapidly as the Negro, and no minority group has received so much in material aid and encouragement as the Negro."

"All of us recognize that change and progress are inevitable; however, every part of the country and every racial group must approach its own unique problems with determination to face facts and make decisions which are in the best interests of all, now and in the years to come."

Based on 1921 Law

The indictments are based on a 1921 state law enacted by the Legislature after a bitter labor crisis in Birmingham. This crisis resulted in violence, including murder, in the calling out of the state National Guard and the then Gov. Thomas E. Kilby convincing the Legislature to pass a law which makes "conspiracy, combination or agreement to interfere with or hinder business, unlawful."

The section adds: "Two or more persons who, without a just cause or legal excuse for so doing, enter into any combination, conspiracy agreement, arrangement or understanding for the purpose of hindering, delaying or preventing any other persons, firms, corporation or association of persons from carrying on any lawful business, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor."

The penalty provided is a "fine of not less than $100 nor more than $1,000" and also provides for the imprisonment of any convicted person for "not more than six months for the first conviction, at the discretion of the court."

A Federal court action to declare illegal segregation in the buses was recently filed by the Negroes and is now pending.

Attorney Arrested

The Negro attorney who brought that suit, Fred D. Gray, was soon afterward arrested and charged with a fraud in connection with papers he prepared in that action. This arrest was one of the arousing factors which solidified Negro sentiment against settlement of the boycott.

Then the grand jury began calling Negroes in the present case eight days ago. The efforts of the citizens committee calling itself "The Men of Montgomery" to effect a compromise went forward in this atmosphere of Negro resentment and feeling of provocation.

Yesterday afternoon the committee met for the last time with the Negro leaders. They offered a compromise, first, guaranteeing the Negroes courteous treatment on the buses and a modification of the segregation rule. This would have provided a section of ten seats in the rear reserved for Negroes only, ten seats in the forward part of the bus for whites only, and a middle section of sixteen seats to be filled on a first-come first-served basis, starting at the rear for the Negroes and at the front for the whites.

Would Cut Fares

Also the offer contained an agreement for a scaling down of the 50 per cent bus fare increase put into effect after the boycott began.

The Negroes are holding out for a return to the old fare, for employment of Negro drivers on mainly Negro routes, and for a flexible segregation arrangement.

The one they want is to fill buses on a first-come first-served basis, with the Negroes starting to fill the buses from the rear and the whites from the front seats. Under this arrangement, the segregation line would be flexible, since it would allow the imaginary segregation line to move either forward or back depending on the relative proportion of Negroes and whites boarding the bus as it moved along its route.

The Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy

Associated Press wirephoto

Circuit Judge Eugene Carter, in his chambers at Montgomery, Ala., yesterday. A grand jury returned to Judge Carter yesterday indictments against 115 Negroes in the boycott of the city's buses.

38b 1956

ALABAMA

MASS INDICTMENTS
MONTGOMERY, ALA. BUS BOYCOTT

MONTGOMERY ARREST DRIVE

Daily Herald Thurs. 2-23-56

Atlanta, Ga. P. 1

Over 50 Undergo Arrests; All Win Freedom With Bond Of $300

BY PAT J. McDONNELL

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — (INS) — Negro ministers, political leaders, volunteer car-pool operators and the woman whose arrest touched off a mass boycott against Montgomery city bus lines were the victims of mass arrest Wednesday.

By mid-afternoon 53 Negroes, including 14 ministers, had been taken into custody or had surrendered on Grand Jury indictments, charging violation of an anti-boycott law. In the indictments issued Tuesday, the grand jury branded the Boycott illegal and an incitement to "racial tension and violence." At 11 P. M. Wednesday, all those arrested were out on bond.

Among those picked up Wednesday afternoon were P. M. Blair, unofficial "Mayor" of the city's Negro population; Jimmie Parks, head of a Negro High School and Dr. M. C. Cleveland, of the Day Street Baptist Church.

Dr. Cleveland is also chairman of the Foreign Mission Board of the National Baptist (Negro) Convention.

Mrs. Rosa Parks, whose arrest last Dec. 1 over her refusal to change seats in a city bus at the driver's request touched off the 12-week-old boycott, was among those taken into custody.

The arrests were to continue into the night.

Sheriff Hamilton Butler said that while there were 113 separate boycott charges, he estimated "about 80 individuals" would have been booked when the work was completed.

The boycott, which began Dec. 5, continued in full force on Montgomery's bus lines as the victims were booked.

AMONG THOSE ARRESTED

Hundreds of Negroes and whites lined the driveway leading to the jail as the following persons were arrested or surrendered:

Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy, pastor of the First Baptist Church, the first man to be apprehended.

E. D. Nixon, president of the County Negro Democratic Association, whose home was bombed during the boycott.

Rev. M. L. King, whose home was also bombed, was out of town and reportedly not among those indicted.

Rev. J. W. Hayes and Dr. S. S. Seay, respectively presiding elder and executive secretary of the Home Missions Board of the A. M. E. Zion Church.

R. James Glasco, secretary of the Negro Ministerial Alliance, where the grand jury charged the boycott originated.

Rev. Leroy Bennett and Rev. A. W. Wilson, of the Holt Street Baptist Church, where the first boycott meeting was held.

Rev. Aaron Hoffman, a Baptist minister.

W. J. Powell, pastor of the Old Ship Methodist Church.

Mrs. Joan Robinson, president of the Women's Political Action Council of Montgomery.

LABOR LAW ARRESTS

The Montgomery County police carried out the arrests under a 1929 labor law banning boycotts, the law carries jail sentences of six months and fines of $1,000.

Meanwhile, across the street, at the Montgomery Court House, Circuit Judge Eugene Carter upheld the original traffic court fine which launched the boycott.

Police announced Tuesday night that 115 persons had been indicted by the grand jury but it was not yet certain whether all of them will be arrested in connection with the boycott. Under Alabama law names are kept secret until arrests are made.

LAW OF THE LAND

Dr. Abernathy, who with others made bond of $300 and was released, said:

"We are law abiding citizens. We are ready to be governed by the law."

Asked if he referred to Alabama's segregation laws, he snapped:

"Oh, No. No. By the law of the land."

Tearful women embraced Dr. Abernathy as he emerged from the jail with cries of:

"God bless you. God bless you."

Dr. Abernathy declared that "only the people" could halt the boycott and Negroes in the crowd confirmed his views with such opinions as:

"This will not stop it. It's ridiculous putting people in jail for a ten cent bus ride."

Bus Boycott Leaders Arrested In Alabama

News + Observer Thurs. 2-23-56 P. 1

Raleigh, N.C.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Feb. 22 (AP)—Negro religious and political leaders, including 10 ministers, were arrested on boycotting charges today in a wholesale round up of defendants indicted by a grand jury for their mass protest against bus segregation.

The grand jury returned indictments late yesterday against 115 defendants accused of taking an active part in the 11-week-old racial boycott against Montgomery City Lines buses.

Dates for their trials will be taken up Friday at their arraignment.

Thousands of Negroes have refused to ride the buses since Dec. 5, the day a member of their race, Mrs. Rosa Parks, was fined $14 for refusing to move to the colored section of a bus. City and state laws require segregation.

Mrs. Parks was sentenced to 14 days in jail in lieu of the fine today after Circuit Judge Eugene Carter, the jurist who ordered the grand jury investigation, turned down her appeal from the previous conviction in City Court.

She appealed Judge Carter's decision to the Alabama Supreme Court, and immediately afterward was arrested on a boycotting indictment.

Judge Carter upheld city and state segregation laws when the issue was raised in Mrs. Parks' defense. He imposed the jail sentence after she refused to pay the fine and announced she planned to appeal the conviction. All of the defedants brought to the county jail and fingerprinted were released as soon as they put up bond of $200 each. They were charged with violating a state law against organized, illegal boycotting. Maximum sentence for violation is six months in jail and $1,000 fine.

As the roundup of boycott defendants continued, there were these other developments:

Gov. James E. Folsom invited newspaper editors and publishers to a conference in his office here Friday to discuss racial problems.

Fred D. Gray, 25-year-old unmarried Negro attorney under indictment on a charge of unlawful practice growing out of the bus boycott, lost an appeal from a draft board order reclassifying him 1-A. He had been deferred from military service as assistant pastor of a Negro church.

City attorneys filed an answer in U. S. District Court along with a motion to dismiss a pending suit seeking to outlaw city and state laws which require bus and railroad segregation.

It was that lawsuit that brought Gray's indictment by the grand jury here last week. He was charged with filing the complaint with the consent of one of the five Negro women whose names were signed to the antisegregation petition.

Whether Gray planned to appeal his draft classification to higher authorities wasn't known. The appeals board of the Middle Alabama District announced late yesterday it had upheld the local board decision to put the attorney in 1-A.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Feb. 22—Negro religious and political leaders, including sixteen ministers, were arrested on boycotting charges today. The arrests were made in a wholesale round up of defendants indicted by a grand jury for their mass protest against bus segregation. The indictments were returned yesterday against 115 defendants accused of taking an active part in the eleven-week Negro boycott against Montgomery's buses. The dates for their trials will be taken up Friday at their arraignment. Thousands of Negroes have refused to ride the buses since Dec. 5, the day a member of their race, Mrs. Rosa Parks, was fined $14 for refusing to move to the Negro section of a bus. City and state laws require segregation.

Mrs. Parks was sentenced to fourteen days in jail in lieu of the fine today after Circuit Judge Eugene Carter, the jurist who ordered the grand jury investigation, had turned down her appeal from the previous conviction in City Court.

She appealed Judge Carter's decision to the State Supreme Court. Immediately afterward she was arrested on a boycotting indictment.

Judge Carter upheld city and state segregation laws when the issue was raised in Mrs. Parks' defense. He imposed the jail sentence after she refused to pay the fine and announced she planned to appeal the conviction.

All of the defendants brought to the county jail and fingerprinted were released as soon as they had put up bond of $300 each. They were charged with violating a state law against organized, illegal boycotting. The maximum sentence for violation is six months in jail and $1,000 fine.

As the round-up of boycott defendants continued, there were these other developments:

¶Gov. James E. Folsom invited newspaper editors and publishers to a conference in his office here Friday to discuss racial problems.

¶Fred D. Gray, 25-year-old unmarried Negro lawyer under indictment on a charge of unlawful practice growing out of the bus boycott, lost an appeal from a draft board order reclassifying him 1-A. He had been deferred from military service as assistant pastor of a Negro church.

City attorneys filed an answer in Federal District Court along with a motion to dismiss a pending suit seeking to outlaw the city and state laws that require bus and railroad segregation.

Two Political Leaders Held

It was this lawsuit that brought Mr. Gray's indictment by the grand jury here last week. He was charged with filing the complaint without the consent of one of the five Negro women whose names were signed to the antisegregation petition.

Whether Mr. Gray plans to appeal his draft classification to higher authorities is not known. The Appeals Board of the middle Alabama district announced late yesterday that it had upheld the local board decision to put the attorney in 1-A.

Two of Montgomery's most active Negro political leaders were among those arrested on boycotting warrants today. They were E. D. Nixon, former state president of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, and Mrs. Jo Ann Robinson, a teacher at Alabama State College for Negroes here.

Mr. Nixon, a Pullman porter, is now president of the Montgomery Progressive Democratic Association, a politically active organization, and Mrs. Robinson heads the Women's Political Council.

A small dynamite bomb exploded in the font yard at Mr. Nixon's home the night of Feb. 1, but no one was injured.

Sheriff Mac Butler said that a mistake in his office had caused another Negro polical figure, Rufus Lewis, to be brought in, but that he was not indicted. Mr. Lewis, who was a witness before the grand jury, is president of the Citizens Club, an organization of Negro voters.

The Sheriff said that Mr. Lewis' name was on a list of those to be brought in, but that when Mr. Lewis arrived at the jail, the error was discovered and he was released.

Mr. Butler said that he has sent word to Mr. Lewis to come to the jail, and that he had appeared voluntarily.

Arrested Ministers Listed

The Negro ministers arrested were:

Dr. S. S. Seay, a leading figure in the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church throughout the world and former executive secretary of its Home Missions Board.

The Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy, pastor of the Negro First Baptist Church and head of a negotiating committee that had conferred with city officials and bus company spokesmen in unsuccessful attempt to settle the boycott.

The Rev. Joshua William Hayes, presiding elder of the West Montgomery District of the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church.

The Rev. A. W. Wilson, pastor of the Holt Street Baptist Church, where the first Negro mass meeting was held at the outset of the bus boycott.

The Rev. Joseph H. Cherry (no church specified).

The Rev. R. James Glasco, director of the Alabama Negro Baptist Center in Montgomery.

The Rev. Aaron Hoffman, pastor of the Shiloh Baptist Church.

The Rev. H. H. Hubbard, pastor of the Oak Street Baptist Church.

The Rev. L. R. Bennett, pastor of the Mount Zion African Methodist Episcopal Church.

The Rev. W. J. Powell, pastor of the Old Ship Methodist Church.

The Rev. Sirberia Heard of the Bryant Street Baptist Church.

The Rev. W. F. Alford of the Beaulah Baptist Church.

The Rev. B. J. Simms of St. Marks Baptist Church of Tuskegee, Ala.

The Rev. Fred Davis of Triumph Holiness Church.

The Rev. B. M. Averhart of the Love and Peace Baptist Church of Wetumpka, Ala.

The Rev. M. C. Cleveland of the Board of Missions of the National Baptist Convention.

Although they were not identified in each indictment, Sheriff Butler said that many of the defendants were drivers who used their automobiles in a huge car pool that had furnished transportation to Negroes during the bus protest.

Negro Leaders Arrested in Alabama Bus Boycott

Associated Press Wirephoto

Mrs. Rosa Parks, Negro seamstress, being fingerprinted yesterday in Montgomery, Ala. Her arrest last December for refusing to move to rear of a bus led to the Negro boycott of segregated city bus lines for which she and 114 other persons were arrested yesterday.

38b 1956

ALABAMA

MASS INDICTMENTS
MONTGOMERY, ALA. BUS BOYCOTT

Montgomery 115 Indictments

Daily World

Wed. 2-22-56 P.1

Cites "Tension, Distrust" In Current Race Relationships

Atlanta, Ga.

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — (INS) — A Montgomery Grand Jury — which declared there is "a growing tension" between Negroes and whites — indicted 115 persons for participating in the bus boycott and warned that "if we continue on our present course of race relations, violence is inevitable."

The Grand Jury completed a study of the 12-weeks-old boycott by Negroes of the city's transit system.

The Negro population was protesting "jim crow" seating laws.

The 18-man grand jury —which included one Negro—announced that it was returning 11 true bills and declared that "there has been an illegal boycott."

Under Alabama law, identity of persons indicted is kept secret until they are arrested. The jury did not say whether all 115 indictments were in connection with the bus boycott.

JURY REPORTS "DISTRUST"

In its report on race relations in Montgomery, "the Cradle of the Confederacy," the grand jury declared:

"Distrust, dislike and hatred are being taught in a community which for more than a generation has enjoyed exemplary race relations."

The jury said Alabama's segregation laws and the attack on segregation by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People "are the primary cause of the unrest and increasing tension between white and Negroes in Montgomery."

The jury added, however:

"In this state we are committed to segregation by custom and by law; we intend to maintain it."

The bus boycott began December 5 after a Negro woman, Mrs. Rosa Parks, was fined in police court for refusing to move to the rear of a bus and give a white man her seat. The grand jury said the boycott was "but one manifestation" of the growing racial tension.

"VIOLENCE INEVITABLE"

Commenting further, the grand jury said:

"Small incidents have been magnified out of their true importance and ugly rumors are being spread among both races. It is axiomatic that distrust produces distrust and hate breeds hate.

"It is the feeling of this grand jury that if we continue on our present course of race relations, violence is inevitable. The leaders of both races are urged to take a long and thoughtful look into the future."

The grand jury found that the boycott began with 18 members of the Interdenominational Ministers Alliance which it said was composed mainly of Negro ministers.

The jury found the ministers created the Montgomery Improvement Association and in the past 12 weeks spent some $18,000 in maintaining the boycott.

The jury launched its investigation under court instructions to determine if the bus boycott came under a seldom used law designed to halt boycotts in labor disputes.

Conviction under this law carries a maximum $1,000 fine and six months in jail.

PROTEST DEVELOPMENTS

Since the arrest of Mrs. Parks, there were these developments:

1. The home of the Rev. M. L. King, Jr., a leader in the boycott, was bombed.

2. The constitutionality of Alabama's segregation laws pertaining to transit systems was attacked in a federal court action.

3. An attorney who filed the constitutional test, Fred D. Gray, was indicted last Saturday, charged with undertaking to represent a woman in this case who did not realize she was participating in the suit.

CITY TO ANSWER TODAY

The City of Montgomery is due to file an answer today to the constitutional challenge which accuses city officials of seeking to break the boycott by "threats, force, violence, intimidation or harrassment."

Daily World

Negroes have been arrested, jailed and fined and taxi drivers have been subjected to a "harassing" questioning by police, the complaint charges, in a "conspiracy to prevent...(Negroes)...from refusing to use the bus facilities.

REPRISALS FEARED

P. 6

The federal court action charges police questioning of taxi drivers was for the purpose of obtaining information which could be used in "bringing pressure upon employers to discharge the Negro employes... and otherwise subject them to economic reprisals."

Mayor W. A. Gayle and Montgomery's two other city commissioners announced publicly their affiliation with the White Citizens' Council "as part of their plan of intimidation," the suit filed by Gray declares.

The White Citizens Council is pledged to maintaining the South's traditional pattern of racial segregation.

75 PER CENT EFFECTIVE

Leaders of the boycott claimed that 75 per cent of regular Negro bus riders had joined in the movement.

The Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy, pastor of the Negro First Baptist Church, said Negroes voted down a "compromise" suggested by a white civic committee.

The compromise would have retained segregation, but would have assured Negroes the 10 seats from the rear of each vehicle.

White people have occupied the 10 front seats, with the bus driver authorized to assign passengers to 16 other seats in a "no-man's land" in the center of the bus. Presently Alabama state law requires white passengers to seat from front-to-rear and Negro passengers from the rear toward the front.

TEXT OF JURY'S REPORT ON BUS BOYCOTT PROBE

Advertiser

Montgomery, Ala.

"In accordance with your honor's charge, this grand jury has conducted an extensive investigation into the local bus situation. We find that there has been an illegal boycott existing in this county since the early part of December, 1955. Indictments have been returned where guilt was shown.

Wed. 2-22-56

"We find that the bus boycott originated on Dec. 5, 1955, with 18 members of the Interdenominational Alliance, most or all of whom are Negro ministers. They created the Montgomery Improvement Association, elected its officers, created its executive board and set up its committees. This association has financed the bus boycott to the extent of some $18,000.

"The grand jury finds that there is a growing tension between the races in this community; the bus boycott is but one manifestation of this feeling. Distrust, dislike and hatred are being taught in a community which for more than a generation has enjoyed exemplary race relations. Small incidents have been magnified out of their true importance and ugly rumors are being spread among both races. It is axiomatic that distrust produces distrust and hate breeds hate.

"It is the feeling of this grand jury that if we continue on our present course of race relations, violence is inevitable. The leaders of both races are urged to take a long and thoughtful look into the future.

"Our segregation laws and the NAACP attack on segregation are the primary cause of the unrest and increasing tension between whites and Negroes in Montgomery. In this state we are committed to segregation by custom and by law; we intend to maintain it. The settlement of differences over school attendance, public transportation and other public facilities must be made within those laws which reflect our way of life. During the past hundred years, no racial group has progressed so rapidly as the Negro, and no minority group has received so much in material aid and encouragement as the Negro. All of us recognize that change and progress are inevitable; however, every part of the country and every racial group must approach its own unique problems with the determination to face facts and make decisions which are in the best interest of all, now and in the years to come.

"The grand jury would like to take this opportunity to commend William F. Thetford, the solicitor, and his staff for their excellent help through the entire week.

"We would also like to thank the sheriff, the bailiff, the police of Montgomery and the state and county officers for their efficient services. We would particularly like to commend City Detectives E. W. Jone and Jack Shows for their services to this grand jury.

"And now, having completed investigation of all cases brought before us, we ask to be recessed according to law and rules of this court."

Bus Boycott By Negroes Indicts 115

Constitution Wed. 2-22-56 Atlanta Ga.

Montgomery Jury Asks Racial Accord

P. 1

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Feb. 21 (AP). A grand jury indicted 115 persons involved in Montgomery's Negro bus boycott today.

The grand jury warned that violence is inevitable unless race relations improve.

Only 11 indictments were returned, but an official source said 115 defendants were named, several of them on each indictment.

Under state law, names of the defendants and the specific charges against them must be kept secret until the accused are in custody.

ARRESTS WEDNESDAY

Sheriff MacButler said no arrests on the indictments will be made until tomorrow.

One indictment growing out of the boycott was returned by the grand jury last week when a Negro attorney was charged with unlawful practice growing out of an anti-segregation suit filed in U.S. District Court.

Fred D. Gray was accused of filing the suit against bus segregation without the consent of one of the five Negro women whose names appeared on the complaint.

ANTI-BOYCOTT LAW

The grand jury report said the boycott is a violation of Alabama law gainst boycotting without "a just cause or legal excuse."

The jury said the boycott originated with 18 members of what it called the inter-denominational alliance composed mostly of Negro ministers. Those 18 members created the Montgomery Improvement Assn. which has financed the boycott to the extent of some $18,000, the report continued.

The grand jury which included 17 white men and one Negro warned that "if we continue on our present course of race relations, violence is inevitable. The leaders of both races are urged to take a long and thoughtful look into the future."

VOWS SEGREGATION

Segregation laws and the attack on them by the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People have been the primary cause of racial tension in Montgomery, the jury continued, adding that "we intend to maintain" separate facilities in schools, public transportation and elsewhere.

A state law enacted in 1921 and originally aimed at labor disputes makes an organized boycott unlawful without "a just cause or legal excuse." Violations are punishable by a $1,000 fine and six month.

Mass Indictments

World P. 8

A Montgomery Grand Jury has done what anyone following the protest against alleged racial mistreatment on city buses should have expected — use political power to curb economic resentment. Political power took the form of the indictment of 115 persons on charges of allegedly violating Alabama's boycott laws.

For about 11 weeks a substantial segment of Montgomery's population stopped riding the buses after a woman was arrested and fined for allegedly refusing to spring out of her seat, push back into the crowded section of the bus, and let a man who board the bus after she was seated, take her seat. Buses which move human traffic for pay in Montgomery have a monopoly. Hence the laws of economic competition do not apply.

Perhaps this is the first time in the history of America that a segment's whole leadership has been indicted. This reflects desperation, frustration and retaliation. All of these are unhealthy signs in a civilization, to say nothing about a democracy. This is what concerns us most for the movement.

It should also be observed that some bus company officials, some city officials, and some others have been summoned to court to answer certain charges. The legality of certain mean and cruel laws are being challenged. Still it is far better that these issues be tugged at in court action rather than by tossing bombs, or through use of violent propaganda, or by high-handed intimidation.

Birmingham, Ala.

When it is mentioned that Montgomery, Alabama has had friendly relations, the full record is not exposed. Some persons with obvious qualifications to vote do not always find the way clear to get their names on the poll lists. One elected public officials campaigned on a platform designed to hold one segment beneath the other. Three top city officials allegedly joined an organization dedicated to rebel against at least one decision of the United States Supreme Court.

Fri. 2-24-56

The ballot is a good barometer of race relations. Take any city, county or state in America where racial restrictions are placed on the ballot and there you find group relations poor, even if subdued. Listen to some politicians exclaim that they were elected without carrying this vote, or that vote, and you get a proper perspective of community relations. Where civic relations are favorable one hears no such talk.

Indictments are not automatic convictions. Often they appear to be almost the case in some spots in America where prejudice strong arms justice. Fortunately the state courts in America are not the last resorts. And the indictments of the 115 alleged protest participants may be the initial step on a long legal journey.

Both sides are now in court. A friendly suit on the constitutionality of the bus segregation laws could have, we believe, made many of the other developments unnecessary. Bad publicity again spotlights Alabama.

Negroes in Alabama City Refuse to End Bus Boycott

Star P. 12-A Tues. 2-21-56

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Feb. 21 (AP).—In the face of possible grand jury indictments, Montgomery Negroes continued their bus boycott with new determination today after overwhelmingly rejecting a compromise settlement.

The Montgomery County grand jury was expected to make its final report today, climaxing an eight-day investigation of the mass segregation protest now in its 12th week.

Washington D.C.

Indictments could be returend under an old Alabama law which makes unlawful boycotting punishable by a fine of $1,000 and six months in jail.

With a vow to "walk on," an offer to end the South's first mass use of economic force in the battle over racial segregation was rejected at a Negro rally last night.

Only Two Dissents Reported

Only two dissenting votes were cast, said the Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy, chairman of the Negotiating Committee and pastor of the Negro First Baptist Church.

Mr. Abernathy said about 4,000 persons attended the rally.

Representatives of the Montgomery City Lines and the city commission previously had agreed to the proposals submitted by a newly formed civic organization, the Men of Montgomery.

Conforming to "existing (segregation) laws," the compromise plan proposed that the first 10 seats in the front of each bus be reserved for white passengers and the first 10 seats in the rear for Negroes.

Remaining seats in the center would be filled by Negroes from the rear toward the front and white customers from the front to the rear. Negroes would be pomised courteous treatment, and extra buses would be used during peak hours of travel.

Assured Against Retaliation

The compromise sought to assure the Negroes that there would be "no retaliation whatsoever resulting from the bus boycott."

Mr. Abernathy said after the meeting, from which newsmen were barred, that Negroes would gain virtually no concessions and would have to "return to the buses with increased fares besides" (the single fare rate has gone up from 10 to 15 cents during the boycott). "We have walked for 11 weeks in the cold and rain Now the weather is warming up. Therefore, we will walk on until some better proposals are forthcoming from our city fathers"

At the outset, the Negroes asked for "courtesy" from bus drivers; a "first come, first served" arrangement with Negroes seated from the rear toward the front, and employment of Negro drivers on routes serving predominantly Negro areas.

The protest against segregated bus transportation began December 5 after a Negro woman, Mrs. Rosa Parks, was arrested and fined $14 for refusing to move to the colored section of a bus. City and State laws require separate facilities on all public transportation.

OPPOSING 3,998

Negro Minister One Of Pair Voting To Halt Bus Boycott

Advertiser Montgomery, Ala. Mar. 2-23-56

By STEVE LESHER

A tall Negro minister who was arrested on charges of advocating a boycott revealed yesterday he was one of the two men who voted to end the bus boycott last Monday night.

The Rev. L. R. Bennett, 721 S. Holt St., said he and his assistant parson voted against an estimated 3,998 Negroes who overwhelmingly decided to ignore the city's final attempt at compromise.

But he added, "I believe in the will of the majority and I will stand with my people throughout this protest despite my own opinions."

Bennett divulged this information while he was standing with a group of Negro ministers in front of the Montgomery County Jail.

Bennett, minister of a Methodist Church at Holt and Stone streets, said he had officiated at the very first protest meeting held prior to the boycott at the Dexter Avenue Baptist Church.

Bennett said when he entered the Negro Methodist Church at which the mass meeting was held he was "cheered by my people until I had to tell them to 'stop this foolisnness.' Then when I told them to vote in favor of the compromise, I was booed and jeered."

Bennett listed his reasons for advocating the return of Negroes to the city's buses.

"I told them that I felt we had accomplished our purpose in this protest. I feel we have brought our situation to a head. I feel that now the NAACP, our legal arm whom we have kept out of the picture so far, may now take steps to test the legality of our demands."

Bennett would not say if the NAACP had been called in to aid in the defense of the Negroes charged with advocating a boycott. In a telephone interview with Atty. Arthur D. Shores of Birmingham, The Advertiser learned he will assist in the defense of those charged.

Shores, attorney for Autherine Lucy and Pollie Ann Hudson, two Negroes who have been seeking entrance to the University of Alabama, said that he "didn't know if the NAACP would assist us in the defense."

"I have been called in to assist in the defense," Shores said. "I don't know who will lead the defense, but I assume it will be Fred Gray and Charles Langford. We haven't planned our case and strategy yet and I don't think we'll have proper time to prepare the case."

The hearings are scheduled for this Friday. Shores said he "might" be in Montgomery today to confer with Gray and Langford.

Meanwhile, Bennett said he feels the "white people know now that the Negro wants to be able to sit on a bus when there is an empty seat." He added "there were plenty of people mad at me when I said we should end the protest."

Advertiser P. 2-A

"We are a proud race of people," Bennett said, "and this protest has served to cement us together as a people striving for self-improvement."

Speed Marks Mass Arrests Of Boycotters

Advertiser Montgomery, Ala. Mar. 2-23-56

By JOE AZBELL
Advertiser City Editor

(Joe Azbell, Advertiser city editor, was the only reporter allowed inside the county jail while arrests of the Negroes in the bus boycott was taking place. He acted as contact reporter between the sheriff's forces and the press corps.)

It was like an army recruit line, and as speedy.

Two deputies were handed a batch of warrants.

They drove off. In 15 minutes they were back.

In the rear seat was one of the 115 Negroes accused of boycotting Montgomery City Lines buses.

The deputies hurriedly ushered the Negro inside.

At a desk, a deputy sheriff checked the warrant against a four-page list.

"You're one," he would say in confirmation of the warrant.

THAT WAS IT

He took down the Negro's name, age, weight and height.

That was the booking.

"Okay. Next." he would say. Another pair of deputies waiting at the door would line up the next arrested Negro.

From the desk, the Negroes would be sent unescorted to the fingerprint and photographic room. It was informal and yet efficient.

The Negroes passed the normal booking desk, passed through a swinging gate, detoured down a dark hall and went into an illighted room where two young policemen were taking fingerprints and pictures. The room was crowded with cameras and printing apparatus. There was a waiting line of five or six all day. As each Negro was fingerprinted, the policeman would pour alcohol from a bottle on the inked hands and hand the Negro a paper towel.

NUMBERED EACH

The other policeman would pin up a number, hang it on the Negro and photograph him.

They were handed the three fingerprint cards and shown to an adjoining room where a deputy sheriff, seated at a desk, took down information about each — age weight, characteristics, teeth markings, next of kin, occupations, date and place of birth.

Completing this, they squeezed their way through the crowded fingerprint room and hall back to the main booking desk. Standing at the booking desk always were three or four Negroes ready to sign bonds for those arrested.

Once the $300 bonds were signed, the Negroes went outside. Few left. Most waited for other Negroes to arrive.

OLD HOME WEEK

The outside atmosphere, rather than being tense, was much like "old home week." There was laughing and joking, casual conversations, and handshaking as new figures came out of the jail.

In small huddles, they would join in the joking.

"Man, you're late. I've been here an hour."

Advertiser

As a car approached the jail, a Negro would be heard saying: "Well, here comes my preacher."

P. 2-A

As the day began, those arrested were brought in by deputies, but late in the morning the procedure became predominantly volunteer arresting. Those who had been booked would bring in others standing in the crowd who would check to see if they were among the indicted. Many were. A few weren't. By noon more than half of those arrested had volunteered.

CROWDS OF NEGROES BLOCK STREET

Crowds of Negro onlookers blocked Washington street at one point yesterday and were moved to the south side of the street by Sheriff Mac Sim Butler and his deputies. Onlookers, both white and Negro, were estimated to total 200. They came to witness the bookings of at least 70 Negroes charged with advocating a boycott.—Photo By Kraus

Alabama Jury To Study Negroes' Bus Boycott

Courier-Journal P. 4
Tues. 2-14-56

Montgomery, Ala., Feb. 13 (AP)—Circuit Judge Eugene Carter charged a grand jury today to determine whether Negroes who are boycotting Mongomery City Lines buses are violating the law.

Louisville, Ky.

E. T. Sinclair, a waiter, was the only Negro seated on the Montgomery County grand jury which began its work after Carter concluded his instructions. The jury contained 17 white men.

Declaring "the doctrine of hate has no place here," the Judge told the jurors that "a person's business is property and, if lawfully conducted, is entitled to protection from unlawful interference."

Fine Started Boycott

Negroes have boycotted Montgomery City Lines buses since last December 5, the day a Negro, Mrs. Rosa Parks, was fined $14 in City Court for refusing to move to the Negro section of a bus.

State and City laws require segregation on all public transportation. Since the boycott began, a suit has been filed in United States District Court seeking to have those laws declared unconstitutional.

Circuit Solicitor W. F. Thetford said anyone taking part in a conspiracy to boycott the bus lines could be indicted under a State law that makes boycotting punishable by six months in jail and a $500 fine.

Conspiracy Illegal

A section of the Alabama Code says:

"Two or more persons who, without a just cause or legal excuse for so doing, enter into any combination, conspiracy, agreement, arrangement, or understanding for the purpose of hindering, delaying, or preventing any other persons, firms, corporations, or associations of persons from carrying on any lawful business shall be guilty of a misdemeanor."

Even if the grand jury finds the boycott illegal, Solicitor Thetford said, the City or State can do nothing to compel Negroes to ride buses again. But he said the jury could indict boycott leaders if there is evidence of unlawful acts.

Jury to Rule on Legality Of Negroes' Bus Boycott

Herald Tribune P. 5
Tues. 2-14-56

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Feb. 13 (AP).—A county grand jury composed of seventeen white men and one Negro was told by Circuit Judge Eugene Carter today to determine whether the ten-week-old Negro boycott of City Lines buses here is illegal. If it is illegal, the judge declared, the boycott must be stopped.

New York

E. T. Sinclair, a waiter, was the Negro seated on the grand jury.

N. Y.

Judge Carter also told the grand jury "no court, whether it be Federal court, state court or city court, can interfere with your investigation. You are the supreme inquisitorial body."

Second Reminder

It was the second such reference within a week in Alabama to the powers of a county grand jury. Circut Judge George Wallace told the Bullock County Grand Jury at Union Springs last Monday that he would jail any Federal agents caught investigating his court or grand jury.

Judge Wallace spoke in protest against the action of the F. B. I. in investigating the way grand juries in Cobb County, Ga., were drawn.

Judge Carter, continuing his reference to the bus boycott in Montgomery, declared "the doctrine of hate has no place here, and particularly has no place in the churches."

He said Montgomery "has been a city that both races have had pleasure living in. I say to both black and white, let's continue to live as neighbors."

Protection of Business

Directing the jury to determine the legality or illegality of the organized refusal of Negroes to ride Montgomery City Lines buses, the court declared:

"It is recognized under the Constitution, state and Federal, that a person's business is property and if lawfully conducted is entitled to protection from unlawful interference.

"The essential idea of boycotting . . . is a confederation, generally secret, of many persons whose intent is to injure another by preventing any and all persons from doing business with him, through fear of incurring the displeasure, persecution and vengeance of the conspirators."

The boycott started Dec. 5 in protest against the arrest of a Negro woman who refused to move to the colored section of a bus. The woman, Mrs. Rosa Parks, was fined $14 in City Court. State and city laws require segregation on all public transportation.

Subject to Jail Term

Circuit Solicitor W. F. Thetford said Alabama law makes participation in an unlawful boycott a misdemeanor punishable by six months in jail or a fine of $500. He said any one taking part in an illegal boycott is subject to prosecution.

City officials weren't available for comment on what the city might be able to do if the grand jury found the boycott illegal.

But Solicitor Thetford said the jury could indict boycott leaders if they had evidence of unlawful acts. At the same time, he said, the jury couldn't compel Negroes to ride the buses again.

Appeal Sent Folsom

Herald P. 10 A
Miami, Fla.

Arrest of several Negro Baptist ministers in the bus boycott dispute in Montgomery, Ala., drew the fire Thursday of the president of the National (Negro) Baptist Convention of the U.S.A., Inc., vacationing in Miami.

Jn., 2-24-56

Dr. J. H. Jackson, visiting here from Chicago, wired this message to Alabama Gov. Jim Folsom.

"Regret to learn of developments in Montgomery which have resulted in arrest of at least nine ministers of religion whom I know personally as some of the most loyal Americans who love their nation dearly and their own people most passionately.

"If they have broken any laws, they have done it without knowledge.

"In the name of this American republic, and the 5,000,000 Baptist of our country, I pray you and your good offices to do all within your power to achieve the following:

"1—A just settlement of the problems in the dispute.

"2—The release of these ministers of religion from the toils of the law.

"3—And help to continue the growth of good will among the people of both races within your state.

"We of the National Baptist Convention are anxious to cooperate with you in any constructive measure."

Bus Boycott Arrests Scored

Arrests Hit As Red Methods

Daily World
Sun. 2-26-56
Atlanta, Ga.

CHARLESTON, S. C. — (Special to the Atlanta Daily World) — The mass arrests of 115 Nearoes

MASS INDICTMENTS
MONTGOMERY, ALA. BUS BOYCOTT

in Montgomery, Ala., was described here as "Soviet Communism method," during c heated declaration that Southern whites, not the NAACP are creating additional tension between Negroes and whites.

Roy Wilkins, Excutive Secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, made the charge Friday in Charleston o ly hours after Montgomery's colored citizens held a mass "Walking Day" in protest over the segregated bus situation.

P. 1

PROBLEM OF SOUTH

"Probably noth ng illustrates the problem of the South so well as the Montgomery bus protest." Mr. Wilkins declared. "And Montgomery city officials, all of whom belong to the White Citizens Councils have met the situation in the customary Southern manner.

"The police state has come out in the open at Montgomery. The grand jury has ind cted 115 persons under a state anti-boycott law."

Mr. Wilkins held that "This is the Soviet communism method. Here we have the police knocking on doors and taking men away. Here we have mass arrests. Here we have a grand jury delivering a general lecture on observance of the segregation line. Prec sely like the Communists."

QUOTED REPORT

The speaker, who was addressing the Southeast Regional Convention of the NAACP, quoted the Montgomery Grand Jury's report which is based as reason for the 115 arrests.

Interpreting the statement, Mr. Wilkins declared:

"What the grand jury said is: Here in Montgomery we don't care a hoot about any law except our law; don't get any notions about the Supreme Court or the Constitution, or the United States; this is Montgomery, Alabama, and this is what we say black people must do—or else."

POWER STRUGGLE

Mr. Wilkins termed attacks on Negroes cowardly, and added "to appreciate the scope of the cowardice, one must remember that none of the victims threatens the power structure of the South. Negroes own no great industries, publ sh no daily papers, sit in no legislatures have only a fingernail hold in financial circles, are not sheriffs, sit on no court benches, and hold only a few scattered and minor polit cal offices. Their industrial employment is limited to unskilled categories.

"What threat do they pose? Are these Citizens Council members these industrial executives, bankers, educators, ministers of the gospel and other respectable white community leaders any safer or happier because some Negro family is made to face sudden disaster?

"Does it make a textile executive more secure to know that a Negro widow with four children over in Clarendon County is thrown off the land and has to beg bread and milk for the "sin" of assuming she is a human being?"

Daily World P. 4

Mr. Wilkins declared the school desegregation problem can be solved if the "South will begin by recognizing Negro citizenship, unreserved citizenship."

"The time has come for freedom," Mr. Wilkins declared. "We have been patient—God knows!—but the time is here. Who can say with truth that we want to go too fast? Ninety years is a long time to wait no man who waits that long is going too fast."

MASS INDICTMENTS
MONTGOMERY, ALA. BUS BOYCOTT

Leader In Bus Boycott Indicted By Grand Jury

Calif Tri. 2-24-56 P.1 Kansas City, Mo

Attorney Accused Of Fraud

For Client Without Says Lawyer Acted Proper Consent

MONTGOMERY, Ala. —(INS)— A Negro attorney active in efforts to end racial segregation in public transportation at Montgomery was indicted Saturday for representing an individual without his consent.

Attorney Arthur Gray was arrested and freed upon posting $300 bond.

The grand jury that returned the indictment will resume its study of a boycott of city buses by Negroes on Monday.

The action brought from a Negro leader the pledge that members of his race will be more determined than ever to maintain their refusal to ride city buses until "Jim Crow" seating is abolished.

There was no sign if other indictments have been returned in the racial controversy since Alabama law does not permit announcing names of accused until they are served with the indictments.

Gray and Charles Langford were the attorneys in a suit filed two weeks ago in federal district court at Montgomery seeking an end to segregation in public transportation.

Five plaintiffs were listed in the suit. One of them, Jenetta Reese, later withdrew because, she said, of the threats made against her.

It was believed she was the individual Gray was accused of representing without her consent.

The law reportedly has brought only one previous indictment in Alabama history. That one resulted in the conviction in 1940 of a Montgomery Negro lawyer who was active in opening voter registration lists to Negroes. P. 4

If convicted, Gray would be automatically barred from law practice and would face a minimum fine of $500. No maximum fine is set by the law. Gray, a native of Montgomery, has been practicing law for 18 months. He is a graduate of Western Reserve at Cleveland, Ohio. Kansas City, Mo.

Of the attempts to end racial segregation in Montgomery, Gray said:

"The suit will go on regardless of what happens to me as long as there is one plaintiff. I think the other four will stick."

The grand jury began its study last Monday into the bus boycott that was launched Dec. 5, in protest of "jim crow" regulations. The long boycott has been marked by tensions that reached a peak two weeks ago when the homes of two Negro leaders were bombed.

One of those leaders, the Rev. M. L. King, a Baptist minister, said of the Gray indictment:

"It seems to me our boycott has grown more effective instead of losing effectiveness as time goes on and this might make our people more determined than ever."

King, visiting his father, also a Baptist minister, in Atlanta, said the Montgomery grand jury is "seeking to declare the boycott illegal, but there is no way to make people ride the buses."

He estimated that "less than one per cent" of the city's usual number of Negro bus riders is still riding them.

Declaring the Gray indictment as a "subtle and insidious attempt" to have Gray disbarred King added:

"Montgomery's 50,000 Negroes are standing behind him with all the strength and influence they have, as well as many white friends of good will."

The Rev. King said he felt the grand jury activity "will increase tension" in the city, but added:

"I believe these tensions ultimately will lead to greater harmony between the races in Montgomery. None of us enjoys the tensions."

The Rev. Mr. King said that he would not be surprised if the grand jury "indicted a few more of us."

King, one of the leaders of the boycott, said the action was part of a world-wide revolt of oppressed peoples.

"It's part of something that's happening all over the world," Rev. King said.

"The oppressed people of the world are rising up. They are revolting against colonialism, imperialism and other systems of oppression," he said.

When reminded that Alabama law prohibits boycott without just cause, Rev. King said that Negroes in Montgomery feel they have a just cause.

Stating there was a possibility of the boycott being called off pending court action, King said:

"But I doubt that more than 50 per cent of our people would go back to the system of segregated seating."

King described the boycott as a "movement of passive resistance," stating that "we have kept violence out of the picture from our standpoint."

He said bombs which were exploded at his home and the home of another Negro leader in Montgomery were probably "not intended to harm anyone, but were a symbol of intimidation."

"I'm well guarded everywhere I go in Montgomery, by my friends," he said. "I asked the sheriff for personal protection, but that was denied."

115 ARE INDICTED IN BUS BOYCOTT

Times-Picayune

Montgomery Jury Warns of Violence Danger

Wed. 2-22-56

By REX THOMAS

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Feb. 21 (AP) — With an ominous warning of violence unless racial relations improve, a grand jury Tuesday indicted 115 persons for participating in Montgomery's lengthening Negro bus boycott. P. 1 New Orleans

Names of the defendants and the specific charges were kept secret until the accused persons were taken into custody.

The grand jury, whose 18 members included a Negro waiter, E. T. Sinclair, said in its written report that "distrust, dislike and hatred are being taught in a community which for more than a generation has enjoyed exemplary race relations.

'Ugly Rumors Spread'

"Small incidents have been magnified out of their true importance and ugly rumors are being spread among both races . . ."

And "if we continue on our present course of race relations," the jurors admonished, "violence is inevitable."

Sinclair, the Negro juror, is head waiter at the Montgomery Country Club. How he voted on the indictments wasn't disclosed since grand jury ballots are taken in close-kept secrecy.

Only 11 true bills were returned in the grand jury's final report, but an official source who wouldn't be quoted by name said 115 defendants were named in the multiple indictments.

He also said all of them were involved in the bus boycott.

Filing of Suit Involved

One indictment growing out of the boycott was returned by the grand jury last week when a Negro attorney was charged with unlawful practice growing out of an antisegregation suit filed in US district court.

The lawyer, Fred D. Gray, was accused of filing the suit against bus segregation without the consent of one of the five Negro women whose names appeared on the complaint.

The grand jury in its written report said the bus boycott which has continued without a break since Dec. 5 is a violation of Alabama law which prohibits boycotting without "a just cause or legal excuse."

The jury's report said the boycott originated wth 18 members of what it called the inter-denominational alliance composed mostly of Negro ministers.

Financed Boycott

Those 18 members created the Montgomery Improvement Association which has financed the boycott to the extent of some $18,000, the report continued.

The jury also said "there is a growing tension between the races in this community" and the bus boycott is "but one manifestation of this feeling." Times-Picayune

"Distrust, dislike and hatred are being taught in a community which for more than a generation has had exemplary race relations," the repotr said. P. 3

"Small incidents have been magnified out of their true importance and ugly rumors are being spread among both races . . ."

Violence Inevitable

Ominously, the grand jury warned that "if we continue on our present course or race relations, violence is inevitable. The leaders of both races are urged to take a long and thoughtful look into the future."

Segregation laws and the attack on them by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People have been the primary cause of racial tension in Montgomery, the jury continued, adding that "we intend to maintain" separate facilities in schools, public transportation and elsewhere.

The settlement of differences, "must be made within these laws which reflect our ways of life," the jury declared.

Grand Jurors Give Warning Of Violence

Post-Herald Wed. 2-22-56 P. 1

Hit At Growing Race Hatred

Birmingham

MONTGOMERY, Feb. 21 (AP)—A grand jury returned indictments against 115 persons today, most if not all of them involved in Montgomery's Negro bus boycott.

Only 11 indictments were returned in the grand jury's final report, but an official source said 115 defendants were named, several of them on each indictment.

Under Alabama law, names of the defendants and the specific charges against them must be kept secret until the accused persons are in custody.

An official source who wouldn't be quoted by name said most, if not all, of the defendants were indicted for the boycott, during which Negroes by the thousands have refused to ride Montgomery City Lines buses for the past 11 weeks.

One indictment growing out of the boycott was returned by the Grand Jury last week when a Negro attorney was charged with unlawful practice growing out of an anti-segregation suit filed in U. S. District Court.

The lawyer, Fred D. Gray, was accused of filing the suit against bus segregation without the consent of one of the five Negro women whose names appeared on the complaint.

The Grand Jury in its written report said the bus boycott which has continued without a break since Dec. 5 is a violation of Alabama law which prohibits boycotting without "a just cause or legal excuse."

The jury's report said the boycott originated with 18 members of what it called the Inter-Denominational Alliance, composed mostly of Negro ministers.

Those 18 members created the Montgomery Improvement Assn., which has financed the boycott to the extent of some $18,000, the report continued.

The jury also said, "There is a growing tension between the races in this community" and the bus boycott is "but one manifestation of this feeling."

"Distrust, dislike and hatred are being taught in a community which for more than a generation had exemplary race relations," the report said.

"Small incidents have been magnified out of their true importance and ugly rumors are being spread among both races . . ."

Ominously, the Grand Jury warned that "if we continue on our present course of race relations, violence is inevitable. The leaders of both races are urged to take a long and thoughtful look into the future." Post-Herald

Segregation laws and the attack on them by the National Association For the Advancement of Colored People have been the primary cause of racial tension in Montgomery, the jury continued, adding that "we intend to maintain" separate facilities in schools, public transportation and elsewhere.

The settlement of differences "must be made within these laws which reflect our ways of life," the jury declared.

The bus boycott investigation began eight days ago when Circuit Judge Eugene Carter charged the regular February Grand Jury to determine whether the mass protest against racial segregation facilities was illegal.

Jury Indicts Atty. In Ala. Bus Boycott

Weekly P. 1 Sat. 2-25-56 New Orleans, La.

Montgomery, Ala. (ANP). — Negro leaders of the 11-week-old boycott of Montgomery buses said the indictment of Atty. Fred D. Gray, their top level advisor, will make them more determined than ever to continue their fight against segregated seating facilities.

Atty. Gray, 25, who filed a federal court suit seeking to end Jim Crow on city buses recently, was arrested Saturday under a grand jury indictment charging he filed the suit unlawfully and without being employed by one of the plaintiffs.

He was released on $300 bond.

Five plaintiffs were listed in the suit. One of them, Mrs. Jeanetta Ross, an elderly housemaid, later said she did not know what she was doing when she signed and asked that her name be withdrawn.

Gray denied the charge and said several persons were present in his office when the woman signed the suit. He said he explained the implication of the action at the time.

The grand jury, which has been investigating the legality of the bus boycott, returned 114 indictments Saturday as it made a partial report.

However, Gray's indictment was believed to be the only one directly connected with the boycott. The grand jury will make a final report later this week, in which further boycott indictments are expected to be presented.

If convicted, Gray would be required to pay a $500 fine and would be prohibited from practice in any state court.

The law reportedly has brought only one previous indictment in Alabama history. That one resulted in the conviction in 1940 of a Montgomery Negro attorney who was active in opening voter registration lists to Negroes.

Gray has been a leader in the boycott, which has resulted in an estimated 80 to 90 per cent of the regular Negro bus passengers refusing to ride the segregated buses.

New Orleans, La.

A native of Montgomery, Gray has been practicing law for 18 months. He is a graduate of Western Reserve University, Cleveland, Ohio.

He was recently reclassified 1-A by a local draft board. He had been exempt as a minister with 4-D classification.

Hold Montgomery Lawyer On Violation of Boycott Law; Protested City Bus Bias

Bystander P. 1 Thurs. 2-23-56 Des Moines, Iowa

MONTGOMERY, ALA. — A Negro attorney who filed an antisegregation suit growing out of Montgomery's bus boycott was arrested Saturday on an indictment returned by a grand jury investigating the boycott.

The grand jury may write other indictments early this week charging actual violation of Alabama's boycott law, a statute originally aimed at labor disputes.

Fred Gray, 25, Montgomery attorney, was among the defendants named in 114 true bills handed in by the jury late Friday.

"Without Consent"

Gray was charged with unlawfully filing an anti-segregation suit in U. S. district court last month without the consent of one of the five Negro women whose names appeared on the complaint.

Out on Bond

The suit, an outgrowth of the racial boycott against Montgomery buses, seeks to knock out city and state laws which require segregation on all public transportation.

The attorney was released on $300 bond. The indictment was returned under a state law which makes it a misdemeanor to file a court suit without authority. Violation is punishable by a $500 fine and suspension from practice.

Gray was exempt from the military draft when the boycott began, being classified 4-D as a "practicing minister."

Rarely Used Law

Buthis draft board reclassified him 1-A last month without mentioning the racial disturbance. Officials said he forfeited his right to deferment when his church acquired a full-time minister.

If the grand jury of 17 white men and one Negro finds the bus protest was organized and carried on without "just cause or legal excuse," it can return indictment under a state law rarely used before except in labor strife.

The statute was enacted in 1921 as an outgrowth of labor unrest in Birmingham which included boycotts and blacklisting along with physical violence in the strike-ridden coal fields there.

Thurs. 2-23-56 Des Moines, Iowa

Law Prohibits

The law prohibits two or more persons "without a just cause or legal excuse," from entering into "any combination, conspiracy, agreement, arrangement or understanding for the purpose of hindering, delaying, or preventing any other persons, firms, corporations or associations from carrying on any lawful business."

Maximum penalty for violation is 6 months in jail and $1,000 fine.

SEGREGATION

Sunday Star Washington, D.C.

Alabama Walkathon Continues Despite Leader's Conviction

A Montgomery (Ala.) judge last week convicted the 27-year-old Negro minister who, with soft words and fervent prayer, has led a four-month walkathon by members of his race protesting segregation and what they regard as shabby treatment on city buses.

The Rev. Martin Luther King, jr., Thursday appealed his conviction on charges of violating Alabama's anti-boycott law. A few hours later, Mr. King told a cheering audience in a packed Negro church:

"Freedom doesn't come on a silver platter. Some of the things we have to go through are a necessary part of our campaign. There can never be growth without growing pains."

Sunday Star

But besides the growing pains, there were also some sore feet. Montgomery's 34,000 walking Negroes were still staying off the buses. They vowed the boycott would continue indefinitely. After the four-day trial ended, the State agreed to postpone the trials of 89 other Negroes facing similar charges pending Mr. King's appeal. P. 28-A

Move in Congress

Meanwhile, in Congress, a bipartisan group of House members began efforts to send to the floor a catch-all civil rights bill. A discharge petition requiring 218 signatures was introduced in an attempt to bypass consideration by the Judiciary and Rules Committees In recent years, civil rights measures have had relatively easy going in the House, which has passed several, only to see them die at the hands of Southern filibusterers in the Senate.

Star 3-25-56

On Wednesday, President Eisenhower gently prodded the South to get on with integration in public schools. He repeated the appeal for moderation he had made the pervious week at his news conference, but this time he reminded the South that the Supreme Court's desegregation decision was the law of the land and that "it is incumbent on all the South to show some progress." Mr. Eisenhower said that much of the responsibility for starting the process of desegregation belongs to the clergy of the South.

The President did not indicate that he had any plans to call a White House Civil Rights conference, a course urged upon him from many quarters, including the camp of Adlai Stevenson.

Progress in Texas

In other developments on the segregation front:

- The city council in San Antonio, Tex., in five minutes ended a century of segregation in municipally-owned facilities. The councilmen unanimously repealed an ordinance requiring racial segregation in city swimming pools and then anounced an "open door" policy for all city facilities to "all persons on an equal basis."
- The University of Tennessee in Knoxville denied a group of white students permission to organize a chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People on the campus.
- Arkansas joined the list of Southern States on the interposition bandwagon when a Governor's committee announced that it would present an interposition resolution before the Legislature. Legislators will be asked to consider a version of Virginia's pupil assignment plan.

PRAYERS AT MEETING

Boycott Leaders Arraigned Today

Advertiser p. 1

Montgomery, Ala.
Fri. 2-24-56

Mass Gathering Called At Church On Eve Of Appearance In Court

Negro leaders of Montgomery's bus boycott will be arraigned in Circuit Court today on charges of advocating an illegal boycott.

Ten thousand Negroes are expected to shun all vehicles and make a pilgrimage to the courthouse this morning, according to Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy.

Some 3,000 Negroes roared and applauded their approval to speeches last night at a mass meeting at the First Negro Baptist Church. Speeches were made by Abernathy, the Rev. M. L. King, E. D. Nixon, the Rev. E. H. French and other Negro religious and political leaders.

At least 90 defendants of 115 indicted by the grand jury will appear for arraignment starting at 9 a.m.

They are charged with violating Alabama's anti-boycott law which provides a maximum penalty of six months in jail and $1,000 fine.

Last night's mass meeting which the Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy hoped would draw at least 10,000 Negroes, was called to "pray for justice to prevail" in the wholesale prosecution of boycott participants.

ABERNATHY INDICTED

The Rev. Abernathy, pastor of the Negro First Baptist Church, was among those indicted.

All "race-loving" Negroes also were urged to shun all forms of auto transportation, including their own cars, for 24 hours today in a "great pilgrimage" to demonstrate that they can walk if they have to.

They have used a highly organized motor pool to get to and from work throughout the boycott.

The Rev. Abernathy emphasized, however, that there is no planned demonstration during the arraignments today despite rumors that the Negroes would "march" on the courthouse.

"There will be nothing like that," he declared.

Another spokesman for the boycotting Negro community, the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., surrendered to sheriff's officers yesterday morning on an anti-boycott indictment returned against him.

TENNESSEE TRIP

He was in Tennessee conducting a religious emphasis program at the time the grand jury made its report on the bus protest Tuesday, and his indictment was kept secret until he returned.

King, who had predicted earlier that he would be indicted, appeared at the county jail with his father, the Rev. M. L. King Sr., of Atlanta. He was fingerprinted and released on $300 bond.

He was the 24th Negro minister taken into custody in the wholesale roundup of boycott defendants. More than 90 defendants in all have been arrested.

The exact number of Negroes named in the 11 indictments was still undetermined although it was originally announced as 115. Sheriff Mac Sim Butler said there were some duplications of names on the writs that would lessen the total number.

For example, some defendants were listed by their full names on one writ and by their nicknames or initials on anotner making it appear they were separate individuals until the sheriff's office checked them.

Meanwhile, a team of five Negro defense attorneys conferred with Circuit Solicitor William F. Thetford, who will prosecute the boycott charges for the state. Neither Thetford nor the Negroes would say afterward what was discussed.

BOTH SIDES MUM

They did disclose, however, that they talked about today's arraignments at which the defendants will ask how they plead to the indictments.

The Negro lawyers were led by Arthur D. Shores of Birmingham, who has represented Autherine Lucy, the Negro coed whose admittance to the University of Alabama touched off riotuous demonstration there earlier this month. The Lucy woman was barred from class "until further notice" because of the vollence.

Shores has asked U.S. District Judge Hobart Grooms in Birmingham to order the university to readmit her immediately. A hearing on that peitition is scheduled next Wednesday.

Another of the attorneys hired to represent the boycott defendants here was Fred D. Gray, who himself was indicted last week on an unlawful practice charge growing out of the mass protest.

Gray was charged with filing an anti-bus segregation suit in federal court without consent of one of the five Negro women whose names were signed to the complaint.

Shores said signed retainers will be obtained from all the boycott defendants so there will be no cause for doubt in the coming trials.

BEGAN DEC. 5

The boycott began last Dec. 5 after a Negro woman, Rosa Parks, was fined $14 in city court for refusing to move to the colored section of a bus. Her conviction was upheld Wednesday in circuit court, but she filed notice of appeal to the State Supreme Court.

City and state laws require segregation on all public transportation.

At first the Negroes demanded only a "first come, first served" seating arrangement on Montgomery City Lines buses, with Negroes seating from the rear and white passengers from the front until all seats were filled.

Under the existing system, the seating is left to the discretion of each bus driver.

Later, as the boycott grew, Gray filed the suit in U.S. District Court asking that bus segregation be declared unconstitutional.

The mass arrests briught a demand from Rep. Powell (D-NY) yesterday for "White House" protection.

TELEGRAM SENT

The Negro congressman, in a telegram to President Eisenhower, called the arrest of the ministers a "new low in American barbarism.'

At Thomasville, Ga., Mr. Eisenhower's vacation headquarters, White House Press Secretary James C. Hagerty said no telegram had been received there from Powell as far as he knew. He said it might have gone to the White House in Washington.

The congressman's telegram said:

"Behind the dark curtain today in Montgomery, Ala., another ghastly victory for communism is scored. As a clergyman and congressman, I wish to state that from this moment on the White House is responsible for safeguarding the lives, physical security and civil liberties of the 115 Negroes arrested for peaceably and nonviolently trying to obtain what the Constitution promises and local state and federal law enforcement officials refuse to give.

"The arrest of my fellow clergymen is a new low in American barbarism. I request, therefore, that they and their followers be protected immediately by the White House."

FIVE REMAINING

Approximately five Negroes remain to be arrested after deputies apprehended 16 yesterday to bring the total number to more than 90.

Arrested yesterday in addition to Rev. M. L. King, were L. C. Walker, 3269 Liles Ct., district manager of North Carolina Mutual Life Insurance Co.; P. E. Conley, 62, 1502 Harriet St., retired government employe; W. H Johnson, 51, 1120 Broughton St., a laborer; Eddie Bradford, 25, Hunter Station, chemical worker; Arthur Bibbins, 48, 649 Smythe St., employe of First National Bank and Alabama Gas Co.; Fred Morris, 26, 573 N. Union St., plasterer; George H. Jordan, 30, 1837 Dixie Ct., employe of Venetian Blinds Service Co.; E. M. Williams, 33, 440 Bainbridge St., employe of Smith and Gaston Funeral Parlor; Calvin Varner, 51, 819 Cleveland Ave., woodyard operator; Mose W. Richburg, 29, 682 Columbia Ave., student; John Green Hill, 3340 E. Tuskegee Circle, L&N Railroad freight handler; Henry A. McLain, 725 Tuscaloosa, mail carrier; Louis Boswell, and Eddie Lee Posey, addresses and employment not available.

Bus Line Answers Segregation Suit

Attorneys for Montgomery City Lines yesterday filed an answer in U.S. District Court here to a suit seeking an end to segregated travel.

The bus company said it was governed by the laws of Alabama and the ordinances of the city of Montgomery.

Two bus drivers named in the suit—James F. Blake and Robert Cleere—also filed answers that they were acting under the orders of their employer.

The bus company denied that it had conspired to commit an illegal or unlawful act and denied further that it holds an exclusive franchise in the city.

The suit was filed on behalf of five Negro women—one of whom later disavowed any part in the action.

Besides the bus company and the two drivers, defendants are the City Commission and Police Chief G. J. Ruppenthal.

City attorneys filed an answer earlier this week, with a motion for dismissal of the suit.

King Pleads Guilty To Speeding Charge

The Rev. M. L. King, who appealed a $10 and costs speeding fine from Recorder's Court last month, agreed through his attorney yesterday to waive jury trial in Circuit Court plead guilty and pay a fine of $5 and costs.

The original fine was $10 plus $4 court costs.

Although the fine was cut in half, circuit court costs sent the total amount up to $25.70.

Englehardt Praises Indictment Action

State Sen. Sam Englehardt of Macon County, Chairman of the Central Alabama Citizen's Council, today praised the Montgomery County grand jury for its recent action in indicting leaders of the bus boycott.

"It is the sworn duty of the grand jury and the officials of the county." Englehardt said, "to indict and arrest any person who voilates the law. The law concerning boycotts has been flagrantly violated here and I am happy to see that the grand jury and the county officials have taken action which was forced on them."

"The Citizens' Council is 100 per cent behind the grand jury and its officials," Englehardt said.

The Citizens' Council Chairman also pointed out that boycott leaders are urging Montgomery Negores to break the law, regardless of what they say about their intentions.

"If these people succeed in getting the Negroes of Montgomery to break this law, and get away with it, then who's to say what unlawful act they will advocate next?"

Sen. Englehardt is also Executive Secretary of the newly-organized Association of Citizens' Councils of Alabama.

'. . . NOT A ONE MAN SHOW'

Advertiser, Ala. Montgomery, Ala. Fri 12-24-56

Negro Boycott Leader Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy tells an estimated 3,000 Negroes that "our protest against the seating arrangements of the city's buses is not a one-man show. It is a show for Negroes all over the country." Some 35 newsmen were present at the huge meeting at which Abernathy and a dozen boycott leaders were cheered wildly when they entered the First Baptist Church at Ripley and Columbus streets.—Photo By AP

38b 1956

ALABAMA

BOMBING

Daily World

Incident Called Aftermath Of Official's "Get Tough" Speech

Wed. 2-1-56 P.1

Atlanta, Ga.

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — (SNS) — Mayor W. A. Gayle of Montgomery apologized for the "Get-Tough" policy he announced early last week and promised protection for the family of Atlanta-born Rev. M. L. King, Jr. whose home was bombed Monday night, according to the minister's wife.

Mayor Gayle, in an effort to ease the pressure of a boycott initiated by Negroes protesting "unfair treatment on city buses," had announced last week that the City Commission was through "pussyfooting around with boycotters." Following his statement Rev. King, pastor of Dexter Ave. Baptist Church and president of the Montgomery Improvement Association, was arrested last Saturday and fined $14 on a charge of speeding 30 miles per hour in a 25 mile zone.

"GET TOUGH" POLICY IN ACTION

The bombing of Rev. King's home Monday was interpreted by some observers as an aftermath of the Mayor's so-called "invitation to violence." Rev. King also blamed his arrest o nthe speeding charge as "intimidation" triggered by the mayor's avowal of war against boycotters.

The boycott began nearly two months ago when a Negro woman was arrested and fined for refusing to move so a white man could sit down when ordered to do so by a white bus driver. Negroes organized a cooperative transportation service and refused to ride public buses.

Since then, numerous Negroes reportedly were arrested, but the most serious of related incidents occurred when a hand-made bomb was tossed on the porch of Rev. King's residence. The explosion shattered windows, ripped a hole in the cement porch and narrowly missed injuring the young minister's family.

Mrs. King, the former Miss Coretta Scott of Marion, Ala., said she and a neighbor, Mrs. Roscoe Williams were in the living room of her home when they heard a loud thud "like a brick hitting the front porch." As they ducked into a back room, the explosion cracked a porch column and literally shook the house, she said. The couple's 10-week old baby was sleeping in a third room near the rear of the house and was unhurt.

Mrs. King said, news of the bombing brought a milling throng of nearly 400 Negroes some of whom came armed —— apparently prepared to protect their leader. It took a dramatic "peace speech" by her husband, she said, to quiet the people who gathered outside.

AFTER BOMB — PROTECTION

Before the smoke of the bomb cleared, Mayor Gayle and Police Commissioner Sellers arrived to make "flowery speeches on protection" for the Kings, the minister's wife continued, but the "people were not going to listen to them. "It was then that my husband spoke," she said.

The 27-year-old minister was quoted as saying:

"We believe in law and order. Don't get panicky. Don't do anything panicky at all. Don't get your weapons. He who lives by the sword will perish by the sword. Remember that is what God said.

"We are not advocating violence. We want to love our enemies. I want you to love our enemies. Be good to them. Love them and let them know you love them. I did not start this boycott. I was asked by you to serve as spokesman. I want it to be known the length and breadth of this land that if I am stopped, this movement will not stop. If I am stopped our work will not stop. For what we are doing is right. What we are doing is just, and God is with us."

Daily World

The crowd cheered "God bless you, Brother King," "Amen."

P.3

Rev. King arrived 15 minutes after the explosion. He had been to a mass meeting attended by some 2,000 Negroes at a local church. The bomb was probably a hand grenade or a half stick of dynamite, according to Vann Pruitt, assistant state toxicologist.

NEIGHBORS' REPORT

Neighbors reportedly saw a white man toss the bomb on the porch and then jump into a light colored automobile that sped away.

The Montgomery city commission termed the bombing of the minister's home a "strange and foreign" deed, and warned that such violence "will not be tolerated by the board of commissioners."

The board posted a $500 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the responsible party, and the pro-segregation Central Alabama Citizens Committee offered another $500 reward.

WCC MEMBERS

All three members of the Montgomery City Commission belong to the Citizen's Council, which is pledged to preserve racial segregation.

The mayor promised police protection for the Kings and asked "the cooperation of the entire community to find the guilty parties."

The Kings' home is a frame structure supported by concrete porch and brick foundation. It is the property of the Dexter Ave. Baptist Church where Rev. King is pastor.

Miss Christine King, the young minister's sister, left Atlanta late Monday night to be with her brother during the crisis.

There has been no marked change of conditions in the boycott which began December 5.

Police Commissioner Sellers said while he was out working on the King bombing someone telephoned his wife and told her: "The same thing is going to happen to you that happened to King." He said there were other similar calls later.

MASS INDICTMENTS

MONTGOMERY, ALA. BUS BOYCOTT

Grand Jury Calls Quiz On 204

Defender Sat. 2-25-56

P.1 Chicago, Ill.

BULLETIN

Arthur Gray, an attorney active in efforts to end racial segregation in public transportation at Montgomery, was indicted Saturday for representing an individual without his consent.

Gray was arrested and freed upon posting $300 bond. Gray and Charles Langford were the attorneys in a suit filed three weeks ago in Federal District court seeking to halt transportation segregation.

38...

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — Unofficial but authoritative reports were current over the week-end that 20 persons and possibly more would be indicted by a grand jury investigating the 11-week-old bus boycott here and refused to stand trial. By the end of the week 204 persons had been subpoenaed by the Montgomery grand jury which is extending its probe of the nationally publicized fight between the city-operated bus line and Negro residents.

Strike leaders, including Rev. M. L. King, have been hesitant to discuss details of the boycott by phone fearing their lines have been tapped.

However, it was learned from reliable sources that boycott leaders have rejected a compromise settlement of the issue. Under the compromise plan, bus seats would be available to both races on a 50-50 basis.

Strike leaders brand this as wasteful and unrealistic. They are pressing for a first-come first-served arrangements whereby Negroes would fill up seats beginning at the front of vehicles and whites would take seats beginning att he front of vehicles and working back. When all seats are filled, both Negroes and white would be required to stand.

This would eliminate Negroes standing while seats reserved for whites would be vacant.

A newly formed group, known as "Men of Montgomery" made up of some of the city's white business leaders have intervened with the hope of breaking the stale mate.

They are urging Negro leaders to accept the compromise. One member of the new group told the Defender Friday that the strike would be settled Monday. He would not elaborate on his statement.

Meanwhile, leaders report that members of the Montgomery Improvement association which is spearheading the boycott, have shown no disposition to ease up on their campaign which is more than 90 percent effective.

GRAND JURY INDICTS IN BOYCOTT OF BUSES

Commercial Appeal

Montgomery Negro Leaders Of Protest Face Arrest

Wed. 2-22-56

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Feb. 21. —(UP)—A Grand Jury reported Tuesday that the Negro boycott of Montgomery city buses is illegal and it indicted an undisclosed number of persons for taking part in it.

Memphis Tenn.

It was reliably reported that more than 100 persons were charged with taking part in the boycott in the 11 indictments returned by the jury.

P. 1

Names of those indicted were not disclosed pending their arrest by sheriff's officers.

Striking hard at the long Negro demonstration, the jury said "we find that there has been an illegal boycott existing in this county . . . indictments have been returned where guilt was shown."

The jury report noted "there is a growing tension between the races in this community; the bus boycott is but one manifestation of this feeling. Distrust, dislike and hatred are being taught in a community which for more than a generation has enjoyed exemplary race relations."

". . . If we continue on our present course of race relations," the report said, "violence is inevitable. The leaders of both races are urged to take a long and thoughtful look into the future."

115 Are Indicted In Negro Bus Boycott

Courier-Journal P.16
Louisville, Ky.

Jury Warns Violence Is Inevitable Unless Racial Relations Improve

Wed. 2-22-56

Montgomery, Ala., Feb. 21 (AP)—A grand jury indicted 115 persons involved in Montgomery's Negro bus boycott today.

The grand jury warned that violence is inevitable unless racial relations improve.

The boycott has been under way 11 weeks in protest against segregated seating on buses, required under Alabama law.

Under State law, names of the defendants and the specific charges against them must be kept secret until the accused persons are in custody.

The grand-jury report called the boycott a violation of Alabama law, which prohibits boycotting without "a just cause or legal excuse."

The jury said the boycott originated with 18 members of what it called the Inter-Denominational Alliance, composed mostly of Negro ministers. Those 18 members created the Montgomery Improvement Association, which has financed the boycott to the extent of some $18,000, the report continued.

The jury also said "there is a growing tension between the races in this community" and the bus boycott is "but one manifestation of this feeling."

'Hatred Being Taught'

"Distrust, dislike, and hatred are being taught in a community which for more than a generation has enjoyed exemplary race relations," the report said.

"Small incidents have been magnified out of their true importance and ugly rumors are being spread among both races."

Ominously, the grand jury—which included 17 white men and one Negro—warned:

"If we continue on our present course of race relations, violence is inevitable. The leaders of both races are urged to take a long and thoughtful look into the future."

Alabama Indicts 115 In Negro Bus Boycott

Times P.1
Wed. 2-22-56

By The Associated Press.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Feb. 21—A grand jury indicted today 115 persons involved in the boycott of Montgomery's buses by Negroes.

An Alabama law enacted in 1921 and originally aimed at labor disputes makes an organized boycott unlawful without "a just cause or legal excuse." Violations are punishable by a $1,000 fine and six months in jail.

The grand jury warned that violence was inevitable unless race relations improved.

The boycott has been under way eleven weeks in protest against segregated seating on buses, required under Alabama law.

New York

Eleven indictments were returned, but an official source said that 115 defendants were named, groups of them in each indictment.

Under state law, the names of the defendants and the specific charges against them must be kept secret until the accused persons are in custody.

Another indictment growing out of the boycott was returned by the grand jury last week when a Negro attorney was charged with unlawful practice growing out of an antisegregation suit filed in Federal District Court.

P.14-C

Fred D. Gray was accused of filing the suit against bus segregation without the consent of one of the five Negro women whose names appeared on the complaint.

The jury said that the boycott originated with eighteen members of what it called the Inter-Denominational Alliance, composed mostly of Negro ministers. The eighteen set up the Montgomery Improvement Association, which has spent about $18,000 on the boycott, the jury's report declared.

The jury further said that "there is a growing tension between the races in this community," and that the bus boycott was "but one manifestation of this feeling."

"Distrust, dislike and hatred are being taught in a community which for more than a generation has enjoyed exemplary race relations," the report said.

"Small incidents have been magnified out of their true importance and ugly rumors are being spread among both races."

The grand jury, which included seventeen white men and one Negro, warned that "if we continue on our present course of race relations, violence is inevitable. The leaders of both races are urged to take a long and thoughtful look into the future."

Segregation laws and the attack on them by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People have been the primary cause of racial tension in Montgomery, the jury asserted. It added that "we intend to maintain" separate facilities in schools, public transportation and elsewhere.

The boycott began Dec. 5 in protest against the arrest of Mrs. Rosa Parks, a Negro, who had refused to move to the Negro section of a bus. She was fined $14.

The boycott has brought some violence, but no injuries. Dynamite bombs were exploded at the homes of two of the leading figures in the Negro protest movement—the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. and E. D. Nixon.

The Rev. Mr. King is pastor of the Dexter Avenue Baptist Church and is one of the most outspoken boycott leaders. Mr. Nixon is a former state president of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

segregated city buses. P. 14

The Rev Martin Luther Kink Jr went on trial Monday, after the defendants asked separate trials.

Bus Boycott Trial Defendants

Rev A Edward Banks, last minister to be arrested when he came into Montgomery last week from his home in nearby Clanton, Ala.

Jimmie Gamble, 36, Maxwell Air Force Base, wharehouse man, 645 Bullock St.

Rev Arthur Murphy, 55, pastor Oak Street, AME Zion church.

Otis Carelton, 27, Air Force truck driver, 407 Wade St.

Sgt Booker T Holmes, 355, Maxwell Air Force Base, 2266 Edgemount St.

Walter Moses, 47, Nelson Construction Co laborer, 1112 Pelham St.

Rev B J Simms, pastor, St Marks Baptist Church.

Osborne Chambliss, 43, mail carrier, 1145 S Decatur St.

Mrs Irene West, 65, Eastern Star leader and mother of an Air Force major.

Miss Jo Ann Robinson, 39, teacher at Alabama State College.

Mose Bishop, employed at Veteran Hospital.

C W Lee, 62, proprietor of Lee's Funeral Home

Rev John W Hayes, 48, Presiding Elder, West Montgomery District, AME Church.

Rev W F Alford, 40, pastor, Beulah Baptist Church.

Robert Carr, cement mason, Butler and Carr streets.

Eli Judkins, 45, Durr Drug Company employee.

Thomas Gray, brother of Fred Gray, one of the defense lawyers.

Rev J H Cherry, 52, pastor, Sundown Little Zion and Ramar Churches.

Rev Siveria Heard, 57, pastor, Bryant Street Baptist Church.

Isiah Ferguson, 48, auto repair shop operator.

Frank Powell, Jr, 31, laborer.

Rev H J Palmer, 53, pastor, Rock Island Baptist Church.

Rev S Seay, pastor, Rogers Chapel AME Church.

Alberta James, 1503 Hall street

Alexander St.

Rev R L Bennett, 52, Mt Zion AME Zion Church (spoke at Cleveland last week)

E D Nixon, pullman porter, and president of the Progressive Democratic Club.

Rev A Hoffman, 42, pastor, Shiloh Baptist Church.

Rev James R Glasco, director, Alabama Baptist Center.

Rev R D Abernathy, pastor First Baptist Church, one of top leaders.

Mrs Cora McHaney, 50, teacher, Carver High School.

A McHaney, 54, District Manager, Atlanta Life Insurance Co.

Martin L Johnson, student, Alabama State College.

Rev Fred L Davis, 41, Triumph Holiness Church.

J E Pierce, 41, professor, Political Science, Alabama State College.

Rev J W Bonner, 50, pastor First CME Church.

Ronald Young, 36, teacher, St Jude Catholic School.

Dr Moses Jones, 42, physician.

George Henderson, 42, store porter.

Rev B M Averhart, 45, pastor, Love and Peace Baptist Church.

Wesley S Tolbert, 63, unemployed.

Rev Simon P McBride, 45, pastor, Mt Pleasant Church.

S H Ligon, 41, letter carrier.

Charles Polk, 23, boiler works laborer.

P M Blair, 54, operator of dry cleaning plant.

Dr M C Cleveland, 72, pastor, Day Street Baptist Church.

Miss Ida Mae Caldwell 34, candy company employee.

J C Smith, 25, glass company employee.

William Johnson, 51, cement finisher.

Rev E N French, 34, pastor, Hilliard Chapel AME Zion Church.

Mrs Lottie Varner, 37, beauty shop operator.

Miss Audrey Belle Langford, 28, teacher. Montgomery public schools.

Frank Taylor, 28, employee, Sunbeam Tailors.

Tom Parks, 32, Swift Packing Co employee.

Matthew Kennedy, 68, pensioner, World War 1.

Rev R D Lambert, pastor, Maggie St Baptist Church.

J H Baker, Atlanta Life Insurance Co. agent.

Sam Barnett, 45, employee, Central of Georgia.

John H Garrison, 45, laborer.

J N King, 52, General Service Administration employee.

Henry William, 49, lumber company laborer.

Jimmie Lowe, 45, owner, Loew's Adult High School.

Rev Martin Luther King, pastor, Dexter Avenue Baptist Church, age 27.

These Names Will Be Active In Giving State Testimony:

City Commissioners W A Gayle, Clyde Sellers and Frank Parks.

Police Chief G J Ruppenthal.

Rev Robert Graetz white pastor of an all-Negro church.

Bus Lines Manager J H Bagley.

Nine bus drivers.

Mrs Eretta F Adair, 50, housewife.

Jimmie B McClain, 25, laborer.

Rev R W Hilson, 43, pastor, St John's AME Church

R B Binion, 50, president, Capitol Life Insurance Co.

Willie James Kemp, plasterer.

Mrs Lottie Boswell, widow, unemployed.

George Hill, laundry employee.

90 Bus Boycott Defendents Listed

Informer Sat. 3-31-56

Special To The Informer By NNPA

Houston Texas

MONTGOMERY, Ala — The following are the 90 defendants — all Negroes — which have been charged by the State of Alabama with conspiring without "just cause or legal excuse" in connection with the boycott against unemployed.

Rev W J Powell, pastor, Old Ship Baptist Church.

Walter Smith, 56, Fuller Cosmetics Co salesman.

Rev H H Hubbard, pastor, Bethel Baptist Church (scene of Sunday prayer meeting)

Mrs Addie J Hamester, 25, 841

Guarantees 'Full Support' To 115 Persons Indicted In Montgomery Boycott

By Bystander
Des Moines Iowa
Thurs. 3-1-56

New York—The 115 persons indicted in Montgomery, Ala., for their participation in the three-month mass protest against discrimination in the Montgomery buses have been assured of the full support of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

In a telegram to the Rev. M. L. King, one of the leaders of the movement, Roy Wilkins, NAACP executive secretary, declared that "all our people over the nation and millions of friends stand with you and your courageous fellow citizens as you answer the indictment of the grand jury." Mr. Wilkins characterized the indictments as "police state action."

Meanwhile, Thurgood Marshall, NAACP special counsel, in response to a request from leaders of the Montgomery group, said "we have agreed to use all of the resources of the NAACP in their defense. The entire legal staff will give maximum support to A. D. Shores of Birmingham and Fred Gray of Montgomery, NAACP attorneys in Alabama."

Costly Defense

Despite the high cost of defending 115 persons indicted, the NAACP attorney "guaranteed that they will have our full support."

"Never before in history," Mr. Marshall continued, "have we faced a more obvious use of otherwise normal judicial machinery to oppress a lawful enterprise of loyal American citizens. The refusal to ride the Jim Crow buses was a spontaneous grass roots protest against racial discrimination touched off by the unlawful arrest of Mrs. Rosa Parks for refusing to give up her seat to a white passenger.

"This was a purely local matter and remained under the sole leadership of local Negroes. They simply refused to ride the buses and be subjected to continued unlawful segregation. Despite all predictions to the contrary, the Negroes were successful in their protest."

"Get-Tough" Policy Adopted

Unwilling to come to terms with the protest movement, city and bus company officials adopted a "get-tough" policy, the NAACP legal chief charged. He cited the harrassment by police of participants in the movement—arrests for alleged traffic violations, charges of loitering and other minor offences. Adoption of the "get-tough" policy was followed by the bombing of the homes of Mr. King and E. D. Nixon, two of the leaders of the protest.

Bystander

Despite all of this and the rabble-rousing of Senator James O. Eastland (D., Miss.), Negroes of Montgomery "stood their ground and refused to spend their money on buses which continued to discriminate against them," Mr. Marshall said.

"Instead of arresting the thugs who bombed Negroes' homes," he pointed out, "the city officials have ordered the arrest of the Negroes who are the victims of this and other types of lawless action."

Associated Press wirephoto

BOYCOTT ARRESTS CONTINUE—The Rev. Martin Luther King jr. (right) being booked by Montgomery, Ala., police officer yesterday. With him is the Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy, who was arrested Wednesday.

Herald Tribune
Sun. 2-24-56
P. 5
New York, N.Y.

Unlikely Persuasion

Wash. Post
Fri. 2-24-56

(From The Christian Science Monitor)

Quite possibly many of the 89 Negroes, including 24 clergymen, indicted and arrested in Montgomery, Alabama, may be found guilty of violating the state's law against economic boycotts. It is a great deal more than possible that these steps in legal prosecution may do more to promote and solidify this organized Negro protest against segregation on the city's bus lines than anything Negro leaders could have done themselves.

Birmingham Ala.

One is reminded pointedly of some of management's early attempts to stamp out the growth of labor unions by proceeding on the assumption that all that was wrong with the situation could be righted by disposing of the "agitators." That was and is an ancient fallacy which has a persistently delusive appeal. Agitators, to be sure, can cause gratuitous trouble. But acting as though agitators were cause rather than symptom usually proves an especially selfdefeating kind of strategy. And it is hard to think of these 24 ministers, one of whom holds a position of world distinction within his denomination, simply as agitators.

Montgomery Negroes have been refusing to ride the city's segregated busses. They object not so much to the separate seating sections as to the fact that the limits remain fixed even though seats are empty at the rear of the "white" sections.

An organized boycott is not an admirable way of bringing about a change. It certainly doesn't promote good will. And it is very probably illegal. But individual Negroes in Montgomery or anywhere else, if they wish, can choose to ride car pools or to walk (just as industry has found that individual workers can choose to stay off the job). Indicting and arresting their ministers of the gospel doesn't look like a promising way of persuading them to ride the busses again.

Montgomery Bus Boycott News + Observer

Indictments Stand First Test; Negro Minister Goes On Trial

P. 1 News, 3-20-56 Raleigh, N.C.

News + Observer

MONTGOMERY, Ala., March 19 (AP) — Grand jury indictments against 90 bus-boycotting Negroes withstood their first court test today, and a young minister went on trial shortly afterward as the first defendant.

Circuit Judge Eugene Carter overruled a defense petition which sought to invalidate the indictments as unconstitutional. Then state's attorneys called the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., before the court to begin what could become a prolonged series of trials.

Separate Hearings.

Each of the 90 defendants, exercizing his right, asked for a separate hearing.

King, 27, whose home was bombed in the early weeks of the mass Negro protest against segregated city bus facilities, was singled out by Circuit Solicitor William F. Thetford as one of the boycott leaders.

But Thetford ran into difficulty at the outset of the trial in trying to link the pastor of the Dexter Ave. Baptist Church to a "conspiracy" to hinder operations of Montgomery City Lines buses.

Carter allowed the first witness, bus company Manager J. H. Bagley, to identify King as one of several Negroes he conferred with at the onset of the boycott last December, but he sustained defense objections to some other questions.

He refused to permit Thetford to introduce two documents as state's exhibits although he permitted Bagley to identify them as papers he had received shortly before and immediately after the bus protest began Dec. 5.

One document was described only as a "resolution;" the other was not identified to any degree except that it was a paper the bus line manager said he received two knives and clubs waged the bloody two-hour fight. British security forces were rushed to the town and it took them nearly a half hour to restore peace.

At least 15 Turkish women and children were taken to a hospital at Yrenia, 12 miles west of here.

Authorities imposed an immediate curfew on the village.

rode city buses have stopped using them.

News + Observer

Bagley was allowed to testify that King and another defendant, Mrs. Jo Ann Robinson, told him they thought the Negroes would resume riding the buses if certain demands were met. Mrs. Robinson, awaiting trial with the other defendants, is a teacher at Alabama State College for Negroes at Montgomery and president of the Women's Political Council, a Negro group.

News, 3-20-56

Eight Negro attorneys represented the defendants, including Robert Carter of the legal staff of the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People in New York.

Carter was permitted to take part in developing defense strategy but the judge refused to let him question witnesses because he is not a member of the Alabama bar. The defense objected to that ruling and said it would be used as one ground for appeal if King is convicted.

Raleigh, N.C.

Other defense attorneys led by Arthur D. Shores of Birmingham also said they would contest Judge Carter's decision in overruling demurrers which said the defendants have committed no unlawful act and therefore can't legally be brought to trial.

Shores, arguing for the demurrers which covered all 90 defendants, said the indictments, under a rarely used state law which prohibits organized boycotting, violated the Negroes' rights of free speech, freedom of worship and peaceful assembly.

The Negro attorney, who represented Autherine Lucy in her successful court battle for admittance to the University of Alabama before she was expelled, said previous courts have upheld the right of people to refuse to patronize business places.

Specific Rights.

Specifically, he said they have granted Negroes the right to withhold patronage from businesses which refuse to hire Negro employes.

Thetford answered the Negroes' arguments briefly. He said the State Supreme Court has upheld the antiboycotting law and added that the U. S. Supreme Court, by refusing to review it, concurred with the Alabama court's findings.

The number of defendants was reduced to 90 today when the solicitor dismissed three indictments because he said further investigation has thrown "considerable doubt on their guilt."

He dropped charges against Alfred Ellis, Booker T. Holmes and the Rev. M. C. Cleveland, a Baptist and one of 25 clergymen included among the Negroes indicted.

The indictments against King and the others were returned under a state law which provides a maximum penalty of $1,000 fine and six months in jail for unlawful boycotting "without just cause or legal excuse."

The boycott began after a Negro seamstress, Mrs. Rosa Parks, was arrested and fined $14 for disobeying a driver's order to move to the rear of a bus where Negroes were to ride. City and state laws require segregation in all public transportation.

As the protest continued, a suit was filed in U. S. District Gourt seeking to knock the segregation laws out as contrary to the federal Constitution.

News + Observer
Jan. 3-20-56
P. 1
Raleigh, N.C.

DEFENSE IN BUS BOYCOTT—Fred Gray (left) and Arthur D. Shores, defense attorneys in the racial bus boycott trial at Montgomery, Ala., talk with Rep. Charles C. Diggs Jr. (right) (D-Mich.) on the steps of the Montgomery County Courthouse. Diggs said he was an "observer." (AP Wirephoto.)

38b 1956

TEXT OF DEMURRER

MASS INDICTMENTS
Montgomery, Ala. Bus Boycott

Text Of Demurrer Seeking To Overthrow Boycott Law

Advertiser 3-2-56 Montgomery, Ala.

(See Story, Page 1)

The text of a bill of demurrer filed yesterday by Negro attorneys for persons indicted on charges of promoting the bus boycott here reads as follows:

"Demurrers to the indictments in the case State versus M. L. King, et al, are filed on the grounds that:

"(1) Allegations to the indictments are so vague and indefinite as not to apprise these defendants of what they are called on to defend.

"(2) That the statute under which the indictments were brought and as applied to these defendants, violates Sect. 25, Art. I of Constitution of Alabama.

"(3) That Section 55, Title 14, Alabama Code of 1940, the statute under which the mass indictments was brought, constitutes an abridgement of freedom of speech, violative of rights and liberties secured to all persons by the First and Fourteenth Amendments to the U.S. Constitution.

(4) That said statute, as applied to defendants, constitutes an abridgement of the right of people peacably to assemble, violative of rights secured to all persons by the First and Fourteenth Amendments to the U.S. Constitution.

"(5) That the statute is unconstitutional on its face in that it is so vague as to constitute a deprivation of liberty without due process of law contrary to the Fourteenth Amendment.

"(6) As applied the statute (state boycott law) violates the 'due process' clause of the U.S. Constitution.

"(7) Violates 'privileges and immunities' of citizens of the United States in violation of the Fourteenth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution.

"(8) In its application the statute denies and abridges 'equal protection of the law' guaranteed under the Fourteenth Amendment.

"(9) The state statute requiring the enforcement of laws requiring segregation of passengers in intra-state transportation 'denies equal protection of the law.'

"(10) The statute as applied constitutes prohibition against free exercise of religion violative of rights secured to all persons by the First and Fourteenth Amendeents."

Despite The Cost Legal Support Is Guaranteed Montgomery Defendants

State Press Fri. 3-2-56
Little Rock, Ark. P. 1

The 115 persons indicted in Montgomery, Alabama, for their participation in the three-month mass protest against discrimination in the Montgomery buses have been assured of the full support of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

In a telegram to the Rev. M. L. King, one of the leaders of the movement, Roy Wilkins, NAACP executive secretary, declared that "all our people over the nation and millions of friends stand with you and your courageous fellow citizens as you answer the indictment of the grand jury." Mr. Wilkins characterized the indictments as "police state action."

Meanwhile, Thurgood Marshall, NAACP special counsel, in response to a request from leaders of the Montgomery group, said "we have agreed to use all of the resources of the NAACP in their defense. The entire legal staff will give maximum support to A. D. Shores of Birmingham and Fred Gray of Montgomery, NAACP attorneys in Alabama."

Costly Defense

Despite the high cost of defending 115 persons indicted, the NAACP attorney "guaranteed that they will have our full support."

"Never before in history," Mr. Marshall continued, "have we faced a more obvious use of otherwise normal judicial machinery to oppress a lawful enterprise of loyal American citizens. The refusal to ride the Jim Crow buses was a spontaneous grass roots protest against racial discrimination touched off by the unlawful arrest of Mrs. Rosa Parks for refusing to give up her seat to a white passenger.

"This was a purely local matter and remained under the sole leadership of local Negroes. They simply refused to ride the buses and be subjected to contnue unlawful segregation. Despite all predictions to the contrary, the Negroes were successful in their protest."

"Get-Tough" Policy Adopted

Unwilling to come to terms with the protest movement, city and bus company officials adopted a "get-tough" policy, the NAACP legal chief charged. He cited the harassment by police of participants in the movement - - arrests for alleged traffic violations, charges of loitering and other minor offenses. Adoption of the "get-tough" policy was followed by the bombing of the homes of Mr. King and E. D. Nixon, two of the leaders of the protest.

Despite all of this and the rabble-rousing of Senator James O. Eastland (D., Miss.)), Negroes of Montgomery "stood their ground and refused to spend their money on buses which continued to discriminate against them," Mr. Marshall said.

"Instead of arresting the thugs who bombed Negroes' homes," he pointed out, "the city officials have ordered the arrest of the Negroes who are the victims of this and other types of lawless action."

State Press P. 4

NAACP Support Pledged To Bus Protest Victims

World P. 8 Fri. 3-2-56
Birmingham, Ala.

NEW YORK—The 115 persons indicted in Montgomery, Ala., for their participation in the three-month mass protest against discriminaton in the Montgomery buses have been assured of the full support of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

In a telegram to the Rev. M. L. King, one of the leaders of the movement, Roy Wilkins, NAACP executive secretary, declared that "all our people over the nation and millions of friends stand with you and your courageous fellow citizens as you answer the indictment of the grand jury." Mr. Wilkins characterozed the indictments as "police state action."

Meanwhile, Thurgood Marshall NAACP special counsel, in response to a request from leaders of the Montgomery group, said "we have agreed to use all of the resources of the NAACP in their defense. The legal staff will give maximum support to A. D. Shores of Birmingham and Fred Gray of Montgomery, NAACP attorneys in Alabama."

COSTLY DEFENSE

Despite the high cost of defending 115 persons indicted the NAACP attorney "guaranteed that they will have our full support."

"Never before in history,' Mr. Marshall continued, "have we faced a more obvious use of othewise normal judicial machinery to oppress a lawful enterprise of loyal American citizens. The refusal to ride the Jim Crow buses was a spontaneous grass roots protest against racial discrimination touched off by the unlawful arrest of Mrs. Rosa Parks for refusing to give up her seat to a white passenger.

"This was a purely local matter and remained under the sole leadership of local Negroes. They simply refused to ride the buses and be subjected to continued unlawful segregation. Despite all predictions to the contrary, the Negroes were successful in their protest."

"GET-TOUGH" POLICY ADOPTED

Unwilling to come to terms with the protest movement, city and bus company officials adopted a "get-tough' policy, the NAACP legal chief charged. He cited the harrassment by police of participants in the movement—arrests for alleged traffic violations, charges of loitering and other minor offenses Adoption of the "get-tough" policy was followed by the bombing of the homes of Mr. King and E. D. Nixon, two of the leaders of the protest.

Despite all of this and the rabble-rousing of Senator James O. Eastland (D., Miss). Negroes of Montgomery "stood their ground and refused to spend their money on buses which continued to discriminate against them,' Mr. Marshall said.

"Instead of arresting the thugs who bombed Negroes' homes,' he pointed out, "the city officials have ordered the arrest of the Negroes who are the victims of this and other types of lawless action."

Montgomery Arrests 115 In Negro Bus Boycott

Star P. 4-A
Wed. 2-22-56
Washington, D.C.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Feb. 22 (AP).—Montgomery police today began rounding up 115 persons indicted for taking active part in a bus boycott by Negroes.

A grand jury yesterday returned 11 true bills against 115 defendants charged with participating in the prolonged protest to racial segregation.

The grand jury report warned that "violence is inevitable" in Montgomery "if we continue on our present course of race relations."

The indictments were returned under a seldom-used State statute which makes conspiracy to boycott a misdemeanor punishable by up to six months in prison and a $1,000 fine.

The grand jury's written report said the attack on Alabama's segregation laws by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People is primarily responsible for current racial unrest in Montgomery.

"Distrust, dislike and hatred are being taught in a community which for more than a generation has enjoyed exemplary race relations," the jurors declared.

Single Negro on Jury

The grand jury was composed of 17 white men and one Negro, E. T. Sinclair, head waiter at the Montgomery Country Club. There was no way to tell how Mr. Sinclair voted on the indictments.

The indictments were returned less than 24 hours after Negro leaders rejected a compromise plan for settling the 11-week-old bus boycott. The proposal had been approved by the Montgomery City Bus Lines and the city commission.

The great majority of Negroes who once patronized the buses have refused to ride them since Mrs. Rosa Parks, a seamstress, was fined $14 December 5 for not complying with State and city laws requiring separate facilities for white persons and Negroes on public carriers.

Mrs. Parks declined to move to the back of a bus when requested to by the driver.

A young Negro attorney, Fred D. Gray, was indicted Friday for unlawful practice. He is charged with filing an anti-segregation suit in United States District Court without the consent of one of the five Negro women whose names appeared on the complaint.

Led by Clergymen

In their final report, the grand jurors said the Montgomery Improvement Association, led by several Negro ministers, had kept the boycott going by contributing $18,000.

"Small incidents have been magnified out of their true importance and ugly rumors are being spread among both races," the jurors charged.

The report declared that segregation in schools, public transportation and elsewhere would be maintained in Alabama "within these laws which reflect our ways of life."

The law under which the indictments were returned was aimed primarily at labor disputes. It was approved by the State Legislature in 1921 and prohibits boycotting by two or more persons without "a just cause or legal excuse."

Indicted Negroes File Demurrers

Courier-Journal
Louisville, Ky.
Feb. 22-56

Montgomery, March 1 (AP) — Attorneys for 100 Negroes indicted in Montgomery's bus boycott filed legal arguments today attaching the constitutionality of the Alabama law under which they are charged.

The demurrers filed in Circuit Court charge that the anti-boycott law passed by the State

Alabama Jury Indicts 115 Persons Over Boycott of Buses in Montgomery, Warns of Violence

Inquirer

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Feb. 21 (AP).—a grand jury today indicted 115 persons involved in Montgomery's Negro bus boycott.

The 18-man grand jury, including one Negro, warned that violence was inevitable unless race relations improved.

The boycott has been under way 11 weeks in protest to segregated seating on buses, required under Alabama law.

MUST BE KEPT SECRET

Only 11 indictments were returned, but an official source said 115 defendants were named, several of them on each indictment.

Under State law, names of the defendants and the specific charges against them must be kept secret until the accused persons are in custody.

One indictment growing out of the boycott was returned by the grand jury last week when Fred D. Gray, a Negro attorney, was charged with unlawful practice growing out of an antisegregation suit filed in U. S. District Court. He was accused of filing the suit against bus segregation without the consent of one of the five women whose names appeared on the complaint.

The grand jury said "there is a growing tension between the races in this community" and the bus boycott is "but one manifestation of this feeling.

"Distrust, dislike and hatred are being taught in a community which for more than a generation has enjoyed exemplary race relations. Small incidents have been magnified out of their true importance and ugly rumors are being spread among both races."

PETITIONS BACK COLD

TUSCALOOSA, Ala., Feb. 21 (AP).—Circulators of petitions urging the return of Autherine Lucy to classes by voluntary action of University of Alabama authorities claimed today they had about 500 signatures.

The petitions seek to have Miss Lucy, first Negro student in the school's 125-year history, given the right to come back to classes before the Feb. 29 hearing of a suit in Birmingham Federal Court. In that suit she seeks to force school officials to rescind their Feb. 6 action excluding her from classes for her own safety.

Albert Horn, of Tuscaloosa, a senior in the law school, said the group of students and faculty members sponsoring the petition had been "somewhat disappointed" in the response.

"Sympathy" riders' strike planned in 17 states

Tribune

Los Angeles, Calif.

CHICAGO — (Special to the Tribune) — A 40-city bus and street car strike by riders supporting the three-month-old bus boycott in Montgomery, Ala., is in the offing unless officials of the National City Lines, owners of the Montgomery system, give some assurance of meeting the demands of the Alabama strikers.

The large-scale demonstration, which would be for one-day only, according to preliminary plans, but would be increased to two and three-day demonstrations should the enormous holding company continue its resistance to Alabama Negro demands, is being planned by a provisional committtee, set up following the local branch Naacp's disclosure that the Montgomery bus company is owned by northern financiers.

"Like the attitude of Negroes in Montgomery, crystallized in the statement of the Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy, one of the Alabama leaders, that 'we bear the bus company no ill will,' Negroes of the North bear the National City Lines no ill will; but riders' strikes and boycotts can be our way of letting it be known that the Negro will resist segregation", a spokesman for the provisional committee said.

The National City Lines owns in part or wholly transportation systems in several cities of large Negro populations, including Philadelphia, Baltimore, Los Angeles, San Francisco, St. Louis. All would be hard hit by a rider strike, even of only one day's duration.

The giant trust wholly owns or has large investments in transit systems in 17 states. Only five of the states are in the South.

Here in Chicago where its headquarters are, the company management last week promised a delegation from the Naacp "a statement on its position in the Montgomery situation" within a few days.

Pending this statement, plans for the riders' strike are being held in abeyance, the provisional committee spokesman said.

The provisional committee is not connected with the Chicago branch Naacp, although some officials of the Naacp are said to be interested in the riders' strike plans.

Errors Cut Arrests in Bus Boycott

Herald Tribune

Fri. 2-24-56

P. 5

Negroes Holding Church Meeting

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Feb. 23 (AP).—Deputies today were completing the job of taking into custody the scores of boycott leaders indicted by a grand jury under an old state law making it a misdemeanor to conspire to prevent others from carrying on their business.

New York

By afternoon, eighty-eight Negroes had been booked and then released on the standard $300 bond, deputies said. Sheriff Mac Sim Butler said he expected his office would not take in more than ninety defendants.

An official source said the number of defendants was less than the 113 to 115 announced earlier because the grand jury had made some duplication of names and the whereabouts of some of the persons indicted were not known.

Meeting at Church

The Rev. D. Abernathy, one of those indicted and the pastor of the Negro First Baptist Church where a mass meeting of protest was scheduled, said he expected 10,000 persons to come to the meeting tonight "to sing and pray Almighty God and get into the hearts of Montgomery people so that justice may be done."

Mr. Abernathy, the first person arrested yesterday, also proclaimed tomorrow—arraignment day for the defendants—as "prayer-pilgrimage day" during which all Negroes, he said, would probably walk rather than drive their cars or ride in other vehicles.

Montgomery's tense citizens largely ignored the few arrests at County Jail today, in contrast to yesterday when 200 persons gathered.

Police Chief G. J. Ruppenthal said his department was taking no special precautions beyond the normal traffic guard at large meetings. He said that had been standard at all meetings throughout the eleven-week boycott of the city bus lines.

One of the boycott leaders, the Rev. Martin Luther King jr., surrendered voluntarily at County Jail and was released after making bond today. He said he was out of town yesterday.

Mr. King pleaded guilty in Circuit Court today to a speeding charge and paid a $5 fine. He was convicted in City Court and appealed after charging that police were "harassing" the Negro boycotters by arresting them for minor traffic violations.

Powell Wires President

WASHINGTON, Feb. 23 (AP).—Rep. Adam Clayton Powell jr., D., N. Y., today asked "White House" protection for Negroes indicted in Montgomery.

Rep. Powell, a Negro, said in a telegram to President Eisenhower: "Behind the dark curtain today in Montgomery, Alabama, another ghastly victory for communism is scored. As a clergyman and Congressman, I wish to state that from this moment on the White House is responsible for safeguarding the lives, physical security and civil liberties of the 115 Negroes arrested for peaceably and nonviolently trying law enforcement officials refuse to give.

"The arrest of my fellow clergymen is a new low in American barbarism. I request, therefore, that they and their followers be protected immediately by the White House."

Seminary's Telegram

A telegram of encouragement was sent yesterday from a group of students and teachers at the Union Theological Seminary to Mr. Abernathy, saying: "Your courageous stand in the battle of the Negro people of Montgomery against injustice has won the admiration of millions of people across the world." The telegram was signed by Edward White, chairman of the social action committee of the student body; the Rev. Dr. John C. Bennett, dean of the faculty, and eighty-six students.

A. C. L. U. Protests

The American Civil Liberties Union yesterday took issue with the indictments in Montgomery, it said the indictments were based on an unconstitutional law. In a statement, the A. C. L. U. executive director, Patrick Murphy Malin, said: "The State anti-boycott law appears to be in outright violation of the free speech and press clauses of the United States Constitution.

MONTGOMERY BUS PROTEST LEADERS SCHEDULED FOR TRIAL ON MONDAY

Daily World

Sun. 3-18-56

VIOLENCE MUST NOT OCCUR

P. 1

Atlanta Ga.

By WILLIAM KERWIN

WASHINGTON — (INS) — Sen. Allen J. Ellender (D) La., said last night that the south must avoid violence "at all costs" in its effort to resist the Supreme Court's ban on segregation in public schools.

Ellender declared that lawlessness in the racial dispute would only lead to a repetition of "oppressive" reconstruction regimes and "A new and even hungrier breed of carpetbaggers."

The Louisiana Democrat made the statement in a radio address in which he defended the Manifesto signed by 100 Southern members of Congress pledging a fight to reverse the Court's ruling.

In issuing the declaration, Ellender said: "We have served notice that the people of the South, both White and Negro are not going to be used as either whipping boys or political pawns in order to fulfill the Supreme Court's new doctrine of sociological justic."

He also lashed out at the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People as a group of "unprincipled, power-hungry, self-seeking, outside agitators."

But he said that "what the South must avoid at all cost is violence, lawlessness, hatred and bloodshed," in opposing the NAACP and other groups favoring desegregation.

The Senator declared: "The outside agitators who seek the subjugation of both the White and Negro races in the South are hovering like greedy vultures for the time when racial antagonisms lead to choos, the breakdown of Governmental Authority, and General lawlessness.

BUS BOYCOTT HEADS GO TO COURT TODAY

Commercial Appeal

93 Negroes To Rest Fate With Judge

Memphis Tenn.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., March 18.—(AP)—Raising the issue of free speech, 93 Negroes including 25 clergymen face trial here Monday for the mass refusal of their race to ride segregated city buses.

Mobile Ala. 3-19-56

They have waived the right of jury trial, choosing instead to let Circuit Judge Eugene Carter decide their guilt or innocence. That is permissable under Alabama law in a misdemeanor. Defense attorneys declined to discuss the decision.

The Negroes were indicted by a predominantly white Grand Jury Feb. 21 as leaders in the boycott of Montgomery city lines buses which has continued since Dec. 5.

Some of the defendants, particularly the ministers, were charged with lending vocal encouragement and leadership to the protest which has cost the bus line 75 to 95 per cent of its normal Negro business.

Others were indicted for using their automobiles in a car pool which has enabled thousands of workers to get to and from their jobs.

The indictments were returned under a state law originally aimed at labor strife and never before used except in union-management disputes. The law prohibits organized boycotting "without just cause or legal excuse."

Maximum penalty for each defendant is six months in jail and a $1,000 fine.

On old state statute—

Bus boycotters face trial Monday in Montgomery

News

Sun. 3-18-56 P. 10-A

Birmingham Ala.

BY REX THOMAS

MONTGOMERY, Ala., March 17—(AP)—Defending their right of free speech, 93 Negroes including 25 clergymen face trial here Monday for the mass refusal of their race to ride segregated city buses.

They have waived the right of jury trial, choosing instead to let Circuit Judge Eugene Carter decide their guilt or innocence. That is permissible under Alabama law in a misdemeanor.

Defense attorneys declined to disclose the reasons for that decision.

The Negroes were indicted by a predominantly white Grand Jury Feb. 21 as leaders and active participants in the 16-week-old boycott of Montgomery City Lines buses, which has continued without pause since last Dec. 5.

Some of the defendants, particularly the ministers, were charged with lending vocal encouragement and leadership to the protest which has cost the bus line 75 to 95 per cent of its normal Negro business.

OTHERS WERE indicted for using their automobiles in a precisely organized car pool which has enabled thousands of workers to get to and from their jobs.

In periodic mass meetings in their churches, Negroes have heard dramatic appeals from the ministers for "passive resistance to oppression" without violence. With their financial contributions, they have kept the motor pool rolling at a cost of $200 a day.

The indictments were returned under a rarely used state law originally aimed at labor strife and never before used except in union-management disputes. The law prohibits organized boycotting "without just cause or legal excuse."

Maximum penalty for each defendant is six months in jail and a $1000 fine.

Negro defense attorneys, attacking constitutionality of the statute, have raised the issue of free speech, freedom of worship and peaceful assembly, and equal protection under the law.

CONTENDING THAT the indictments violate their rights guaranteed under the U. S. Constitution, they laid the predicate for an appeal to the federal courts if convicted. The state Supreme Court upheld validity of the anti-boycott law in 1943.

Judge Carter must rule on the defense demurrers before the trials can start. Carter is the judge who directed the Grand Jury to investigate the bus boycott.

The demurrers, which say in effect that the boycotters have committed no unlawful act, were filed after the Negroes were arraigned on the indictments and pleaded innocent.

Since each defendant can demand a separate trial, the proceedings could stretch out for weeks, perhaps months. Or, if some are convicted and it appears likely they will appeal to the U. S. Supreme Court, the remaining trials may be postponed pending the outcome of those appeals.

Fred D. Gray, one of the defense lawyers, declined to reveal what course he and his colleagues will pursue. Likewise Circuit Solicitor William F. Thetford said he wasn't in a position to tell which defendant he will call to trial first.

THE BUS BOYCOTT has given Negroes in the South their first opportunity to exert widespread economic pressure in the continuing battle over segregation since the historic Supreme Court school integration decision.

It began with the arrest and conviction of a Negro seamstress, Mrs. Rosa Parks, for refusing to move to the colored section of a bus. City and state laws require separate seating facilities.

At the outset, Negroes demanded only a better seating arrangement, a "first come, first served" plan where Negro riders would be seated from the rear and white passengers from the front until all places were taken.

Later, as the boycott continued, the Negroes challenged the segregation pattern itself with a suit in U. S. District Court attacking the city and state laws as unconstitutional. No hearing has been scheduled on that complaint.

The Grand Jury which returned the boycotting indictments also charged one of the Negro attorneys, Gray, with unlawful practice in the handling of the anti-segregation suit.

Gray was accused of acting without consent of one of the five Negro women whose names were signed to the petition in Federal Court. But the state dismissed the attorney's indictment because the alleged offense occurred on federal property, where the suit was filed.

Negroes elsewhere in the United States have pledged their support to the boycotters, hinting even at a similar protest demonstrations against other Southern subsidiaries of National City Lines of Chicago, parent company of the Montgomery busline.

There have been relatively few acts of violence in the lengthening dispute here, although the Grand Jury warned that trouble is "inevitable" unless race relations take a new course.

A DYNAMITE explosion the night of Jan. 30 damaged the home of the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., one of the boycott spokesmen later indicted. Two nights later a bomb went off in front of the home of E. D. Nixon, another of the defendants. No one was injured in either incident.

Several buses were fired on in Negro sections of Montgomery in the early days of the protest, but no injuries were reported there either.

The economic cost of the boycott hasn't been counted, but the bus company has raised its fare from 10 to 15 cents and eliminated some routes through Negro areas. All bus service has been suspended on Sunday except to Maxwell and Gunter Air Force Bases at opposite edges of the city.

Repeated efforts to reach a settlement have failed. All three members of the City Commission have publicly aligned themselves with the pro-segregation Montgomery County Citizens Council and have appealed to white residents of Montgomery to refrain from giving rides to Negroes.

Trial Opens Today For 93 Boycotters

Advertiser Montgomery, Ala.

Ninety-three Negroes charged with advocating an illegal boycott of Montgomery City Lines buses go on trial before Judge Carter at 10 a.m. today.

Among the 93 are 25 Negro ministers. They will be defended by five Negro attorneys including Arthur Shores of Birmingham and Fred D. Gray of Montgomery.

Judge Carter will rule on defense demurrers before proceeding with the trials. The demurrers call the state's anti-boycott law unconstitutional. The defendants have waived jury trial and Carter will rule on guilt or innocence of the 93 Negroes.

Alabama Trial Today.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., March 18 (AP)—The opening trials for 93 Negro leaders accused of directing Montgomery's bus boycott will start tomorrow.

Circuit Judge Eugene Carter is first expected to rule on defense demurrers which challenge constitutionality of the state's anti-boycott law under which the indictments were returned.

Carter, who directed the grand jury to investigate the 16-week-old boycott, also will decide on the guilt or innocence of the 93 defendants. They have waived the right to jury trials.

Defense attorneys declined to say if they will ask for separate trials.

Twenty - five ministers were among those charged by the grand jury as leaders or active participants in the bus boycott which has continued since Dec. 5 in protest to segregated seating required by city and state law.

After the indictments were returned Feb. 21, Negro attorneys filed the demurrers to lay the groundwork for an appeal to federal courts if the defendants are convicted.

Alabama's 1921 antiboycott law was primarily aimed at labor disputes. Its constitutionality was upheld by the State Supreme Court in 1943. The U.S. Supreme Court twice refused to review the case on grounds that no federal rights had been violated.

The law makes boycotting "without just cause or legal excuse" a misdemeanor punishable by a maximum of six months in prison and a fine of $1,000.

Minister on Trial In 'Bama Boycott

Herald Trib. 3-20-56

Miami, Fla.

MONTGOMERY, Ala. —(UP)— A young Negro minister who led a boycott of segregated buses to assert the "dignity" of his race went on trial Monday as the first of 90 defendants to be prosecuted under an obscure law.

P. 8-A

A panel of Negro attorneys immediately put up a barrage of objections, most of them sustained, as the state called the manager of the city bus lines as first witness against the Rev. M. L. King, 27.

J. H. Bagley, manager of the Montgomery city bus lines, described how King had asked the transit system to assure Negroes more courtesy from drivers and "first come, first served" seating.

The number of defendants was cut from 93 to 90 as the state decided it did not have enough evidence against three, including some of the 25 Negro clergymen originally indicted.

Demurrers contending that the defendants were charged illegally were denied by Circuit Judge Eugene Carter before the trials began in a creaking ante-bellum courtroom where the crowd was limited to 100 for fear the floor might collapse.

King is the recognized leader of the boycott, which in its 15th week has plunged the bus system into economic chaos.

All the defendants were charged with conspiring to interfere with the normal carrying out of a business under a little-used 1921 law originally enacted to combat the Ku Klux Klan.

The boycott began after a Negro seamstress was convicted of violating the segregated seating law.

Bagley testified that Negro trade on the segregated buses had dropped 90 to 95 per cent during the boycott.

Five Lawyers Ready Defense Of Boycotters

Advertiser Montgomery, Ala.

By STEVE LESHER

Five Negro attorneys will defend 93 Negroes who stand trial here at 10 a.m. tomorrow on charges of advocating an illegal boycott of Montgomery City Lines buses by 40,000 Montgomery Negroes.

Among the 93 are 25 Negro ministers. At their arraignment here recently, 89 Negroes pleaded not guilty. Four others have been arrested since the grand jury returned 11 indictments naming 113 Negroes who allegedly have instigated the illegal boycott.

BEFORE JUDGE

Defending the Negroes will be Arthur Shores, Orzell Billingsly Jr. and Peter Hall, all of Birmingham, and Fred D. Gray and Charles Langford of Montgomery. Shores gained notoriety as the attorney for Autherine J. Lucy, 26-year-old Negro woman who twice was ordered admitted to the University of Alabama by a federal court, only to be expelled for unfounded charges she made against the university. Gray recently was cleared of charges of conducting an unethical practice.

Boycott Jury To Try Negro Pastor First

Post Times Herald Wed. 3-20-56

Washington, DC

Prosecution Runs Into Court Checks, Is Told It Must Prove Conspiracy

MONTGOMERY, Ala., March 19 (U.P.)—A young Negro minister who led a boycott of segregated buses to assert the "dignity" of his race went on trial today as the first of 90 defendants to be prosecuted under an obscure anti-boycott law.

The State called as its first witness the manager of the Montgomery City Bus Lines in the case against the Rev. M. L. King, 27.

J. H. Bagley, the manager, described how the Rev. Mr. King had asked the transit system to assure Negroes more courtesy from drivers and "first come, first served" seating.

The number of defendants was cut from 93 to 90 as the State decided it did not have enough evidence against three, including one of the 25 Negro clergymen originally indicted.

Demurrers contending that the defendants were charged illegally were denied by Circuit Judge Eugene Carter before the trials began in a creaking ante-bellum courtroom where the crowd was limited to 100, nearly all defendants, for fear the floor might collapse.

Calling the Rev. Mr. King as the first defendant, Judge Carter told other defendants they "might as well go on home" because the minister's trial probably would last "two or three days." But nearly all held their seats.

Judge Carter refused to admit a State exhibit, later described as a handbill calling for a mass meeting of Negroes to discuss continuing the boycott beyond its original 1-day limit. He said the prosecution would first have to prove a conspiracy existed.

All the defendants were charged with conspiring to interfere with the normal conduct of a business under a little-used 1921 law originally enacted to combat the Ku Klux Klan. The boycott began after a Negro seamstress was convicted of violating the segregated-seating law.

Bagley testified that Negro trade on the segregated buses had dropped 90 to 95 per cent during the boycott, now in its 15th week.

When Bagley began talking about the Negroes' "demands" on the company to provide equal seating privileges, Carter upheld defense objections to the phraseology. Again, he said, the fact of a conspiracy would first have to be proved.

Six Negro attorneys conferred repeatedly with Arthur Shores, Birmingham Negro lawyer who was barred by Judge Carter from actively defending the case because he is not a member of the local bar. Shores was attorney for Autherine Lucy, the Negro co-ed recently expelled from the University of Alabama.

93 NEGROES FACE TRIAL TOMORROW

Times P. 8-L

Leaders of Montgomery Bus Boycott Waive Use of Jury, Will Let Judge Decide

Sun. 3-18-56

MONTGOMERY, Ala., March 17 (AP)—Ninety-three Negroes, including twenty-five clergymen, face trial here Monday for the mass refusal of their race to ride segregated city buses.

They have waived the right of jury trial, choosing instead to let Circuit Judge Eugene Carter decide their guilt or innocence. That is permissible under Alabama law in a misdemeanor.

Defense attorneys declined to disclose the reasons for that decision.

New York, N.Y.

The Negroes were indicted by a predominantly white grand jury Feb. 21 as leaders and active participants in the sixteen-week-old boycott of Montgomery city lines buses. It began last Dec. 5.

Some of the defendants, particularly the ministers, were charged with lending vocal encouragement and leadership to the protest, which has cost the bus line 75 to 95 per cent of its normal Negro business.

$200 a Day for Car Pool

Others were indicted for using their automobiles in a car pool that has enabled thousands of workers to get to and from their jobs.

In mass meetings in their churches, Negroes have heard appeals from the ministers for "passive resistance to oppression." With their financial contributions, they have kept the motor pool rolling at a cost of $200 a day.

The indictments were returned under a rarely used state law originally aimed at labor strife and never used before except in union-management disputes. The law prohibits organized boycotting "without just cause or legal excuse."

Maximum penalty for each defendant is six months in jail and a $1,000 fine.

Negro defense attorneys, attacking the constitutionality of the statute, have raised the issue of free speech, freedom of worship and peaceful assembly, and equal protection under the law.

Law Upheld in 1943

Contending that the indictments violate their rights guaranteed under the United States Constitution, they laid the groundwork for an appeal to the Federal courts if convicted. The State Supreme Court upheld validity of the anti-boycott law in 1943.

Judge Carter must rule on defense demurrers before the trials begin. He is the judge who directed the grand jury to investigate the bus boycott.

The demurrers, which say in effect that the boycotters have committed no unlawful act, were filed after the Negroes had been arraigned and had pleaded innocent.

Since each defendant could demand a separate trial, the proceedings could stretch out for weeks, perhaps months. Or, if some are convicted and it appears likely they will appeal to the United States Supreme Court, the remaining trials might be postponed pending the outcome of those appeals.

Fred D. Gray, one of the defense lawyers, declined to say what course he and his colleagues would pursue. Likewise, circuit solicitor William F. Thetford said he was not in a position to tell which defendant he would call to trial first.

The bus boycott began with the arrest and conviction of a Negro seamstress, Mrs. Rosa Parks, for refusing to move to the colored section of a bus. City and state laws require separate seating facilities.

At the outset, Negroes demanded only a better seating arrangement, a "first come, first served" plan where Negro riders would be seated from the rear and white passengers from the front until all places were taken.

State drops three cases in boycott trials

News p.1
Mon. 3-19-56

By REX THOMAS

MONTGOMERY, Ala., March 19—(AP)—The state dropped charges against three deefndants today as 93 Negroes were called to trial for the mass boycott against racially segregated public buses in the cradle of the Confederacy.

At the same time, Negro defense attorneys formally requested separate trials for each of the remaining 90 defendants charged with violating Alabama's seldom-used Anti-Boycotting Law. The request was granted.

The trials started an hour and five minutes late because Circuit Judge Eugene Carter, who will judge the defendants in the absence of juries, was called away from the courthouse to attend the funeral of a relative.

AT THE OUTSET of the proceedings, Circuit Solicitor William F. Thetford asked for dismissal of indictments against Alfred Ellis, Booker T. Holmes and the Rev. M. C. Cleveland, pastor of the Day Street Baptist Church. Thetford explained that further investigation by his office "raised a substantial doubt of their guilt."

Judge Carter opened court with a stern warning against spectators talking during the trial and cautioned them. "If you came here to be entertained you're in the wrong place."

Only a few white men were in the courtroom and most of them were newspaper reporters or witnesses. The rest of the crowd were Negroes.

News

TWENTY-FIVE Negro ministers and 68 other members of their race were called to trial for the prolonged boycott of Montgomery city buses.

p. 6

Long before the court was called to order, Negroes jammed the corridor and stairs leading to the second-floor courtroom.

The defendants had eight Negro attorneys, including Robert Carter of New York, a member of the legal staff of the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People.

Also present as an "interested spectator" was Negro Congr. Charles C. Diggs Jr. (D., Mich.). Diggs said he came here to watch the proceedings and also to bring a "substantial sum of money" contributed by residents of Detroit to support the protest against bus segregation. He said it was more than $5000.

With Diggs was his legal advier, Basil W. Brown of Detroit.

Ironically, the light-skinned Brown had to identify himself as a Negro before Bailiff Addie Mosley would permit him to sit next to his employer in the segregated courtroom.

BEFORE THE trials could proceed, Judge Carter had to rule on a defense petition attacking validity of the anti-boycotting indictments returned by a Grand Jury Feb. 21.

SPOKESMEN FOR the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People have said outcome of the Montgomery boycott may determine whether similar moves should be made elsewhere.

At New York, the Fellowship of Reconciliation said yesterday more than 200 white and Negro clergymen have expressed willingness to go to Montgomery and take the pulpits of the 25 Negro clerics. The Fellowship describes itself as a voluntary nondenominational Protestant organization.

THE MINISTERS and others were indicted in Montgomery Feb. 21 under Alabama's 1921 anti-boycott law. It makes boycotting "without just cause or legal excuse" a misdemeanor punishable by a maximum of six months in prison and a fine of $1000.

Trial Opens Today For 93 Boycotters

Advertiser p.1
Montgomery, Ala.

Ninety-three Negroes charged with advocating an illegal boycott of Montgomery City Lines buses go on trial before Judge Carter at 10 a.m. today.

Among the 93 are 25 Negro ministers. They will be defended by five Negro attorneys including Arthur Shores of Birmingham and Fred D. Gray of Montgomery.

Judge Carter will rule on defense demurrers before proceeding with the trials. The demurrers call the state's anti-boycott law unconstitutional. The defendants have waived jury trial and Carter will rule on guilt or innocnece of the 93 Negroes.

INDICTMENTS

MONTGOMERY, ALA. BUS BOYCOTT

INDICTMENTS UPHELD IN BUS-BOYCOTT CASE

Commercial Appeal

Minister Is First Of 90 Negroes To Face Trial In Segregation Suit

Tues. 3-20-56

(Picture on Page 32)

Memphis, Tenn.

By The Associated Press

MONTGOMERY, Ala., March 19. — Grand Jury indictments against 90 bus-boycotting Negroes withstood their first court test Monday, and a young minister went on trial shortly afterward as the first defendant.

Circuit Judge Eugene Carter overruled a defense petition which sought to invalidate the indictments as unconstitutional. Then state's attorneys called Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., before the court to begin what could become a prolonged series of trials.

Separate Hearings Asked

Each of the 90 defendants asked for a separate hearing.

The 27-year-old King, whose home was bombed in the early weeks of the mass Negro protest against segregated city bus facilities, was singled out by Circuit Solicitor William F. Thetford as one of the boycott leaders.

But Mr. Thetford ran into difficulty at the outset of the trial in trying to link the pastor of the Dexter Avenue Baptist Church to a "conspiracy" to hinder operations of Montgomery City Lines buses.

Judge Carter allowed the first witness, bus company Manager J. H. Bagley, to identify King as one of several Negroes he conferred with at the onset of the boycott last December, but he sustained defense objections to some other questions.

Documents Barred

He refused to permit Mr. Thetford to introduce two documents as state's exhibits although he permitted Mr. Bagley to identify them as papers he had received shortly before and immediately after the bus protest began Dec. 5.

One document was described only as a "resolution;" the other was not identified to any degree except that it was a paper the bus line manager said he received two days before the boycott started.

Judge Carter upheld defense objections when Mr. Thetford asked Mr. Bagley what caused a "falling off" of his company's business since Dec. 5. The bus line official said 90 to 95 per cent of the Negroes who formerly rode city buses have stopped using them.

Commercial Appeal

Mr. Bagley was allowed to testify that King and another defendant, Jo Ann Robinson, told him they thought the Negroes would resume riding the buses if certain demands were met. Jo Ann Robinson, awaiting trial with the other 89 defendants, is a teacher at Alabama State College for Negroes at Montgomery and president of the Women's Political Council, a Negro group.

NAACP Aids Defense

Eight Negro attorneys represented the defendants, including Robert Carter of the legal staff of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People in New York.

P. 3

Carter was permitted to take part in developing defense strategy but the judge refused to let him question witnesses because he is not a member of the Alabama bar. The defense objected to that ruling and said it would be used as one ground for appeal if King is convicted.

Other defense attorneys led by Arthur D. Shores of Birmingham also said they would contest Judge Carter's decision in overruling demurrers which said the defendants have committed no unlawful act and therefore can't legally be brought to trial.

Shores, arguing for the demurrers which covered all 90 defendants, said the indictments, under a rarely used state law which prohibits organized boycotting, violated the Negroes' rights of free speech, freedom of worship and peaceful assembly.

The Negro attorney, who represented Autherine Lucy in her successful court battle for admittance to the University of Alabama before she was expelled, said previous courts have upheld the right of people to refuse to patronize business places.

Specifically, he said they have granted Negroes the right to withhold patronage from businesses which refuse to hire Negro employes.

Arguments Answered

Mr. Thetford answered the Negroes' arguments briefly. He said the State Supreme Court has upheld the anti-boycotting law and added that the United States Supreme Court, by refusing to review it, concurred with the Alabama court's findings.

The number of defendants was reduced to 90 Monday when the solicitor dismissed three indictments because he said further investigation has thrown "considerable doubt on their guilt."

He dropped charges against Alfred Ellis, Booker T. Holmes and Rev. M. C. Cleveland, a Baptist and one of 25 clergymen included among the Negroes indicted.

The indictments against King and the others were returned under a state law which provides a maximum penalty of $1,000 fine and six months in jail for unlawful boycotting "without just cause or legal excuse."

The bus boycott began Dec. 5 after a Negro seamstress, Rosa Parks, was arrested and fined $14 for disobeying a driver's order to move to the rear of a bus where Negroes were to ride. City and state laws require segregation in all public transportation.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., March 19.—(UP)—A three-judge court has been named to hear a case attacking the constitutionality of city and state laws requiring racial segregation on public transportation utilities.

Judge Joseph C. Hutcheson Jr., presiding judge of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, appointed United States District Judge Seybourn H. Lynne of Birmingham, United States Circuit Court of Appeals Judge Richard Rives of Montgomery and United States District Judge Frank M. Johnson of Montgomery to hear the case.

Four Negro women filed a suit in Federal Court here Feb. 1 charging state segregation laws violated rights guaranteed Negroes under the 14th Amendment to the United States Constitution.

COURT REDUCES DEFENDANTS IN BUS CASE TO 90

Daily Tribune

Tues. 3-20-56

Chicago, Ill.

Boycott Indictments Ruled O. K.

P. 7

Montgomery, Ala., March 19 (AP) — Circuit Judge Eugene Carter rejected a defense petition attacking validity of grand jury indictments and ordered 90 Negroes brought to trial today for the prolonged mass boycott of segregated city buses in Montgomery.

The state asked for and was granted dismissal of charges against three of the original defendants.

Defense attorneys also asked for separate trials for each of the indicted Negroes. Judge Carted was required by law to grant that request.

First Defendant Called

The first defendant called was The Rev. M. L. King Jr., one of the leading spokesmen in the boycott, whose home was damaged by a dynamite explosion the night of Jan. 30. No one was injured in the blast.

The judge overruled defense demurrers which argued that the indictments under a seldom-used Alabama anti-boycotting law violated the Negroes' rights of speech, freedom of assembly, and freedom of worship.

The anti-boycotting law, enacted in 1921 as a weapon against labor strife, prohibits any conspiracy or agreement to hinder the operation of a lawful business. Maximum penalty for violating the law is six months in jail and a $1,000 fine.

Demanded Better Seating

The bus dispute began as a demand for better seating arrangements even if still segregated. It spread to an attack on city and state travel segregation laws. A suit challenging their constitutionality is on file in United States District court.

The mass protest began last Dec. 5 after a Negro seamstress, Mrs. Rosa Parks, was arrested and fined $14 for refusing to obey a driver's order to move to the colored section of his bus. Bus operators have authority under a city ordinance to enforce segregation. Negro clergymen then began appeals for "passive resistance" without violence.

At the outset of the proceedings, Solicitor William F. Thetford asked for dismissal of indictments against Alfred Ellis, Booker T. Holmes, and the Rev. M. C. Cleveland, pastor of the Day Street Baptist church. Thetford asserted that further investigation by his office "raised substantial doubt of their guilt."

Few Whites on Hand

Only a few white men were in the courtroom and most of them were newspaper reporters or witnesses. The defendants had eight Negro attorneys, including Robert Carter of New York City, a member of the legal staff of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Also present was Rep. Diggs, [D., Mich.], a Negro, who said he came here to watch and to bring a "substantial sum of money" from residents of Detroit to support the protest against bus segregation.

MONTGOMERY, ALABAMA BUS BOYCOTT

'No Let Up,' Rev. King Says

Courier P. 2 Sat. 3-24-56

Courthouse Packed For Boycott Trials

Pittsburgh Pennsylvania

By EVELYN CUNNINGHAM
(Staff Correspondent)

MONTGOMERY, Ala.—Long before 10 o'clock Monday morning, small groups of the ninety-three defendants charged with advocating an illegal bus boycott began arriving at Circuit Court here. One after another reavowed his determination to "stick it out" and his willingness to face the rigors and consequences of the trial. They went into the courtroom to face Judge Eugene W. Carter without fear and with an attitude that theirs was a just cause. "No legal maneuver will make us feel we're wrong," one said, "no matter what the court does."

Among the ninety-three are twenty-five ministers. At their recent arraignment here, eighty-nine pleaded not guilty. Four others have been arrested since the grand jury returned eleven inductments naming 113 who allegedly have instigated an illegal boycott of Montgomery City Lines buses by 40,000 Montgomery Negroes. A total of $27,900 in bail bond was posted by individual Negroes.

Defending the ninety-three are Arthur D. Shores, attornrey for Autherine J. Lucy; Orzell Billingsley and Peter Hall of Birmingham, Fred D. Gray and Charles Langford of Montgomery and Robert Carter of the national NAACP legal staff. Defense attorrneys waived trial by jury, allowing the judge to rule on each case.

All defendants were charged with the same misdemeanor, which carries a penalty of not more than $1,000 and not less than $100 in fines, plus not more than six months in the county jail. The boycott law under which they were indicted has been used only in labor disputes in the state.

* * *

THE PERSONAL stake that Negroes feel in the whole issue is evidenced by the influx of observers from may parts of the country and by the almost total participation in Sunday night's two simultaneous prayer meetings.

Congressman Charles Diggs of Chicago arrived Sunday, four Detroit leaders were here and national officers of Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity arrived for the trials. The local prayer meetings were held at Bethel Baptist Church and the Hutchinson Street Baptist Church.

Contrary to published report and widespread rumor, the Rev. Martin Luther King, 27-year-old president of the Montgomery Improvement Association, said that he has had no recent conference with Gov. James Folsom. Mr. King said he has had three earlier conferences with the Governor, the most recent of which was "about a month ago," the day after his house was bombed. At that time, he said, he was accompanied by his father, the Rev. M. L. King Sr. of Atlanta.

* * *

EXPRESSING "great admiration" for Governor Folsom, "on many points," the Rev. Mr. King called him "pretty liberal on the race question . . . but he's got a tough Legislature to deal with."

As head of the Montgomery Improvement Association, Mr. King is gravely concerned over any hint or charge of misuse or mishandling of association funds. Although he said he could not give any estimate of the contributions that have been made to the MIA, since the bus protest started last Dec. 5, he revealed that a full report would be made public by the finance committee of the association.

He said that many white people are telling Negroes that he is "getting rich and fat" from the boycott; that he has purchased a Cadillac and a station wagon. Mr. King said he did not feel, however, that these accusations have had any effect on the willingness of Negroes to see the thing through."

He estimated that approximately $3,500 a week is being spent for: car pool (gasoline for drivers), rental of office, full-time office staff, telephone and telegrams and all-day paid drivers. Over $18,000 is being spent in lawyers' fees.

Although the MIA has applied fo a transportation franchise and has been turned down, they are still exploring the possibilities of setting up some kind of transportation system.

Meanwhile, a virtual end to Sunday bus service here was approved by the City Commission.

92 Others Await Day Before Judge

Journal + Guide P. 1 Sat. 3-24-56

Citizens Still Walk; Fund Still Flow In As Major Test Of Right To Protest Bigotry Gets Underway

Norfolk, Va.

By ROBERT H. DENLEY

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — (INS) — The most eloquent leader of Montgomery's 16-week-old bus boycott, the Rev. M. L. King, Jr., went on trial separately Monday as the first of 93 Negroes accused of violating an Alabama anti-boycott law.

Rev. Mr. King, a 27-year-old Baptist minister, was called to trial first after eight defense attorneys asked for separate trials for the defendants.

* * *

PRELIMINARY moves, including the handling of the corps of defendants and 80 witnesses, delayed actual beginning of the trial until past noon.

Rev. Mr. King was specifically charged with conspiring to hinder unlawfully the operations of a corporation, in this case the Montgomery City Lines. The company's buses have been avoided almost 100 per cent by Montgomery's 45,000 Negro population since Dec. 5.

* * *

REV. MR. King is president of the Montgomery Improvement Association, the organization that supposedly instigated and directed the protest against segregated seating rules on city buses.

The minister, who has been a pastor in Montgomery for two years, was the first of two Negro leaders whose homes were bombed in the only incidents of violence in the long boycott There were no injuries when a dynamite blast was touched off before his home last Jan. 30.

The minister, who holds a Ph.D from Boston university, took his place before the bar, after telling newsmen:

* * *

"I THINK WE are right and our cause is just and I hope we win."

Circuit Judge Eugene W. Carter overruled defense demurrers which asked that the cases be thrown out on grounds that the indictments were "vague" and that the old law on which they were brought violates Federal and state constitutional guarantees of freedom of speech and the right to petition.

And as the trail got under way here Monday, the situation looked something like this:

(1) There was no sign of letdown in the four-month-long boycott which has caused "drastic" curtailment of service of Montgomery City Bus lines;

(2) Eight defense attorneys, including Authur Shores of Birmingham (Miss Autherine Lucy's lawyer) and Fred Grey, Montgomery, who was threatened with disbarment, were on hand;

(3) Funds continued to flow in from all parts of the nation as groups of all races and denomination showed tangibly their support of the efforts of the local groups; and

(4) The action was being heralded by the press both here and abroad as "the most extensive open protest of the white man's rule in modern Southern history."

• • •

THE FIRST OF 90 boycott leaders indicted by the Montgomery County grand jury under a 1929 law banning boycotts were set for trial before Circuit Judge Eugene Carter. All waived the right to jury trials.

• • •

THE BOYCOTT, in protest to segregated seating rules has affected city revenue and has had economic effects on retail businesses, especially those with "choice" location at certain bus stops.

Nowhere else in the South has there been such a long-sustained and complete (about 45,000 Negroes are involved) organized protest by Negroes against white supremacy.

• • •

THE BOYCOTTERS have been held together, despite the inconvenience of walking or joining car-pools, by a spiritual appeal.

The boycott, in contrast to on Feb. 21 for the boycott violation that carries punishment of fines up to $1,000 or jail terms of six months.

The boycott, in contrast of a federal court suit still pending does not seek an end to segregation on buses, but a change in seating rules. Montgomery bus drivers are given authority to decide the point beyond which Negroes cannot sit. The Boycott leaders sought a rule that would allow Negroes to be seated from the rear forward and whites from the front backward, on a first-come, first-seated basis. That system is common in many other Dixie cities.

The last suggested compromise was rejected by a vote of 3,998 to 2 by the boycotters the weekend before the grand jury returned its indictments.

New Witnesses Are Called In Trial Of First Of 90 In Protest

Mobile Press, Ala.
Mg. 3-23-56

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — (INS) — A three-man board of Federal judges has been named to hear a case which attacks the constitutionality of the Montgomery city laws and Alabama state laws requiring racial segregation in public transportation.

The suit was brought on February 1 by five Montgomery Negro women Montgomery has been the scene of a prolonged bus boycott by Negroes protesting segregation on the vehicles.

Attorneys for the five women are at present representing 93 Negro leaders in state court at Montgomery accused in connection with the boycott.

JJUDGES NAMED

Named to the board were U. S. Circuit court of appeals Judge Richard T. Rives and District Judge Frank M. Johnson, Jr., both of Montgomery and District Judge Sey-H. Lynne of Birmingham, Ala.

The law has been used only in labor disputes and in '2 was upheld by the Alabama Supreme Court. The defense in the bus trials has announced plans to appeal any adverse verdicts to federal courts under the Fifth and Fourteenth amendments.

CHARGES DENIED

In Tuesday's trial A Montgomery Negro leader denied that an organized car pool was operated for the purpose of preventing any one from riding the city's buses.

Rufus Lewis, chairman of the transportation committee of the Montgomery improvement Association, tsetified for the State and described details of the pool established soon after a bus boycott began last December 5.

Asked directly if the pool was not set up to keep Negroes from using buses, Lewis said:

"It is not to keep them from riding buses—it is to give transportation to those who won't wish to ride the buses."

The state was attempting to connect operation of the pool to an alleged conspiracy of Negro leaders to boycott Montgomery city lines' buses.

The Rev. M. L. King, Jr., is on trial, the first of 90 to be tried on charges of violating an old state anti boycott law.

Lewis said his committee arranged to borrow cars, pay drivers $4.00 per day, and set up dispatch stations and pickup stations.

BUS DRIVERS

In a second action Tuesday testimony of a bus driver who was shot at six times went into the record of the trial over the repeated objections of defense attorneys.

Driver George Henderson said that on the night of December 6, one day after the boycott began, "I was shot at six times—the first two shots hit the bus two feet behind me. I saw the flash and the shots came out of a house where colored people live or from the porch of the house."

Defense lawyers protested that Henderson's testimony was in no way connected with the defendant, the Rev. King.

In still another action a city detective told over strenuous defense objections——of questioning motorists who said they were driving in a car pool for the Montgomery improvement Association during the city's lengthy bus boycott.

Detective K. W. Jones was the ninth state witness in the trial of the Rev. M. L. King, Jr. first of the 90 Negroes to be tried on charges of conspiring unlawfully to foster a boycott.

Circuit Judge Eugene W. Carter overruled defense objections in permitting the detective to tell of interviews he had in January with several drivers who pulled out of a car pool uickup station with their cars loaded with Negro passengers.

One driver, Jones related, "told us he hauled for two or thre hours a day, was getting four dollars a day and gasoline and said the Montgomery Improvement Association paid for it."

Similar conversations with other drivers were reported

The 100 year old courtroom was only about half-filled with all but a dozen of the spectators being Negroes.

The state attempted to show through testimony given Tuseday that the Montgomery Improvement Association created a car pool in order to sustain the boycott protest against segregated seating rules. The protest started last December 5.

MARCH 28 SITDOWN

Advertiser 2/1

'Deliverance Day' Protest Aimed At Boycott Arrests

Montgomery, Ala.

Sun. 2-26-56

Montgomery Negro ministers are expected to develop the theme of "passive resistance" at Sunday services today as several national religious groups pledged their support to nationwide "deliverance day" sitdown March 28 to protest the prosecution of Negro boycott leaders here.

More than a score of ministers who will address local congregations were indicted on boycott charges along with more than 70 others by the Montgomery County Grand Jury. The ministers are from all denominations and record attendances at church services were predicted last night.

See picture of Negro church leaders on steps of U.S. Supreme Court Building, Page 2A.

Over the nation, the boycott has attracted attention from organized groups and individuals. Among those condemning the arrest of the Negro boycotters were the Council of Bishops of the African Methodist Episcopal Church and church groups in Columbus, Ohio, Boston, New York, Cincinnati and other cities.

The national "deliverance day" sitdown March 28 to protest the prosecution was suggested by Negro Rep. Adam Clayton Powell (D-NY). The ideal immediately gained momentum around the nation.

Meanwhile, the Department of Justice in Washington began studying a demand on the White House, also by Powell that protection of persons and civil liberties be provided the accused boycott leaders.

Atty. Gen. Herbert Brownell Jr. will reply to Powell in the near future regarding the issues to be raised, according to a White House spokesman.

"Unfortunately there has been no congressional action," said Bryce N. Harlow, administrative assistant to the President in a letter to Powell. "It is hoped that you and your colleagues will find your way clear to speed the enactment of this legislation in this session."

The "deliverance day" has been endorsed and has received pledges from several cities and groups.

In Boston, the Rev. Walter Davis, president of Boston's Inter-Denominational Ministers Assn., said 22,000 Negroes there would join in the work stoppage.

Davis called a special meeting of 27 pastors for today to "pray for our brethren in Montgomery."

The Rev. E. C. McLeon of the Union Methodist Church in Boston also promised his support and said he would ask his congregation of 500 to contributed moral and financial help to the Montgomery boycott.

Powell said he also had received a pledge of support from the Council of Bishops of the African Methodist Church which is in emergency session in Washington.

Clergymen will direct the demonstration all over the country, Powell said, and it will be organized initially and solely by and for Negroes. But they intend to include white ministers and congregations later in prayer demonstration.

Advertiser

LABOR LEADERS

Powell meets today with three leading Negro labor leaders representing clothing workers and sleeping car porters to discuss participation of the unions in the March 28 sitdown. 2-4

Powell said at this stage he is paying all the bills for the movement but that $1,000 was contributed Friday by a group of New York businessmen.

Efforts were made to rent Madison Square Garden in New York for a citywide prayer meeting on March 28. A series of smaller prayer meetings will begin Sunday, March 4 in various churches.

"We are not tabling the idea of waging a passive resistance, Ghandi-type campaign after Mrch 28 if we fail in other means," Powell said. "We will try everything else first."

FEDERAL INTERVENTION

Meanwhile, the Council of Bishops of the African Methodist Espiscopal Church decied yesterday to appeal to President Eisenhower for immediate federal intervention in the bus boycott here.

A spokesman for the group which claims to represent 1,600,000 Negro members, said the council was drafting letters to Eisenhower and Atty. Gen. Brownell asking federal court action to protect Negroes arrested in Montgomery.

Twelve of the council's 13 bishops met in a closed session. They issued a statement denouncing the arrest of clergymen and others on charges they conspired to keep Negroes from riding Montgomery buses in protest against segregation.

In his statement to Powell, White House Administrative Assistant Harlow also answered the bishops by saying:

STATE OF UNION

"I have been asked to advise you of our view that this incident is one of a number recently in public notice which reinforces the President's State of the Union recommendation that the Congress establish a commission to consider actions having civil rights implications."

The bishops had declared in their statement:

We promise not only our prayers and moral support but any material aid in support of efforts to meet the situation with justice by nonviolent and constitutional means."

Yesterday the Rev. S. S. Seay, secretary-treasurer of home mission, pensions and relief of the AME Zion Church, received a telegram from Dr. Eugene Carson Blake president of the National Council of Chruches stating the council's position in the situation here.

CHRISTIAN GREETINGS

Dr. Blake's message said:

"Because of press reports of present difficulties in Montgomery, I want to send Christian greetings and communicate to you the position of the general board of the National Council of Churches.

At its meeting on Dec. 1, 1955, the general borad stated that in the present situation of acute tension over policies with regard to race relations, many of our fellow Christians are in deep distress of spirit and in extreme difficulty in their community relationships.

"Long standing social traditions and deep emotions make reasonable action and relationships almost impossible. The board therefore assures the churches and our fellow Christians in these agonizing situations of our sympathy and prayers and of our resolution to assist them in ways that may be helpful.

DENOUNCE SEGREGATION

"You will recall that in 1952 the National Council announced and recommended to its member churches 'that they denounce the pattern of segregation based on race, color or national origin as unnecessary and undesirable, and a violation of the gospel of love and human brotherhood.'

"I believe that the above statement in spirit and intent indicates clearly that the wider fellowship of the churches including churches of whatever color in your own community and across the land support you and all others who are struggling with these grave problems."

It also was announced yesterday that the Alabama Legislature may be called on to help segregation problems when they return for another special session.

FOLSOM ACTION

Following a meeting with newspaper publishers and editors Friday, Gov. James E. Folsom hinted strongly that he might also ask the Legislature to create a bi-rcial commission to seek peaceful settlement of racial disputes.

The group, headed by Editor James E. Mills of the Birmingham Post-Herald, suggested that the governor name a 25-member commission including responsible Negro and white leaders from each Congressional district.

A young minister who has worked for effective communication between the races yesterday endorsed the plan for setting up a bi-racial commission suggested by Gov. Folsom.

The Rev. Robert E. Hughes of Montgomery, executive director, Alabama Council on Human Relations, said the proposal agreed on by Gov. Folsom and a committee of Alabama newspaper editors, can meet a longfelt need.

OPPORTUNITY LACK

"One of the major barriers to constructive progress in the field of race relations in Alabama, as well as in the rest of the Deep South," said Hughes, "is the lack of an opportunity for a free and frank exchanged of ideas between white and Negro leaders in an atmosphere of calmness.

"At the present time communication is largely restriced to the court room and the press where charges and countercharges inflame public opinion needlessly."

In a prepared statement Hughes said the Alabama Council on Human Relations has been emphasizing the need for a bi-racial approach to these problems on both the state and local levels, calling for a cross-section of the leadership of both races to be assembled for purposes of mediation, study, and cooperative action.

PARTICIPATION ASKED

"One fact is obvious," he said. "The recommendations of such a body will be acceptable to both whites and Negroes only if truly representative citizens of both groups participate.

"The action of Governor Folsom in proposing the commission has established this vital principle of a bi-racial approach. The second step, the appointment of the members of the commission by the governor, will largely determine its success. The required wisdom is cause for prayer by people everywhere."

In an interview at the request of The Advertiser, the Rev. O. D. Dempsey, how is directing plans for a "National Deliverance Day of Paryer" by Negroes March 28, said response to the idea has been "overwhelming."

Dempsey, who is assistnat to Rep. Powell, Negro pastor of the Abyssinian Baptist Church in New Yrok's Harlem, was named executive director of the drive.

TELEPHONE CALL

Later yesterday Powell spoke to leaders of a number of Negro church denominations across the country through a simultaneous ing room floor.

Brown's 9-month-old daughter, to enlist the aid of "our white brothers, Christian and Jew."

Dempsey said the office at Powell's church had been flooed with other promises of support in telephone calls and telegrams.

Negro ministers are being asked to take up special collections in their churches today to hel finance the campaign and other contributions are being received, Dempsey said.

Dempsey has been assistnat to Powell and in charge of boys' work at the Abyssianian Church since last October.

The 32-year-old minister, a veteran of World War II, attended Brooklyn College night classes for seven years after leaving the Army and did youth work at two Negro Baptist Churches in Brooklyn before taking the post at Powell's church.

Dempsey said there will be a series of preliminary prayer meetings in various New York churches at 3 p.m. on March 4, 11, 18 and 25.

PRAYER ON SUPREME COURT STEPS

Thirteen council members of bishops of the African Methodist Church pose in prayer yesterday on the steps of the Supreme Court building in Washington after appealing to President Eisenhower to act against what they termed the "tragic persecution" of leaders of the Negro boycott of Montgomery, Ala., buses. Left to right are F. D. Jordan, Los Angeles, Calif.; Howard T. Primm, New Orleans, La.; William R. Wilkes, Little Rock, Ark.; Isaiah H. Bonner, Birmingham, Ala.; A. J. Allen, Cleveland, Ohio; Frank M. Reid, Columbia, S.C.; D. Ward Nichols, New York City; S. L. Greene, Atlanta, Ga.; R. R. Wright, Philadelphia, Pa.; G. W. Baber, Detroit, Mich.; Carey A. Gibbs, Jacksonville, Fla.; E. C. Hatcher, Nashville, Tenn., and Joseph Gomez, Waco, Tex.—AP Wirephoto

38b 1956

ALABAMA

No Franchise If Integrated, Carrier Told

Constitution
Thurs. 4-26-56
Atlanta Ga.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., April 25 (AP)—Montgomery City Lines faced the threat of court action to revoke its franchise today unless it backs away from its newly announced policy of racial integration.

P. 1

The City Commission, whose three members all belong to the White Citizens' Council, declared that the bus company will have to abide by city and state segregation laws if it continues to do business here.

RACES APART

Meanwhile, there was still no report of race mixing on the buses despite the company's integration order. Most Negroes still were boycotting the bus line as they have for five months, and those who did ride took seats in the rear.

Hinting at a court suit to break the recently renewed 10-year bus franchise, Mayor W. A. Gayle said the contract can be canceled "if one party breaks the law."

COURT CASE

But it would take court action, the mayor said, since the franchise itself says nothing about segregation.

Said Police Commimssioner Clyde Sellers:

"If the bus company operates in Montgomery, it will have to operate under Montgomery and Alabama laws."

The commission contends city and state segregation statutes are still valid despite a federal court ruling in South Carolina and the Supreme Court's decision backing the federal court.

A spokesman for National City Lines, Inc., of Chicago, which owns the company here, said this morning that his company doesn't plan to change its orders for integration in, Montgomery and other Southern cities where its buses operate.

The company operates bus lines in Mobile, Ala.; Jackson Miss.; Tampa, Fla.; Tulsa, Okla.; and Beaumont, Wichita Falls, and El Paso, Texas.

Officials at Tampa and Jackson said segregation would be continued on buses operating in those cities despite the company statement in Chicago.

Constitution

The Montgomery statement was made at a news conference before it was disclosed later in the day that government attorneys in Washington are divided in their opinion of the meaning of the Supreme Court's ruling Monday.

They said the court might have ruled all bus segregation invalid, the first interpretation given to the decision, or that it may have merely dismissed an appeal on the grounds that the case hadn't been finally determined in the lower courts.

The Virginia Transit Co. announced it would discontinue segregation on its lines in Richmond and Norfolk today and said the Portsmouth, Va., Transit Co. also would adopt the new policy.

A few Virginia Transit Co. bus drivers permitted mixing of the races Tuesday. No incidents were reported.

In North Carolina, the Duke Power Co. said it was complying with the Supreme Court decision but did not expect any great change in its bus operations at Durham and Greensboro.

Several Louisiana and Mississippi officials said segregation on buses would be continued despite the Supreme Court ruling.

But in Florida, J. B. Osteen, traffic manager of Florida Greyhound Lines, said his company would obey the new court order as soon as interpretation and procedure have been worked out. A Florida Trailways Bus System spokesman said, however, that his company would operate under Florida law which calls for segregation on buses within the state.

BUS FRANCHISE ATTACK TALKED

P. 3

Times-Picayune
Montgomery Officials Warn Company
Thurs. 4-26-56

MONTGOMERY, Ala., April 25 (AP)—Montgomery City Lines today faced the threat of court action to revoke its franchise unless it backs away from its newly announced policy of racial integration.

New Orleans La.

The City Commission declared the bus company will have to abide by city and state segregation laws if it continues to do business here.

Meanwhile, there was still no report of race mixing on the buses despite the company's integration order. Most Negroes were still boycotting the bus line as they have for five months. Those who did ride took seats in the rear.

Hinting at a court suit to break the recently renewed 10-year bus franchise, Mayor W. A. Gayle said the contract can be canceled "if one party breaks the law."

But it would take court action, the Mayor explained, since the franchise itself says nothing about segregation.

Must Obey Laws

Said Police Commissioner Clyde Sellers:

"If the bus company operates in Montgomery, it will have to operate under Montgomery and Alabama laws."

The commission contends city and state segregation statutes are still valid despite a federal court uling in South Carolina and the Supreme Court's decision.

A spokesman for National City Lines Inc., of Chicago which owns the company, said this morning his concern doesn't plan to change its orders for desegregation in Montgomery and other Southern cities.

That statement came from Vice President B. W. Franklin, who also told reporters the company would stand behind any Montgomery bus driver who is arrested for permitting integration on his bus. Sellers has threatened arrests.

Before Uncertainty

Franklin's statement was made at a news conference before the disclosure came later in the day that government attorneys in Washington are divided in their opinion on what the Supreme Court actually ruled Monday, and whether bus segregation was really ruled invalid.

City officials said they would confer with bus company representatives later today or tomorrow. Franklin took over the negotiations for his firm in the absence of the Montgomery manager, J. H. Bagley, who suffered a heart attack last night.

His doctor said Bagley was stricken while talking on the telephone and was still under an oxygen tent in a hospital today. His condition was somewhat better, the physician reported.

City Officials, Bus Firm Fail To Settle Rift

Advertiser
Montgomery, Ala.
Sat. 4-28-56

By STEVE LESHER

The wall separating bus company and city officials remained uncracked yesterday after a second meeting between the belligerents yielded little hope of compromise.

Mayor W. A. Gayle issued a statement following the brief meeting saying the city "will require the (bus) company to follow to the letter" existing segregation laws

Benjamin W. Franklin, vice president of National City Lines Inc., parent company of the local bus line, apparently stood firm on his instructions to bus drivers not to enforce segregation laws.

A reliable source told The Advertiser that no meeting had been scheduled for a future date and "chances of a meeting in the near future are slim." The source did not wish to be quoted.

KEEP UP BOYCOTT

Negroes meanwhile continued their five-month-old boycott of city buses. More than 3,000 Negores massed at Day Street Baptist Church Thursday night voted unanimously to continue the boycott until the city withdraws its threats to arrest passengers and drivers who did not enforce segregation.

Franklin had no comment to reporters' questions following the meeting in the offices of Walter Knabe, city attorney. It was the second meeting in two days between the city and the company. No solutions were reached at either meeting.

No new comment was available on the city's threat to revoke the company's franchise in Montgomery if it failed to comply with segregation laws.

ORDERS ISSUED

Orders to bus drivers not to enforce segregation on buses were issued last Monday night by J. H. Bagley, superintendent of Montgomery City Lines Inc., on the heels of a Supreme Court action interpreted as upholding a lower court's decision to declare segregation on buses in South Carolina unconstitutional.

However, there is general confusion as to whether the Supreme Court intended to outlaw segregation only in South Carolina or in all states. There has been some speculation that the Supreme Court did not intend to rule on the bus segregation question at all.

Bagley, who suffered a heart attack shortly after midnight on Wednesday, was reported resting quietly in a local hospital. His condition was reported "improved."

Text of the brief City Commission's statement following yesterday's meeting:

"No agreement has been reached. The City Commission has advised the bus company that all laws and ordinances will be enforced and that the commission will require the company to follow to the letter all laws and ordinances."

Majority of southerners ready, feel desegregation inevitable

Afro-American Baltimore, Md.
Oct. 5-12-56

(By AFRO STAFF WRITER)

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — "Our people working together will solve our own problem."

This is the viewpoint of the vast majority of Montgomery's white citizens as expressed by Thomas Blake, public relations director of the Montgomery Chamber of Commerce.

On the other hand another white person here, the Rev. Robert Graetz, pastor of Trinity Lutheran Church, who is actively engaged as a minister of a 240-member colored church, with the bus protest, says:

"Integration is the only Christian thing to do. It is coming and I hope that people on both sides are prepared to accept it."

* * *

MR. BLAKE, whose job is to help entice businesses and visitors to Montgomery, talked to the AFRO in his fashionable offices on Commerce St., while the Rev. Mr. Graetz addressed a mass meeting at Holt Street Baptist Church Monday night.

Mr. Blake made it plain that he was expressing his "personal opinion," but he added he felt it was the general opinion of white citizens here and reflected the thinking of the white masses in the Cradle of Confederacy.

"Our attitude," he explained, "is one of helpfulness and cooperation with separation, and sometimes we get quite pricked at how it works out." He continued:

* * *

"WE ARE LIKE a man born with a mortgage over his head, and we can work it out if given time and if they'll just let us alone.

"Our people working together will solve our own problem. We have as intelligent, level-headed colored people here as there are anywhere in the world, and we can solve the problem if they just let us alone.

"We think a lot of the colored people here and we want health and prosperity for them as well as we do for anyone. But we don't want social integration.

"I have some colored friends that I'd fight for, but we have always kept separately and we always knew that is the way it should be."

* * *

THE CHAMBER of Commerce official said 43.6 per cent of Montgomery's population of more than 127,000 (metropolitan area) is colored and "we have always gotten along all right."

He expressed the opinion that the leaders of the bus protest may not be the "real leaders" of the colored population here, pointing out that the mass meetings attract only several thousands.

He also is of the opinion that many people do not ride the buses "out of fear."

As a final opinion, Mr. Blake declared: "As the masses are educated and fast assume the responsibilities of citizenship, business will come. But all of us are pro-segregationists," he reminded the AFRO.

* * *

THE REV. MR. GRAETZ, 27, a native of Charleston, W. Va., who was educated at a Lutheran college in Columbus, Ohio, said:

"Other white people believe the bus protest is justifiable, but I am one of the few active because of my position in the community."

He added: "Plenty people here hate me, but it is the only Christian thing to do. Some of my older church members suggest that I forget it, fearful that I could get hurt, but that is because they have never known any other way."

Asked about how he felt the bus protest would end, the youthful minister, who looks more like a choir master, declared:

* * *

"WE CAN'T LOSE. There is no doubt about it. We have at least three cracks at victory."

His inference was to the May 11 trial at which the constitutionality of the segregated transportation laws will be tested;

The appeal of Mrs. Rosa Parks, whose arrest and conviction for refusing to give up her seat to a white passenger, is pending;

And the appeal of the conviction and $500 fine of the Rev. Martin L. King, president of the Montgomery Improvement Association, which also is pending.

* * *

THE REV. MR. GRAETZ was not among the 26 ministers who were indicted along with the Rev. Mr. King on charges of violating the Alabama anti-boycott law.

A total of 90 persons have been indicted and the cases of the 89 others are awaiting the outcome of the Rev. Mr. King's appeal.

It's a strange coincidence that when interest appears to be flagging in the bus boycott something like this happens."

Graetz has been an active participant in the Negro bus boycott and is a member of the Montgomery Improvement Association, a group supporting the racial demonstration that began Dec. 3.

Last January, the home of the Rev. M. L. King, president of the association and recognized leader of the boycott, was bombed. Two days later dynamite was hurled into the yard of E. D. Nixon, former state president of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. No one was injured in either blast.

Third Explosion Since Dispute Began

Dynamite Blast in Yard Damages Home Of Minister Aiding Negro Bus Boycott

Post-Herald Birmingham, Ala.
Aug. 8-26-56

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Aug. 25 (UP)—A blast today damaged the home of a white minister who has encouraged Negroes in their boycott of city buses in a segregation dispute. No one was injured.

The Lutheran minister, the Rev. Robert Graetz, 27, and his wife and three children were not at home when the blast knocked out several windows.

Police Capt. E. P. Brown said the minister was believed to be "somewhere in Tennessee" either no vacation or business.

Brown said "two or three" sticks of dynamite were apparently hurled into the yard. The blast broke windows in the front of the house, near the Negro Lutheran Church served by Graetz, and did "some" damage to the door. A hole about 2 feet in diameter was blown in the yard. Windows across the street also were shattered.

Mayor W. A. Gayle angrily asserted that perhaps today's bombing "is just a publicity stunt to build up interest of the Negroes in their campaign" because of a drop-off in "out-of-state" contributions to the boycott.

"This latest bombing," Gayle said, "follows the usual pattern. No arrests have been made.

Graetz this week had called on the Montgomery Ministerial Association to hear a speech by King on what the bus boycott was "all about." The request was turned down.

"The law will be enforced to protect lives and property of our citizens."

Graetz, 27, is white pastor of the all-Negro Trinity Lutheran Church. His home adjoins the church in a Negro residential section.

The young clergyman has actively supported Negro bus boycotters who have refused to ride segregated city buses since last Dec. 5.

He is a member of the Montgomery Improvement Assn., an organization composed mostly of Negroes supporting the boycott, and has used his personal car to give rides to Negroes to and

Publicity Stunt Hinted In Montgomery Bombing

Post-Herald Birmingham, Ala.
Mon. 8-27-56

MONTGOMERY, Aug. 26 — Mayor W. A. Gayle deplored the dynamite explosion set off early yesterday outside the home of a young white minister who has been active in the bus boycott.

"We mean to get to the bottom of this thing by arresting and convicting the guilty party or parties if it is at all possible," he added.

No one was injured in the explosion since the Rev. Robert Graetz and his family were away from home.

"This latest 'bombing' follows the usual pattern," Gayle said. "It's a strange coincidence that when interest appears to be lagging in the bus boycott something like this happens.

"It's interesting to note that Rev. Graetz and his family were out of town and the explosion was set off at least 20 feet away from the house so that no extensive damage was done.

"We are inclined to wonder if out-of-state contributions to the boycott have been dropping off. Perhaps this is just a publicity stunt to build up interest of the Negroes in their campaign."

Gayle observed that most white people of Montgomery have "very little interest in the boycott and don't care particularly how the Negroes solve their transportation problem.

"They, the white people, don't care if the boycott lasts 100 years," he added.

"We deplore this latest incident which tends to fan the flames of racial unrest. Our police department is going to do everything possible to apprehend and convict the guilty party or parties.

—A bomb burst Saturday damaged the home of a white minister who has encouraged Negro bus boycotters and ended the lull in this old Confederate capital's eight-months racial struggle.

The intended target of the home-made dynamite bomb, the Rev. Robert Graetz, 27, and his family were visiting in Tennessee. The blast ripped out windows and knocked a hole in the front door. Windows also were blown out in a house across the street but no one was injured.

Informed of the bombing at Monteagle, Tenn., where he was attending the Highlander Folk School, the Rev. Mr. Graetz left immediately for Montgomery. The Highlander School conducts an integration workshop and has two integrated children's camps in the Tennessee mountains.

The Rev. Mr. Graetz, a soft-spoken Lutheran minister, only this week had called on the Montgomery Ministerial Association to hear a leader of the boycott, Rev. M. L. King, explain the Negroes' position. His request was refused.

Mayor W. A. Gayle angrily asserted that perhaps Saturday's bombing "is just a publicity stunt to build up interest of the Negroes in their campaign" because of a drop-off in "out of state" contributions to the boycott.

Third Bombing

"This latest bombing," Mayor Gayle said, "follows the usual pattern. It's a strange coincidence that when interest appears to be flagging in the bus boycott something like this happens."

This was the third bombing in connection with the boycott undertaken by thousands of Montgomery Negroes last December to protest discourtesy by white drivers and segregated seating.

In January, the home of Rev. King was blasted. Two days later dynamite was hurled into the yard of E. D. Nixon, former state president of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. No one was injured in either blast and no arrests were made.

The boycott quickly put the local bus line on financial rocks and nearly 100 Negro leaders, a score of them ministers, were arrested under an obscure Alabama law. It dealt with conspir-

BOMB BLASTS HOME OF BOYCOTT BACKER

Commercial Appeal 8-1

White Montgomery Minister Was Away—Mayor Calls It Publicity Stunt

Memphis Tenn.

By The United Press

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Aug. 25.

acy to form an economic boycott to the detriment of a business.

At a trial in which Negroes testified about mistreatment on buses, Rev. King was convicted and sentenced to six months in prison. His case is still pending on appeal, and trials of the other Negro leaders have been postponed.

Police Capt. E. P. Brown said "two or three" sticks of dynamite formed the bomb hurled into the Rev. Mr. Graetz' yard. In addition to damage to the house the blast ripped a hole in the yard.

The Rev. Mr. Graetz has been an active participant in the Negro bus boycott and is a member of the Montgomery Improvement Association, a group supporting the boycott.

He is a slightly built clergyman of the American Synod of the Lutheran Church. He and his wife and three young children live in a neat brick bungalow next door to their church. The home is on the fringe of a middle class Negro neighborhood.

BLAST SCENE — Exploding dynamite, placed or thrown by unidentified persons, caused minor damage to the home of the Rev. Robert Graetz in Montgomery. Mr. Graetz, 27, is a white minister who has supported the Negro bus boycott in Montgomery. Patrolman A. G. Bedsole examines the small crater in the yard. (United Press Telephoto.)

ALABAMA HOME BOMBED

Times P. 31-L

Minister in Bus Boycott Case Away at Time of Blast

Sun. 8-26-56

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Aug. 25 (UP)—A blast today damaged the home of a white minister who had encouraged Negroes in their boycott of city buses in a segregation dispute. No one was injured.

New York

The Lutheran minister, Rev. Robert Graetz, 27 years old, and his wife and three children were not at home when the blast knocked out several windows.

Police Capt. E. P. Brown said the minister was believed to be "somewhere in Tennessee." He said "two or three" sticks of dynamite apparently had been hurled into the yard. The explosion ripped windows in the front of the house, near the Negro Lutheran Church served by Mr. Graetz and did "some" damage to the door.

Mr. Graetz has been an active participant in the Negro bus boycott and is a member of the Montgomery Improvement Association, a group supporting the racial demonstration that began Dec. 3.

MONTGOMERY

Baltimore Md.

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — A new move involving Montgomery insurance firms and drivers in the car pool and believed designed as a threat to the 10-month-old bus boycott was disclosed here this week.

P.1

The Rev. Robert Graetz, pastor, Trinity Lutheran Church, who has been associated with the Montgomery Improvement Association, sponsors of the boycott, revealed that insurance agents repeatedly cancelled policies on vehicles used in the pool.

Sun. 9-29-56

The Rev. Mr. Graetz, white, said the practice had been going on since January and owners constantly were seeking new insurance from other sources.

* * *

"IT HAS BEEN a cat-and-mouse game virtually from the start. However, it has not cut into the operation of the pool to an extent which threatens its immediate closing," the Rev. Mr. Graetz emphasized.

"It has been a matter of keeping cars in reserve and when one is put out of commission by loss of insurance, putting into service another which is insured," he declared.

The minister whose home was bombed five weeks ago while he and his family were away said his own automobile insurance policy once was cancelled and that he had trouble finding an agency which would issue another policy.

He pointed out, however, that only properly insured automobiles had been and are being used in the pool.

* * *

THE REV. MARTIN LUTHER KING, president of the Montgomery Improvement Association, did not comment on the situation.

Under Alabama law, car drivers must be insured for $11,000 to cover any injuries or damages growing from accidents, or provide an equivalent cash responsibility.

In case of the accident, the driver must show such financial responsibility or receive automatic cancellation of his operating license. In addition, he is liable for any action which might be taken in civil court.

Mayor Promises to Act On Bus Boycotter Blast

Sunday Star P. 8-A

Washington, D. C.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Aug. 25 (AP). — Mayor W. A. Gayle today promised that the police department will do everything possible to solve the mystery of a pre-dawn dynamite blast which slightly damaged the home of a young white pastor of a Negro church.

Sun. 8-26-56

The mayor said the bombing of the home of the Rev. Robert Graetz, 27, might have been a publicity stunt to build up interest in the Negro boycott of Montgomery buses.

(Mayor Gayle is a member of the pro-white Montgomery County Citizens Council.)

Mr. Graetz and his family were out of town at the time of the dynamiting and no one was injured.

"We mean to get to the bottom of this thing by arresting and convicting the guilty party or parties if it is at all possible," Mayor Gayle said.

Bus Boycott Supporter

The minister, pastor of Trinity Lutheran Church, has actively supported the bus boycott since it got under way nearly 10 months ago. For a time he was a driver in the boycott car pool.

A native of Clarksburg, W. Va., he attended Capital University and Seminary in Columbus, Ohio, where he became interested in work with Negro young people.

Before accepting his Montgomery pastorate he was intern minister at a predominantly Negro church in Los Angeles.

Only this week Mr. Graetz had invited Montgomery's white ministers to attend a meeting of the bi-racial Montgomery Council on Human Relations, to hear a Negro pastor, the Rev. Martin Luther King, jr., tell "his side of the story" on the bus boycott.

The white ministers declined the invitation.

Mr. King, convicted of violating Alabama's anti-boycott law last spring, was unavailable for comment on the bombing.

Sees Whites Uninterested

The mayor commented that for the most part white people of Montgomery have been dispassionate about the bus boycott and have shown very little interest in it.

"Theyy don't care particularly how the Negroes solve their transportation problem," he said, "and don't care if the boycott lasts 100 years."

The explosion, which came about 3 a.m., blew open the front door and dug a hole in the front yard about big enough to fit a two-gallon bucket.

Today's explosion was the third which has occurred since the boycott began. One damaged the King home last January 30, and another the home of Negro leader E. D. Nixon, two nights later. No one was injured in any of the blasts.

26 Clergymen Arrested

Herald Tribune

Negro Boycott Leaders Rounded Up in Alabama

Thurs. 2-23-56 P. 1

New York, N.Y.

By The Associated Press

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Feb. 22.—Negro religious and political leaders, including 26 ministers, were arrested on boycott charges today in a wholesale roundup of defendants indicted by a grand jury for their mass protest against bus segregation.

The grand jury returned indictments yesterday against 115 defendants accused of taking an active part in the eleven-week-old racial boycott against Montgomery city lines buses. Dates for their trials will be taken up Friday at their arraignment.

Thousands of Negroes have refused to ride the buses since Dec. 5, the day a member of their race, Mrs. Rosa Parks, was fined $14 for refusing to move to the colored section of a bus. City and state laws require segregation.

Mrs. Parks was sentenced to fourteen days in jail in lieu of the fine today after Circuit Judge Eugene Carter, the jurist who ordered the grand jury investigation, turned down her appeal from the previous conviction in City Court. She appealed Judge Carter's decision to the State Supreme Court, and immediately afterward was arrested on a boycotting indictment.

Judge Carter upheld city and state segregation laws when the issue was raised in Mrs. Parks' [illegible] He imposed the jail sentence after she refused to pay the fine and announced she planned to appeal the conviction.

Freed in $300 Bonds

All of the dependants brought to the county jail and fingerprinted were released as soon as they put up bond of $300 each. They were charged with violating a state law against organized, illegal boycotting. Maximum sentence for violation is six months in jail and $1,000 fine.

As the roundup of boycott defendants continued, there were these other developments:

Gov. James E. Folsom invited newspaper editors and publishers to a conference in his office here Friday to discuss racial problems.

Fred D. Gray, twenty-five-year-old unmarried Negro attorney under indictment on a charge of unlawful practice growing out of the bus boycott, lost an appeal from a draft board order reclassifying him 1-A. He had been deferred from military service as assistant pastor of a Negro church.

City attorneys filed an answer in United States District Court along with a motion to dismiss a pending suit seeking to outlaw city and state laws which require bus and railroad segregation.

Herald Tribune

It was that lawsuit that brought Mr. Gray's indictment by the Grand Jury here last week. He was charged with filing the complaint with the consent of one of the five Negro women whose names were signed to the anti-segregation petition.

P. 13

Whether Mr. Gray planned to appeal his draft classification to higher authorities was not known. The appeals board of the Middle Alabama District announced yesterday it had upheld the local board decision to put the attorney in 1-A.

Leaders Are Seized

Two of Montgomery's most active Negro politcal leaders were among those arrested on boycotting warrants today. They were E. D. Nixon, former state president of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored people, and Mrs. Jo Ann Robinson, a teacher at Alabama State College for Negroes in Montgomery.

Mr. Nixon, a Pulman porter, is president now of the Montgomery Progressive Democratic Association, a politically active organization, and Mrs. Robinson heads the Women's Political Council. A small dynamite bomb exploded in the front yard at Mr. Nixon's home the night of Feb. 1, but no one was injured.

Sheriff Mac Butler said a mistake in his office caused another Negro political figure, Rufus Lewis, to be brought in but that he was not indicted. Mr. Lewis, who was a witness before the grand jury, is president of the Citizens Club, an organization of Negro voters.

Sheriff Butler said Mr. Lewis' name was on a list of those to be brought in but that when he arrived at the jail the error was discovered and he was released because there was no charge against him. The sheriff said he had sent word to Mr. Lewis to come to the jail and he appeared voluntarily.

Ministers Listed

The Negro ministers arrested were:

The Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy, pastor of the Negro First Baptist Church and head of a negotiating committee which has conferred with city officials and bus company spokesmen in unsuccessful attempts to settle the boycott.

Dr. S. S. Saey, a leading figure in the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church throughout the world and former executive secretary of its Home Missions Board.

The Rev. A. W. Wilson, pastor of the Holt Street Baptist Church, where the first Negro mass meeting was held at the outset of the bus protest.

The Rev. M. C. Cleveland, of the Board of Missions of the National Baptist Convention.

Although they were not identified in each indictment, Sheriff said many o the defendants were drivers who used their automobiles in a huge car pool which has furnished transportation to Negroes during the bus protest.

defendants arrested today for taking part in the mass racial boycott against city buses. They were the Rev. Ralph D. Abernathey and the Rev. R. James Glasco.

By the United Press.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Feb. 22.—The sheriff's office today started a roundup of more than 100 persons named in indictments charging Negroes with illegally boycotting city buses in a segregation dispute.

A grand jury yesterday returned the indictments reliably reported to name 114 defendants in a presentment stating the boycott was one sign of "a growing tension between the races."

"If we continue on our present course of race relations, violence is inevitable," the grand jury said.

The indictment charged leaders of the 11-week boycott with violating a 1921 state law making it a misdemeanor for two or more persons to conspire to prevent others from carrying on their business. Thus, conspiracy to initiate the boycott and keep it going was looked upon as the violation, not the actual participation of individual Negroes in the boycott.

The boycott began as a protest against the arrest of a Negro seamstress for refusing to move to the segregated section of a bus. It was continued to enforce demands for better seating arrangements.

"We find that there has been an illegal boycott existing in this county," the grand jury said. "Indictments have been returned where guilt was shown."

The grand jury said the primary causes of the unrest are the segregation laws and the attacks upon them by the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People.

"In this state we are committed to segregation by custom and law," the grand jury said. "We intend to maintain it."

Two Ministers Seized First in Dixie Boycott

World-Telegram + Sun P. 1

Wed. 2-22-56

New York, N.Y.

BULLETIN

By the Associated Press

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Feb. 22.—Two Negro Baptist ministers were among the first

BEGIN ROUNDUP OF DEFENDANTS IN BUS BOYCOTT

Daily Tribune

Thurs. 2-23-56

Chicago, Ill.

World Leader of Negro Church Seized

P. 4

Montgomery, Ala., Feb. 22 [Special] — Forty Negroes, including nine ministers, were arrested today on indictments charging participation in Montgomery's racial boycott of city buses because of segregation of passengers.

A crowd of about 150 Negroes milled around the county jail and courthouse as deputies brought in those arrested among 115 defendants named in grand jury indictments late yesterday. But the crowd remained orderly and no trouble was expected.

Identity of the defendants was not disclosed until their arrests. All of those seized thus far, however, have been Negroes. Among them were the world leader in the African Methodist Episcopal Zion church and the former state director of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Jury Probes Boycott

A Circuit court grand jury of 17 white men and one Negro returned the indictments after an eight day investigation of the Negro boycott of city buses that began last Dec. 5 and is continuing. The defendants are charged with violating an Alabama law which prohibits boycotting without "a just cause or legal excuse." They face a maximum penalty of six months in jail and a fine of $1,000.

Thos earrested included:

E. D. Nixon, former sta' president of the NAACP, home was the target of a dynamite bomb Feb. 1.

The Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy, one of the foremost spokesmen for the Negroes during the boycott.

The Rev. R. James Wilson, pastor of the Baptist church where the first Negra mass meeting was held at the outset of the boycott.

Woman Loses Appeal

Meanwhile, Mrs. Rosa Parks, whose arrest started the boycott, lost her appeal from a $14 fine levied after she refused to move to the section of a bus set aside for Negroes.

Circuit Judge Eugene Carter, who charged the grand jury to investigate the bus dispute, upheld the City court fine. He also upheld both the city and state segregation laws which require separation of races on public transportation. Mrs. Parks announced she would appeal o the state Supreme court.

It also was learned that an apeals board had upheld unanimously the 1-T draft status of Fred D. Gray, Negro attorney who has been the chief legal voice of the bus boycott.

His Deferment Ends

Gray, an assistant pastor of a church here, had been classed 4-D, a ministerial deferment classification, since 1948. Ten days ago his local board reclassified him 1-A, making him eligible for the draft.

The appeals board action yesterday came three days after Gray was indicted by a grand jury on a charge of unlawful practice in filing a suit asking an end to segregation on city buses. He was charged with representing a person without having been employed to do so. One of five Negro women who signed a petition later said she didn't know what she was signing and was withdrawing from the suit.

Associated Press wirephoto

BOYCOTT LEADER ARRESTED—The Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy, head of Negro negotiating committee, being taken into custody in Montgomery, Ala., yesterday.

Dr. Bunche Praises Bus Boycott at Montgomery

Constitution p. 12
Atlanta, Ga. Mon. 5-28-56

MONTGOMERY, Ala., May 27 (AP)—Montgomery Negroes were praised Sunday for their six-month-old bus boycott against segregation by Dr. Ralph J. Bunche, undersecretary of the United Nations.

Dr. Bunche, 1950 Nobel Peace Prize winner for mediation in Palestine, extended his "most earnest congratulations and well wishes" to boycotting Negroes.

He spoke to about 1,500 persons, including a sprinkling of unsegregated white persons, at Alabama State College, a Negro school here. The speech was presented by the "Ten Times One is Ten Club," a Negro women's social and service club.

LEADERSHIP'

"I applaud the excellence of your leadership" in the boycott, Bunche said. He also praised the "genuineness of your Christianity, the magnificence of your courage, the persistent wisdom of your tactics, and the careful avoidance of animosity."

Most of Montgomery's approximately 50,000 Negroes have been boycotting city buses since Dec. 5, 1955, in protest to city and state segregation ordinances on them. A federal court test of the ordinances is now awaiting decision by a special three-judge panel.

Bunche drew strong applause when he described the boycott as a declaration by Negroes that "you simply have refused to pay a dime to be abused." The Negro speaker added, "if one cannot ride with dignity, why should he ride at all?"

BUNKER HILL

The United Nations official compared the downtown corner on which Negroes congregate for rides in a car pool, being used in place of what he called the "beautiful sight" of empty buses, with Bunker Hill.

Bunche described his topic as "American Democracy in the Peculiar Context of Race Relations."

"No more effective blow to ideologies of all kinds, especially communism, that are antithetical to democracy can be struck than by American democracy working convincingly to show people all over the world that it has application in fact—not merely in theory—to peoples of all colors and creeds," Bunche declared.

"Voluntary segregation is a myth, along with the 'separate but equal' legend," he said.

"TWO FACES"

"Those Negroes who say they prefer segregation are most likely to be frightened or captivated by special interests. Many of them have two faces, two voices, one for the Big House and one for private. Where they have indicated willingness to accept segregation, it was a reflection of the stress under which they lived."

Bunche said "the problem of race relations is national, not confined to the South." He cited housing problems in the North and West.

Heavy applause followed the statement that "Democracy in the North has two faces, but that's better than if it has only one face," in apparent reference to segregation laws in the South.

Order Company To Segregate

Defender p. 1 Sat. 5-19-56
Chicago Ill.

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — (INS) — Montgomery's mayor testified Friday that a breakdown of Alabama's segregation laws would bring "violence and bloodshed," as attorneys moved for dismissal of a case asking an end to segregation in Montgomery buses.

Atty. Gen. John Patterson, acting for the Alabama Public Service commission, and Walter Knabe, on behalf of the city of Montgomery, asked the dismissal, contending the three-judge federal court does not have jurisdiction.

Mayor W. A. Gayle took the stand to declare:

"We'll arrest anyone who breaks the law, regardless of race, color or creed."

WOMEN BRING SUIT

The plaintiffs, four women, claim they were forced to give up seats on the buses to white persons. Two of them said they were arrested for failure to relinquish their seats.

Gayle said that any breakdown of segregation barriers in Montgomery would "lead to violence and bloodshed in this city."

When asked by one of the six attorneys for the plaintiffs how he knew there would be violence, he replied:

"It is my duty to anticipate violence and disorder, and not to wait until it happens."

State and city attorneys, in asking the dismissal, argued that the suit was brought against a city ordinance and not against the statutes of the state of Alabama. They contended the case should be tried in a state court.

BUS LINE REVERSED

The women are asking an end to racial segregation on Montgomery buses. The case is an outgrowth of the six-months-old boycott of the buses marked by violence in its early stages last December.

City attorneys contend that boycott leaders originally asked a different seating arrangement, rather than an end to segregation.

The case was further complicated by an order from the National City Lines, inc., of Chicago, parent company of the bus firm, which ordered an end to segregation on the buses earlier last week.

The state court Thursday ordered the bus company to comply with state segregation laws.

Presiding Judge Richard T. Rives said he did not believe there was any chance for an immediate decision in the case.

He added that the three judges would have to "study and deliberate" on the evidence "because this is an important case."

38b 1956

Fear, The Only Common Bond

Advertiser P. 4-A

The Bus Boycott, Writes A Montgomery White Minister, Has Brought Tensions And Conflict In Which Both Races Are Victims

Montgomery Ala.

Sat. 3-3-56

By The Rev. Thomas R. Thrasher

[The Rev. Mr. Thrasher is rector of the Episcopal Church of the Ascension here in Montgomery. The following is excerpted from an article on the bus boycott which he wrote for The Reporter, a twice-monthly national magazine of politics and opinion, published in New York.—Ed]

AS THE painful weeks have passed, the facts of the [bus boycott] situation have become more rather than less obscure. There is, for example, the recurrent rumor of goon squads operating among the Negroes to force them to obey the boycott. Thus far only one arrest has been made on this count—a Negro youth picked up for preventing a Negro woman from boarding a bus. She testified in court that he was helping her cross the street and the charge was dropped. If there has been widespread intimidation among Negroes, the police have been unable to get evidence of it.

There have been rumors in the Negro community that white employers were going to discharge them on a certain day, and rumors in the white community that all the Negroes were going to quit on a certain day.

Businesses have been damaged severely by rumors circulated among white people that they had contributed to the NAACP or rumors among Negroes that they had contributed to the White Citizens' Council. In a few cases businesses have been caught in a crossfire of rumor. Some say that competitors have been starting these rumors.

If there is anything universal in our community it is fear. The businessman's fear lest his business be destroyed by some false move or baseless rumor. The Negro's fear for his safety and his job. The clergy's fear that their congregations may be divided by the tense feelings generated by our situation. The politician's fear that he may do something disapproved by the majority of of voters. And finally the whole community's fear that we may be torn asunder by a single rash act precipitating interracial violence.

Barrier, Visible And Invisible

TIME after time during these past weeks I have felt as if I were living in a nightmare, one of those where you speak and nobody hears, where you wave your arms and nobody pays any attention. This nightmare extends to the whole community. White and black stand on opposite sides of an invisible line, and there seems no possible way of communicating across the barrier, a barrier which is there and isn't there, which in a sense both of us have made and of which we both are victims. The Negroes are people who have helped us, taught us, nurtured us, made us laugh, made us weep, and have given us depth of understanding. But the patterns of our past communication are breaking, and new patterns are not yet formed. We know them, and yet in our knowing we are aware that we know them not. The nightmare persists even when we hear words and see gestures. They speak. We do not understand.

As I look at this tragic situation involving me and my fellow Southerners of both races, I can only ask God's mercy and pity on us all. No one of us is wise enough to predict what our relationships will be or how they will be worked out. There is only one thing of which I am fully certain. It is that there must be a mutual facing of our common problem. We must get at the facts of our situation and not simply believe any rumor that happens to fit our prejudices. Having gotten the facts, we must then sit down together and negotiate practical solutions.

The South's Plight

THE missing element in in our community's attempts to cope with the situation has been the lack of recognized agencies for interracial communication, cooperation, and understanding. In the past a dreary fate awaited any person or group who made even tentative steps in this direction. One of the encouraging recent developments has been the growth of our Alabama Council on Human Relations, an affiliate of the Southern Regional Council, which provides a meeting point for men and women of good will from both races.

I am not Pollyanna enough to think that the Alabama Council can meet and effectively deal with such crises as the recent ones in our state. We are too few and too weak. However, we are fully convinced that the fundamental method we propose—that white and Negro must sit down together—is the only way to avoid recurring crises of even greater severity. This may sound like a simple point but sometimes in complex situations the simple points are overlooked.

As a Southerner born and bred, I am deeply moved by the plight of all Southerners of both races. All of us know that no easy, pat solutions will solve our problems. Our experience in Montgomery, a city known in the past for its good race relations, shows us that change, any change, will be painful for some of us, and that sudden change may operate in reverse and bring about what is not wanted. The Negro is surely regretful to see his bus boycott contribtue to the growth of the White Citizens Council.

The white Southerner canot be indifferent to the feelings and aspirations of the Negro, for though he is politically impotent here, we are beginning to see that he is exceedingly important humanly and economically to the maintenance of "our social fabric."

Negotiation Is Needed

OUR situation in Montgomery gives strong evidence of the need for patience in negotiation. Sometimes in labor-management disputes the only thing the two groups have in common is a belief that negotiation should continue. We have not even had this much in Montgomery. There is much to be learned of the art of negotiation, but mainly we need a will to find a solution.

The most disturbing factor in the whole situation is the growth of the White Citizens' Council, an organization pledged to nonviolence but dedicated to thwarting the Sureme Court decision on integration. Its main argument seems to be that if vigilance is relaxed in any measure there will be wholesale intermarriage across racial lines. The situation is complex enough without muddying the waters with such arguments as these. The question before us is not intermarriage but simply human rights for a vast section of the human family.

ALABAMA BUS BOYCOTT, MONTGOMERY, ALA.

MONTGOMERY IS STAGE FOR A TENSE DRAMA

Times P. 6-E

Sun. 3-4-56

Negroes Adopt a Policy of Passive Resistance to Segregation

New York, N.Y.

By WAYNE PHILLIPS

Special to The New York Times.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., March 3—For almost three months this city has been gripped by a phenomenon unprecedented in American race relations—a Ghandi-like passive resistance campaign waged by Negroes with religious fervor against the city bus lines.

Perhaps it is fitting that this most dramatic occurrence of the current race struggle—frustrating to the whites, inspiring to the Negroes—should take place in a city that is known as the Cradle of the Confederacy.

Certainly it is striking that the red brick church with small white cupola, presided over by the young Negro minister who is leading the protest, stands at the edge of the state capital mall, almost at the foot of the long marble steps atop which Jefferson Davis took his oath as President of the Confederacy.

Montgomery was a city of only 8,000 persons then, the center of a rich cotton plantation area.

Today the city is still the trading and distribution center of rich agricultural country But now the emphasis has shifted from cotton to the raising of fine beef cattle. Light industry has taken over sections of the city, Maxwell Air Force Base spreads out over former farm land on the city limits, and the population has jumped to 124,750.

Irritating Pattern

Forty per cent, possibly more, of that population is Negro. And among these Negroes one finds a crosspatch pattern of irritants have been at work—irritants that finally reached a fever point early last December.

There was the difficulty, for many of them, of making the transition from a rural to an urban economy. There was the frustration of being confined to the dirty and the low-paid jobs in that economy. There was, for those who could get an education, a closed-door to many fields—there are but two Negro lawyers in the city. And there was the constant goad of social segregation.

All of these worked on different people in different ways and were nothing peculiar to Montgomery. What was peculiar there was the presence in recent years of a handful of very well-educated, intelligent and young Negro leaders uncompromising in their opposition to segregation. The cumulative effect of incidents between the races brought all the other irritants to a head.

The stage had been set, then, for an explosion when on the evening of Dec. 1 a tired, 43-year-old seamstress named Rosa Parks refused a bus driver's order to give up her seat to a white man. Mrs. Parks was arrested, jailed briefly, and released on bond. She is appealing to the State Supreme Court her conviction for violating the state's segregation law.

Boycott Begins

The protest movement against the buses, which began to snowball the day after her arrest, started as a one-day boycott of the buses on Dec. 5, when she appeared in court. It has been extended to the present time and might have happened no matter who Mrs. Parks was.

But it was certainly strengthened by the fact that Mrs. Parks was an intelligent, hard-working woman with a strongly developed conviction that segregation was evil, a leader in her church and one of the leaders in the local chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

The man who came to bail her out that evening was E. D. Nixon, a Pullman car porter she had known for several years and a former state president of the N. A. A. C. P. The lawyer who that night took over her defense was Fred D. Gray.

And by the next evening a meeting of about fifty leaders of the Negro community was held in the church of Martin King Jr., a 27-year-old Baptist minister, to organize a mass protest to be held on Dec. 5, after Mrs. Parks' court appearance.

Those at this first meeting disclaim the bus boycott idea. But from somewhere there appeared the day after they met an unsigned mimeographed manifesto appealing to the Negroes of Montgomery to refrain from riding the buses on Dec. 5, and to attend the mass meeting that night "for further instructions."

The full text of these appeals appeared in the Montgomery newspapers and their substance was broadcast over the Montgomery radio stations. As a result the one-day protest was almost 90 per cent effective.

Meeting Sets Stage

The stage had been fully set. The night of Dec. 5 the mass meeting jubilantly appealed to "all the citizens of Montgomery" to refrain from riding the buses until conditions were created that were satisfactory to "all citizens."

The leaders of the community, many of them Protestant ministers, who had laid the groundwork for the mass meeting contended that the protest against the buses had so snowballed that by that night they had no choice but to take the leadership in the movement, or see it turn toward open race struggle and violence.

The ministers are the natural leaders of the Negro community —for generations it has been the only profession fully open to Negroes. Their leadership had important influences on the development of that movement.

By emphasizing the Christian virtue of "love thine enemy" the boycott was made a mass movement of passive resistance—though it took months for the Ghandi similarity to be recognized. And by preaching the protests in their churches and at mass meetings they gave it the dynamism of a religious crusade—bringing to bear the strongest emotional force in the Negro community.

Bus Firm Hurt

The protest, by denying the bus company about 65 per cent of its income, hurt that company and to some extent the city to which it pays taxes. It did not directly affect most of the white people of Montgomery. But it did—by raising a specter of Negro revolt—irritate them. And the irritation grew with the stubborness of the boycott, and as its objectives grew larger.

At the very beginning the boycott could have been settled by revision of the segregation rules. The Negroes would have agreed to an arrangement whereby Negroes would be seated from the rear forward, whites from the front back, with no one having to give up seats when all were taken.

But a compromise proposal only a hair's breath from that was rejected because the Negroes and city officials could not get together. As a result the city officials washed their hands of any attempt to settle the problem, and the Mayor and city commissioners publicly enrolled in the white citizens councils.

Aimed at Laws

The Negro reaction was the filing of a Federal suit in late January by Mr. Gray and Charles D. Langford, the other Negro attorney in Montgomery, aimed at overthrowing the city and state segregation laws—and a swing of the boycott toward this objective.

The whites retaliated with the indictment of 100 Negroes for conspiracy to conduct an illegal boycott.

The mass arrests attracted the attention and sympathies of a large part of the world. And this, in turn, lent a new impetus to the protest movement, No longer was it fighting for fairer segregation, no longer was it fighting to overthrow segregation, now it was—in the words of Mr. King—"a battle for the oppressed people of the world."

When the bus protest began there were temperate people in Montgomery actively interested in bettering race relations. Some of them were brought together in the Alabama Council on Human Relations, the only interracial group in the state.

The executive secretary of that group was a white Methodist minister, the Rev. Robert Hughes. His assistant was Fred Gray. One of the leaders was the white minister of a Negro Lutheran church—the Rev. Robert S. Graetz.

Shift From Middle

But Mr. Gray, a leader of his people, was gradually carried away from middle ground by the battle, so was Mr. Graetz. He believed in the justice of the Negro cause, and if he was to remain a leader in his own church he had to—and did—support it. The drift away from the middle that they represented, however, meant an immeasurable weakening of the moderates.

The disproportion in their strength is represented by the rally staged in Montgomery by the white citizens councils last month. Ten thousand persons jammed the City Coliseum to hear Senator James O. Eastland of Mississippi deliver a fiery defense of segregation. The next day the Alabama Council on Human Relations held its statewide conference at the Negro Alabama State College in Montgomery. Two hundred persons were present.

City Situation

On the city level in Montgomery there is very little middle ground left. Mr. Hughes and others like him work desperately to retain what there is—but they are impotent now either to organize any mass middle movement, or effectively to sway either side in the controversy.

Their only open path to work toward better relations has been to urge, and to work for, the establishment of biracial commissions such as that proposed by Gov. James E. Folsom to the State Legislature this week.

If those commissions can be set up, if they can find leaders of both communities to take part in them, if they can compromise, and if they can sell the public on compromises, some good might come of them. But those are big ifs.

INFIDELS AND BOYCOTTS

Black Dispatch p. 6

Capitalism and Christianity ranged at their lowest level last week in the United States. In Montgomery, Alabama, Negroes were recognized as criminals because they elected to walk to work rather than submit to humiliation and insult, while in South Carolina, the pastor of the largest Baptist church in the world, and who lives in Dallas, Texas, told a religious audience in John Calhoun's state, that white folk who believe in brotherhood are infidels.

Both arguments are of course based upon materiality. A northern-owned bus company in Montgomery, which follows Dixie patterns of transportation, is said to be losing $3,000 per day because Negroes will not ride under conditions traditionally set up by Alabama statutes, has already lost near $200,000 because of the organized boycott by the blacks, and may have to close shop. Its alternative is not to improve travel conditions for its passengers, but to slam in jail, photograph and fingerprint every dignified and courageous Negro minister in the city, on the charge these ministers are the leaders of an unlawful boycott.

As these white goons of the twentieth century decide to reverse the scriptural admonition, and operate on the assumption that "great riches are rather to be chosen than a good name," it is easy to understand why they have decided to convert men of the cloth into criminals and make these men of God subject to the same brutal, harsh punishment of harlots, dope runners and bootleggers. These Negro leaders are guilty of having forced the wealthy to lose a portion of their loot.

Oklahoma City, Okla.

As to the questionable Christian leader from the Lone Star state, who made the headlines last week because of his bitter opposition to integration and the Supreme Court edict, the Black Dispatch sincerely believes that when the remarks of Rev. W. A. Criswell, pastor of First Baptist church, Dallas, are reduced to their lowest and most understandable denominator, it will be discovered that Rev. Criswell is simply "church hunting," as most pastors frequently do. We have an idea that Brother Criswell is not doing so well with his present pastoral work and is anxious to get relocated in South Carolina. The speech he is reported to have made is of course calculated to give him the choice of pastoral posts in the state where rebels first started to shooting holes in the Stars and Stripes.

Integrationists, as Rev. Criswell avers, may be "dead from the neck up," but before their demise they surely had embraced the theology of the scriptures, "Out of one blood God created all of the nations of the earth," and they probably were students of history, who know that God's philosophy of brotherhood was hoary with age, long before one of the Caesars visited the British Isles twenty-five years following the birth of Christ and found the ancestors of Queen Elizabeth, stunted savages living in caves. Intelligent people accept and surrender to the eternal verities, but it is difficult to convince a savage that he should wear clothes.

Thurs. 3-1-56

If the Baptists of the United States had not met last year in St. Louis and studiously and deliberately decided to join the ranks of integration, and had proceeded to carry their resolve into constructive action, we might think Rev. Criswell represents a large segment of his denomination. In Oklahoma and everywhere we can see with our own eyes that in his present position Rev. Criswell stands almost alone. He is a pygmy standing among giants of wisdom and an understanding culture. Mark our words, all Rev. Criswell is attempting to do is secure another church. He is in bad at home, and like many traditional Southerners, makes the Negro a "whipping boy" whenever he thinks he may improve his condition.

Economic Boycotts in the South

P. 14

Fri. 2-24-56

Herald Tribune

By Henry Lesesne

ATLANTA, Ga.—Some areas of the South that have a large or majority Negro population and which have been engulfed by a brooding tension over the school segregation issue are beginning to learn just how effective a weapon the economic boycott can be—and also that it can be a two-edged sword. This "cold" economic conflict in parts of the South is very real, and it is spreading. New York,

Not only is it causing a rapid deterioration of racial relations in some communities, widening the chasm in the area of interracial communication, deemed essential in any approach to the solution of a complex social problem, but it threatens to get worse before it gets better and conceivably could become national in scope.

The one local symptom of this movement that has attracted most attention, of course, is the current boycott of Montgomery, Ala., city buses by Negroes, which is now more than two months old and has been punctuated with an occasional flare of violence and mass arrests.

Generally or basically, the no-compromise "cold" war is between pro-segregation organizations of whites, notably the Citizens Councils, and the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and its members. These Citizens Councils are purely autonomous and their leadership is usually top-drawer. Some deny using or intending to use economic pressure on the Negro; others have been openly organized for that expressed purpose. Some deny it as an official policy, though concede that members as individuals probably utilize the device.

Anyhow, the pattern of developments has been this: Negroes began signing and presenting petitions in various communities for the immediate desegregation of schools. In some areas—counties in lower South Carolina, notably—certain local and even state officials accused the N. A. A. C. P. of using undue pressures and even deception in obtaining some of the signatures, charges which N. A. A. C. P. officials denied.

At any rate, quite a few signers here and there promptly wanted their names removed, usually claiming they didn't understand what they were signing. Citizens Councils, long active in Mississippi, Alabama and Louisiana—in Mississippi alone they claim a membership of 60,000—began to mushroom in counties of lower South Carolina, for instance, where the Negro population generally exceeds the white.

The city of Orangeburg in South Carolina furnishes an example of the subsequently sharply-drawn economic conflict. N. A. A. C. P. spokesmen charged Citizens Councils members began to apply economic pressures on the Negroes on a widespread basis. Some distributors of well-known products began refusing to make deliveries to certain Negro stores, and the like.

Consequently Negroes, comprising about 50 per cent of the population, began an organized boycott against businesses operated by Citizens Councils members. Mimeographed lists of blacklisted firms or businesses were widely distributed. The boycott, to whatever degree it is effective, has created mounting tension, and in a few instances it has backfired, white citizens rallying to patronize a certain blacklisted establishment.

In a rather spontaneous movement, Negro merchants in Jackson, Tenn., recently began boycotting a soft drink because the local bottler participated in an anti-desegregation legal maneuver. And at some state-level N. A. A. C. P. meetings members are being urged to identify and make a record of products, goods and services which have been refused them.

The situation has many twists. For instance, in Mississippi, where the N. A. A. C. P. has much difficulty finding leaders who are not vulnerable to economic pressure, certain Negro doctors, dentists, and the like have reported banks have suddenly refused them loans. On the other hand, a Negro newspaper in Columbia, S. C., recently listed a prominent white banker as a Citizens Councils member and urged Negroes to withdraw funds from the institution with which he is connected.

There are quite a few communities in the South where the Negro population considerably exceeds the white and where Negroes have relatively good incomes, with the result that their buying power is too much, as merchants know from past experience, to risk a boycott.

Reports out of Washington have been widely published in the South quoting N. A. A. C. P. officials to the effect that negotiations have quietly been under way with some big corporations to take action against Southern employees and franchise holders who apply economic pressures against N. A. A. C. P. members.

The question of civil rights is, of course, raised; but ordinarily the Federal government has no authority to intervene in activities of private citizens, as contrasted with public officials, in relation to civil rights. A good illustration might be that if a Negro should lose his job because of the way he voted, he'd have recourse to the law or the courts; but if he loses his job because of N. A. A. C. P. membership, Federal laws aren't necessarily violated.

Meanwhile, a mass of legislation has been introduced in, or passed by, some of the legislatures in the South this spring, aimed at curbing N. A. A. C. P. activities. Typical attitude of the Citizens Councils or other white pro-segregation groups is this: They aren't against the Southern Negro as such, but contend the N. A. A. C. P. is "duping" him, as the Southern Negro is now getting good schools but won't have them very long if he sticks with the N. A. A. C. P. and insists upon integration.

The no-quarter conflict extends, meanwhile, into spheres other than commercial. A pro-integration speech was credited as the reason for the recent dismissal of Dr. Chester C. Travelstead as dean of education at the University of South Carolina.

At the conference level, many religious denominations in the South have taken action tantamount to accepting racial integration in principle, yet at the grass roots more than one minister has been either shifted to another area or asked to resign because of racial views his congregation considered too liberal.

The crisis deepens in much of the South and, as the Columbia, S. C., "Record" noted recently editorially, "There is not room now for compromise, for working together to find a solution"; yet such may be possible when the tumult and the shouting on both sides die down, even though present indications are that the situation will undoubtedly become worse before it improves.

Protest against indecency, Negro leader declares

News & Courier, Charleston, S. C.

Sun. 3-4-56

DETROIT, March 3—(AP)—One of 90 Negroes under indictment in Montgomery, Ala., for allegedly conspiring to boycott city buses, declared Friday night that "we don't have a boycott, but we are protesting against indecency and mistreatment, and when we go on trial, Montgomery will be on trial, too."

The Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy, a 29-year-old leader in the Montgomery movement to avoid using city buses, told a church audience here that Negroes "are tired of being pushed around" and described the Montgomery movement as a "walk for freedom."

"In this, the 89th day," he said, "they are walking with more determination than on the first day. And they are going to walk until they are treated right."

Montgomery Negroes are demanding that bus seats be available on a first-come, first-served basis. Now a certain number are reserved for whites and a certain number for Negroes.

The Detroit meeting was sponsored by the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People and a collection was taken to aid defense of those indicted in Montgomery.

Idea Could Spread

Herald Tribune

Analysis of Bus Boycott: Negro Pattern for Future?

New York, Thurs. 3-8-56

By Robert S. Bird

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Mar. 7.—A question widely asked in the North and the South is: "Does the Negro passive resistance movement in this city furnish a pattern for similar action in other parts of the South?".

After a close scrutiny of the bus boycott of Montgomery's 50,000 Negroes, it seems to this correspondent that a similar movement could succeed elsewhere in the South, though perhaps not in every type of community.

This thought horrifies the segregationist South. And the Negroes of Montgomery are not, up to now, sending forth any special call to their people elsewhere to follow suit. Yet a study of this highly successful boycott and of its particular environment setting fails to disclose any inherent reason why the non-hating, passive resistance idea could not spread.

It is true that the Negro community is more deeply rooted in this city than in some of the newer more industrialized cities such as Birmingham. It is also true that the city government of Montgomery has, as its members privately acknowledge, made some mistakes in meeting the challenge, mistakes which have helped greatly to strengthen Negro unity.

But since these mistakes have stemmed almost naturally from the extremist segregationists throughout the South, it is reasonable to assume that they might also be made in other places which might have to meet such a Negro protest movement in the future.

Here are the chief elements of this boycott listed more or less in the chronological order of their development:

First, an upwelling of race consciousness which followed the Supreme Court integration decision of May 17, 1954—a date called "black Monday" by all the Southern segregationists.

Second, a group of long-standing grievances which smoldered among the Negroes under the surface of outward racial harmony.

Third, a series of incidents on buses involving the arrest of Negroes for refusing to yield seats to suit the drivers' arbitrary but legal right to change the segregated seating section to accommodate white passengers.

Herald Tribune

Afraid No More

Fourth, an impressive psychological factor which caused the Negroes, once the boycott was "spontaneously" declared, suddenly to lose for the first time their fear of the white community. This happened, almost over night; it still amazes both Negroes and whites. P. 19

Fifth, the fast emergence of outstanding leadership from the Negro ministerial group, which closed ranks immediately.

Sixth, the equally fast unifying of the rank and file of Negroes through their parish churches, and the upsurging of religious fervor to power the sense of righteousness and justness in their cause.

Seventh, the crystallizing of the passive resistance concept and its twin idea of non-violence and of no-hatred of the white community for its traditional segregationist beliefs.

Car Pools Help

Eighth, the organization and successful operation of a substitute voluntary method of providing transportation: largely, the car-pool idea, which is as much a morale builder for the Negroes of Montgomery as the Berlin air lift was for the people of West Berlin.

Ninth, police harassment of the Negroes in the beginning of the boycott and later the indictment of its leaders, including almost the entire ministerial group, who are now honored as virtual martyrs.

Tenth, the bringing together by the Negroes of all the legal issues in a Federal Court suit of broad scope to end segregation on the buses. This is what they feel confident will vindicate them in the end.

Other factors could be listed—the moral support which has come from many parts of the country, the new willingness of the Negroes to sacrifice temporary material gains for greater gains of principle, the proving again of the old adage that nothing succeeds like success, and so on.

But the passive resistance method and its ideology, of non-hatred, as supported by deep religious fervor, seemed to be of main and immediate interest to the country at large. This correspondent has examined these power-propelling ideas at length.

It is possible to dismiss at the outset that these were brought into the movement by "outside agitators" as charged by the white side. It is true that certain outsiders appear to be lurking about the fringes of the movement and would like to get a hand in it. But all the evidence indicates that this protest is indigenous to Montgomery and that outsiders are not being welcomed into its strategic councils except for openly proffered legal help of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Role of Leader

The passive resistance and non-hatred concepts come from the ministers themselves, especially from the fertile brain of the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King.

Dr. King is the learned but boyish-looking Negro Baptist minister who is asknowledged by the whole Negro community, including his fellow ministers, as the No. 1 boycott leader.

A third-generation Baptist minister, born and brought up in Atlanta, educated in an Atlanta Negro college and at Grozer Theological Seminary in Chester, Pa., and Boston University, where he earned his degree of Doctor of Philosophy, he came to this city fresh from Boston two years ago to begin his first pastorate among the Negroes.

At his modest frame bungalow home in the Negro section of Montgomery, where a dynamite bomb was exploded one night earlier in the boycott, he discussed with this correspondent the passtive resistance and non-hatred idea.

"What we are preaching" he said, "is best described by the Greek word, 'agapa.' The Greeks made distinctions between several kinds of love. For example, there is the kind of love described by the word 'eros,' a romantic type of love, such as a fellow would have for his girl friend. Then there is the kind of love designated by the word 'philia,' a kind of friendship. And there is 'agapa.' That's the highest type of love; not sentimental but meaning understanding, good will, a redemptive sort of love. That is what we are trying to get our people to feel.

"I don't know that they fully understand it yet, but they are making progress. This kind of love doesn't imply a sitting down at the dinner table together, but it does carry a feeling of compassion for the other person in his own weaknesses.

"Even though the white man may hate me and subject me to his system of second-chlass citizenship, I recognize that he, too, is a victim of his system. While I will fight to get out from under his subjugation, I will also try to understand him and I will not try to defeat him.

"Since the white man will not come to realization of his own integrity without understanding, to defeat him in his hatred only makes matters worse.

Can't Afford to Hate

"The fight here is between light and darkness. The job of us leaders is to make that clear to our people. We Negroes can't afford to hate the white man because if we won in the spirit a residue of hatred would remain between us. That is why we constantly preach against hatred.

As an outside observer, it appears to this reporter that Dr. King and his fellow preachers have bot the general idea across to their people, though in a less philosophical version. Resentment against their second-class status, though deep-rooted in most other Negroes, is not a thing they take pleasure in indulging. Their enormously expressive hymn singing traditionally has stressed the idea of love and the comfort it brings, and this passive resistance preaching of love-opposed-to-hatred follows this well grooved channel in the boycott rallies.

Dr. King is a superb speaker, polished but down to earth and able to weave Biblical texts, spiritual message and homey folk story all together with reverence and with an immediacy of effect visible in even the simplest members of his congregations.

Negroes Say 'No' to City's Compromise On Bus Boycott

State Press P. 1
Little Rock, Ark.
Fri. 2-24-56

A vote of 3,998 to 2 was the Negroes' answer to the city of Montgomery, when it offered a compromise plan to end the bus boycott that has been successfully executed by Negro leaders in that Alabama city. The Negroes rejected the city's plan in face of a possible indictment that is being studied under an old Alabama law by a grand jury, it is reported. Fri. 2-24-56

The compromise was drawn up under existing laws to continue segregation by allotting the last 10 seats of the bus to Negroes and the first 10 seats of the bus to whites to be filled first. Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy, chairman of the negotiating committee stated that they wanted no part of the compromise, which was evidenced by the vote.

115 Indicted in Bus Boycott

Following the Negroes' rejection of the city's proposal to end the 12-week old boycott of the city buses, the grand jury indicted 115 Tuesday, under an old Alabama law.

The jury's report said that boycotting was a violation of Alabama law which prohibits boycotting without a just cause or legal excuse.

Montgomery Boycott Has Business "In A Mess"

State Press P. 1
Little Rock, Ark.
Fri. 2-24-56

MONTGOMERY, Ala.—(CNS)—The still-going-on boycott of the city's bueses by Negroes has business of all kinds in a dither. Shops that are near the bus stops report "almost no business" since the boycott began.

But the city's businesses aren't the only ones to suffer. It seems that shows scheduled to enter the city are trying to get out of the dates. For Montgomery is a "dead" town in many respects.

The touring "Holiday on Ice" is trying hard to be released of its engagement March 20 - 24th. It plays at the Coliseum which is on the outskirts of town and thus is very dependent on all kinds of transportation for a success. Usually its Montgomery stand is very prosperous, yet if it has to go thru its date now, it doesn't expect much of a crowd at all in the tension-ridden city. The ice show isn't suffering. All theaters are at a stand still in the Alabama city.

Shame Falls on Alabama as the World Watches

Inquirer P. 12
Mars. 2-25-56

Last December 5 a seamstress in Montgomery, Alabama, was fined $14 for refusing to move to the back of a "segregated" bus when ordered to by the driver.

Since then, the majority of Negroes in Montgomery have refused to ride the buses of that city. They organized car pools. Many walked. But they refused to ride. And the boycott has hurt. Philadelphia, Pa.

On Washington's Birthday arrests began on a Montgomery grand jury indictment of 115 Negroes of that city for participating in the boycott in violation of a 1921 statute, originally enacted to fight labor unions. Among the 115 indicted were nine clergymen.

Coming on the heels of the rioting which was used as an excuse for barring a Negro student from the University of Alabama, this shameful spectacle cannot be ignored by the rest of the Nation. It comes at a time when the United States is seeking to win confidence and respect from the uncommitted countries of the world in our fight against Communism. Most of those countries have colored populations. And when they look at Alabama—the rest of us are hard put to explain.

They ask us this simple question: Does not the U. S. Constitution hold in Alabama?

And what is the answer?

The grand jury which has indicted 115 Negroes for refusing to ride on segregated buses makes no bones about its defiance, or its motives. That grand jury report reads:

"In this State we are committed to segregation by custom and by law; we intend to maintain it."

It is one thing to indict these people; it will be something else to convict them; and something very different to make any such conviction stick in the higher courts.

The Supreme Court, with most of us, had hoped to make gradual but effective progress toward desegregation in the South. In some States a measure of progress has been made. In others, notably Alabama, there is simply mass contempt for the Supreme Court and mass defiance of the Constitution.

It would be bad enough if this were only a local matter; if the issue were confined to one State. It is not. It is more, even, than a national issue. It is an international issue. And as shame falls on Alabama, the Kremlin is the only beneficiary.

The wide world is watching. If Americans are sickened, what must the feeling of others be?

38b 1956

Case Goes to High Court

Herald P. 9-a

Alabama Appeals Bus Integration

Fri. 8-24-56

Miami Fla.

WASHINGTON — (AP) — The Supreme Court was asked Thursday in two appeals to overturn a decision holding unconstitutional Alabama and Montgomery, Ala., laws requiring racial segregation of passengers on buses.

The appeals were filed by the Montgomery Board of Commissioners and by Alabama's Atty. Gen. John Patterson on behalf of the state Public Service Commission.

They asked the high court to reverse a decision by a special three judge U.S. District Court June 5 which declared enforced segregation of Negroes and white bus passengers in Montgomery violated the federal Constitution's guarantees of due process and equal protection of law.

The board of commissioners questioned the authority of the special court to act in the case.

"The judgment of the special court," the appeal said, "departs from principles of federal court procedure long considered essential to a proper accommodation of state and federal courts."

The commissioners said the special court should have dismissed the complaint filed by Negro attorneys on behalf of Negro bus riders, "or, at least, stayed it" pending action in a similar suit filed by Negroes in Alabama state courts.

1,000 hear heroine of Alabama

Afro American P. 8

Sat. 10-6-56

BALTIMORE

"The only answer I have is this: As far back as I can remember I knew there was something wrong with our way of life when people could be mistreated because of the color of their skin."

Standing before over 1,000 persons on Sunday, Mrs. Rosa Parks, an admitted humble woman, explained why she had decided not to give up her seat on a Montgomery, Ala., bus to a group of white men.

It was this spark of resistance that ignited the now famous bus boycott in the southern city, and catapulted Mrs. Parks into prominence as the woman responsible for the surge of passive resistance movements that have struck the South.

Mrs. Parks' purpose in being in Baltimore on Sunday was to address the kick-off mass meeting of the annual membership of the NAACP at the Sharp St. Memorial Methodist Church, Dolphin and Etting Sts.

When she rose from her seat on the platform to deliver her short address, the Montgomery matron was greeted with a standing ovation and, smiling modestly, she quickly informed the audience that she was a "modest person" and one not well accustomed to addressing groups.

However, before she had finished, her soft voice and the touch of the south in her speech, and her unashamed modesty, had made her the hit of the program.

DESCRIBING that day on which she refused to move, Mrs. Parks said:

"On Dec. 1, 1955, I had worked all day on the job and my only thought was to get home and rest. It just happaned that the driver (on the bus) didn't want to see some of his white passengers stand. I was seated with three ladies and when the driver told them to move they moved.

"He spoke to me in a threatening manner and I refused to move and he called the officer and I was arrested."

"It was as simple as that," said Mrs. Parks, but the results were more than anyone had anticipated.

"On, Dec. 2, 3, and 4, word was getting around that we were going to have a mass meeting. The (Montgomery) paper came out on Sunday with this big story about how the colored people were going to stay off the buses.

"We didn't tell the paper but a woman who worked as a maid told her boss and the news got to them.

"That Monday," said Mrs. Parks, "thanks to the publicity, in the paper, over 4,000 people showed up at the mass meeting, and with the day's successful boycott, the Montgomery resistance movement was on in full swing.

Argue Ala. JC case in high court

Afro-American

Baltimore, Md.

Sat. 10-27-56

WASHINGTON (NNPA)—The NAACP has asked the Supreme Court to affirm the judgment of the Federal District Court at Montgomery, Ala., holding invalid state laws and city ordinances requiring racial segregation of passengers on Montgomery buses.

The Alabama Public Service Commission, the Montgomery Board of Commissioners and Montgomery Police Chief Goodwyn J. Rupperthal had asked the Supreme Court to reverse the District Court.

The City of Montgomery, Montgomery City Lines, Inc., and its drivers were enjoined from enforcing the bus segregation law and ordinances, but the injunction was suspended pending the appeal to the Supreme Court.

* * *

IN ITS motion to affirm, the NAACP contends that the judgment and decree are in line with Supreme Court decisions and that the questions raised in the appeal are without substance.

The suit was instituted in the District Court by Misses Aurelia S. Browder, Susie McDonald, Claudette Colvin and Mary L. Smith to enjoin the enforcement of the jim crow laws.

The NAACP told the Supreme Court that these persons have been embarrassed and humiliated and some have been convicted and jailed for violating the Alabama jim crow bus law.

The Montgomery City Lines last April 23 interpreted the action of the Supreme Court in refusing to review the decision of lower Federal courts in a Columbia, S.C., bus case as barring the segregation of passengers in intrastate travel and announced it would no longer enforce segregation on its lines.

* * *

C. C. (Jack) OWEN, president of the Alabama Public Service Commission, the next day sent telegrams to the National City Lines of Chicago, of which the Montgomery City Lines, Inc., is a subsidiary, and to other bus companies in Alabama directing them "to strictly adhere to all present existing segregation laws in our state or suffer the consequences."

The Alabama Public Service Commission is claming in its appeal that it has no authority to enforce the state jim crow law within city limits and that the motor carriers act specifically does not apply to buses operating within the limits of a city or incorporated town.

The NAACP tells the Supreme Court that the District Court answered that argument by saying that the Alabama Public Service Commission has the duty of enforcing racial segregation.

It adds that since its president acted so positively and affirmatively to that end by sending a telegram to the National City Lines, the action against the commission should not be dismissed.

* * *

WHILE THE Supreme Curt dismissed the appeal in the Columbia bus case, the NAACP asserts, the import of that ruling is somewhat in doubt.

But the high court in other decisions has overruled the "separate but equal" doctrine, the NAACP said, and there now remains no legal principle upon which a state policy of racial segregation in public transportation can be sustained

Attorneys for the NAACP are Robert L. Carter, Thurgood Marshall, Fred D. Gray and Charles D. Langford.

Montgomery car pool is now operating again

News Birm. Ala. P. 1

Mon. 10-29-56

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Oct. 29 —(AP)—A car pool which has provided transportation for bus-boycotting Montgomery Negroes for 11 months was still operating today despite a threat of legal action by the city.

Church-operated station wagons were back in service along with privately owned automobiles.

The station wagons were kept out of the pool last Saturday and only private cars used to take Negroes to and from work.

THAT WAS the day after leaders of an independent, pro-segregation labor group told Montgomery's City Commission that the car pool should be stopped. Editor Jack D. Brock of The Alabama Labor News said men stood ready to swear out citizens' warrants against car pool operators if necessary.

The commission responded that it was studying the car pool and had "plans of bringing action for an injunction to stop all activities which the city considers illegal at this time."

Top officers of the Montgomery Improvement Assn., the group that coordinates the boycott, were not available yesterday. Rufus Lewis, identified last Spring as chairman of the MIA's transportation committee, refused to make any comment on the situation.

MINISTERS INTERVIEWED yesterday said they had no knowledge of a rumored plan for all Negroes to walk to work today. Such a mass demonstration was conducted last Winter when the boycott was first reaching national prominence.

No plans for a walking demonstration were announced to congregations, the way MIA information has been disseminated in the past, the ministers reported. Rev. Harold A. L. Clement and Rev. H. H. Hubbard both said their station wagons would run, but others were uncertain of it.

Neither the car pool or the city bus system operate on Sunday and yesterday no signs of activity indicated what might happen if steps were taken to halt car pool transportation. Before last Dec. 5 when the protest began, between 30,000 and 40,000 Negro customers used city buses every day.

Since then Negroes have been seen on buses only infrequently.

MRS. ROSA PARKS — MRS. LILLIE M. JACKSON

Walk together' in Baltimore

CHURCH 'WAGONS' OPERATE

Advertiser 1-7
Montgomery, Ala.
Dec 10-30-56

Legal Crackdown Under Way As Negroes Resume Car Pool

City officials continued their preparation for a legal crackdown yesterday as the Negro bus boycott car pool resumed operation as usual.

Church-operated station wagons again joined privately owned automobiles providing jitney service for Negroes engaged in the 10-month-old protest of city bus segregation. The wagons had halted activity Saturday.

Although police said the station wagons were not operating yesterday morning and only some of the vehicles participated in the afternoon, Negro ministers said the station wagons had been active all day.

Mayor W. A. Gayle said the city was still preparing an injunction to be filed in Circuit Court which will enjoin "activities" the Commission considers "illegal at this time." The mayor predicted the action will be taken within the next three days.

Other prominent city officials indicated such action would come today or tomorrow.

The proposed injunction is expected to be based on a state code which demands that all "associations" using city streets must have the permission of the city commission.

Station wagons did not participate in the car pool Saturday after an announcement by city officials and representatives of a state trade union publication that legal action was being readied to halt car pool activities.

On Friday officials of the Alabama Labor News asked the city commission for immediate action to stop station wagon operations. At that time they declared they were willing to swear out warrants for citizens' arrests if needed to halt the jitney service.

That afternoon the commission replied with a statement saying it was preparing legal action against the car pool and that police had been gathering appropriate evidence for 10 weeks.

★ Tell It To Old Grandma ★

Advertiser
Wed. 2-22-56

Your name and address must be given on letter ★ But upon request, name will often be withheld at the Editor's discretion ★ We reserve the right to shorten letters ★ No poetry, please ★ Repeat: No letter will be printed unless Editor knows who wrote it.

Montgomery, Ala.

Adlai On The Race Issue

EDITOR, THE ADVERTISER—I read in this morning's paper that George Meany, AFL-CIO president, completely opposes our President's and Adlai Stevenson's views on gradual integration and the issuing of federal educational funds without the integration stipulation.

P. 4-A

Well, I tell him here and now they speak with the greatest truth. I applaud them! Yes, integration will come but it must come gradually or this danger of civil war that they speak of will indeed become a horrible reality. The Southern people are not going to have integration rammed down their throats. If our uninformed Yankee countrymen will listen to their informed leaders who speak with the true consideration of all the American people at heart, and only then, will our country be truly united.

I urge all our Alabama friends to rally to the support of a man who is not afraid to state his honest beliefs—Adlai Stevenson. If a man is honest in his campaigning, there's a much better chance of his living up to his beliefs in office. Then when he is elected, let's make sure we have senators and representatives up there in Washington who will actively back him up and make sure he is kept fully aware of all our problems. Here, I think, is a man who will be genuinely concerned.

MRS. FRED B. PERRY JR.
Auburn, Ala.

Meany And The South

A editorial
The Dallas Morning News

GEORGE MEANY, the boss of organized labor's millions, deplores groups in the South who have organized to keep segregation.

Montgomery, Ala.

"Economic boycott and intimidation of Negroes are chosen instruments of the White Citizens' Councils' hate-mongering campaign," says an AFL-CIO executive council statement, adding: "Many acts of violence have come in the wake of this campaign."

Both hotheads and decent, sensible people are in the Citizens Councils—just as hotheads and the sensible are in labor's millions.

2-17-56

The "hate-mongering campaign" and "acts of violence" in the South are infinitesimal compared to the violence against body and property in the many strikes by labor to achieve its aims.

Meany says Southern groups are challenging the Supreme Court's segregation decision—in effect, challenging the law. But on the same day he erupted, 47 strikers were convicted of contempt of court in Columbus, Ohio, in connection with the Westinghouse strike. They had violated a court order limiting picketing.

P. 4-A

The News does not condone lawlessness in any form. But in these days of sectional emotionalism, it would remind that many of those condemning the South in its trying period themselves have much to explain.

Montgomery Church Packed at Negro Rally

Evening Star
Washington, D. C.
Fri. 3-9-56

People Protesting Transit Segregation Begin Gathering at Noon for Night Meeting

By JAMES Y. NEWTON
Star Staff Correspondent

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Mar. 9.—Last night a goodly portion of Montgomery's (capital of the Confederacy and of Alabama) Negro population was packed in the Mount Zion Methodist Episcopal Church.

"O Lord let us be free," intoned a gray-haired colored man in the audience.

"Yeah man," responded voices around him.

"O God, don't leave us," the elderly man continued, amid encouragement from those about him.

"O God, let them treat us as humans . . ." and on and on he went with the expressed approval of the gathering.

This was not billed as a religious ceremony but was one of the bi-weekly mass meetings of Negroes "protesting" segregation on the city's transit system, Montgomery City Lines, Inc., an affiliate of National City Lines, Chicago.

South Carolina Legislature Acts Against NAACP. Page A-8

Boycott Effective

Since December 5 (a memorable date in the organized Negro fight against segregation in the deep South) a large percentage of the colored population have boycotted the city transit system. Now it is almost totally effective—the whites said no more than 10 per cent of the Negroes ride the buses—the colored leaders say it is less than 1 per cent. I watched buses load for a long time in downtown Montgomery and I didn't see a single Negro get aboard one.

Bellhops and waiters in the hotel where I stayed told me they walked to work—sometimes as much as 3 miles. One hotel employe admitted he was neither in sympathy with nor opposed to the bus boycott, he said he just didn't like to board one when he saw no other Negroes on it. He had become accustomed to walking home and he liked it.

Although the formal mass meeting at Mount Zion African Methodist Church was not scheduled to begin until after 7 p.m., I was told people began gathering at noon and that by 4:30 p.m. all the seats were filled. In any event, I know that by 6:45 there was not only a crowd packed in the church proper, but the balcony was full and there were others listening by loud-speaker in basement rooms of the church. The "press," however, was quickly steered to a seat by the church organ.

Before the formal part of the proceeding started at about 7:15, the program at least seemed to be spontaneous, a mixed program of individual exhortation and hymn-singing. This was not only audience participation, the audience ran the meeting.

There was great applause as the Rev. Martin Luther King entered the church. He is president of the Montgomery Improvement Association, leader of the bus "protest" movement and pastor of the Dexter Avenue Baptist Church, located a mashie shot from Alabama's splendid Capitol Building.

Mr. King is a smallish young man, 27, attired nattily in a gray suit. He told me he was born in Atlanta, Ga., was graduated from Moorhouse College there and the Crozer Theological Seminary, Chester, Pa., and obtained a Ph.D. from Boston University only last June.

He is an active member of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and among 99 Negroes, including 26 ministers, who have been indicted as a result of the bus boycott. Their trials will start the week of March 19.

The church organist broke off and the hymn-singing was abruptly halted by the raised hand of J. W. Hayes, presiding elder of the A. M. E. Zion Church. He intoned a prayer:

"We come tonight," started Mr. Hayes, as the audience cried "Yes, yes." "Asking you to search these our hearts," he continued amid approving remarks from the gathering. "If you find anything that is contrary to Thy will we ask You to speak now. We realize that Thou hast brought us to the kingdom for such an hour as this. Not only in our fair city of Montgomery, but all over the world idealogies are crashing, constitutions are falling down and traditions are being uprooted. Gracious God ('Yeah,' from the audience), in the midst of it all help us be sane. Help us to be calm ('Yes, Lord'), help us to be forthright and help us to maintain our integrity."

By this time, the crescendo of the audience had risen to "Yes Lord, yes Jesus."

"We realize that the thousands who heard our fathers' prayers 90 years ago," Mr. Hayes continued, "also heard our groans on the cotton fields of Alabama and Mississippi. We pray now that you hear us in Montgomery."

At this point, the Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy, pastor of the First Baptist Church (colored) and (also among those indicted) entered and there was more applause. There followed a hymn beginning "On Christ, the Solid Rock."

Out to Defeat Injustice

Mr. King, the first speaker, said "we are not out to defeat the white man. We are out to defeat injustice. As I look at the face of a white man I can't hate him because there is something that says deep down in me that he is my brother. He is my brother even if he kicks me around and treats me unkindly, he is my brother and I am responsible for him."

Mr. King went on to say, amid cheers, that the struggle here was larger than Montgomery, larger than Alabama . . . "the eyes of the world are upon us. We can't let the people of the world down."

"Yes' sir, you are right," chanted the audience.

Mr. Abernathy took up the speech making at this point.

"Fellow walkers," he started, amid applause and laughter. "We are determined to walk until justice prevails. We walk but we are convinced we walk not alone. We have the support of our friends and of people who don't even know us in this country and all over the world."

Mr. Abernathy, who just returned from a speaking tour of the north, including Washington, said "we are walking with God."

$8,300 Fund Raised

On a practical note, he said $8,300 had been collected for the Montgomery cause in the last few days.

"We are going to live with God where there won't be any segregation. But until we get to the other side we are going to enjoy freedom or die fighting right here," he concluded.

The Montgomery Transit Co. lost large chunks of money immediately following the incident last December which started the Negro boycott . . . the arrest of a Negro woman for refusing to obey a driver's order to sit in the rear of a bus.

In the beginning, the Negroes demanded (1) more courteous treatment by the bus drivers, (2) a flexible seating arrangement on the buses in place of the "colored to the back, whites to the front" arrangement and (3) colored drivers in preponderantly colored areas. Now the demand on the heels of a Federal court suit, is for an end of segregation in transportation.

No Talks in Progress

A group of white businessmen offered them substantially the original demands recently and were turned down. At the present there are no negotiations looking toward a settlement. There is no communication between the disputants.

The transit company has raised fares from 10 to 15 cents and has reduced service accordingly. Neither the boycotters nor the white population at the moment seem to be disturbed.

Negroes walk to work or take part in car pools. They claim they are getting along all right and so do the white people. When and where it will end nobody on either side will hazard a guess.

Both sides predict the 99 Negroes will be convicted under the Alabama boycott law enacted in 1922 against strikes and labor boycotts. But both sides freely predict when the case reaches the Federal courts—the United States Supreme Court, some years hence, the conviction will be reversed.

Whites Help Make Boycott A Success

Sat. 3-17-56

Houston Tex.

MONTGOMERY, — Ala — Over the weekend the city commission granted the bus company's request to close down Sunday service on 12 of the 14 routes still operating. The southern whites, who "know the Negro," have done more by their dumbness to make the boycott successful than the Negroes have themselves.

The bus fight began when Mrs. Rosa Parker was arrested with her child because she refused to move to a segregated seat on the bus.

Ed Nixon struck off 50,000 sheets asking Negroes to boycott the buses for one day in protest.

Admittedly, this would not have affected a great number of Negroes. But the Montgomery Advertiser (a daily paper) put the story on the front page. The police commissioner went on the air, promising to protect any Negro who would ignore the call for boycott and ride the buses.

These dumb movements of the whites gave the boycott publicity, and also aroused and challenged the Negro. These movements were made by the whites, who always boast "we know our southern Negro." Negroes could not have bought the publicity that was given to them free

Not satisfied with that free publicity, the police commissioner put a motorcycle cop behind every bus. Negroes, who under the guise of being neutral, might have ridden the buses, now assumed that there was trouble in the wind and stayed off the buses. The white men kept blundering and making movement that accomplished just the opposite of what he wanted.

Then to make the cycle complete the bus company took its buses off Negro routes, after about four days of the boycott. Stupidly, they kept them off long enough for Negroes to get into the habit of scuffling to work without buses.

By the time they had restored the buses, Negroes had broken the habit of riding the buses. So the boycott was about 90 per cent effective.

But the white people, who "know the Negro", were not satisfied with 90 per cent. So they hit upon the scheme of arresting Negroes, and included about 25 or 30 Negro preachers. That made the boycott unanimous. So the bus company came into the city commission last week and asked that it be permitted to close down practically all bus service for Sunday, closing out 12 of the 14 remaining buses that were operating on Sundays. That leaves just two operating.

The mayor, in making the announcement that the 12 out of 14 buses would be permitted to close on Sundays, said the revenue from these 12 routes "had not been enough to warrant continued operation."

The Negro leaders of the boycott know how much they have been assisted by the dumbness of the whites in Montgomery. They say frankly they don't claim that boycotts would succeed as effectively everywhere, because they don't believe that they would get this much help from whites.

THE SOUTH

City on Trial

Time P. 21

Caucasian officialdom in Montgomery, Ala. (pop. 120,000) moved drastically last week to break the twelve-week-old Negro boycott of the Jim Crow city buses (TIME, Jan. 16 et seq.). Hastily dusting off an old (1921) antilabor state law forbidding restraint of trade, a grand jury voted indictment of 115 of the city's Negro leaders—including a score of Negro ministers. "In this state," the indictment read, "we are committed to segregation by custom and by law; we intend to maintain it." Arrested on George Washington's birthday, one of the Negro ministers responded: "The Negroes are not on trial here, but Montgomery is on trial. The eyes of the world are focused here."

In keeping with the passive tone of their whole rebellion, the Negro defendants—each freed on $300 bond after fingerprinting—proceeded from the jailhouse to church for the next move. About 3,000 Negroes gathered in Montgomery's red brick First Baptist (Negro) Church to protest the arrests, to kneel beneath stained glass windows and peeling yellow walls and sing "Hallelujah." Said the Rev. Martin Luther King, 27: "This is not a tension between the Negro and whites. This is only a conflict between justice and injustice. We are not just trying to improve Negro Montgomery. We are trying to improve the whole of Montgomery . . . If we are arrested every day; if we are exploited every day; if we are triumphed over every day; let nobody pull you so low as to hate them."

As dawn broke over Montgomery next day, tension lay thickly beneath an apparent calm. Thousands of Negroes walked to work through the rain in a nonviolent demonstration. Then, at week's end, Alabama's Governor James Folsom called for a Bi-Racial Commission to try to work out some new ways of putting the pieces back together in a city that would somehow never be the same again.

Rev. King Says Protest Not Halted

World

Birm. Ala.

Fri. 6-8-56

MONTGOMERY, Ala. - (INS) - The leader of Montgomery's boycott of the city's transit system said recently the protest will continue until legal technicalities involved in the dispute over segregation are cleared up.

The Rev. M. L. King, himself jailed and fined in state court for his part in the six month-old boycott, said he was elated over the decision. He said:

"It is a decision that will be welcomed by all persons of good will, both North and South. It represents a victory not merely for the 50,000 Negroes of Montgomery, but a victory for Democracy and justice."

The Rev. King emphasied that the decision of the three judge federal court--which held bus segregation illegal--"does not immediately affect the protest." He pointed out the court has not written a final judgment or decided whether to make its ruling effective while the decision is appealed.

"So," the Rev. King said, "the protest will continue until this is cleared up."

"It is certainly our hope,' he said, "that the court will not suspend its decree pending an appeal.

"When the matter is finally cleared up it is my greatest hope that both races will evince wise restraints, calm reasonableness without sacrificing basic principles, and recognize the difficulties of adjustment."

Bus Boycotters Hit on Fund Use

Star P. 2-A

Tues. 6-12-56

MONTGOMERY, Ala., June 12 (AP).—A Baptist preacher said last night that leaders of the Negro protest against bus segregation here have been playing fast and loose with boycott funds.

Washington D.C.

The Rev. U. J. Fields did not specify any individual members of the Montgomery Improvement Association, set up to coordinate the boycott for the city's 50,000 Negroes, but declared in resigning his post as recording secretary:

"All the money coming in here for transportation is not being used for that." He did not elaborate.

Officials of the association quickly denied any financial misconduct.

"No money received by this association has been misappropriated," said Dr. Moses W. Jones, second vice president.

Officials Deny Charge

"Definitely false," said the Rev. R. J. Glasco, in referring to the Rev. Mr. Fields' accusations. The Rev. Mr. Glasco is chairman of the finance committee. His comment was echoed by C. W. Lee, the association's assistant treasurer, and by Mrs. Erna Dungee, the financial secretary.

The Rev. Mr. Fields, one of the association's founders, also said, "I no longer can identify myself with a movement in which the few are exploiting the many."

The 25-year-old Negro minister said boycott leaders "have become egotistical and interested in perpetuating themselves."

"Individuals who are handling" money contributed throughout the Nation to support the boycott "are using it for selfish purposes," he said.

Critic Was Officer

The Rev. Mr. Fields said his position as recording secretary had given him knowledge of funds contributed to support the boycott. He estimated that an amount "up in the thousands of dollars" had been diverted from the announced purpose of providing private transportation for boycotting Negroes.

The association has been paying about $3,000 a week to provide car pool transportation for the boycotters.

Boycott Driver Fined in Accident With Policemen

Call P. 18

Fri. 6-8-56

Kansas City Mo.

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — (ANP) — The driver of a station wagon used to transport Negro bus boycotters was fined $5 and costs in city court last week for a collision in which two Montgomery boycott probers were slightly injured.

Mrs. Alberta Judkins James, 44, driver of a station wagon owned by Hutchinson Street Baptist church, by cutting in front of another car, was charged with causing a wreck

Detectives Jack O. Shows, 29, driver of the police car involved in the collison, said Mrs James cut in front of him while both were traveling east on a downtown street.

On cross examination by Negro defense attorney Fred D. Gray, the officer denied that he and his partner, Detective K. W. Jones, has been trailing the station wagon.

Advertiser Tues. 2-21- P. 1 Montgo

BOYCOTT INVESTIGATORS

City Detectives K. W. Jones, left, and Jack D. Shows talked outside the courthouse yesterday while the grand jury investigated the Negro bus boycott. Jones and Shows have been assigned for the past several weeks to the circuit solicitor's office to investigate the boycott. Some participants in the boycott may be indicted by the grand jury.—Photo by AP

BREAK RUMORS PERSIST

Advertiser P. 1

Jury's Report Awaited On City's Bus Boycott

Tues. 2-21-56

Montgomery, Ala.

Reports of a break in the 11-week-old Negro bus boycott persisted yesterday as a grand jury neared completion of its investigation of the mass protest against segregation.

The grand jury is expected to make a final report today and may indict some of the Negroes who have participated in wholesale refusal to ride Montgomery City Lines buses.

Several men who have been prominently identified with efforts to settle the boycott conferred in the office of Mayor W. A. Gayle yesterday morning, but declined to comment afterward.

They included all three members of the City Commission, representatives of the bus company and spokesmen for the Men of Montgomery, a civic organization which has volunteered to act as mediator in the lengthening dispute.

A mass meeting of Negroes was scheduled last night at a Negro church.

Two city detectives disclosed meanwhile that they have been assigned to the circuit solicitor's office for several weeks' investigating the boycott. Detectives K. W. Jones and Jack D. Shows were among the scores of witnesses interviewed by the grand jury in the past week.

But they were prohibited by law from disclosing their testimony.

The grand jury which has already indicted one boycott spokesman, Negro Atty. Fred D. Gray, may return other true bills charging violation of Alabama's rarely used anti-boycott law.

Gray was charged with unlawful practice because of a suit he filed in U.S. District Court seeking to throw out city and state laws requiring racial segregation in all public transportation. The suit was an outgrowth of the boycott.

Advertiser

The attorney's indictment was based on the statement of Mrs. Jeanetta Reese, one of the five Negro women whose names were signed to the court petition. Mrs. Reese told Mayor Gayle in the presence of two newspaper reporters that she didn't know what she was signing. P. 2-A

Gray was charged with filing the suit in Mrs. Reese's name without her consent, an offense punishable in Alabama by a $500 fine and suspension from practice.

The boycott began Dec. 5, after a Negro woman, Mrs. Rosa Parks, was arrested and fined $14 for refusing to move to the colored section of a bus.

Since then, an estimated 75 per cent of the Neroes who normally used the buses for transportation have refused to ride them. Some have used taxicabs to get to and from work; others have depended on a highly organized car pool operating with military precision.

HINT OF BOYCOTT BREAK PERSISTS

Times Picayune New Orleans, La.

Negro Bus Protest Probe Ending in Montgomery

Tues. 2-21-56

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Feb. 20 (AP)—Reports of a break in the 11-week-old Negro bus boycott persisted Monday as a grand jury neared completion of its investigation of the mass protest against segregation. P. 12

The grand jury is expected to make a final report late Monday or Tuesday, and may indict some of the Negroes who have participated in wholesale refusal to ride Montgomery city lines buses.

Several men who have been prominently identified with efforts to settle the boycott conferred in the office of Mayor W. A. Gayle Monday morning, but declined to comment afterward.

They included all three members of the city commission, representatives of the bus company and spokesmen for the Men of Montgomery, a civic organization which has volunteered to act as mediator in the lengthening dispute.

Detectives Testify

A mass meeting of Negroes was scheduled Monday night at a Negro church.

Two city detectives disclosed meanwhile that they have been assigned to the circuit solicitor's office for several weeks investigating the boycott. Detectives K. W. Jones and Jack D. Shows were among the scores of witnesses interviewed by the grand jury in the past week.

But they were prohibited by law from disclosing their testimony.

The grand jury which has already indicted one boycott spokesman, Negro attorney Fred D. Gray, may return other true bills charging violation of Alabama's rarely used antiboycott law.

Gray was charged with unlawful practice because of a suit he filed in US district court seeking to throw out city and state laws requiring racial segregation in all public transportation. The suit was an outgrowth of the boycott.

'Filing without Consent'

The attorney's indictment was based on the statement of Mrs. Jeanetta Reese, one of the five Negro women whose names were signed to the court petition. Mrs. Reese told Mayor Gayle in the presence of two newspaper reporters that she didn't know what she was signing.

Gray was charged with filing the suit in Mrs. Reese's name without her consent, an offense punishable in Alabama by a $500 fine and suspension from practice.

The boycott began Dec. 5, after a Negro woman, Mrs. Rosa Parks, was arrested and fined $14 for refusing to move to the colored section of a bus.

Since then, an estimated 75 per cent of the Negroes who normally used the buses for transportation have refused to ride them. Some have used taxicabs to get to and from work; others have depended on a highly organized car pool operating with military precision.

Bus boycott head talks

Afro-American Sat. 2-25-56 P. 1

CHICAGO, Ill. — America's counterpart of India's Mahatma Gandhi faces jail.

He is the Rev. M. L. King, leader of a "passive resistance movement" in Montgomery, where 98 per cent of the colored residents refuse to ride the city's buslines.

Speaking at a news conference here, Monday, the Rev. Mr. King, head of the Montgomery Improvement Association, said that a grand jury investigating the "legality" of the boycott "probably will indict some of us."

The Rev. Mr. King said that the boycott "is part of something that is happening all over the world.

Baltimore, Md.

"THE OPPRESSED peoples are rising up. They are revolting against colonialism, imperialism, and other systems of oppression."

In ordering the grand jury probe, Circuit Judge Eugene Carter of Alabama called upon the jurors to determine whether the boycott was being carried on "without just cause" in violation of an Alabama law.

The Rev. King told the Chicago newsmen that he doubted "that more than 50 per cent of our people would not go back until the system (of segregated seating) is changed."

BUS BOYCOTT MAY END

Commercial Appeal

Reports Rise At Montgomery City Leaders Mum

Tues. 2-21-56

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Feb. 20. —(AP)—Reports of a break in the 11-week-old Negro bus boycott persisted Monday as a grand jury neared completion of its investigation of the mass protest against segregation.

Memphis Tenn.

The jury may indict some of the Negroes who have participated in wholesale refusal to ride Montgomery City Lines buses.

Several men who have been prominently identified with efforts to settle the boycott conferred in the office of Mayor W. A. Gayle Monday, but declined comment.

They included the city commission, representatives of the bus company and spokesmen for the Men of Montgomery, a cavic organization which has volunteered to act as mediator in the dispute.

The Boycott Probe

Afro-American

The world will be viewing with a critical eye the convening of a grand jury at Montgomery to determine whether colored passengers, by refusing to ride city buses, are violating state law. P. 4

Circuit Judge Eugene Carter, in charging the grand jury, asserted: "A person's business is property and, if lawfully conducted, is entitled to protection from unlawful interference."

Certainly there is no quarrel with that, providing a just and reasonable interpretation is placed by the jurors on what constitutes "unlawful interference."

Can the refusal to pay for subjection to humiliation and indignity be construed as unlawful interference?"

Or is it "unlawful interference" to walk to one's destination rather than risk arrest for refusing to surrender one's bus seat to another passenger, merely because the other passenger chances to have a [illegible]

Can "unlawful interference" be read into the determination of citizens to stand up and fight for those privileges and immunities the United States Constitution holds are the rightful heritance of every American?

These are but three of the questions which the grand jury at Montgomery must answer.

Upon those answers will depend world judgment whether the grand jury's action was motivated by impartial justice or subverted by blind prejudice.

The nation and the world will also be watching to see if the jurors widen their probe to include the openly acknowledged boycotting activities of the Central Alabama White Citizens' Council.

Since the investigation of boycotts has become the order of the day in Montgomery, what possible excuse can Judge Carter offer for winking at the parents of the practice?

"Only a short time ago, city buses hummed with activity with crowds of shoppers and business people-both white and colored.

"More people ought to start considering what it will mean if Montgomery loses its bus franchise," Stough said, "If enough public spirited citizens get behind the bus company's problem, the operating franchise may be saved."

Stough reflected that "things sure have changed, and it just doesn't seem right with only a few passengers riding your bus every day.

Sough, a driver since 1916, said he wondered how long the bus company can continue to exist in its present financial state.

Montgomry bus drivers face bleak future due to boycott

Afro-American Sat. 7-28-56 P.16

Baltimore, Md.

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (ANP) —Bus company officials and bus drivers here are faced with a dismal, insecure future as a result of the effective eight-month-old bus demonstration.

The bus service, already seriously curtailed, is threatened with permanent discontinuation unless patronage increases considerably very soon.

AS VETERAN bus operator George W. Stough says:

"Only a short time ago, city buses hummed with activity with crowds of shoppers and business people-both white and colored.

"More people ought to start considering what it will mean if Montgomery loses its bus franchise," Stough said, "If enough public spirited citizens get behind the bus company's problem, the operating franchise may be saved."

Stough reflected that "things sure have changed, and it just doesn't seem right with only a few passengers riding your bus every day.

Sough, a driver since 1916, said he wondered how long the bus company can continue to exist in its present financial state.

INDICTED MINISTER ASKS RENEWED FAITH

Commercial Appeal

Bus Boycott Leader Tells Negroes Segregation Cannot Survive

Mon. 2-27-56 P. 1

By JAMES EWING,
Staff Writer

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Feb. 26.—The leader of Montgomery's 83-day-old bus boycott by Negroes told his church congregation Sunday that "segregation can't survive because God is against it."

Memphis, Tenn.

Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., preaching to a capacity crowd at Dexter Avenue Baptist Church, urged them to "just keep loving" their enemies and not to lose faith in man.

'Lifted To Justice'

"Our Christian faith says you can be changed," he said, declaring that "exploiting" and "prejudiced" men can be "lifted up to the justice and fair play" by those who practice brother love.

Rev. King said during a visit to Vanderbilt University in Nashville last week that 90 per cent of the students with whom he came in contact said they were "willing to accept integration."

Support From Students

He said some of the white students at Vanderbilt told him they were glad to see desegregation even though their communities and their parents are against it.

"Thank God there are people who can rise above their communities," the minister said. King, whose home was bombed the day the boycott started, conducted Religious Emphasis Week at Fisk University, a Negro institution in Nashville, last week. He told his congregation Sunday that "we are in a great struggle and the consequences will be worldshaking."

He said Negroes through their boycott of city buses have already won a victory, giving to Negroes everywhere 'a new sense of dignity," but he urged that the boycott must continue, no matter how much sacrifice it entails. He said he had received telegrams and phone calls from both white and Negro leaders in practically every state praising the movement.

Commercial

Collection Taken

One Negro leader was quoted as sayingthe boycott has "put Negroes all over America on their feet."

Appeal

Most of Rev. King's remarks about the boycott were made during an announcement period preceding his sermon. P. 2

Following the regular offering, the plates were passed around again for a special offering to finance the boycott, with each member being urged to contribute at least a dollar. Most of them did and one 20-dollar bill was noted. Located downtown near the State Capitol, the church serves most of the professional and higher paid classes of Negroes in the city.

Rev. King said he is going to insist that the boycott not be exploited and htat money contributed to the cause is "properly handled."

Till Case Cited

He cited the Emmett Till case in Mississippi as an example of exploitation and said he does not intend to "get rich" filling speaking invitations when "our job is here in Montgomery."

The boycott was touched off after a Negro woman was fined $14 for refusing to move from a white section to a Negro section on a city bus.

National interest was sparked last week with the arrest and indictment of 100 Negro leaders of the movement, including 24 ministers.

The charges were brought under a 1921 law making it illegal for two or more persons to enter into a conspiracy to prevent a person or firm from carrying on a lawful business. Trials will begin March 19.

National Negro leaders have urged a March 28 sitdown strike by Negroes all over the country in protest to the mass arrests. King said Sunday he read about the proposal "with interest" but was not ready to comment on it.

Organization Of Stoppage Is Begun In New York

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—(UP)—The first steps were taken Sunday toward organizing an hour-long nationwide work stoppage by whites and Negroes alike to mark the "deliverance day" demonstration set for March 28 in support of the Montgomery 2 to 3 p.m. the Wednesday before Easter for a nationwide hour of prayer for Montgomery Negroes.

However, the president of the Oklahoma chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People said he does not favor the idea of a national work stoppage.

Jimmy Stewart of Oklahoma City said special prayers and collections were being made for the Montgomery Negroes in 50 churches around the state, but that he does not believe the Oklahoma branch of NAACP will favor the "deliverance day" strike.

Stewart said the Oklahoma branch hasn't taken a stand on the question, but he personally believes "the Montgomery boycott fight would be helped more if we each sent an hour's wages down there, and I don't see why employers in other parts of the nation should be inconvenienced by such a sitdown."

Bus Seating Ruling Taken To High Court

Post & Times Herald P. 2 Washington, D.C.

Associated Press

The Supreme Court was asked yesterday in two appeals to overturn a decision hol[illegible] unconstitutional Alabama and Montgomery, Ala., laws requiring racial segregation of passengers on buses. 2-4-56

The appeals were filed by the Montgomery Board of Comissioners and by Alabama's Attorney General John Patterson on behalf of the State Public Service Commission.

They asked the High Court to reverse a decision by a special three-judge United States District Court June 5 which declared enforced racial segregation on Montgomery buses violated the Federal Constitution's guarantees of due process and equal protection of law.

The Montgomery Commissioners questioned the authority of the special court to act in the case. They said it should have dismissed the complaint filed by Negro attorneys on behalf of Negro bus riders, "or, at least, stayed it" pending action in a similar suit filed by Negroes in Alabama state courts.

State Denies Involement

"The evidence is undisputed," Patterson's appeal said, "that the Alabama Public Service Commission has never attempted or threatened to enforce the statutes and ordinances relating to segregation on buses operated by Montgomery City Lines, Inc. . . ." The Alabama Motor Carrier Act, he declared specifically provides that it does not apply to buses operated wholly within the limits of a city.

Negroes in Montgomery for months have conducted a boycott of the city's buses in protest against state and city segregation laws.

Court in Recess

The Supreme Court, now in summer recess, cannot decide whether to hear the case until after Oct. 1, when the new terms begins. If the justices decide to hear the case, each side will be asked to present briefts and make oral arguments.

Patterson's appeal added:

"The right of the passenger (on a bus) is only that of being carried safely, and with a due regard to his personal comfort and convenience. This cannot be done and peace and order maintained in Montgomery and other similar places if, by court degree, a Negro man is permitted to sit by a white woman. The Supreme Court should face squarely the truth and reality of that fact."

The appeal by the City Commissioners, filed by Attorney Walter J. Knabe of Montgomery, declared that "certainly be left to its own devices so as public transportation if a fa[illegible] as police power and leg[illegible] islation are concerned."

State provides equal physical and equality facilities and other tangible factors, it should

Alabama Cleric Talks to NAACP

Eagle P. 1 Thurs. 3-22-56 Tulsa, Okla.

Rev. R. J. Glasco Says God is with Montgomery Negroes

By E. L. Madison, Jr.
Of the Eagle Staff

A minister charged with helping to spearhead the bus segregation boycott in Montgomery, Ala., told members of the Tulsa Branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People Friday that "we are not worried and we know that God is working with us."

The Rev. R. J. Glasco, formerly of Muskogee, addressed the membership drive held at the Carver Youth center where over 500 members and friends of the Association heard him relate what he termed the true story behind the bus boycott.

Rev. Glasco said that for the most part the newspapers have not told the complete story of the Montgomery situation. In addition to all of the abuses of bus drivers to Negro passengers, he pointed to instances where drivers have deliberately driven away, leaving passengers who stepped down to let others off crowded busses.

He cited one instance where a driver became so abusive in his language to a Negro woman that a white woman passenger became embarrassed and got off the bus. This same white woman made editorial comment on the incident, it was reported.

Working Together

Eagle P. 6

"We in Montgomery are working together," Rev. Glasco toold the spellbound audience. He stressed the fact that the boycott in Montgomery is not a "one man show," but a situation involving the common men and women.

Attempts on the part of white leaders have been made to influence certain ministers to persuade Negroes to ride the busses again. "Before this would happen," said Rev. Glasco, "such a minister might meet disaster provided he made such an attempt."

The speaker made it clear that the common people, not the ministers, doctors, lawyers or businessmen, would give the signal to start using city bus facilities again.

He illustrated his point by saying.

"As long as we stick to the bunch, we won't get skinned." He referred a picture depicting a stalk of bananas all together on one side. The other side of the picture showed one banana un-peeled. This came about when the banana left the bunch.

Searching for Justice

Rev. Glasco declared that the Negro people of Montgomery are in search of justice without violence. Leaders in the boycott have urged members of their race to refrain from any form of violence at all times. The ministers and citizens at large believe that God is the answer to their problem.

"Every step we have made has been made with God on our side. He has been our legal counsel," Rev. Glasco further stated. He added that before the group takes a step on any phase of the matter prayer is used as a foundation.

Referring to the trial of the 90 Negroes indicted for instigating the boycott which opened Monday "as we go to court we sing a hymn to God." He said the Negroes of Montgomery would remain true to God and their native land.

The Alabama minister reported numerous "arrests" of Negroes wherein there were no real charges against them. He told of one case where a Negro was taken from his job in a parking lot and arrested on a vagrancy charge. An enraged judge told the arresting officer not to bring any more such ridiculous cases before him.

He also related an incident where a driver of one of the more than 200 cars made available by Negroes for working people was stoned by a policeman and charged with blocking traffic. The driver of the car had stopped, parked his car against the curb and was waiting for passengers.

Rev. Glasco said the bus company has refused appeals made by Negroes to hire Negro bus drivers. They have also refused to reach a "suitable" agreement with regard to the seating arrangement on buses.

Rev. King Hopes For "Peaceful" Bus Integration

Daily World Tues. 12-18-56 Washington, D.C.

WASHINGTON — (INS) — The Supreme Court reaffirmed Monday its ruling that racial segregation on intrastate buses is unconstitutional by denying Alabama's petition for reconsideration of the Montgomery bus case.

Boycott Leader Rev. Martin Luther King expressed hope "now that the city and state have exhausted all means of legally enforcing segregation," that Negroes will be able to proceed peacefully with integration on Montgomery buses.

And C. C. (Jack) Owen, president of the Alabama Public Service Commission said when the Supreme Court order is received, his commission, would release a new regulation pertaining to transit systems.

On Nov. 13, the high court upheld, without calling for arguments, a two-to-one district court decision that segregation on buses or other city or intrastate transportation is unlawful.

In its reconsideration plea, the State of Alabama argued that the federal government took away its police power.

Alabama authorities declared: "There now exists, a 'no man's land' in which the state, under the court's opinion, is powerless to protect property and prevent breaches of the peace which will inevitably result from the decision in this case."

ALABAMA ARGUES

The petition for rehearing argued that such issues have always been recognized as being covered by the states' police powers "and this has been the expressed opinion of many distinguished and learned justices who have heretofore sat on the Supreme Court."

Racial segregation on Montgomery buses became the focus of national attention earlier this year when Negroes in the Alabama city boycotted the transport system.

The court's November decision invalidated all state and local ordinances which enforce racial separation on local transport systems.

Attorney General Herbert M. Brownell, Jr., met with U. S. Attorneys from 13 states last week to discuss the Supreme Court decision. Brownell has expressed hope that local authorities and transport company officials will comply voluntarily with the court ruling.

EMERGENCY MEET

Meanwhile, Montgomery city officials called an emergency meeting to discuss the Supreme Court's ruling that racial segregation on interstate buses is unconstitutional.

W. A. Gayle, Mayor of the Negro-bus boycotted city, said he would meet with the rest of the city commission "as soon as possible."

ing of boycott leaders last night. The executive board of the Montgomery Improvement Association, the boycott's coordinating group, which King heads, met to discuss the decision.

King said the group would meet later to draw up recommendations to mass meetings of boycotters. He predicted the boycotters would vote to end their protest and return to city buses.

A similar boycott of segregated buses has been conducted by Negroes in Tallahassee, Fla. It began several months after the Montgomery protest started Dec. 5.

The Governors of Mississippi and Georgia, United States and State Senators, a State Attorney General and other officials were among those sharply criticizing the decision.

The Montgomery City Commission, named in the suit, had no immediate comment. President Jack Owen of the Alabama Public Service Commission said that "to keep down violence and bloodshed, segregation must be maintained."

With no immediate efforts reported of Negroes seeking to ride in the front parts of buses, there was no sign of violence here.

A caravan of about 40 carloads of robed Ku Klux Klan members toured Negro residential areas of Montgomery last night, horns blowing, but police said they had no reports of violence.

Gov. J. P. Coleman of Mississippi said that his state's segregation law "are not involved" in the decision and would still be enforced.

Bus Ruling Hailed, Criticized in Dixie

Post + Times Herald P. 27-a Thurs. 11-15-56 Washington, D.C.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Nov. 14 (AP)—"We were badly treated on the buses, but now they've given us justice."

That was the reaction of a 78-year-old Montgomery Negro woman to the United States Supreme Court's decision yesterday that bus segregation is unconstitutional. The woman, Susie McDonald, and three other Negro women brought the suit that broke city and state bus-segregation laws.

White officials a cross the South took a strong stand directly opposed to hers.

Charges of unlawful interference with the states, common since the 1954 Supreme Court ban on public-school segregation, echoed again across Dixie.

Leaders of the 11-month-old bus boycott in Montgomery indicated the decision would bring the protest to an end, its purpose now removed.

Callinfi the decision "a glorious daybreak," the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. said "everyone was very happy" at a meet-

38th Ala

Afro-American P. 17
Baltimore, Md.
Sat. 11-17-56

BUYS FIRST TICKET — Mayor Robert Wagner bought the first two tickets for a benefit concert to be held Dec. 5 at Manhattan Center to commemorate the first anniversary of the non - violent protest against bus segregation in Montgomery, Ala. Left to right: Mrs. Robert Wagner, Mayor Wagner, Mrs. Ralph J. Bunche and Mrs. Roy Wilkins, chairman of the committee. In front are Andy Levinson, 8, and Lynn E. Kilgore, 10. Mrs. Martin Luther King Jr., wife of the boycott leader, will appear as the featured artist.

Rev. King Tells Montgomery-ites Five Ways To Speed Integration

Call Fri 12-14-56 P. 13
Kansas City, Mo.

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (ANP)—The Rev. Martin L. King, this city's staunch leader of the successful year old bus boycott against segregation, told a packed church crowd here five ways of speeding up integration last week.

38th

Speaking at the opening of a southside Negro institute on passive resistance to Montgomery's racial segregation, the young minister and leader said Negroes can speed up the "inevitable end" of segregation by:

1. "We must continue to gain the ballot... one of the basic keys to the solution of our problem." He said both the Democratic and Republican parties have 'betrayed' Negro hopes.

2. "We must continue to struggle through legislation."

3. "We must donate large sums of money to the cause of freedom."

4. "Negroes must develop intelligent, courageous and dedicated leadership... one of the pressing needs of the hour."

5. "And, we must have the moral courage to stand up and protest injustice wherever we find it."

Rev. King declare that "Negroes should meet every act of violence toward an individual Negro with the fact that there are thousands of others who will present themselves in his place as potential victims."

"This dynamic unity, this amazing self-respect, this willingness to suffer and this refusal to hit back will soon cause the oppressor to become ashamed of his own methods," he stated.

The brilliant minister said the Montgomery example had taught Negroes to stick together to achieve their goals. He added "We have found a new an powerful weapon: non-violent resistance."

Rev. King said that for the success of the boycott the white people of the city must also be commended. He said if there had not been some discipline and moral sensitivity in the white community, we would have had much more violence in Montgomery

The 27-year-old leader said "Nobody has been able to convince me that the vast majority of white people in this community, or in the whole state of Alabama, are willing to use violence to maintain segregation. It is only the fringe element, the hoodlum element which could resort to the use of violence."

Rev. King told the overflow hymn-singing crowd that Negroes must continue to believe that the most ardent segregationist can be transformed into the most constructive integrationist, but he warned that the battle against segregation is far from won.

He said: "Segregation in America is still a fact. We confront it in the South in its glaring and conspicuous forms. We confront it in the North in its hidden and subtle forms."

Negroes Tell Of Bus Treatment At Trial

Herald P.1 B'ham, Ala.

BY ROBERT H. DENLEY

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — (INS) — Bitter, long-standing grievances over their treatment on Montgomery buses spilled forth from Negro witnesses Wednesday as the defense of one of their ministers, Rev. M. L. King, Jr., opened in Circuit Court.

As the prosecution rested its case against the 27 year old Baptist Negro minister accused of leading a bus boycott, the defense tried but failed to get an immediate verdice in favor of the defendant.

Rev. King is the first of 90 Negroes including 24 ministers, to go on trial in connection with the boycott that began on December 5.

All of the defense witnesses told of mistreatment or discourtesy on Montgomery buses and some said they stopped riding before December 5.

QUIT DEC 5

However, one witness—Mrs. Gladys Moore — said she quit December 5 and since then had gone to work by Taxi and returned home by car pool operated by an organization of which the Rev. King is president.

Circuit Judge Eugene W. Carter who is hearing the case without a jury, asked the witness.

"Why did you stop riding the buses on December 5 ?"

She replied:

"Well, nobody asked me to stop riding .....

The Judge cut off that answer and repeatedly asked Mrs. Moore why she happened to mention December 5 as the day to quit riding buses.. At one point she said:

"I stopped because we had been treated so bad through the years, we all decided to stop riding."

50,000 NEGROES

Judge Carter asked Mrs. Moore whom she meant by "ALL." the witness answered: "All of us—All 50,000 of Montgomery's Negroes."

The courtroom's predominantly Negro audience burst into applause. Judge Carter sternly warned that if there was recurrence of the demonstration he would send someone to jail for contempt.

"I kiow you have feelings," the Judge said, "But the courtroom is not the place to vent them."

The answer that finally satisfied Judge Carter as to why Mrs. Moore stopped riding buses on December 5 was:

"That was the day they had the trial for Mrs. Rosa Parks."

Montgomery's 16 week bus boycott apparently was triggered by Mrs. Parks' arrest after she refused to move from one seat to another when ordered to do so by the bus driver.

HANDBILLS USED

Although no testimony in this trial has shown it, handbills reportedly were circulated among the Negro population setting December 5 as the date for a boycott.

Richard S. Jordan, who also is under indictment, testified that he rode street cars or buses for nearly 20 years until last November and added:

"Many, Many times I have had unpleasant experiences on buses."

A chief resentment brought out in his —as well as other testimony was against being called "Nigger" by bus drivers.

Jordan said:

"Anywhere you can find a Negro in Montgomery, you can find someone dissatisfied with the bus service."

Mrs. Della Perkins, another witness, said she last rode a bus December 3. that was the day, she testified, when a bus driver told her:

"Get back to the back, you black ape."

She said she asked for her money back, was refused and got off the bus to walk.

Another witness, Mrs. Georgia Gilmore said she quit riding buses last October when having paid her fare at the front of the bus, the driver said:

" Go out Nigger and go around to the back door."

When she left the bus, she testified the bus driver drove away without her. She said:

"I decided then and there not to ever ride a bus again.

"I did not mind going around but he said, 'Nigger' and I resented his tone because I paid a fare and when they count the fares, they don't know if it is colored money or white money."

The state ended its case at midmorning with the testimony of Mayor W. A. Galye who said he attended about 20 conferences designed to settle the boycott. He testified he adoped a so-called "get tough" policy in late January because "nothing else could be done by the city to end the boycott."

Immediately after the state completed presentation of its case, defense counsel moved for a directed verdict of not guilty. Attorney Fred Gray argued that the state "has utterly failed to produce one Iota of evidence sufficient to support a conviction."

State Heading Toward Close In King Case

Advertiser Wed. 3-21-56 Montgomery, Ala. P.1

Prosecutors Attempt To Show Conspiracy Behind Bus Boycott

By TOM JOHNSON AND FRANK McARDLE

The state yesterday continued a battle to link the Rev. M. L. King, Montgomery egro minister, to the bus boycott and to establish a conspiracy to boycott the bus lines.

A final round of state witnesses is on the agenda for early this morning before Negro defense lawyers take over.

As the state hammered on the violence which has erupted in the boycott, a Negro woman Beatrice Jackson, 1501 W. Fifth St., testified a Negro man, identified only as "Sheet," warned her to stay off the buses and then hit and cut her.

HELD AS WITNESS

The woman was held as a witness after defense attorneys asked that the man who hit and cut her be brought into court.

Another Negro, Willie C. Carter, told of threats because he had ridden the buses of the Montgomery City Lines but Judge Carter ordered the testimony thrown out because no connection was shown between the incident and the Montgomery Improvement Assn., sponsors of the boycott.

K. W. Jones, a city detective assigned to the circuit solicitor's office, told of the car pool organization of the MIA and named several people who had operated cars for the improvement association. These included Fletcher Smith, Burr McEverhart, W. H. Johnson, Mathew Kennedy, Walter Smith and the Rev. S. Heard. He named the North McDonough, Monroe Street Parking lot, Maxwell's main gate and the Holt Street Baptist Church as pickup points.

RIGHTS QUESTIONED

Defense attorneys questioned the detective's rights to stop cars and his activities in the investigation. Jones told he had examined banks records of the group under a subpoena of the circuit solicitor.

Testifying their buses had been nit by thrown objects or gunfire were George Henderson, J. B. Gardner, C. A. Bedsole and A. E. Beasley, all Montgomery City Lines bus drivers. Henderson said his bus was shot at six times and hit twice in Washington Park Dec 6. Gardner said a bullet was fired at his bus in Boylston Negro section. Bedsole said a brick was thrown through a bus window Dec. 8 in Washington Heights. Beasley said a rock was thrown at his bus Dec. 10 on the Boylston route.

Joe Azbell, city editor of The Advertiser, testified he had covered the boycott from its inception and, making references to stories he had written, told of statements and incidents. He testified he was present when Negroes voted to approve a resolution to continue the bus boycott on Dec. 5 at the Holt street church. He also told of the first buses being boycotted on the morning of Dec. 5. On cross examination by Negro attorneys, he said he had not been threatened at any meetings.

He added that when a Negro group of 100 became angry following a bombing at the home of the Rev. King, the minister came out on the porch and appealed to the group to leave and "not get panicky and not to get your weapons." He said in all meetings he had covered there had been appeals for non-violence sounded.

Ealier witnesses testified the Montgomery Improvement Assn., which was organized on the day the boycott began, arranged the agenda of the first mass meeting and later handled the funds to support the boycott.

Judge Carter at one point indicated that the state's task for the remainder of the trial is not to show that a conspiracy existed but to link it with King.

CASE ESTABLISHED

"A prima facie case of conspiracy has been established," Judge Carter said.

As on the first day, the state often had difficulty yesterday with its own witnesses, supposedly but actually closer to "hostile" at times.

Many of these witnesses have been prominent figures in the boycott movement who might have been subject to indictment themselves had the state not elected to use them as witnesses.

Most of them testified grudgingly.

One of the most difficult for the state was another of its own witnesses, the Rev. U. J. Fields, pastor of Bell Street Baptist Church.

WISP OF GOATEE

Fields, an evasive young Negro with a mustache and a wisp of a goatee, gave answers which at one point drew an admonition from Judge Carter.

Admitting that he had attended several mass meetings, Fields insisted he could not recall if the bus boycott had ever been discussed.

Deputy Solicitor Robert B. Stewart asked Judge Carter to declare Fields a "hostile witness," a move that would have given the state the right to challenge the truthfulness of its own witness.

Instead, the judge admonished Fields to "tell the truth" about cussed at the meetings.

"You know whether it was or not," he said. "Now tell the truth."

'I DON'T SWEAR

Fields, when first called as a witness, refused to swear to the customary witness oath, saying, "I don't swear. It's against my religious convictions." But he promised to tell the truth and the judge accepted that.

Fields, as secretary of the improvement association, kept minutes of the organizational meeting on the afternoon of Dec. 5, but balked at answering questions about subjects not covered in the minutes.

Asked how he was informed there was to be a meeting, Fields said he received a phone call from an unknown person. He said he did not recall who presided at the group."

He also professed not to know the purpose of the meeting.

He said his minutes did show the election of officers, including King as president, and the appointment of a resolutions committee, including a man named Gray. Fields said he could not say whether that was Atty Fred D. Gray, one of the defense witnesses.

COULDN'T RECALL

He was questioned about the words "transportation committee" which appeared in his minutes. "The words don't make sense to me now," he testified.

He said he could not recall whether the boycott was discussed at the first meeting of the improvement association, which grew out of a meeting of the Interdenominational Ministers Alliannce, a group of Negro clergymen.

The state attempted to show that the resolutions read at the first mass meeting at the Holt Street Batist Church on the night of Dec. 5 were prepared during the afternoon of that day by a committee of the association.

Fields was asked who prepared the agenda of the mass meeting. He replied: "Memory does not serve me well enough to answer."

He gave the same reply when asked if the agenda was put together during the afternoon before the meeting.

Fields did admit that he testified before the grand jury that an agreement was reached at the afternoon session to continue the boycott until "conditions improve."

(Negro leaders have maintained the boycott was continued indefinitely because of the "spontaneous" mood of the crowd at the meeting which followed the afternoon session.)

Rufus Lewis, chairman of a transortation committee appointed by the improvement association, described in detail how protesting Negroes have been transported during the boycott.

He said approximately 43 pick-up and dispatch stations were set up to accommodate persons who couldn't get transportation otherwise. About 200 private cars are used, he said, and drivers are paid $4 a day.

Lewis was asked if the improvement association had done anything besides promoting the boycott. He answered "yes" and mentioned that committees on registration and voting and on establishing a bank had been appointed by the association.

"Were all the committees set up after the indictments?" he was asked.

"I don't think so," said Lewis.

He answered "yes" when asked if Negroes had been urged not to ride the buses at the mass meetings.

The state called the operators of several service stations with which the association arranged to buy gas.

STATION OPERATOR

Among them were John L. Oliver, oerator of a station at 772 Holt St.; Joe Foster of Darby Service Station; Hezekiah Nunn of Day St. Service Station; and D. W. Williams.

All of them testified they were approached by a committee of "two or three," were told to sell gas to certain drivers and to take the drivers' tag numbers for identification.

All but Williams said they had never before seen the committee. Williams testified one of the men who approached him was the Rev. W. J. Powell, one of the indicted ministers.

The service station oerpators said they were paid every "two or three days."

Erna Dungee, financial secretary of the improvement association who was first called as a witness Monday, concluded her tekstimony yesterday morning.

Like many of the other witnesses, she professed not to know many of the details of the organization, including its financial status.

She said she didn't know the present bank balance of the improvement association, either in Montgomery or Atlanta, where the group also has an account. To the questions on finances she gave such answers as "I have no idea," "I don't remember," "I don't know," and "I can't tell you that."

She said the headquarters of the improvement association is now at the Citizens Club, where it was moved from the Alabama Negro Baptist Center.

The woman said the association has performed no direct function besides supporting the bus boycott and has sent no money "directly" for any other purpose.

Appeal on Bus Decision Fails

City of Montgomery and State of Alabama Lose

Times Picayune

BY KARL R. BAUMAN

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17 (AP)—The supreme court Monday rejected pleas by Alabama and the city of Montgomery for reconsideration of its Nov. 13 decision banning racial segregation on local buses.

New Orleans

The court thus disposed of the last preliminary to the sending out of official notice of the ruling.

Sun 12-18-56

This notice will be mailed in two or three days to a special three-judge United States district court in Montgomery which ruled that segregation violates the constitution. The supreme court on Nov. 13 affirmed that ruling.

While the ruling was limited to Alabama and Montgomery, it established the law to be followed by lower federal courts wherever the issue may arise again.

New Action by State Hinted

Segregation in Montgomery caused a long boycott of buses by Negroes, leaders of the boycott have announced plans to end it when bus service is integrated.

Jack Owen, head of Alabama's pubilc service commission, hinted after Monday's decision, however, that new action may be taken to preserve the present system of separate seating arrangements for white and Negro bus passengers.

Owen said at Montgomery the commission will issue an order designed to "preserve peace and harmony" on the buses. He declined to go into details but left no doubt it would be an attempt to maintain separate seating.

Negro Leaders Rejoicing

The high court's refusal to reconsider the case brought rejoicing from Negro leaders but left Mayor W. A. Gayle of Montgomery with "no comment" for the time being.

In asking the court to reconsider, the city said the Nov. 13 decision left "vital" legal questions unanswered.

The court also denied Monday for a second time a petition for review of the trial of Dr. Samuel H. Sheppard, Cleveland osteopath who is serving a life sentence for the slaying of his wife. The original denial was announced Nov. 13. Dr. Sheppard's counsel, in asking the second time for a review, contended a "Roman holiday" atmosphere had surrounded the trial.

Other Decisions

In other actions Monday the court:

1. Authorized a temporary increase up to 8500 cubic feet a second in the flow of water from Lake Michigan into the Illinois-Mississippi waterway. The permanent base flow is 1500 cubic feet a second. The increase of 7000 cubic feet, which will remain in effect through Jan. 31, was authorized due to an emergency in navigation caused by low water in the Mississippi river. Should further action be required, the court directed that justice Burton act for it.

2. Ruled unanimously that an Arkansas law requiring the licensing of building contractors cannot be appealed to contractors on government projects. Subjecting a federal contractor to the state license requirements, the court said, would "frustrate the expressed federal policy of selecting the lowest responsible bidder."

The case reached the court on a report by Leslie Miller Inc. of Fort Wort, Tex., which built facilities at Little Rock Air Force base under a federal contract. Later the firm was fined $200 on a charge of engaging in business without authority from the state contractors licensing board.

3. Agreed to review a decision upholding a dual price system for gasoline sales used by the Standard Oil Co. (ind.) in the Detroit area.

NEGRO LEADERS PLAN INTEGRATION 'PEACE'

Commercial Appeal Sat 12-15-56 Memphis, Tenn.

Montgomery Ministers Urge Non-Violence On Buses

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Dec. 14.—(AP)—Negroes awaiting the end of bus segregation in Montgomery are being schooled by their leaders to remain peaceful "even if others strike first."

And to guide them, Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy disclosed Friday an effort will be made to have a Negro clergyman or civic leader aboard every bus day and night during the early stages of integration.

The Supreme Court has ruled city and state bus segregation laws unconstitutional but the formal order has not been issued pending action on a request for city and state authorities for a re-hearing.

If the court acts on the rehearing petition Monday, the integration notice may reach Montgomery later next week.

Meanwhile, Rev. Abernathy said as many as 1,000 Negroes are attending weekly classes designed to "prepare our people for the return to the buses and for integration in general." He did not elaborate on the latter.

The weekly instruction periods, held in Negro churches, are conducted by the Montgomery Improvement Association, the organization which has directed the long mass Negro boycott against segregated city buses. Abernathy is vice president of the group.

Ministers and other MIA leaders along with officers of civic clubs and volunteers in each neighborhood are acting as instructors, the Baptist minister said. Besides weekly classes, Negro civic clubs also are urged to spread the doctrine of non-violence.

THE WALK GOES ON

Daily World
Atlanta, Ga.
Sat. 5-12-56

Federal Court Hears Montgomery Bus Case

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — Montgomery's mayor, who declared segregation's end would bring "Bloodshed", was ask to reveal his formula for knowing yesterday as Negroes opened their attack in federal court on city and state bus segregation laws.

Mayor W. A Gayle testified a breakdown in the segregation laws would bring "violence and bloodshed," as his attorneys moved for dismissal of the case

Negroes have staged a boycott of the City bus line for several months over the alleged cruel treatment of Negroes. The line has sought to remove racial barriers, but were later ordred by the state to replace them.

Atty. Gen John Patterson, acting for the Alabama Public Service Commission, and Walter Knabe, on behalf of the city of Montgomery, asked the dismissal, contending the three-judge Federal court does not have jurisdiction.

THREATENS ARRESTED

Mayor W A. Gayle took the stand Friday to declare:

"We'll arrest anyone who breaks the law, regardless of race, color or creed."

The plaintiffs, four Negro women, claim they were forced to give up seats on the buses to white persons. Two of them said they were arrested for failure to relinquish their seats.

Gayle said that any breakdown of segregation barriers in Montgomery would "lead to violence and bloodshed in this city."

When asked by one of the six Negroes attorneys for the plaintiffs how he knew there would be violence, he replied:

MY DUTY

It is my duty to anticipate violence and disorder and not to wait until it happens "

State and city attorneys, in asking the dismissal, argued that the suit was brought against a city ordinance and not against the statutes of the state of Alabama They contended the case should be tried in a state court.

END SEGREGATION

The women are asking an end to raccial segregation on Montgomery buses The case is an outgrowth of the six-months-old boycott of the buses by Negroes, marked by violence in its early stages last December

City attorneys contend that Negro leaders originally asked a different seating arrangement, rather than an end to segregation

The case was further complicated by an order from the National City Lines Inc., of Chicago Parent Co, of the Bus Firm, which ordered an end to segregation on the buses earlier this week.

The State Court yesterday ordered the Bus Company to comply with state segregation laws.

Presiding Judge Richard T. Rives said he did not believe there was any chance for an immediate decision in the case. He added that the three judges would have to "study and deliberate" on the evidence because this is an important case."

Knobe argued for an injunction to compel the bus company to enforce the city segregation laws on the Montgomery buses.

Knobe said that the bus company seemed to be more "interested in avoiding lawsuits than in public safety on buses."

The city called to the witness stand Clyde Sellers, police commissioner and an acknowledged member of the White Citizens Council.

* * *

"PUBLIC SAFETY and public health will be jeopardized and the future existence of the bus transportation here will be threatened if the segregation barriers on the buses were broken down," said Sellers.

In asking that the injunction petition be dismissed the bus company attorney cited the Fourth U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruling in the South Carolina bus case as an example that segregation was unlawful.

Afro-American
Baltimore Md.

He stated that "greater danger of physical disturbances" would result in the continuance of the segregation policy.

Sat. 5-12-56

HE POINTED out that the visement and said that he would give his decision in about three days.

ON MAY 11, the city and bus company are defendants in a case filed by the Montgomery Improvement Association on behalf of four Montgomery residents challenging the constitutionality of the bus segregation law.

A three-judge Federal Court will hear the case.

END INTEGRATION BUSLINE IS TOLD

Times-Picayune
New Orleans

Alabama Court Says Segregation Not Outlawed

Thurs. 5-10-56

MONTGOMERY, Ala., May 9 (AP) — Holding that the Supreme Court hasn't outlawed bus segregation yet, Circuit Judge Walter B. Jones directed Montgomery City Lines today to abandon its new integration policy.

The state court jurist ruled that nothing in the U. S. Constitution gives the federal government the right to prohibit the states from segregating bus passengers in intrastate transportation, and that the Supreme Court has taken no clear-cut stand against such segregation.

He held Montgomery city and Alabama state segregation laws constitutional and ordered the bus company to "comply and abide" with them.

In Chicago, Benjamin W. Franklin, vice-president of National City Lines, parent firm of Montgomery Bus Company, said, "We will obey the injunction, of course."

Franklin said no decision has been made on what, if any, future legal steps might be taken by the company.

Jones' decision granting an injunction against further compliance with the bus company's recent integration order came at the request of the city of Montgomery, whose officials and attorneys predicted rioting and other violence if the segregation laws are broken down.

The judge took note of that threat and observed in his written order:

"A situation of tension and unrest has been created in the city of Montgomery, which is likely to explode into violence at any time, if not restrained."

Most Montgomery Negroes have boycotted city buses for nearly six months, even despite the company's instructions to its drivers to refrain from enforcing the segregation laws.

Segregation Hearing Ends In Alabama

Courier-Journal
Louisville, Ky.
Sat. 5-12-56

No Decision Given In Bus-Law Suit

p. 2

Montgomery, Ala., May 11 (AP) —The three-judge panel in Federal Court completed a one-day hearing on city bus segregation this afternoon and adjourned without announcing a decision.

The judges gave no indication when the decision would be announced.

Two of the three judges agreed in observations from the bench, however, that there has been no Supreme Court decision as yet on the constitutionality of City and State segregation laws on bus travel within a state.

Judge Richard T. Rives of the Fifth United States Circuit Court of Appeals and District Judge Seybourn Lynne of the Northern District of Alabama said they do not construe the April 23 Supreme Court ruling as a decision on the merits of bus segregation within a state.

The third member of the panel, District Judge Frank M. Johnson, Jr., of the Middle District of Alabama, didn't comment.

Filed by 4 Woment

The hearing was on a suit filed by four Negro women contesting the racial barriers on city buses as unconstitutional.

City attorney Walter Knabe and Alabama Assistant Attorney General Gordon Madison argued that no matter what the Supreme Court may have done in other fields, it has not yet overturned the old doctrine of separate-but-equal facilities in city bus transportation.

Negro attorney Robert Carter of New York insisted, on the other hand, that the separate-but-equal theory "has been overturned" by the Supreme Court in every other field and also perhaps in city and intrastate transportation.

It was at that point that Rives, presiding over the hearing, said that in his opinion the Supreme Court hasn't decided the issue, and Lynne added, "That's my opinion, too."

Bem Price of the Associated Press writes about the Negro's situation in the North in tomorrow's Passing Show.

Mixed buses safer, Ala. court told

Afro-American
Baltimore Md.
Sat. 5-12-56

By AL SWEENEY
AFRO Staff Writer

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — "Continued segregation on local bus lines will result in greater danger of public disorder and subject the bus company to repeated prosecution under the civil rights laws."

So declared Robert Thrum of Chicago, an attorney for the Montgomery City Lines, Inc., Thursday.

The bus company was hailed into the Montgomery County Circuit Court by city officials for issuing an order to its bus drivers not to enforce segregation on the buses.

* * *

CITY ATTORNEY Walter Knabe said that the bus company had suffered heavy losses during the five-month bus boycott and if segregation on the local buses is continued the company would face numerous law suits.

"This would mean unbearable cost through court litigation," Thrum added.

HE SAID that the National City lines, operators of the Montgomery system, had carefully considered city laws and customs before issuing the order.

He pointed out that other southern cities operating as subsidiaries have ordered discontinuance of segregation on buses in line with the national firm's regulation.

Circuit Judge Walter B. Jones took the arguments under ad-

Court Ruling Expected Today Waited on Bus Segregation

Atlanta Ga.
Sat. 5-12-56

MONTGOMERY, Ala., May 11 (AP)—The three-judge panel in federal court completed a one-day hearing on city bus segregation this afternoon and adjourned without announcing a decision.

It gave no indication when the decision will be announced.

Four Negro women had brought suit contesting racial barriers on the buses.

Two of the three judges agreed in observations from the bench, however, that there has been no Supreme Court decision as yet on the constitutionality of city and state segregation laws on bus travel within a state.

Judge Richard T. Rives of the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals and Dist. Judge Seybourn Lynne of the Northern District of Alabama said they don't construe the Supreme Court ruling as a decision on the merits of bus segregation.

Major Airlines Drop Color Bar In Flight Jobs

Defender p.3
Sat. 10-13-56
Chicago Ill.

NEW YORK — (INS) — Major airlines operating in New York state have opened the door to the employment of Negroes as flight personnel.

A joint statement has been issued here by the chairman of the State Commission Against Discrimination, Charles Abrams and representatives of 18 lines including most of the nation-wide firms.

The statement said the airlines would not solicit personnel from agencies or schools which "discriminate in the referral of job candidates."

It "reiterated" a policy of non-discrimination.

"The airline representatives and members of the commission agreed to meet in further conferences for fulfillment of these objectives," the statement added.

At the present time no Negro pilots, stewardesses or other personnel fly for any regular airline in the U. S.

Bus Boycott Activity Echoes With Negro Minister's Arrest

Commercial Appeal Memphis Tenn. P. 19

By The Associated Press

MONTGOMERY, Ala., March 25.—A Negro minister who testified during the bus boycott trial last week was charged with disorderly conduct Sunday because he refused to obey an ouster order voted by "a particular group" within his congregation.

Rev. U. J. Fields said he was ordered to relinquish the pastorate of the Bell Street Baptist Church because a "particular group does not believe in taking a stand on what our people are pressing for."

Mar. 3-26-56

Fields, 25, was released under $100 bond after being arrested Sunday morning at the church on a warrant sworn out by George Durden, a deacon in the church. He will be given a hearing in city police court Friday.

Durden said the congregation voted to remove Fields from the pulpit solely "in the interest of peace and harmony within the church." He said the removal order was not connected with Fields' activity in the prolonged bus boycott here in protest to racial segregation.

Pressure Is Charged

But Fields charged that "pressure was put on some of my parishoners from outside" because of his "progressive" stand on racial questions.

"I do have a faction in my church who disagree and many of them can be used by outsiders," the Negro minister said.

Fields testified before the Grand Jury which returned indictments against almost 100 Negro leaders for taking part in the 17-week-old bus boycott.

He was also called by the state as a witness last week during the trial which ended in the conviction of Rev. M. L. King, another Negro Baptist minister, for violating Alabama's anti-boycott law.

Equal Rights Battle Urged By Minister

NEW YORK, March 25.—(UP) —Rtv. Martin Luther King Jr., Negro minister convicted as a leader of the Montgomery, Ala., Negro bus boycott, said Sunday that such a campaign could be used by Negroes everywhere in their struggle for equal rights.

The 27-year-old Baptist minister spoke at a meeting held in his honor in the Concord Baptist Church in Brooklyn, which has a largely Negro membership. The meeting was sponsored by the Brooklyn chapter of the National Association of Business and Professional Women.

"This is a protest of passive resistance depending upon moral and spiritual forces," King said. "It is non-violent. Our only weapon so far—and it will go on being our only weapon—is love, love and passive resistance."

That method can be used by Negroes everywhere, he said, defining the method as "to refuse to co-operate with injustice."

"We've come a long way but we've still got a long way to go," he said. "We are far from the promised land of justice and freedom in both the North and the South."

In the North, King said, injustices are hidden and subtle.

Charges Withdrawn Against Pastor

Star P. 2-A

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Mar. 31 (AP).—A disorderly conduct complaint against a Negro minister who testified during the bus boycott trial here has been withdrawn, City Judge Luther B. Waller said yesterday.

Mar. 31-56

The charge was brought against the Rev. U. J. Fields after a group within his church asked him to resign as pastor.

Washington, D.C.

Mr. Fields said a "particular group" at the Bell Street Baptist Church sought to force his resignation because they opposed "taking a stand on what our people are pressing for."

The case had been scheduled for trial in Judge Waller's court yesterday.

George W. Durden, a deacon in the Bell street church, signed the warrant charging the 25-year-old pastor with disorderly conduct.

Court records showed that Mr. Durden withdrew his complaint against the minister and agreed to pay court costs. Mr. Fields had been free under $100 bond.

Pastor Resigns in Protest

Herald P. 11-A

Bus Boycott Funds Misuse Charged

Wed. 6-13-56

Miami, Fla.

MONTGOMERY, Ala. —(AP)— A Baptist preacher said that leaders of the Negro protest against bus segregation here have been playing fast and loose with boycott funds.

The Rev. U. J. Fields did not specify any individual members of the Montgomery Improvement Assn., set up to coordinate the boycott for the city's 50,000 Negroes, but declared in resigning his post as recording secretary:

"All the money coming in here for transportation is not being used for that." He did not elaborate.

Officials of the MIA quickly denied any financial misconduct.

"No money received by this association has been misappropriated," said Dr. Moses W. Jones, second vice president.

"Definitely false," said the Rev. R. J. Glasco in referring to Fields' accusations. Glasco is chairman of the MIA finance committee. Glasco's comment was echoed by C. W. Lee, the organization's assistant treasurer, and by Mrs. Erna Dungee, the financial secretary.

Fields, one of the MIA founders, also said "I no longer can identify myself with a movement in which the few are exploiting the many."

The 25-year-old Negro minister said boycott leaders "have become egotistical and interested in perpetuating themselves."

"Individuals who are handling" money contributed throughout the nation to support the boycott "are using it for selfish purposes," he said.

MIA officials termed Fields' criticism "simply another attack designed to hinder our protest movement."

The MIA has been paying about $3,000 a week to provide car pool transportation for the bus boycotters.

Deacon Acts Against A Boycott Leader

World-Telegram P. 3

By The Associated Press.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., March 26.—A deacon has filed disorderly conduct charges against a Negro bus boycott leader because he refused to give up his pastorate.

Mon. 3-26-56

The Rev. U. J. Fields, 25, was arrested by city detectives at the Bell Street Baptist Church yesterday on a disorderly conduct warrant sworn out by Deacon George Durden.

New York

$100 Bond.

Mr. Fields posted a $100 bond and was freed pending a hearing Friday.

N. Y.

Mr. Fields, who testified during the boycott trial last week of Baptist Minister Martin Luther King Jr., said a "particular group" in his congregation voted to remove him because they "do not believe in taking a stand on what our people are pressing for." But Mr. Durden said the action to remove Mr. Fields was not connected with his boycott activity

38b 1956 ALABAMA REV. U.J. FIELDS
MONTGOMERY, ALA., BUS BOYCOTT

One Boycott Minister Ousted

Defender Chicago, Ill Sat. 4-7-56

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — (ANP) — The Rev. U. J. Fields, 25, pastor of Bell Street Baptist church was arrested on a disorderly conduct charge brought by one of the church's deacons.

Rev. Fields was a unique witness in the recent trial of Rev. Martin Luther King, who was convicted of leading the boycott in Montgomery. P. 2

Fields refused to take an oath before testifying, stating that oaths are against his religious beliefs.

After his arrest, he said that a "particular group" in his church is seeking his removal because they "do not believe in taking a stand on what our people are pressing for."

Deacon George Durden, who swore out the warrant, denied the action had anything to do with Field's boycott activities, but contended they were to "keep peace and harmony" in the church.

Durden refused to state what Rev. Fields had done to bring the demand for his resignation.

Fields blamed his troubles on "outsiders" who oppose his anti-segregation activities.

Fields retracts charges on misuse of bus protest funds

Afro-American Sat. 6-30-56

Baltimore, Md.

MONTGOMERY — "To acknowledge and confess the statement I made was not a statement of truth." P. 3

This was the reason the Rev. U. J. Fields gave last week for his appearance before a mass meeting and his apology for his attack on the Montgomery Improvement Association — the group spearheading the bus protest.

The Rev. Mr. Fields, former recording secretary of the group, had previously been quoted as saying that funds of the MIA were being misappropriated and its leaders were subordinating the anti-segregation protest to personal in-

Both charges were denied by MIA officials and their denial was followed by the Rev. Mr. Fields' ouster as pastor of the Bell St. Baptist Church by a membership vote of 40-0.

In apoloziing for the charges, the Rev. Mr. Fields told the mass meeting:

"To my knowledge, money sent to the organization has been used only for the purpose of transportation.

"I have no evidence at all that will allow me truthfully to say that money sent to the organization has not been brought back to the organization," he said.

The minister was introduced by the Rev. M. L. King, president of the MIA, who asked the audience to be forgiving toward Fields.

"Let he who is without sin cast the first stone," he added.

In Montgomery, Ala.

Courier Pittsburgh, Pa.

Pastor Apologizes

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — (ANP) — A young minister who was voted out of his pulpit after he charged that leaders of the Montgomery bus boycott were guilty of misconduct, withdrew the accusations and apologized to them last week.

The minister said that he had made the accusations while in a state of "anger and passion."

The Rev. U. J. Fields said he had "no evidence" for the charges. Sat. 6-30-56

The minister had charged that funds being contributed all across the nation to provide car pool transportation for boycotters were being misappropriated "for selfish purposes," and that Montgomery Improvement Association leaders had put personal interests before the anti-segregation movement by the city's 50,000 Negroes. P. 2

The proposal to accept the pastor's apology was made by the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., president of the MIA.

First Bus Boycott Trial Delves Into Finances

World-Telegram + Sun
N.Y. Sun 3-21-56

By the United Press.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., March 20.—The prosecution in the trial of the first Montgomery bus boycott defendant hammered today at the financial affairs of the Montgomery Improvement Assn., an all-Negro organization formed after the boycott began 14 weeks ago. P. 2

New York, N.Y.

The 90 defendants, including the Rev. M. L. King, 27, who is being tried first, are accused of conspiracy to enforce an economic boycott, in violation of a little-used 1921 law. Mr. King is president of the MIA.

As the second day of the trial opened, the state called Stuart Patton, a Montgomery bank official, who identified photostatic copies of deposits and check withdrawals of the MIA at the Alabama National Bank of Montgomery.

Checks Identified.

Mrs. E. A. Dungee, financial secretary of the association, took the stand and identified a series of checks made out by the MIA as payment to automobile drivers and for gasoline. Most of them were for about $24.

The state is seeking to establish that a conspiracy existed in the wholesale private transportation of Negroes to jobs in private automobiles during the bus boycott.

Assistant solicitor Frank Stewart also questioned Mrs. Dungee about her attendance at the various mass meetings of Negroes that have marked the bus boycott.

She testified she attended the first meeting Dec. 5 but "only managed to get into the rear of the church." She said she wasn't sure whether Mr. King was present at that meeting.

Jour. 3-20-56

"Were you there when the money was taken up?" Mr. Stewart asked.

"Yes."

Put Into Account.

"Was the money taken up at these collections deposited to the (account of) the Montgomery Improvement Assn?"

"I'm sure it was."

J. H. Bagley, manager of the hard-hit Montgomery city bus lines, said the boycott was 90 to 95 percent effective. Most of the passengers had been Negroes. Loss of fares plunged the company into economic chaos, he said.

Bus Boycott Spontaneous, King Says

Defender P. 1
Sat. 3-31-56
Chicago, Ill.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., — The Rev. M. L. King, Jr., was found guilty Thursday of conspiring to sustain Montgomery's long bus boycott, and fined $500.

Judge Eugene W. Carter, who made the decision in the jury-less trial explained he reduced the punishment well below the maximum in recognition of the minister's attempt to prevent violence during the boycott that begin last Dec. 5.

The trials of 89 others on similar charges were postponed pending the Rev. King's appeal to the State Supreme court.

King, who was released immediately under appeal bond, told newsmen:

"This will not diminish in any way the interest in the bus protest. We will continue the protest in the same spirit."

"I have not asked anyone to refrain from riding the busses. My theme has always been to let your conscience be your guide."

Solicitor William Thetford, on cross examination, asked: "Did you have anything to do with calling the boycott?" The Rev. King, a native of Atlanta, Ga., replied:

"No, I did not. It was a spontaneous thing. When I heard about it, it had been started.

Thetford said that it was the state's understanding that the pamphlets circulated called a one-day boycott which the MIA was organized to extend, and asked "isn't that true?"

The Rev. King replied: "No."

The defendant said he could not recall who wrote three demands for a change in bus service which were presented to city officials stating:

Chicago, Ill.

"I think they came out of the mass meeting of more than 4,000 people."

Those proposals asked for more courtesy by bus drivers, a segregated seating arrangement on a first come, first served basis and employment of some Negro drivers. The Rev. King denied that he had ever rejected or accepted any compromise proposals to end the 10-week boycott.

28 OTHER WITNESSES

Estella Brooks, one of 28 witnesses called by the defense, told of her husband being shot and killed by policemen in 1950 after an argument with a bus driver. Her testimony was ruled out of the record because she was not present at the shooting.

The witnesses cited examples of abuse or discourtesy in defense of the Rev. King.

Solicitor William Thetford, who rested the state's case Wednesday, said he intends to produce rebuttal testimony, "probably" bringing back bus company manager J. H. Bagley to tell what has been done to answer Negroes' complaints in the past.

The 100-year-old courtroom was packed as it had not been since the trial began last Monday. Murmers of approval rolled through the predominantly Negro audience on several occasions and once spontaneous applause broke out when a witness said "all of us—50,000 Montgomery Negroes—decided to stop riding the buses."

MRS. PARKS' HUSBAND

One of the last witnesses was R. A. Parks, husband of the seamtress whose arrest for refusing to move to another bus seat led to the boycott. Parks said he last rode a bus on Dec. 5, to go to his wife's trial. In reply to cross-examination, he stated:

"I quit the buses because they don't have anything I want. I don't want to ride them."

One of the few other defense witnesses cross-examined was Rosa Lee Murray, who said she stopped riding on Dec. 5 because "I thought if the other Negroes could stop I could too."

"How did you know the others were stopping?" asked the solicitor. She said, "I saw it in the newspaper."

ATTENDS MASS MEETING

She told of attending mass meetings and of hearing the Rev. King speak but remembered only that the minister said "it was everybody's pleasure to ride or not ride the buses."

The state has attempted to show that the Rev. King as president of the MIA conspired unlawfully with others to boycott a business.

One defense witness, Mrs. Martha Walker, told of one incident when a bus pulled off too quickly, catching her blind husband's foot in the door. She managed to pull him loose and she testified, "the bus driver never even slowed down."

Most of the complaints concerned discourtesy of bus drivers and that they addressed Negroes as "niggers;" segregated seating arrangements that sometimes forced Negroes to stand while seats reserved for whites remained empty; and the practice of having Negroes pay at the front door then walk around to board the bus at a back door.

Court Says 'Guilty Of Conspiracy'

Call P.
Jonesboro, Ga.
Tri. 3-30-56

Delay Trials of Others Pending Appeal by King

By ROBERT H. DENLEY

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — (INS)—The Rev. M. L. King Jr., immediately began an appeal of his conviction Thursday, March 22, as Montgomery bus boycott leader while fellow Negroes vowed to continue their mass protest.

Defense attorneys for the 27-year-old pastor of the Dexter Avenue Baptist church, who was found guilty late Thursday of violating Alabama's seldom-used anti-boycott law, said his appeal may lead ultimately to the U. S. Supreme Court.

Circuit Court Judge Eugene W. Carter, who conducted the four-day hearing without a jury at the defendant's request, fined the pastor $500 plus $184.50 in court costs for his part in the 17-week-old boycott against segregated city buses.

Changed To Jail Term

The fine and costs were converted into a jail sentence since he chose to appeal rather than pay the money. He was sentenced to a total of 386 days. The sentence was suspended, however, after his lawyers served notice of appeal.

King's attorneys said that if the state appellate courts uphold the conviction, they will take the appeal to the U. S. Supreme court.

The maximum penalty under the law could have been a $1,000 fine and six months in jail but the judge explained he did not levy the more severe penalty because of King's activities toward preventing violence during the boycott that began last Dec. 5.

The trials of 89 other Negroes, including 23 other ministers, were postponed pending the outcome of King's appeal. The 90 Negroes were indicted by a grand jury Feb. 21.

Determined To Go On

Thursday night, an estimated 3,000 Negroes roared their determination to continue the bus boycott.

At one of the regularly-scheduled twice-a-week mass prayer meetings that have been held since early December, the Rev. King urged that Negroes continue their spirit of "passive resistance" and "non-violence" in their protest against bus service.

He asked if they wanted to continue the boycott, and they thundered: "Yes!"

Defense attorneys in final arguments yesterday contended the state had failed to produce sufficient evidence for a conviction.

The Rev. King told newsmen the verdict "will not increase or diminish in any way my interest in the protest." He continued:

"We will continue with the protest in the same spirit, with non-violence, passive resistance and using the weapon of love."

When he left the courthouse, the pastor was cheered by waiting Negroes with shouts of "Behold the King" and "Long Live the King."

Almost 25 Negro witnesses testified of long-standing complaints of being abused and humiliated by bus drivers. King's lawyers argued that even in a conspiracy did exist, it had a "just cause and legal excuse" as provided by the boycott law.

Atlanta, Ga.
3-30-56

State's attorneys used seven rebuttal witnesses, including six veteran bus drivers, who denied they had ever mistreated any Negro passenger.

Defendant Says Protest Spontaneous

Daily World
Atlanta, Ga.
Tri. 3-23-56

By ROBERT H DENLEY

MONTGOMERY, Ala.— (INS)—The Rev. M. L. King, Jr., denied on the witness stand Thursday that he called for Montgomery's long Bus boycott or ever urged anyone to join it.

The 27 year old Baptist Minister was the first of 90 Negro leaders to go on trial in Montgomery's Circuit Court for allegedly conspiring to violate an anti-boycott law.

All testimony ended before a lunch recess leaving only final arguments before the case goes to circuit Judge Eugene W. Carter for a decision. The defendant waived the right to a jury.

The state brought to the stand this afternoon seven rebuttal witnesses who told of abuses suffered on Montgomery buses.

"SPONTANEOUS THING"

The Rev. King, a native of Atlanta Georgia who came to Montgomery two years ago testified:

"I did not have anything to do with calling the boycott. It was a spotaneous thing. When I heard of it, it had been started. I do know who called it."

Asked if he ever urged anyone to refrain from riding the buses, he said, "No I have not. My theme has always been 'let your conscience be your guide."

The state has contended that a group of Negro leaders, including the Rev. King sustained the boycott by spiritual appeals to the city's 15,000 Negroes at a series of mass metings and supported it by organizing a car pool.

The Rev. King acted as a spokesman for Negroes in presenting to Bus Company and city official three requests for more courtesy by Bus drivers. for hiring of Negro drivers on some Bus routes, and for a seating arrangement that would permit Negroes to sit from the rear frontward and whites from the front rearwad on a first come, first served basis.

4,000 PEOPLE

He testified Thursday that he did not know who drew up those three proposals, adding, "I think they came out of a mass meeting of more than 4,000 people."

He denied that he had ever rejected any compromise proposals but said those suggestions were always put to the people at mas meetings. He added "until this point the people have always found them unsatisfactory and have rejected them."

Seven more defense witnesses added their complaints against Bus drivers' treatment and segregated seating arrangements this morning to similar testimony given by 28 witnesses yesterday afternoon.

In rebuttal the state brought to the stand six Bus drivers, each of 20 years experience on predominantly Negro routes, without exception they testified that they had never had any difficulties with Negro passengers, had never abused passengers and in reply to the most common complaint of defense witnesses had never called one "Nigger".

The final witness was J. H. Bagley, manager of the Bus Company who testified that his home office made a routine secret check of Bus operations in Montgomery in the last three days of November, 1955.

He said:

"Not one act of discourtesy by drivers toward passengers was reflected in the report."

The courtroom was completely filled with spectators, overwhelming majority of them Negro.

Pastor Held In Boycott

Herald Trib. 3-18-56

MONTGOMERY, Ala. —(AP)— Negro minister, the Rev. Arvie Banks, was arrested at Clanton, Ala., on an indictment charging participation in Montgomery's continuing Negro bus boycott.

He was identified by Sheriff Mac Butler's office here as pastor of a Baptist church at Clanton. His arrest brought the total number of defendants in the mass boycott indictments to 93.

The boycott started last Dec. 5 in protest against segregated seating facilities on Montgomery City Lines buses. It has continued without letup.

Battle Against Tradition

Times P. 28-C Wed. 3-21-56

The Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

New York, N.Y.

Special to The New York Times

MONTGOMERY, Ala., March 20—The battle against segregation in Montgomery is being led by young, southern-born but often northern-educated Negroes.

For some of them it has meant a break with the views of their parents; for all of them it has meant taking a strong stand against the traditions of their community. But in their current efforts, they have solidly behind them the counsel and support of their elders.

Man in the News

Outstanding among these young leaders, whose ages range from 25 to 32, is the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. He is president of the Montgomery Improvement Association, which was organized to lead the current protest against bus segregation.

Dr. King is the first to be tried of ninety-three persons arrested in connection with the boycott of Montgomery buses by Negroes.

Dr. King is a rather soft-spoken man with a learning and maturity far beyond his twenty-seven years. His clothes are in conservative good taste and he has a small trim mustache.

He heads an upper middle-class group of Negro Baptists with dignity and restraint.

They worship in the historic Dexter Avenue Baptist Church. This is a red-brick building on the edge of the State Capitol Mall, near the long white marble steps atop which Jefferson Davis took his oath as President of the Confederacy.

Dr. King came here as pastor of the church in September, 1954, after finishing work on his Doctor of Philosophy degree at Boston University. He is particularly well read in Kant and Hegel, and the concepts of struggle as a law of growth.

Dr. King is a Baptist preacher in a great southern tradition of resounding, repetitive rhetoric. And he can build to his climax with a crescendo of impassioned pulpit-pounding that overwhelms the listener with the depth of his convictions.

Among his convictions are these: That all men are basically good; that ultimately good will triumph over the evil in their nature; that segregation in all its aspects is evil, and that ultimately it must be swept away.

He continues to teach this doctrine in public in the heart of a state officially committed to defend segregation at all cost.

"Frankly, I am for immediate integration," he said. "Segregation is evil and as a minister I cannot condone evil."

Times P. 28-C Wed. 3-21-56 New York, N.Y.

Associated Press

All men are basically good

He sees the current bus boycott as just one aspect of a world-wide revolt of oppressed peoples.

Dr. King's maternal grandfather was the pastor of the Ebenezer Baptist Church at Atlanta, from 1895 to 1932. His father has been the pastor of the church from 1932 to the present.

Dr. King was his father's assistant at that church from 1948, after receiving his Doctor of Divinity degree, until 1953, when he went to Boston to work on his doctorate.

He did his undergraduate work at Morehouse College, and had his religious training at the Crozier Theological Seminary in Chester, Pa., where he was the top man in his class. He and his wife, a graduate of Antioch College in Ohio, have an 11-week-old daughter.

Another of the young Negro leaders here is the Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy, who is 29. He is pastor of the Negro First Baptist Church, and head of the negotiating committee that tried unsuccessfully last week to settle the boycott.

The only two Negro lawyers in Montgomery also have been leaders in the movement. They are Charles D. Langford, 32, and Fred D. Gray, 25. They have filed a suit to overthrow the city and state segregation laws and are defending the Negroes arrested in connection with the bus protest.

United Press Photo

The Rev. M. L. King and his wife outside Montgomery courthouse.

38b 1956

ALABAMA

REV. M.L. KING
MONTGOMERY, ALA. BUS BOYCOTT

NO INJURIES REPORTED—

Boycott leader's home is blasted

News P. 1. Birmingham, Ala.

Lee 1/31/56

BY AL LANIER

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Jan. 31 —(AP)—Standing in front of his bomb-damaged parsonage minutes after the blast, a young Negro minister issued a dramatic appeal last night for calmness despite mounting racial tension here over a prolonged bus boycott.

An explosion which police said was caused either by a hand grenade or dynamite shattered windows at the home of the Rev. M. L. King, the most outspoken leader in the boycott movement.

No one was injured in the blast about 9:15 p.m. (CST).

IT WAS THE FIRST act of violence reported since the initial week of the boycott, which began Dec. 5 in protest to the segregated seating arrangement required on buses by state and city laws. Shots were fired at a few buses during the first week, but they caused no injuries and little damage.

The Montgomery City Commission, whose members recently joined a pro-segregation organization after weeks of unsuccessful negotiations with boycott leaders, offered a reward of $500 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of those responsible for bombing King's home.

Rev. King's wife, their 7-week-old girl and Mrs. Roscoe Williams, a neighbor, were in the home alone when they heard a thud "like a brick hitting the front porch."

WITH MRS. KING carrying the baby, the two women ducked into a back room just as the explosion shattered windows, ripped a hole in the porch and cracked a porch column.

Arriving home 15 minutes after the explosion from a mass meeting at a church, Rev. King first assured himself of his family's safety and then addressed about 300 Negroes who gathered outside his home. News

He began by asking the group to be "peaceful." P. 4

"Don't get panicky," he appealed to the crowd. "Don't get your weapons. He who lives by the sword will perish by the sword. Remember that is what God said . . ."

Then he added: "I want it to be known the length and bredth of this land that if I am stopped this movement (the boycott) will not stop." 1-31-56

AS HE SPOKE, Negroes in the crowd cried "Amen," and "God bless you, Brother King."

Then Police Commissioner Clyde Sellers told the throng: "I will do everything in my power to bring the guilty parties to prison."

Mayor W. A. Gayle, also on the scene, told the Negroes the "entire white community is for law and order and none of us condone or believe in these sort of acts."

Rev. King then addressed the group again: "Go home and don't worry. We are not hurt, and remember, if anything happens to me there will be others to take my place."

A police guard was stationed at the parsonage throughout last night.

Rev. King, 27-year-old pastor of the Dexter Avenue Baptist Church, is a native of Atlanta. His father, Rev. M. L. King Sr., is pastor of one of the largest Negro churches there.

The young minister was fined $10 plus $4 costs last Saturday for driving 30 miles an hour in a 25-mile zone. King denied the charge and blamed his arrest on the commission's new get-tough policy with boycotters.

THAT WAS a reference to Mayor Gayle's statement last week that the city commission was through "pusseyfooting around" with boycotters. He said there would be no further efforts to reach a compromise because Negro leaders had time and again rejected "all reasonable proposals . . ."

At the same time, it was revealed that all three members of the City Commission had joined the Central Alabama Citizens Council, an organization pledged to fight racial integration by all legal means.

The breakoff of negotiations followed the rejection by boycott leaders of the commission's final compromise plan—a suggestion that 10 rows of seats in the back of buses be assigned to Negroes only and an equal number of front seats be allowed to whites.

With bus company approval, the commission also offered to authorize special buses for Negroes only at peak hours.

BUT BOYCOTT LEADERS, many of them ministers, refused to accept less than their demand for seats on a "first come, first served" basis. They explained that Negroes would continue to sit from the rear toward the front but would not be required to stand if any seats were vacant.

The protest movement was touched off by the $14 fine given Mrs. Rosa Parks, a seamstress who refused to move to the rear of a bus.

The pro-white Central Alabama Citizens Council today offered a $500 reward for a solution to the bombing.

State Sen. Sam Engelhardt of nearby Macon County, president of the council, announced the reward and said "we deplore this type of demonstration and will do all in our power to preserve segregation in a lawful manner."

"We must keep our present segregation laws by peaceful and legal means," the statement said

Reward Up in Bombing Of Home in Bus Boycott

Post + Times Herald P. 3

Wed. 2-1-56

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Jan. 31 (AP) — City Commissioners posted a $500 reward today for information leading to convictions for bombing the home of a Negro leading a race boycott of city buses.

King

The three Commissioners, all members of a pro-segregation white Citizens Council, went to the scene to supervise investigation after the bomb was tossed against the house last night. Washington D.C.

The explosion damaged the front porch and blew out windows of the home of the Rev. M. L. King, occupied at the time by his wife, his small daughter, and a visitor. No one was reported injured.

The bomb was believed to have been thrown from an automobile. King, spokesman for a group of Negroes waging a boycott of city bus lines in a 9-week segregation dispute, was away at the time.

Police said about 100 Negroes assembled at the scene, but there was no disorder. King, arriving home about 15 minutes after the explosions, advised the crowd not to "get panicky."

King had been attending a mass meeting of some 2000 Negroes at a church to discuss the boycott.

BOMBERS ARE SOUGHT IN NEGRO HOME BLAST

Commercial Appeal

Citizens Council Offers $500 For Information

Wed. 2-1-56

MONTGOMERY IS SCENE

Memphis, Tenn.

By The United Press

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Jan. 31. —The Central Alabama Citizens Council Tuesday offered a $500 reward for information leading to the conviction in the bombing of the home of a Negro leader in a boycott of city buses.

The council's action follows on the heels of a $500 reward posted Tuesday by city commissioners for the same purpose. P. 21

House Is Damaged

The front porch was damaged and windows were blown out last night at the home of Rev. M. L. King, 27-year-old Baptist minister. King's wife, his small daughter, and a visitor were the only occupants of the home at the time, but all escaped injury.

Announcement of the reward by the Citizens Council was made by Senator Sam Englehardt, chairman of the council.

Senator Englehardt said:

"Reasserting our conviction that we must keep our present segregation laws by peaceful and legal means, we are today offering a reward of $500 for information leading to the arrest of the person or persons responsible for the bombing of M. L. King's residence last night. We deplore this type of demonstration and will do all in our power to preserve segregation in a lawful manner."

Away During Blast

King, who was away at the time of the explosion, said he had received telephone threats since he had taken the leadership in the boycott begun Dec. 5. However, he said the incident Monday night was the first act of violence against him.

Police said there was no disorder Monday night from about 100 Negroes who gathered at the scene.

State Toxicologist Vann Pruitt said Tuesday tests showed dynamite was used in the bombing. Mr. Pruitt said at least "a half stick and maybe a whole stick" was thrown at the dwelling.

The arrest and conviction of a Negro seamstress for refusing to take a "Jim Crow" seat on a city bus touched off the boycott, and is now considered about 80 per cent effective by bus company officials.

Plea Turned Down

The Negroes have asked for a "first come, first served" seating arrangement on the buses, but have been turned down by the city commission.

Meanwhile, the general counsel for the Central Alabama Citizens Council said Tuesday that council membership "is pushing 10,000."

Atty. Luther Ingals of Montgomery said the organization is receiving "several hundred" applications a day for membership. He said the council had employed 15 full-time clerks to process the applications.

'Rebellion' Goes Into Eighth Week

Defender Sat. 2-4-56 Chicago, Ill.

MONTGOMERY — The eight-week-old bus boycott is still on here, but last week city officials served notice that they are going to quit "pussy-footing around," and don't care if Negroes "never ride city busses again." P. 1

Mayor W. A. Gayle, in urging white Montgomerians to quit giving rides to Negro city employees who have been boycotting city buses because of segregated seating, declared that "Negroes have made their own bed and white people should let them lie in it."

The boycott of city buses by Montgomery Negroes started Dec. 5 in protest to the segregated seating arrangement required by law. The boycott was touched off, however, when a Negro woman was fined $14 for refusing to move to the rear of a bus.

Negro ministers have been leaders in the boycott, and so far they have resisted and turned down several compromise plans suggested by City Commission. One compromise plan was to reserve 10 seats at the front for whites and 10 in back for Negroes. During rush hours special buses would be used to transport Negroes only along predominantly Negro routes.

Negro cooks and maids received "special attention" in Mayor Gayle's appeal.

"The Negroes are laughing behind the backs of whites who haul the maids and cooks to and from work," he said.

Maids and cooks are as important to the Southern white as cotton and tobacco. They're the backbone of southern culture and food produced in the white mansions and on the plantations.

Boycott leaders have organized a pickup system at many points throughout Montgomery. They say as many as 200 automobiles are assigned each day to transport Negroes to and from work so they won't be forced to ride city buses.

One of the leaders in the citywide boycott, Rev. M. L. King, said "the boycott will continue until our proposals are given sympathetic treatments."

But Mayor Gayle said if Negro leaders "mean for us to destroy our social fabric, then there is no likelihood of an end to the boycott."

Associated Press wirepho

NEGRO MINISTER'S HOME BOMBED IN MONTGOMERY

. . . Left to right: Fire Chief R. L. Lampley, Mayor W. A. Gayle (a Reserve Army colonel), Rev. M. L. King, Police Commissioner Clyde Sellers

ON CHICAGO VISIT

King Says Boycott Part Of Revolt By Oppressed

CHICAGO, Feb. 14 (AP)—A leader of the 10-week-old bus boycott by Negroes in Montgomery, Ala., said today the boycott is part of a worldwide revolt of oppressed peoples.

"It's part of something that's happening all over the world," said the Rev. M. L. King Jr., 27-year-old Negro Baptist minister.

"The oppressed peoples of the world are rising up. They are revolting against colonialism, imperialism and other systems of oppression."

He said this revolt was an apparently spontaneous movement throughout the world. He said he did not know why it is occurring at this particular time.

The Rev. Mr. King—in Chicago for a guest sermon last Sunday at a Negro church—gave his views at a news conference arranged by a family friend who said he wanted to "give a segment of the northern press a chance to get an unbiased account of what is going on in Montgomery."

King, minister of the Dexter Ave. Baptist Church in Montgomery, is president of the Montgomery Improvement Assn. He said the association was formed to direct a boycott that began Dec. 5 in protest against segregated seating required on buses by state and city laws.

As of today, King said, only about 10 Negroes a day ride buses in Montgomery. About 65 per cent of the bus company's patrons were Negroes before Dec. 5, when Mrs. Rosa Parks, a Negro seamstress, was fined $14 for refusing to move back to the Negro section of a bus. King said this incident sparked a "spontaneous" boycott by the city's Negroes.

"This is a movement of passive resistance," King said. "We have kept violence out of the picture from our standpoint."

'INTIMIDATION'

Two weeks ago small dynamite bombs were thrown at the homes of King and another Negro leader. King said he did not believe the bombs were intended to do any personal harm but were "a symbol of intimidation."

"I'm well guarded everywhere I go in Montgomery, by my friends," King said. "I asked the sheriff for personal protection and that was denied."

The Montgomery County grand jury yesterday began an investigation to determine if Negroes boycotting the buses are part of a conspiracy violating the law.

"I don't doubt that they will indict some of us," King said.

CONFERENCE LOOMS

He said Alabama law prohibits boycotts "without just cause" but that Montgomery Negroes feel they have just cause.

King said litigation initiated by the improvement association — a federal suit challenging the constitutionality of the segregated bus seating laws, and an appeal of Mrs. Parks' fine—will take several months and that "I am not sure that the people will want to continue the boycott that long."

He said Negro leaders will confer shortly to decide whether to call off the boycott pending court decisions. The reason he gave for possibly ending the boycott was that car pools which have been organized to replace the buses have cost Negroes "a lot of money."

"But even if we decide to go back to the buses while the litigation is on, I don't believe more than 50 per cent of our people would go back until the system is changed," King said.

King later left by train for Atlanta. He said he would return to Montgomery tomorrow night.

Sheriff Says Gun Permit Denied King

The Rev. M. L. King who yesterday gave an interview on the bus boycott in Montgomery to Chicago newspapermen, was denied a gun permit by the Montgomery County sheriff.

However, the Rev. King received the assurances of Police Commissioner Clyde C. Sellers Mayor W. A. Gayle and Sheriff Mac Sim Butler that they would do "everything within their power" to protect him although they disagreed with his views and his actions.

A police car was left at his home following a recent bombing and Commissioner Sellers announced he would provide King with "complete police protection."

Despite King's statements that a meeting is planned to discuss ending the boycott, the minister denied telling two newspapermen that such a meeting was scheduled last Wednesday.

The newspapermen on two separate occasions were told by King that the Montgomery Improvement Assn.'s executive board would discuss the possibility of ending the boycott at the Wednesday meeting. King later said the newspapermen misunderstood him.

38b 1956 ALABAMA

REV. MARTIN LUTHER KING, JR.
MONTGOMERY, ALA. BUS BOYCOTT

The Rev. King Is Boycott Boss

Advertiser 4-A

27-Year-Old Baptist Pastor Seems To Be Deferred To By Other Leaders; He Says, Surprisingly, NAACP 'Looks Down Nose' At Boycott

38b

Montgomery, Ala.

By Tom Johnson

THERE seems to be uncertainty in the minds of the white community of Montgomery over the identity of the director of the bus boycott. Who is the acknowledged boycott leader? He seems to be the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., a 27-year-old Negro Baptist preacher.

The Rev. King does not speculate on the ultimate fruits of the Negro movement, but he does declare the current boycott is directed solely toward obtaining a better seating arrangement for Negro passengers. However he is frank to admit that his own views are more ambitious.

JOHNSON

"Frankly," he says, "I am for immediate integration. Segregation is evil, and I cannot, as a minister, condone evil."

King is pastor of the Dexter Avenue Baptist Church, whose congregation includes 375 "professional people" on a "higher economic level." Many of his members come from Alabama State College. The president of the college, Dr. H. Council Trenholm, is a deacon in the church.

Times 1-9-56

King is a member of the Montgomery Improvement Association, a Negro organization of some 50 members which has been active in the conduct of the boycott. King, as spokesman for the association, has also served as spokesman for the protesting bus riders.

The association, apparently, is handling the boycott funds. Recently, a check for $5,017 was made payable to King, who, it is said, transferred the money to an out-of-town bank because the organization feared its funds might get "tied up" in the local bank. This I was told by an associate of King.

At all meetings where the boycott has been discussed, is the one who has enunciated the Negro demands for better seating, more courtesy and the hiring of Negro drivers on predominantly Negro routes. His remarks on these occasions have never been challenged or countered by other Negroe ministers, who accord him a deference that is surprising in view of his youth and relatively short residence in Montgomery.

Seems Older

KING had his 27th birthday Sunday. (He looks and acts older. Most people would guess him to be about 35.) He holds degrees from Morehouse College, Crozer Theological Seminary and Boston College, where he earned his doctorate. His title is Doctor of Systematic Theology, for which he wrote the dissertation, A Comparison Of The Conceptions Of God In The Thinking Of Paul Tillich And Henry Nelson Wieman. His wife, a native of Marion, attended Antioch College, Yellow Springs, Ohio.

Kink speaks openly and with an authoritative air on the Negro view of the bus boycott. He is convinced the boycott will not end so long as the present arrangement exists. Moreover, whatever effect the boycott has had on the bus company and on race relations in Montgomery, King says the Negro has profited—he has gained a "dignity" that he never knew before. He has discovered the voice of the protestant.

NAACP Disdains Boycott

KING says the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People has made not so much as a "small contribution" to the boycott. In fact, he says, the NAACP looks down its nose at the puny, deviationist efforts of local Negroes.

The goal of the NAACP is to gain full race mixing; it, therefore, sanctions no movement such as the local boycott which, King says, aims merely at achieving a "better form of segregation" within existing segregation laws.

To be sure, many Negroes involved in the boycott are members of the NAACP. ("Most well-thinking Negroes are members. If one tells you he is not, he is being dishonest.") And some of them have contributed money, but King says no help has come from the organization itself.

Admires Hegel's Philosophy

KING, who is from Atlanta, is motivated in his racial activities by what he terms the "social gospel," as distinguished from the gospel of personal salvation. He says:

"A minister should attempt to improve social conditions of men at every point where they are not proper—educational, cultural and economic. He must not only change a man's soul but a man's environment, too."

It is evident that he feels it folly to resist the changes that the Supreme Court decision gave momentum to. This is how he sees the boycott:

"It is part of a world-wide movement. Look at just about any place in the world and the exploited people are rising against their exploiters. This seems to be the outstanding characteristic of our generation. Why it had to happen at this time in history, I don't know. But it's happening."

Besides the religious philosophers, King was particularly interested in the German philosophers Kant and Hegel. The latter, his favorite, fathered the "dialectical process" which holds that change is the cardinal principle of life and that in every stage of things there is a contradiction which only the "strife of opposites" can resolve.

Further, as Will Durant, in his Story Of Philosophy defined dialectics: "Struggle is the law of growth; character is built in the storm and stress of the world; and a man reaches his full height only through compulsions, responsibilities and suffering."

King said he tries to translate the teachings of philosophy to his congregation.

Came Here In 1953

HE WOULD NOT comment on the possibility of a compromise settlement of the bus boycott, except to say: "We began with a compromise when we didn't ask for complete integration. Now we're asked to compromise on the compromise."

As an ardent member of the NAACP, King was asked to state his definition of the difference between the White Citizens Council, a champion of one race, and the NAACP, the champion of another.

The aims of the NAACP, he said, are "to get full rights for Negroes, to abolish injustice, to obtain the vote, to obtain protective legislation, improve the cultural life of Negroes and stop lynching," and to do all this through the courts.

On the other hand, the WCC "seems to be an organization to preserve the status quo and to buck the law of the land." King wasn't sure where the WCC stands on violence (he is opposed to it) and how it plans to achieve its goals. All official WCC statements reject violence of any kind.

In short, he thinks the aim of the NAACP is "constructive," the aim of the WCC to "block progress in race relations."

The Dexter Avenue church is King's first congregation. He came here full-time in September, 1953, after getting his doctorate. From 1948 to 1953, he was assistant pastor of Ebenezer Church in Atlanta. His father has been pastor there since 1932 and before that, his maternal grandfather was pastor of the church for 37 years.

Boycott Boss Gets $14 Fine In Speed Case

Advertiser Sun. 1-29-56

Montgomery, Ala.

Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., dapper 27-year-old leader in Montgomery's Negro bus boycott, was fined $14 by Recorder's Court Judge Luther H. Waller yesterday for speeding in a residential zone.

During the course of the hearing in the packed courtroom, Judge Waller warned Defense Atty. Charles Langford three times to stick to the facts of the speeding case and not attempt to bring up prior events.

P. 2-A

At the outset, Negro Atty. Langford informed the court that he would "like to show that a previous occurrence. . ."

Waller interrupted with an explanation of court procedure.

WARNS LAWYER

"You are a licensed attorney," the judge told Langford. "and should be familiar with court procedure. There is no necessity to show bias or hate or anything else. Please limit yourself to the facts at the time. Is that clear?"

Motorcycle Patrolman Grady L. Arnette testified he stopped King at Dericote and East Grove after following him for some four blocks and clocking him at 35 miles per hour in a 25 mile zone.

Arnette said he walked up to the car, asked King for his driver's license and informed him he was under arrest for speeding. The officer said King got out, turned and told a passenger to "take the car and go home" before he or his partner, R. H. Houlton, could make a note of the tag number.

"Isn't it customary to make a note of the tag number?" City Prosecutor Eugene Loe asked.

Arnette said that it was but the car took off within a minute after he had stopped the vehicle.

However, Prof. Robert E. Williams, who testified that he was the passenger who drove the car away, said the vehicle remained at the scene some "seven to 10 minutes"

"I got out, got some names and addresses from King and then drove off," Williams said.

King testified that he had noticed the two motorcycle patrolmen for several blocks and made a special effort to stay within the limit.

King, pastor of the Dexter Avenue Baptist Church, appeared miffed because the officers frisked him for weapons at the scene.

"That is a customary procedure," Judge Waller explained.

APPEAL NOTICE

King filed notice of appeal and was released under $50 bond signed by himself and James Maull.

Meanwhile, City Lines bus driver Daniel S. Johnson, 919 Key St., told police his bus had been fired upon about 6 p.m. Friday as he was driving in the 1600 block of South Holt street.

Johnson said the bus was not hit. City Detectives P. L. Berrey, W. H. Simpler, J. C. McKenzie and S. E. Sellers said they could not locate the bus at the time it was reported fired upon

Like Father, Like Son Are Pastors King

Leader of Bus Boycott Is 'Chip Off Old Block'

Courier Sat. 2-18-56 Pittsburgh, Pa

By WILLIAM A. FOWLKES

ATLANTA, Ga.—The Revs. M. L. King (Senior and Junior) presented a picture of calm, but forthright resolve in regard to the leadership of their people when this reporter interviewed them here last week.

The Rev. Mr. King Jr., whose name has been hurled into national limelight along with the Montgomery, Ala., bus boycott story, had stopped by his Atlanta father's home en route to Chicago for a speaking engagement. Pastor of Montgomery's Dexter Avenue Baptist Church, the Rev. Mr. King Jr. is "a chip off the old block."

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — The Rev. M. L. King Jr., pastor of Dexter Avenue Baptist Church here and one of the top leaders of the current boycott against the local city bus lines, has denied rumors that his organization is planning to discuss ways and means of ending the action.

The Rev. Mr. King Sr. pastor of Atlanta's Ebenezer Baptist Church for twenty-four years, is widely known as a "war horse" in the leadership of his people and church.

HE HAS figured in most of Atlanta's fights for equal and civil rights and was chairman of the Citizens' Committee which launched Atlanta's first suit for equal teacher pay.

At present time he is a member of the executive committee of the Atlanta Branch NAACP, helping to guide the policies of the organization on the community level.

As long-time president of the powerful Atlanta Baptist Association, the Rev. Mr. King Sr. figures heavily in the formation of policy and leadership of state and national Baptist groups.

WHEN THE Rev. Mr. King Sr. took over the helm of Ebenezer—widely known as one of the most financially sound churches in Atlanta—he succeeded his late and lamented, powerful father-in-law, the Rev. A. D. Williams, who had pastored the Auburn Avenue-Jackson Street congregation for thirty-seven years.

The Rev. Mr. Williams had set a terrific pace in leadership of the Atlanta community and his son-in-law, a Morehouse College graduate, willingly took over the torch.

With his wife, the popular and talented Miss Alberta Williams, the Rev. Mr. King Sr. worked, prayed and sang Ebenezer to its present place of leadership. (It has a membership roll of over 4,200.) Born unto this couple were the Rev. Mr. King Jr., who stood his ground although intimidated, bombed and threatened in Montgomery; Willie Christine King, an Atlanta public school teacher, and A. D. Williams King, a student at Morehouse and Atlanta funeral home employe.

Of his son's contributions at Montgomery, the Rev. Mr. King Sr. said:

"Although things have been critical and still require watching and praying, I never doubted for once that M. L. Jr. would help work things out."

(King Jr., indicated Friday that with the filing of the Federal court suits against segregated transportation in Montgomery, the bus boycott may be eased.)

Sheriff Says Gun Permit Denied King

The Rev. M. L. King who yesterday gave an interview on the bus ~~boycott in Montgomery~~ to Chicago newspapermen, was denied a gun ~~permit~~ by the Montgomery County sheriff.

However, the ~~Rev. King~~ received the assurances of Police Commissioner Clyde C. Sellers, Mayor W. A. Gayle and Sheriff Mac Sim Butler that they would do "everything within their power" to protect him although they disagreed with his views and his action.

Advertiser

A police car was left at his home following a recent bombing and Commissioner Sellers announced he would provide King with "complete police protection."

Despite King's statements that a meeting is planned to discuss ending the boycott, the minister denied telling two newspapermen that such a meeting was scheduled last Wednesday.

P. 2-A

The newspapermen on two separate occasions were told by King that the Montgomery Improvement Assn.'s executive board would discuss the possibility of ending the boycott at the Wednesday meeting. King later said the newspapermen misunderstood him.

AT MEETING TODAY

Advertiser Montgomery, Ala.

Group To Study Possibility Of Ending Boycott Of Buses

Wed. 2-8-56

Discussion of the possibility of ending the two-month-old Negro boycott of buses will be on the agenda of the executive board meeting of the Montgomery Improvement Assn. today.

P. 1

The Rev. M. L. King, boycott spokesman, said the matter would be presented to the association board of which he is president.

"I really couldn't say yet whether or not we will start back riding the buses," he said, "It will depend upon the meeting and the action taken on any recommendation the board may make," he said.

He explained that the executive board's action—one way or another—would be in the form of a recommendation to Negroes at large.

"If we suggest an end to the movement, it will be placed before the next mass meeting of the group," he said. The group usually meets at least once or twice a week.

Mayor W. A. Gayle said he was "always in favor of peace and harmony in our city."

King said the position of the boycotters had been "changed somewhat" byp the filing of a suit in federal court last week attacking Montgomery and Alabama travel segregation laws as being unconstitutional.

He said the litigation could last a "long time" and that he did not "know whether Negroes would want to continue the boycott until the suit is settled."

"We are now depending on the courts to give the final answer," he said.

Advertiser

King declined to say where today's meeting will be held.

Meanwhile, the Montgomery Ministerial Assn. passed a resolution urging that racial "bitterness, suspicion and hatred" be ended and that the "spirit of unity, peace and concord," be restored.

The resolution passed unanimously by the group states:

"A few weeks ago Montgomery was a city that was justifiably proud of its community spirit. Different racial, religious, and economic groups lived, worshipped, and worked here in an atmosphere of mutual respect and good will.

P. 2

"Today Montgomery is a 'House divided against itself.' The spirit of good will has given place to one of bitterness, suspicion and hatred.

Wed. 2-8-56

"The loss to Montgomery, morally and economically, is incalculable—a loss resulting from our own intemperate thinking, talk, and acting.

"That further harm may not be done, and that there may be restored the spirit of unity, peace, and concord to our city, we urge:

"(1) That every citizen exercise censorship of his own words, that malicious and unfounded rumors may cease.

"(2) That all measures savoring of force, intimidation, and reprisal be stopped and remedies sought at the council table.

"(3) That the differing groups select true representatives who will lay aside passion and together endeavor to reach an agreeable solution."

THE REVS. M. L. KING, SENIOR AND JUNIOR
. . . the "old block" from Atlanta and his "chip"

Boycott Jury Told Busmen Abuse Negroes

Post & Times Herald
Thurs. 3-22-56
Washington, D.C.

Witnesses Say None Of 50,000 of Race in Montgomery Escaped

MONTGOMERY, Ala., March 21 (AP)—Negroes testified today that white drivers abused "all 50,000" of their race in Montgomery and for the reason they stopped riding city buses.

Witness after witness testified about mistreatment by drivers as the defense presented its case in the trial of the Rev. M. L. King, one of 90 Negroes charged with conspiring to boycott the bus line.

Six defense lawyers attempted to show by the testimony that the 15-week boycott actually was a spontaneous protest demonstration rather than a calculated scheme to put the transit system on the rocks financially, as the state contends. The state rested this morning.

An Alabama law of 1921 banning such a conspiracy against a business provided the basis for the prosecution.

Spectators broke into applause today when witness Ella Perkins said none of the city's 50,000 Negro population was spared arrogant treatment from the city bus driver force. Circuit Judge Eugene Carter warned that if it occurred again "I'll make you all stand and go outside, or take you to jail."

A later witness, Martha Kate Walker, said that once last year she was taking her blind husband, who lost his sight in Germany in an accident after World War II, home on the bus.

As they left the bus, she said, "my husband had his left foot on the ground but his right foot still on the step when the bus started off suddenly.

"I screamed and a white lady on the bus told the driver to wait a minute but he kept on going," the witness said. She said her husband skinned his ankle in getting clear of the bus.

An earlier witness, Pullman porter Richard S. Jordan, testified that several years ago a bus driver bruskuely ordered his pregnant wife to give up her seat to a white passenger.

"I'm a man, and I'm supposed to protect her, but I just looked out the window," Jordan said bitterly.

Mrs. Perkins said that she and other Negro women had been called "ugly black apes" by the white drivers.

The first defense witness was 320-pound Georgia T. Gilmore, 35.

Mrs. Gilmore evoked laughter several time, while Judge Carter rapped sternly for order as she described her experiences on the buses.

She said she knew "quite a few other" Negroes who had stopped riding the buses before the city-wide boycott be-

She said she stopped because of the treatment she received from a driver.

"I know this fellow in particular," she said. "He's red-skinned and red-haired and wears glasses and has freckles. He's a very nasty bus driver.

"I boarded the bus when it was crowded. There were two whites on the bus. The people were half-way up the aisle and the driver said 'Come out, Nigger, and go around.' Well, I didn't move. Then an old lady near me told me to go around."

The witness said she then left the front door of the bus to enter from the rear, but "the light changed, and he pulled off and I was left standing there."

"So I made up my mind I wouldn't ride the buses any more. Now I take a taxi, but if it's warm I walk home."

Final state witnesses were Mayor W. A. Gayle and J. H. Bagley, manager of the bus company, who told of reports turned in on the case of Rosa Parks, Negro seamstress whose arrest for refusing to move to a rear seat was the spark that touched off the boycott.

WHO WON IN ALABAMA?

Daily Tribune
Mon. 3-26-56
Page 22
Chicago, Ill.

The Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. stands convicted of leading a boycott against the bus company in Montgomery, Ala. The judge decided that the organized refusal of Negroes to ride in the buses constitutes a boycott, that this boycott was undertaken without just cause or legal excuse, and that it hindered the conduct of a lawful business. The judge concluded from all this that the Rev. Mr. King had violated an Alabama statute enacted in 1921 and fined him $500 and another $500 in costs.

When the young preacher announced that he would appeal, the sentence was changed automatically to 386 days in jail at hard labor, and was suspended until the appeal has been heard. At the same time, the trials of 89 others who were indicted along with him were postponed until the appeal has been decided.

The higher courts will have to say whether the conviction was in accordance with the evidence, the law, and the Constitution. Meanwhile, we are left to wonder what the prosecutor in Montgomery and his advisors thought was to be gained by bringing this case. If the purpose was to break the spirit of the Negroes of Montgomery, the plan failed. The wholesale prosecution seemed to be vindictive and created sympathy for the defendants. This was heightened by their continued preaching of nonviolence.

The people of this country are accustomed to strikes. They do not ordinarily regard as criminal the efforts of employes to wring concessions from their employer by joint action directed at ruining him if he does not yield. Strikes in industry are lawful when the aim is nothing nobler than a wage advance of a dime a day or the discharge of an unpopular foreman. Nobody is sent to jail for even one day merely for joining a strike.

In face of that familiar fact, the ordinary man is going to find it hard to understand why some of the customers of a bus company may not do in defense of their human dignity, what all the employes of the same company may do with impunity to gain 50 cents a week. The collective action of the Negroes of Montgomery did not prevent the buses from running, yet the Rev. Mr. King was sentenced to 386 days at hard labor.

The conviction may be lawful but it will seem unjust to a good many people. What is, perhaps, the most remarkable aspect of this business is the unawareness it reveals of the art and science of public relations on the part of the prosecuting authorities in Montgomery. Apparently these men and their advisors in the community were wholly unaware that their prosecution would damage the cause of segregation that is so dear to their hearts.

In convicting the Rev. Mr. King they have managed to provide their opponents with a certified martyr. At the same time they have given the Negroes of Alabama an opportunity to prove that they understand Christian precepts. It will be harder from now on to pretend that all the Negroes of Alabama are so deficient or backward in moral standards that they must be segregated.

Court Fines King $500 On Boycott Law Charge

Advertiser Fri. 3-23-56 P.1

Montgomery, Ala.

Judge Orders Continuance In 89 Cases

By TOM JOHNSON
And FRANK McARDLE

The Rev. Martin Luther King, Negro leader of the bus boycott here, was convicted on a charge of violating a state anti - boycott law and was fined $500 and costs in Circuit Court by Judge Eugene Carter yesterday.

Judge Carter ordered a continuance in 89 other cases of Negroes charged with the same violation until a final appeal action is completed in King's case.

The jurist suspended payment of the fine until the appeal is heard by higher courts. The appeal eventually could go to the U.S. Supreme Court.

$1,000 BOND

Defense attorneys prepared to post a $1,000 appeal bond. They had previously stated they would carry the case "all the way to the U.S. Supreme Court" in the event of a conviction.

As King and his wife left the courthouse, they encountered a lively demonstration on the sidewalk. Television cameramen and news photographers fired away as a crowd of about 300 clapped and waved their hands.

They chanted, "Long Live King," or "Long Live The King" and "We Ain't Gonna Ride the Buses No More."

No demonstrations occurred in the courtroom.

Judge Carter announced he had been satisfied about the guilt of King in violating the anti-boycott law. But he added that he was levying a fine lower than the maximum because the minister apparently had "discouraged violence" in the bus boycott movement.

MOTION DENIED

Earlier a motion to dismiss the evidence entered by the state and rule a verdict for the defendant was denied by Judge Carter.

In his summary arguments, Circuit Solicitor William F. Thetford argued that the state had proved King had engaged in a conspiracy to hinder and prevent the operation of the bus company without "just or legal cause."

Defense attorneys Arthur Shores of Birmingham and Fred Gray of Montgomery, in their summary said that the state had failed to prove King had been a party to any conspiracy or agreement to hinder the bus company's business and that if such a conspiracy existed it existed with "just cause." Shores said King was merely a spokesman for the Negroes who selected him for their leader.

Shores, one of the six Negro attorneys defending King, said that the Baptist minister "didn't volunteer to be a rabble-rousing crusader, as the state attorneys have presented him."

Interpretations of the anti-boycott law took up most of the arguments. Thetford charged a group of 16 to 18 Negro leaders carried out the boycott "to gain personal power and influence." He added the boycott resulted from "hysteria built up at mass meetings" promoted by King and others. He pointed to violence in the firing on city buses and charged that King was directly responsible for boycott activity.

Thetford said the Montgomery Improvement Assn. had spent $30,000 for the sole purpose of keeping the bus boycott alive.

King himself was called as the final defense witness.

The state put him through a fairly brief but vigorous examination during which the young minister denied that he had ever urged Negroes to refrain from riding buses.

P. 2-A

He said his "emphasis" has been "let your conscience be your guide."

Another witness, the Rev. Robert S. Graetz, pastor of the all-Negro Trinity Lutheran Church, had earlier testified that on the "several occasions" he heard King speak, the Negro leader never openly advocated that bus patrons remain off the buses.

Graetz said he had heard "two or three compromise proposals" for ending the boycott discussed at meetings of the executive board of the Montgomery Improvement Assn., and had submitted such a plan himself.

He said the board had been "interested" in the compromises but none was ever "completely acceptable."

King was asked if he ever advocated violence on the part of protesting Negroes. He replied that his stand had been the "very antithesis of that," that he had urged non-violence.

He described the improvement association, of which he is president, as a group formed on the day the boycott began to improve race relations and "uplift the general tenor of the community."

NO SALARY

He said he is paid no salary but that seven office workers receive money for their services.

Thetford tried to show that the resolution adopted at the first mass meeting (Dec. 5 at Holt Street Baptist Church) was actually prepared during the preceding afternoon by a committee headed by King.

King admitted he was a member of a committee but said he did not recall helping draft the resolutions. He said his impression was that the resolutions were planned during the afternoon and actually drawn up that night.

Thetford referred to another portion of the minutes of the afternoon session which referred to an agreement to continue the boycott indefinitely, and asked King if such an agreement was reached.

"That's true according to the minutes," he said. "I just don't remember the discussion."

'SPONTANEOUS'

Thetford directed his questioning at trying to show that the boycott did not develop spontaneously" on the night of Dec. 5, as some Negro leaders have maintained, but was planned hours before by a group of 20 persons at the Mt. Zion AME Church.

Did the executive committee of the association agree during the afternoon to set up finance and transportation committees, as mentioned in the minutes of the meeting?

King's reply: "I don't remember."

Thetford tried to show that there were, as he phrased it, "two boycotts"—the first one planned for one day only (Dec. 5) and the second, which developed later, planned for indefinite duration.

"Did you have anything to do with the first boycott?" asked Thetford.

"No, I didn't," said King.

"Do you know anyone who did?"

"No, I don't," King replied. "It was a spontaneous beginning."

ONE-DAY BOYCOTT

Did the Montgomery Improvement Assn. take what started out to be a one-day boycott and, with its money and planning, extend the boycott indefinitely, Thetford asked.

"No, I wouldn't say that," the minister answered.

Thetford again referred to the minutes of the Dec. 5 afternoon session which referred to certain "recommendations" of the executive board being given to that night's mass meeting.

The solicitor wanted to know what the recommendations were.

King said he didn't know.

Was an agenda for the night's program drawn up at the afternoon meeting, Thetford asked.

"I imagine so," replied King.

Did the executive board draw up the three items the Negroes are said to demand as the price for ending the boycott — that is, a different seating arrangemnt, courteous treatment and the hiring of some Negro bus drivers?

"I don't remember," said King. He testified he "couldn't say" who formulated the demands or where or when they were drawn up.

"DIDN'T REMEMBER"

But he added, "I think they were done at the Holt Street Church (at the first mass meeting). I really don't remember." In any event, he said, the demands reflected the wishes of the "4,000 Negroes" present at the Dec. 5 mass meeting.

He confirmed that the weekly budget of the improvement association is $3,200 — "approximately that."

Thetford asked if all of the approximately $30,000 donated to the improvement association had been spent for the boycott.

King admitted "most of it" had. He said the money came from "free-will" offerings.

Asked how many white persons are members of the improvement group, King said he didn't know because "we don't keep records on the basis of race."

SOME OTHERS

He said he did know that Graetz was a member.

Thetford asked if there were any others.

"I know we have some others," said King.

"Who are they?"

"I don't know," said King.

King, pastor of the Dexter Avenu. Baptist Church, testified he came to Montgomery in 1954.

Thetford asked how many times he had ridden the city buses?

"Only Once," King replied.

Graetz preceded King on the witness stand.

He said, though, he couldn't remember having heard King urge Negroes to refrain from riding buses, he did "recall that there were times when they referred to people not wanting to ride."

The defense put on seven other witness before resting the case.

The Negroes have demanded the end of reserved seating for the race.

They said—and Manager J. H. Bagley confirmed—that the seating arrangement now in existence on buses reserves an equal number of seats for whites and Negroes.

That, they explained, means the rear 10 setas are held for Negroes, the front 10 for whites, with the middle section seated on a first come, first served basis.

Bagley, superintendent of the bus company since it began business in Montgomery 20 years ago, drivers employed on Dec. 5, the day the boycott began. None of them, he said, was a Negro.

Asked if he would hire a Negro driver, Bagley said, "It's never been the custom to hire Negro drivers."

Anyway, he answered: "I've never had an application."

All of them testified that as bus passengers they were abused and referred to in derisive terms or discourtesy.

REBUTTAL GIVEN

In rebuttal to the passengers' testimony, the state called bus drivers J. B. Saddler, O. T. Rainwater, C. H. Williams, W. H. Mills, C. E. Moseley, and O. O. Martin.

Each of them testified he had driven buses for several years on predominantly Negro lines and denied the use of abusive language

Fined $500 Plus Costs

First Defendant Is Convicted In Alabama Bus Boycott Trial

MONTGOMERY, Ala., March 22 (AP)—The first of the Negro bus boycott leaders, the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., was convicted today. Defense attorneys immediately began an appeal that may lead ultimately to the U. S. Supreme Court.

King, 27-year-old pastor of the Dexter Avenue Baptist church, was fined $500, plus $500 court costs for violation of Alabama's seldom-used antiboycott law for his part in the 17-week-old boycott against segregated city buses.

The fine and costs were converted into a jail sentence since he chose to appeal rather than pay the money. He was sentenced to a total of 386 days.

The sentence was suspended, however, after Negro defense lawyers served notice of appeal. They have said they will take the appeal to the U. S. Supreme Court if the state appellate courts uphold the conviction.

Circuit Judge Eugene Carter, presiding over the trial in the absence of a jury, could have fined King $1,000 and added a six-month jail sentence under the state law.

But he said he decided on a lesser penalty because it was shown in testimony that the minister used his influence throughout the mass bus protest to urge his people to refrain from violence.

Circuit Solicitor William F. Thetford said immediately after the verdict that the state had agreed to postpone the trials of 89 other boycott defendants pending King's appeal.

The 90 Negroes were indicted by a grand jury Feb. 21.

Makes Statement.

In a statement to newsmen, King said the verdict "will not increase or diminish in any way my interest in the protest."

"We will continue with the protest in the same spirit," he continued, "with nonviolence, passive resistance and using the weapon of love."

As he left the courthouse, the minister was cheered by waiting Negroes with shouts of, "Behold the King" and, "Long live the King."

King expressed confidence to reporters that the federal courts will throw out his conviction and hold the Alabama law unconstitutional.

Defense attorneys Fred D. Gray and Arthur Shores insisted in their closing arguments that the state had failed to prove King committed any unlawful acts and that Negroes had a justifiable reason for refusing to patronize the bus company.

Nearly two score Negro witnesses had testified of repeated acts of mistreatment in the past decade at the hands of white bus drivers, and defense lawyers argued the boycott was the culmination of those experiences.

